†1. Where a sum of money is stated to be payable either by way of liquidated damages or by way of penalty for breach of stipulations, all or some of which are, or one of which is, for the payment of a sum of money of less amount, that is really as penalty, and you can only recover the actual damage, and the court will not sever the stipulations.

2. Cases in which the amount of damages is not ascertainable per se, but in which the amount of damages for a breach of one or more of the stipulations either must be small, or will, in all human probability, be small—that is, where it is not absolutely necessary that they should be small, but it is so near to a necessity, having regard to the probabilities of the case, that the court will presume it to be so.

Then the question is whether in that class of cases the same rule applies. Now upon this there is no decision. There are a great many dicta upon the question, and a great many dicta on each side. I do not think it is necessary to express a final opinion in this case, but I do say this, that the court is not bound by the dicta on either side, and the case is open to discussion. It is within the principle, if principle it be, of a larger sum being a penalty for non-payment of a smaller sum; but at the same time it is also within another class of cases to which I am now going to call attention.

3. The class of cases to which I refer is that in which the damages for the breach of each stipulation are unascertainable, or not readily ascertainable, but the stipulations may be of greater or less importance, or they may be of equal importance. There are dicta there which seem to say that if they vary much in importance the principle of which I have been speaking applies, but there is no decision. On the contrary, all the reported cases are decisions the other way; although the stipulations have varied in importance the sum has always been treated as liquidated damages.

4. A class of cases relating to deposits. Where a deposit is to be forfeited for the breach of a number of stipulations, some of which may be trifling, some of which may be for the payment of money on a given day,—in all those cases the judges have held that this rule does not apply, and that the bargain of the parties is to be carried out. I think that exhausts the substance of the cases.

agreement for the payment of money. See also per Bramwell, B., in Sparrow v. Paris (1832) 7 Hurlst. & N. 594, 599.

Now the stipulation here being considered obviously would be within the last class, for it was a promise to pay a stipulated sum on the breach of a covenant to return the yacht to its owner.

With the exception of the more recent decisions, the cases generally on liquidated damages and penalties, as well as those decided in England as in this country, are reviewed in 2 Evans-Pothier on Obligations, pp. 88 to 111, and in a note to Graham v. Bickham, 1 Am. Dec. 331 et seq. A list of some of the later decisions of the state courts is found in the margin.†

[668] The character of the stipulation under consideration renders it unnecessary to review in detail the decisions of the state courts. There is in them much contrariety of opinion on some phases of the doctrine, but our attention has not been called to *any case which sustains the contention that a valuation clause, such as that we are considering, contained in a contract made under circumstances like those which existed when this contract was executed, must be disregarded despite the evident intention of the parties to treat the sum named as estimated and ascertained damages for a breach of the covenant to return the yacht. That the courts of the state of New York do not lend any support to such a contention—which it was strenuously argued at bar they do—we will make evident.

The case of Ward v. Hudson River Bldg. Co. (1891) 125 N. Y. 230, 26 N. E. 256, is not an authority for the contention in question. Equitable relief was sought in that case against the enforcement of a stipulation, which the court, however, held to be liquidated damages, and binding on the parties. True, the court did say, on page 235, N. E. p. 257, that “where, however, a sum has been stipulated as a payment by the defaulting party, which is disproportioned to the presumable or probable damage, or to readily ascertainable loss, the courts will treat it as a penalty, and will relieve, on the principle that the precise sum was not of the essence of the agreement, but was in the nature of a security for performance.” There is nothing, however, in this excerpt, to countenance the claim that where it is clear from the terms of the contract that the precise sum was of the essence of the agreement, and was the agreed amount of estimated damages, no fraud or imposition having been practised, either a court of equity or of law might rightfully decline to give effect to the stipulation. Nor does the quoted statement support the further claim that a court of law, in an action on a contract to recover a stipulated sum as damages, might let in evidence to establish that a mere disproportion existed between the agreed sum and the actual damage, for the purpose of avoiding the stipulation. The meaning of the court is made clear by the following statement, appearing on the same page with the above excerpt: “We may, at most, say that where they have stipulated for a payment in liquidation of damages, which are in their nature uncertain and unascertainable with exactness, and may be dependent upon extrinsic considerations and circumstances, and the amount is not, on the face of the contract, out *of all proportion to the prob- [669] able loss, it will be treated as liquidated damages.” An inspection of the opinion in the Ward Case also shows that the New York court approvingly referred to prior decisions of the courts of that jurisdiction (Dakin v. Williams, 17 Wend. 447, and 22 Wend. 201), where it was emphatically recognized that parties might embody in their contract an agreed valuation of property or any other quantum of damages, where the damage was uncertain in its nature. We quote in this connection from the opinion as reported in 17 Wend., delivered by Chief Justice Nelson, afterwards a member of this court. It was said (p. 454):

“The next question presented upon the above conclusion is whether the sum of $3,000 is to be viewed as damages liquidated by the contract of the parties, or only in the light of a penalty. There are many cases in the English books in which this question has been very fully examined and considered, but it would be an unprofitable consumption of time to go over them with a view or expectation of extracting any useful general principle that could be applied to this case. The following are the leading cases: Astley v. Weldon, 2 Bos. & P. 346; Barton v. Glover, Holt, N. P. 43, and note; Reilly v. Jones, 1 Bing. 302; Davies v. Penton, 6 Barn. & C. 216; Crisdee v. Bolton, 3 Car. & P. 240; Randall v. Everest, 2 Car. & P. 577; Kemble v. Farren, 6 Bing. 141. In our court are the following: Dennis v. Cummins, 3 Johns. Cas. 297, 2 Am. Dec. 160; Slosson v. Beadie, 7 Johns. 72; Spencer v. Tilden, 5 Cow. 144, and note, p. 150; Nobles v. Bates, 7 Cow. 307; Knapp v. Maltby, 13 Wend. 587. From a critical examination of all these cases and others that might be referred to, it will be found that the business of the court, in construing this clause of the agreement, as in respect to every other part thereof, is to inquire after the meaning and intent of the parties; and when that is clearly ascertained from the terms and language used, it must be carried into effect. A court of law possesses no dispensing powers; it cannot inquire whether the parties have acted wisely or rashly, in respect to any stipulation they may have thought proper to introduce into their agreements. If they are competent to contract within the prudential rules the law has fixed [670] as to parties, and there has been *no fraud, circumvention, or illegality in the case, the court is bound to enforce the agreement. Men may enter into improvident contracts where the advantage is knowingly and strikingly against them; they may also expend their property upon idle or worthless objects, or give it away if they please without an equivalent, in spite of the powers or interference of the court; and it is difficult to see why they may not fix for themselves by agreement in advance, a measure of compensation, however extravagant it may be, for a violation of their covenant (they surely may after it has accrued), without the intervention of a court or jury. Can it be an exception to their power to bind themselves by lawful contract? We suppose not; and regarding the intent of the parties, it is not to be doubted but that the sum of $3,000 was fixed upon by them 'mutually and expressly,' as they say, 'as the measure of damages for the violation of the covenant, or any of its terms or conditions.' If it be said that the measure is a hard one, it may be replied that the defendants should not have stipulated for it; or, having been thus indiscreet, they should have sought the only exemption, which was still within their power; namely, the faithful fulfilment of their agreement."

†Hoagland v. Segur (1876) 38 N. J. L. 230; Wolf v. Des Moines & Ft. D. R. Co. (1884) 64 Iowa, 380, 386, 20 N. W. 481; Burrill v. Daggett (1885) 77 Me. 545, 1 Atl. 677; Jaqua v. Headington (1888) 114 Ind. 309, 16 N. E. 527; Wibaux v. Grinnell Live Stock Co. (1889) 9 Mont. 154, 22 Pac. 492; Wilhelm v. Eaves (1891) 21 Or. 194, 14 L. R. A. 297, 27 Pac. 1053; Hennessy v. Metzger (1894) 152 Ill. 505, 38 N. E. 1058; Willson v. Baltimore (1896) 83 Md. 203, 210, 34 Atl. 774; May v. Crawford (1898) 142 Mo. 390, 44 S. W. 260; Garst v. Harris (1900) 177 Mass. 72, 58 N. E. 174; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Southern Seating & Cabinet Co. (1900) 104 Tenn. 568, 30 L. R. A. 729, 58 S. W. 303; Weedon v. American Bonding & T. Co. (1901) 128 N. C. 69, 38 S. E. 255; Young v. Gaut (1901; Ark.) 61 S. W. 372; Knox Rock Blasting Co. v. Grafton Stone Co. (1901) 64 Ohio St. 361, 60 N. E. 563; Johnson v. Cook (1901; Wash.) 64 Pac. 729; Taylor v. Times Newspaper Co. (1901; Minn.) 86 N. W. 760; Emery v. Boyle (1901) 200 Pa. 249, 49 Atl. 729

Chancellor Walworth, "in the opinion rendered in the same case by the court for the correction of errors, embodied in his opinion the following (22 Wend. 213):

"In Huban v. Grattan, Aleock & N. 389, in which an action was brought to recover the stipulated damages which the defendant had agreed to pay if he did not remove a lime kiln adjacent to the plaintiff's premises, Bushe, Ch. J., says: 'The stipulation consists of two parts, one affirmative that the lime kiln should be prostrated before a particular day, the other, negative that the assignee shall not at any future time erect another lime kiln; and upon those the breaches are assigned. Both bear on one object,—to be relieved from the lime kiln altogether,—and both are essential to that object being accomplished; and both parties agree in measuring beforehand the damages consequent upon a breach of either agreement. Such stipulations as to damages are upheld by courts of law upon two grounds: 1st. Because a man may set a value, not [671] only *upon matters connected with his property, which value is capable of being estimated, but also upon matters of taste or fancy, such as prospect or ornament, which he alone can appreciate; and, 2dly, because even in matters capable of ascertainment great difficulties might occur in some cases; and in all cases it is prudent in both parties to provide against the trouble and expense of a future investigation. The cases which seem to have interfered with such compacts are those in which the subject-matter of the stipulation shows that, whatever the form of it may be, the parties could not have contemplated anything more than a penalty to secure against actual damage."

183 U. S.

So, also, the case of Bagley v. Peddie (1857) 16 N. Y. 469, 471, 69 Am. Dec. 713, makes clear the fact that the New York courts recognize the right of parties to agree beforehand upon damages to be sustained by the breach of a contract, and that evidence aliunde the instrument declared on cannot be received respecting the amount of damage. The last two of what were termed "artificial rules" on the subject of liquidated damages and penalties, recited in the opinion as being peculiar to contracts of this character, were as follows:

"Sixth. If, independently of the stipulated damages, the damages would be wholly uncertain and incapable of being ascertained except by conjecture, in such case the damages will be considered liquidated, if they are so denominated in the instrument. Seventh. If the language of the parties evince a clear and undoubted intention to fix the sum mentioned as liquidated damages in case of default of performance of some act agreed to be done, then the court will enforce the contract, if legal in other respects."

Following a review of several decided cases in England, the court said (p. 474, Am. Dec. p. 716):

"The above cases will serve to illustrate the kind of certainty as to the sum to be paid as damages for breach of an agreement in order to hold the larger sum agreed to be paid on such breach a mere penalty. They are cases where the lesser sum is named specifically in the instrument itself, or depends on the award of arbitrators. These and similar cases are the cases of certain damages to which the courts allude in the third rule."

*The court then quoted approvingly the [672] prior decision of the supreme court in Dakin v. Williams, 17 Wend. 447, and concluded as follows (p. 475, Am. Dec. p. 717):

"The case at bar seems to me to fall within the sixth rule, the damages being wholly uncertain, and depending entirely on proof aliunde the instrument declared on."

And in connection with the New York cases it becomes pertinent to notice the case of Gay Mfg. Co. v. Camp (1895) 13 C. C. A. 137, 25 U. S. App. 134, 65 Fed. 794, on rehearing, 15 C. C. A. 226, 25 U. S. App. 376, 63 Fed. 67, much relied upon in argument. As we have previously observed, language is employed in that opinion which, broadly interpreted, seems to countenance the idea that if a jury can ascertain the damages suffered by the breach of a stipulation, an agreement by the parties, embodied in a written contract, fixing such damages, will be treated as a nullity. This deduction appears to have been drawn from certain rules of construction respecting liquidated damages and penalties enunciated by the trial judge in Bagley v. Peddie, 5 Sandf. 192, 194, the judgment in which case, it is proper to remark, was reversed by the appellate court in 16 N. Y. 469, 69 Am. Dec. 713, already referred to. We do not think, however, the interpretation we have noticed as having been put upon the rules in question was warranted; at least, as we have shown, such a doctrine is altogether untenable. Nor do the other authorities cited in the opinion in the Gay Case lend support to the asserted doctrine. Those authorities were Harris v. Miller, 6 Sawy. 319, 11 Fed. 118, 121, and a note to Spencer v. Tilden (1825) 5 Cow. 144, 150. Harris v. Miller is referred to because of the statement by Judge Deady that the courts, instead of giving effect to the contract of the parties according to their intentions, assume to control them according to their standard of justice. The note to 5 Cowen need not be commented upon, in view of the reference we have made to later decisions of the courts of New York.

[673] It may, we think, fairly be stated that when a claimed disproportion has been asserted in actions at law, it has usually been an excessive disproportion between the stipulated sum and the possible damages resulting from a trivial breach apparent on the face of the contract, and the question of disproportion has been *simply an element entering into the consideration of the question of what was the intent of the parties, whether bona fide to fix the damages, or to stipulate the payment of an arbitrary sum as a penalty, by way of security.

In the case at bar, aside from the agreement of the parties, the damage which might be sustained by a breach of the covenant to surrender the vessel was uncertain, and the unambiguous intent of the parties was to ascertain and fix the amount of such damage. In effect, however, the effort of the petitioner on the trial was to nullify the stipulation in question by mere proof, not that the parties did not intend to fix the value of the yacht for all purposes, but that it was improvident and unwise for its agent to make such an agreement. Substantially, the petitioner claimed a greater right than it would have had if it had made application to a court of equity for relief, for it tendered in its answer no issue concerning a disproportion between the agreed and actual value, averred no fraud, surprise, or mistake, and stated no facts claimed to warrant a reformation of the agreement. Its alleged right to have eliminated from the agreement the clause in question, for that is precisely the logical result of the contention, was asserted for the first time at the trial by an offer of evidence on the subject of damages.

The law does not limit an owner of property, in his dealings with private individuals respecting such property, from affixing his own estimate of its value upon a sale thereof, or, on being solicited, to place the property at hazard by delivering it into the custody of another for employment in a perilous adventure. If the would-be buyer or lessee is of the opinion that the value affixed to the property is exorbitant he is at liberty to refuse to enter into a contract for its acquisition. But if he does contract, and has induced the owner to part with his property on the faith of stipulations as to value, the purchaser or hirer, in the absence of fraud, should not have the aid of a court of equity or of law to reduce the agreed value to a sum which others may deem is the actual value. And, as pertinent to these observations, we quote from the opinion delivered by Wright, J., in Clement v. Cash, 21 N. Y. 253, where it was said (p. 257):

"When the parties to a contract, in which the damages to be *ascertained, growing out of a breach, are uncertain in amount, mutually agree that a certain sum shall be the damages, in case of a failure to perform, and in language plainly expressive of such agreement, I know of no sound principle or rule applicable to the construction of contracts that will enable a court of law to say that they intended something else. Where the sum fixed is greatly disproportionate to the presumed actual damage, probably a court of equity may relieve; but a court of law has no right to erroneously construe the intention of the parties, when clearly expressed, in the endeavor to make better contracts for them than they have made for themselves. In these, as in all other cases, the courts are bound to ascertain and carry into effect the true intent of the parties. I am not disposed to deny that a cause may arise in which it is doubtful, from the language employed in the instrument, whether the parties meant to agree upon the measure of compensation to the injured party in case of a breach. [See Kemp v. Knickerbocker Ice Co. 69 N. Y. 45.] In such cases, there would be room for construction; but certainly none where the meaning of the parties was evident and unmistakable. When they declare, in distinct and unequivocal terms, that they have settled and ascertained the damages to be $500.00, or any other sum, to be paid by either failing to perform, it seems absurd for a court to tell them that it has looked into the contract and reached the conclusion that no such thing was intended; but that the intention was to name the sum as a penalty to cover any damages that might be proved to have been sustained by a breach of the agreement."

As the stipulation for value referred to was binding upon the parties, the trial court rightly refused to consider evidence tending to show that the admitted value was excessive, and the circuit court of appeals properly gave effect to the expressed intention of the parties.

The decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals was right, and it is therefore affirmed.

[675]*SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

ISAAC T. BELL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 675-690.)

Railroad land grants—withdrawal from settlement—lands within indemnity limits.

The Secretary of the Interior was not authorized, by the act of July 27, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 299), making a land grant in aid of the Southern Pacific Railroad, to withdraw from settlement lands within the indemnity limit of such grant in advance of any selections by the railroad company based on ascertained losses in the place limits, in view of the provisions of § 6 that the "odd sections of land hereby granted shall not be liable to sale or entry or pre-emption, before or after they are surveyed, except by said company as provided in this act," but that the provisions of the pre-emption and homestead laws "shall be and the same are hereby extended to all other lands on the line of said road when surveyed, excepting those hereby granted to said company."

[No. 20.]

*Argued and Submitted December 5, 6, 1901.
Decided January 13, 1902.*

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of California to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of Fresno County in favor of defendant in a suit to recover real property. Affirmed.

See same case below, 125 Cal. XIX., 58 Pac. 1116.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was a complaint in the nature of a bill in equity filed by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company in the superior court of Fresno county, California, against Isaac T. Bell, praying to be declared the rightful owner of a certain quarter section of land in that county, and that it be adjudged that the defendant Bell holds the legal title to said land in trust for the plaintiff, and requiring him to convey the same to it free of all encumbrances.

The facts of the case, as set forth in the complaint, are substantially as follows: By "An Act Granting Lands to Aid in the Construction of a Railroad and Telegraph Line from the States of Missouri and Arkansas to the Pacific Coast" (14 Stat. at L. 292, chap. 278), such road being incorporated under the name of The Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company, there was granted to such railroad company—

"Sec. 3. . . . Every alternate section of public land, not mineral, designated by odd numbers, to the amount of twenty alternate sections per mile, on each side of said railroad line, as said company may adopt, through the territories of the United States, and ten alternate sections of land per mile on each side *of said railroad when- [676] ever it passes through any state, and whenever on the line thereof the United States have full title, not reserved, sold, granted, or otherwise appropriated, and free from pre-emption, or other claims or rights, at the time the line of said road is designated by a plat thereof, filed in the office of the Commissioner of the General Land Office; and whenever prior to said time any of said sections or parts of sections shall have been granted, sold, reserved, or occupied by homestead settlers, or pre-empted, or otherwise disposed of, other lands shall be selected by said company in lieu thereof, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, in alternate sections, and designated by odd numbers, not more than 10 miles beyond the limits of said alternate sections," etc.

"Sec. 6. And be it further enacted, That the President of the United States shall cause the lands to be surveyed for 40 miles in width on both sides of the entire line of said road after the general route shall be fixed, and as fast as may be required by the construction of said railroad; and the odd sections of land hereby granted shall not be liable to sale or entry or pre-emption, before or after they are surveyed, except by said company, as provided in this act; but the provisions of the act of September, eighteen hundred and forty-one, granting pre-emption rights, and the acts amendatory thereof, and the Act entitled 'An Act to Secure Homesteads to Actual Settlers on the Public Domain,' approved May twenty, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, shall be, and the same are hereby, extended to all other lands on the line of said road when surveyed, excepting those hereby granted to said company."

By § 18 of the same act authority was given to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, incorporated under the laws of California. "to connect with the said Atlantic & Pacific Railroad, formed under this act, at such point near the boundary line of the state of California, as they shall deem most suitable for a railroad line to San Francisco, and shall have a uniform gauge and rate of freight or fare with said road; and in consideration thereof, to aid in its construction, shall have similar grants of land, subject to all the conditions and limitations herein provided, and shall be required to construct its *road on the like regulations, [677] as to time and manner, with the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad herein provided for."

On November 26, 1866, the plaintiff accepted the terms and conditions of the charter and grant of July 27, 1866, as above set forth, and on January 3, 1867, duly fixed the general route of its line of road, designating the same by a plat thereof filed in the office of the Commissioner of the General Land Office. This plat and designation having been duly approved and accepted by the Commissioner and Secretary of the Interior on March 22, 1867, all the odd-numbered sections of land lying within 30 miles of the railroad, as shown upon the plat, were withdrawn from sale or location, pre-emption or homestead entry, and have ever since remained so withdrawn.

NOTE.—As to land grants to railroads—see note to Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 L. ed. U. S. 794.

183 U. S.

383

Thereafter, and prior to November 8, 1889, the company duly constructed and equipped the entire railroad provided for in said act, and along the line designated upon the plat filed on January 3, 1867, and the road so constructed, except that part which extends from Mojave to the Needles, was duly accepted and approved by the President and Secretary of the Interior.

A certain quarter section of land within the granted limits of the railroad, as constructed and shown on the map, having been granted and otherwise disposed of, prior to the time when the line of the route was designated by the plat filed with the Commissioner of the General Land Office, the quarter section of land in dispute in this case, which was within the indemnity, but not within the granted limits of the road, being more than 20 but within 30 miles on one side of the road as constructed, was selected by the railroad, in lieu of the quarter section above described as having been granted and otherwise disposed of by the United States. The land so selected was at the time the act of July 27, 1866, was passed, vacant and unappropriated public land of the United States, not mineral, to which the United States then had full title, not reserved, sold, granted, or otherwise appropriated, and free from pre-emption or other claims or rights, and such land has ever since so remained, except as it has been affected by the acts of the parties to this suit. The company had not, at the time the selection was made, nor has it since, se-[678]lected or received "lands to the extent or amount earned and acquired by it in virtue of the grant and the provisions of the granted act.

The complaint further alleged that notwithstanding the rights of the company secured to it by the act of July 27, 1866, the United States issued a patent for the quarter section so selected in lieu of the other, to the defendant, who claims the legal title to said land in fee simple and free from any trust or obligation to the plaintiff.

To this complaint the defendant interposed a general demurrer, which was sustained, and the plaintiff having refused to amend his complaint, a final judgment was entered against it and an appeal taken to the supreme court of California, where the judgment of the superior court of Fresno county was affirmed upon the authority of another case against one Wood. 124 Cal. 475, 57 Pac. 388. Whereupon plaintiff sued out a writ of error from this court.

Mr. Maxwell Evarts argued the cause, and, with Mr. L.E. Payson, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Selection is unnecessary when the deficiency in the place limits of a grant is greater than the amount of the indemnity lands applicable thereto.

St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co.

384

139 U. S. 1, 35 L. ed. 77, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389.

The words "hereby granted," as used in the various acts of Congress granting lands in aid of railroads, include lands within the indemnity limits of the grant, as well as within the primary limits of such grant.

Northern P. R. Co. v. United States, 36 Fed. 282; Barney v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 24 Fed. 889; Northern P. R. Co. v. Barnes, 2 N. D. 310, 51 N. W. 786; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. 3 McCrary, 280, 10 Fed. 435; Re Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 9 Land Dec. 465; Wood v. Beach, 156 U. S. 548, 39 L. ed. 528, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410.

It has been held by this court that a section in the Northern Pacific act of 1864 (13 Stat. at L. p. 365, chap. 217), which is substantially identical with the 6th section of the act in question, was equivalent to a withdrawal of the lands granted to the railroad company by the Secretary of the Interior, and that any withdrawal by the Secretary was only giving publicity to what the law had already done.

St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 139 U. S. 1, 35 L. ed. 77, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Buttz v. Northern P. R. Co. 119 U. S. 55, 30 L. ed. 330, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100; Southern P. R. Co. v. Groeck, 68 Fed. 609.

Indemnity lands are included within the term "lands granted by this act" used in the act of July 26, 1866, which are the equivalent of the words "land hereby granted" found in the section of the act now under consideration, and where there is a withdrawal of such lands they are not subject to sale, entry, or pre-emption by anyone except the railroad company.

Wood v. Beach, 156 U. S. 550, 39 L. ed. 529, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410.

A withdrawal of indemnity lands included within a railroad grant is effective as against a grant of the lands to another railroad under a subsequent act of Congress.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Musser-Sauntry Land, Logging & Mfg. Co. 168 U. S. 604, 42 L. ed. 596, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 205.

The indemnity lands granted by the act of 1866 (the act involved in this case) are not open to entry, sale, or pre-emption after the filing of the map of the general route of the grantee, except to such grantee.

United States v. Colton Marble & Lime Co. 146 U. S. 615, 36 L. ed. 1104, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163.

The question involved in the present case has often been before the lower Federal courts in one form or another, and has almost uniformly been decided in favor of the railroad.

Southern P. R. Co. v. Wiggs, 43 Fed. 333; Southern P. R. Co. v. Araiza, 57 Fed. 98; Southern P. R. Co. v. Groeck, 31 C. C. A. 334, 59 U. S. App. 366, 87 Fed. 970.

The intent of Congress to give the Southern Pacific Railroad Company by the act of 1866 its full amount of 101 sections of land per mile should not be defeated by applying to the grant the rules of the common law, which are properly applicable only to transfers between private parties.

183 U. S.

Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Kansas P. R. Co. 97 U. S. 491, 24 L. ed. 1095.

Mr. Joseph H. Call submitted the cause for defendant in error:

The act of Congress of July 27, 1866, as amended by the joint resolution of June 28, 1870, required of the Southern Pacific, not only a map of general route, but one of definite location.

United States v. Southern P. R. Co. 146 U. S. 570, 36 L. ed. 1091, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152; Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 168 U. S. 1, 42 L. ed. 355, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18.

The route laid down in the charter or articles of incorporation of a railroad company is deemed to be read into the congressional act making a grant of lands or of right of way to the company, and it is presumed that Congress had such line of route in view.

Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Alling, 99 U. S. 474, 25 L. ed. 438; Washington & I. R. Co. v. Cœur D'Alene R. & Nav. Co. 160 U. S. 77, 40 L. ed. 346, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231.

Where the termini of a land-grant road are fixed the road must be constructed upon the shortest practicable route.

St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 139 U. S. 1, 35 L. ed. 77, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; United States v. Northern P. R. Co. 152 U. S. 284, 38 L. ed. 443, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 598.

In filing its map of general route on January 3, 1867, and securing a temporary reservation at that time, the Southern Pacific did not acquire, by virtue thereof, any right or title to any lands along the line.

New Orleans P. R. Co. v. Parker, 143 U. S. 42, 36 L. ed. 66, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364; United States v. Southern P. R. Co. 146 U. S. 570, 36 L. ed. 1091, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152; Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 168 U. S. 1, 42 L. ed. 355, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; United States v. Oregon & C. R. Co. 176 U. S. 28, 44 L. ed. 358, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 261.

Until the selection of indemnity land has been made by the company, and approved by the Secretary of the Interior, no right or title passes to the company.

Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Price County, 133 U. S. 496, 33 L. ed. 687, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Ryan v. Central P. R. Co. 99 U. S. 382, 25 L. ed. 305; St. Paul & S. C. R. Co. v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 112 U. S. 720, 28 L. ed. 872, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334; Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 117 U. S. 406, 29 L. ed. 928, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 790; Barney v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 117 U. S. 228, 29 L. ed. 858, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; Cedar Rapids & M. River R. Co. v. Herring, 110 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 56, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; United States v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 141 U. S. 358, 35 L. ed. 766, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13; New Orleans P. R. Co. v. Parker, 143 U. S. 42, 36 L. ed. 66, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364; Southern P. R. Co. v. Wood, 124 Cal. 475, 57 Pac. 388; Moore v. Cormode, 20 Wash. 305, 55 Pac. 217.

The decisions of the Interior Department uniformly hold that no right or title to any particular tract of indemnity land passes until it has been selected and approved, and until that time the land is open to disposal by the Land Department.

Brady v. Southern P. R. Co. 5 Land Dec. 658; Secretary Lamar to President, 6 Land Dec. 77; Re Atlantic & P. R. Co. 6 Land Dec. 84; Northern P. R. Co. v. Miller, 7 Land Dec. 100; Southern P. R. Co. v. Meyer, 9 Land Dec. 250; Northern P. R. Co. v. Walters, 13 Land Dec. 230; Southern P. R. Co. v. Wasgalt, 13 Land Dec. 145; Southern P. R. Co. v. McWharter, 14 Land Dec. 610; Southern P. R. Co. v. Waters, 17 Land Dec. 270; Re Southern P. R. Co. 18 Land Dec. 314; Northern P. R. Co. v. McMahan, 21 Land Dec. 402; Northern P. R. Co. v. Lillethun, 21 Land Dec. 487; Southern P. R. Co. v. McKinley, 22 Land Dec. 493; Southern P. R. Co. v. Kanawyer, 23 Land Dec. 500; Northern P. R. Co. v. Ayers, 24 Land Dec. 40; Re Southern P. R. Co. 25 Land Dec. 223; Southern P. R. Co. v. Davis, 26 Land Dec. 595; Northern P. R. Co. v. Gunther, 26 Land Dec. 340; Lund v. Northern P. R. Co. 27 Land Dec. 348; Northern P. R. Co. v. Blain, 27 Land Dec. 361; California v. Southern P. R. Co. 27 Land Dec. 542.

When the selection has been approved by the Secretary of the Interior the equitable title passes to the company, but only when patent is issued, under the provisions of § 4 of the act of July 27, 1866, does the full legal title pass, and until patented the land is within the control of the Interior Department.

Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 38 L. ed. 992, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030; Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Price County, 133 U. S. 496, 33 L. ed. 687, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Michigan Land & Lumber Co. v. Rust, 168 U. S. 589, 42 L. ed. 591, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Brown v. Hitchcock, 173 U. S. 473, 43 L. ed. 772, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; Rogers Locomotive Mach. Works v. American Emigrant Co. 164 U. S. 559, 41 L. ed. 552, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 188; Hawley v. Diller, 178 U. S. 476, 44 L. ed. 1157, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 986.

The facts found by the Land Department upon the issuance of the patent to defendant Bell are conclusive against the Southern Pacific.

Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. 106 U. S. 447, 27 L. ed. 226, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Lee v. Johnson, 116 U. S. 48, 29 L. ed. 570, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Heath v. Wallace, 138 U. S. 573, 34 L. ed. 1063, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 380; United States v. Marshall Silver Min. Co. 129 U. S. 579, 32 L. ed. 734, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 343; Russell v. Maxwell Land Grant Co. 158 U. S. 253, 39 L. ed. 971, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 827.

The controlling principle in this case, namely, that there was no authority to withdraw the indemnity lands as against homestead and pre-emption entries, and that patents issued to settlers under such entries are valid, has been lately presented and fully determined by the court adversely to the contentions of the plaintiff in error in the present case.

Hewitt v. Schultz, 180 U. S. 139, 45 L. 25

ed. 463, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 309; Moore v. Cor-mode, 180 U. S. 167, 45 L. ed. 476, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324; Powers v. Slaght, 180 U. S. 173, 45 L. ed. 479, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 319; Moore v. Stone, 180 U. S. 180, 45 L. ed. 483, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 322.

[678] *Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

This case involves a priority of right as to certain lands within the indemnity limits of the grant to plaintiff by act of Congress of July 27, 1866, and a patent for the same lands issued to the defendant as a settler under the land laws of the United States.

It presents the single question whether the railroad company had a right, on July 26, 1893, to select the land in dispute as lieu lands, notwithstanding the defendant had nearly one year before and on September 15, 1892, received a patent for the same. This involves the further question whether the lands in dispute were subject to pre-emption and sale after the filing of the plat designating the line of the road; and this turns upon the meaning of the words. "land hereby granted," used in § 6, *wherein it is enacted that the "odd sections of land hereby granted shall not be liable to sale or entry or pre-emption, before or after they are surveyed, except by said company, as provided in this act," which language must also be construed in connection with the further proviso in the same section, that the pre-emption act of 1841, the homestead act of 1862, and the acts amendatory thereof, "shall be and the same are hereby extended to all other lands on the line of said road when surveyed, excepting those hereby granted to said company."

[679] There is no dispute that the land "hereby granted" extends to all the odd-numbered sections within the place limits; that is, within 20 miles of each side of the road. The real question is whether it extends to the indemnity lands, 10 miles beyond this limit, so much of which the company was authorized to select in lieu of lands unavailable to it within the granted limits.

The relative rights of railroads and of settlers under these congressional grants, all of which are couched in similar language, have been the subject of much litigation in this court, the main object of which has been to fix the time when the right of the roads to particular lands within both the place limits and the indemnity limits finally attaches as against both prior and subsequent settlers. Although at the last term of this court the question involved in the case under consideration was practically settled in Hewitt v. Schultz, 180 U. S. 139, 45 L. ed. 463, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 309, the progressive steps by which the conclusion in that case was reached will show the difficulties which have attended the solution of these questions, and, as we think, indicate the logical necessity of affirming this case. Two objects have been kept steadily in view: First, securing to the railroad the benefit of the lands actually granted; second, protecting, as far as possible, the right of the public to lands not actually granted, or necessary to indemnify the roads for lands which have become unavailable to it within its granted limits, by reason of the fact that they had been otherwise disposed of prior to the designation of the line of the road.

In the first of these cases, Schulenberg v. Harriman, 21 Wall. 44, 22 L. ed. 551, it was held that the act of June 3, 1856, granting lands *to the state of Wisconsin, to aid in the construction of railroads, was a grant in præsenti of lands within the granted limits, and passed the title to the odd sections designated to be afterwards located; but, until such designation, the title did not attach to any specific tracts, and that when the route was fixed the title which was previously imperfect acquired precision, and became attached to the lands as of the date of the grant. There was no question of indemnity lands involved.

In Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 733, 23 L. ed. 634, it was held that a similar grant, though operating in præsenti, did not apply to lands set apart for the use of an Indian tribe under a treaty, and that it was immaterial that they subsequently became a part of the public lands by the extinguishment of the Indian rights. This doctrine was extended in the next case, Newhall v. Sanger, 92 U. S. 761, 23 L. ed. 769, to lands within the boundaries of an alleged Mexican or Spanish grant, which was sub judice at the time the Secretary of the Interior ordered a withdrawal of lands along the route of the road.

In Ryan v. Central P. R. Co. 99 U. S. 382, 25 L. ed. 305, the rule laid down in the last two cases was qualified and limited to lands within the place limits, and it was held that, as the lands in Ryan v. Central P. R. Co. were within the indemnity, but not within the place limits, "the railroad company had not and could not have any claim to it until specially selected." The land in dispute was within a tract formerly covered by a Mexican claim, which, although sub judice at the date of the act, had been finally rejected as invalid before the railroad company had selected it as part of its lieu lands. When so selected "there was no Mexican or other claim impending over it." This case practically holds that the title to indemnity lands inures to the railroad company only when selection is made.

This view, that the act conferred no rights to specified tracts within the indemnity limits until the grantees' right of selection had been exercised, was subsequently confirmed in Cedar Rapids & M. River R. Co. v. Herring, 110 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 56, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485, and Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atehison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 112 U. S. 414, 28 L. ed. 794, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208, although it had been stated only as a suggestion in Grinnell v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 103 U. S. 739, 26 L. ed. 456.

*In Van Wyck v. Knevals, 106 U. S. 360, 27 L. ed. 201, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336. it was again held that the grant of the place lands was in presenti, and attached to the sections as soon as a map showing the definite location of the road was filed, and that a party who had subsequently entered a portion of the land covered by the grant, and procured a patent for the same, might be required to execute a release of the premises to the company. It was said by Mr. Justice Field, in that case, p. 365, L. ed. p. 202, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 337, that the grant cut off all subsequent claims from the date of this act, with certain exceptions specifically named, and passed the title as fully as if they had been then capable of identification.

The principle of this case was still further applied in St. Paul & S. C. R. Co. v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 112 U. S. 720, 28 L. ed. 872, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, to two conflicting grants, and it was held that as the title to the lands was within the place limits, it related back, after the road was located, to the date of the grant, priority of date of the act of Congress, and not priority of location of the line of the road, giving priority of title. A distinction was drawn in this case between the land within the place limits and land within the indemnity limits, and it was said that in case of the latter neither priority of grant, nor priority of location, nor priority of construction, gave priority of right; but this was determined by priority of selection.

The case of Buttz v. Northern P. R. Co. 119 U. S. 55, 30 L. ed. 330, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100, is in seeming conflict with Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 733, 23 L. ed. 634, inasmuch as it was held that the grant by act of July 2, 1864 [13 Stat. at L. 365, chap. 217], to the Northern Pacific Railroad, of lands to which the Indian title had not been extinguished, operated to convey the fee to the company subject to the right of occupancy by the Indians; but the case is distinguishable, as there was in the 2d section of the act a proviso that the United States "should extinguish, as rapidly as might be consistent with public policy and the welfare of the Indians, their title to all lands falling under the operation of this act, and acquired in the donation to the road." The prior case was not cited in the opinion.

The conclusions to be deduced from these cases are—

(1) That as to lands within the primary [682] limits, the grant *takes immediate effect, and attaches to particular lands when the map of definite location is filed; that the Secretary of the Interior may, upon the filing of such map, give notice of a withdrawal from sale of all the odd-numbered sections within the granted limits, and that the title so acquired by the railroad company relates back to the date of the grant, and takes precedence of all titles subsequently acquired, except those specifically named.

(2) That to lands within the indemnity limits, the company takes no title until a deficiency in the place limits has been ascertained and the company has exercised its right of selection, with perhaps some rare exceptions. See St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 139 U. S. 1, 35 L. ed. 77, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389.

The last case upon this subject is Hewitt v. Schultz, 180 U. S. 139, 45 L. ed. 463, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 309, which involved the title to a quarter section of land in North Dakota within the indemnity limits that is (as applied to territories), between the 40 and 50 mile limits of the Northern Pacific Railroad land grant. Plaintiff Hewitt claimed title as a settler under the pre-emption laws; defendant as a purchaser from the railroad company, under its grant of July 2, 1864. 13 Stat. at L. 365, chap. 217. The 3d and 6th sections of this act were, except as to the name of the railroad and a few immaterial words, identical with the corresponding sections of the Atlantic & Pacific act of July, 1866.

On March 30, 1872, the railroad company filed a map of its general route through the territory of Dakota, and the local land office was thereupon directed to withhold from sale or location all the odd-numbered sections within the place limits of 40 miles, as designated on such map. On June 11, 1873, the company having filed a map of the definite location of its line, the local land office was directed to withhold from sale, or entry, all the odd-numbered sections within the 50-mile limits. This action was taken pursuant to the practice at that time prevailing in the General Land Office.

The land in dispute was more than 40, but within 50, miles of the line of definite location; that is, was within the indemnity limits, and the controlling question in the case was whether it was competent for the Secretary of the Interior to withdraw *the [683] odd-numbered sections within such indemnity limits; that is, between the 40 and 50 mile limits.

Hewitt settled upon the land April 10, 1882, more than a year before the withdrawal was made, and it was not until March 19, 1883, that the railroad company filed in the local land office its selection of land, embracing the land in dispute within the indemnity limits.

On April 4, 1883, Hewitt submitted his final proofs for the land, tendered the price, and demanded a patent; but his proof was rejected on the ground that the land had been withdrawn from entry under the act of July 2, 1864. Hewitt appealed to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, who affirmed the decision of the local land office, October 5, 1883. He was ousted of his possession the following year by the defendant Schultz, who had taken a deed from the railroad company. On August 15, 1887, the order of withdrawal of the indemnity lands was revoked, and, upon a review by the Commissioner of the General Land Office of his former decision, the ruling of the local land office was set aside, Hewitt's final proofs admitted, and the selection by the railroad held for cancellation. The company appealed from the decision in favor of Hewitt to the Secretary of the Interior, who affirmed the decision of the Commissioner.

and a patent was issued to Hewitt, June 22, 1895.

It was contended upon the argument in this court that the words "the odd sections of land hereby granted," used in the 6th section, referred to the lands described in the "1st" (3d) section of the act; that is, to those within the place limits, which were free from pre-emption and other claims, and unappropriated prior to the definite location of the road; and that, as to "all other lands on the line of said road, when surveyed," the act expressly declared that the pre-emption and homestead acts should extend to them; "that Congress took pains to declare that it did not exclude from the operation of those statutes any lands except those granted to the company in the place limits of the road which were unappropriated when the line of the railroad was definitely fixed; and that if at the time such line was 'definitely fixed,' it appeared that any of the lands granted, that is, lands in the place limits, had been sold, granted, or [684] *otherwise appropriated, then, but not before, the company was entitled to go into the indemnity limits beyond the 40 mile and within the 50 mile line, and under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, and not otherwise, select odd-numbered sections to the extent necessary to supply the loss in the place limits."

The court, treating the question as one of grave doubt, based its views largely upon the practice of the Land Office since 1888, and of the opinions of Secretary Lamar in the Atlantic & P. R. Co. 6 Land Dec. 84, and of Secretary Vilas in Northern P. R. Co. v. Miller, 7 Land Dec. 100. The opinion of Secretary Lamar indicated that some of his predecessors had assumed that the power to withdraw lands within the indemnity limits could be exercised upon a definite location of the railroad before the loss in the place limits had been ascertained, but treating it as an original proposition, he thought the words of the act, "that the odd-numbered sections of land hereby granted shall not be liable to sale, or entry, or pre-emption," indicated clearly the legislative will that none other should be withdrawn than the odd-numbered sections within the granted limits. Mr. Secretary Vilas, considering the same subject, said: "In my opinion.—and it is with great deference that I present it,—the granting act not only did not authorize a withdrawal of lands in the indemnity limits, but forbade it. The difference between lands in the granted limits and land in indemnity limits, and between the time and manner in which the title of the United States changes to and vests in the grantee, accordingly as lands are within one or the other of these limits, has been clearly defined by the Supreme Court, and it is sufficient to state the well-settled rules upon this subject."

The same question arose in Northern P. R. Co. v. Davis, 19 Land Dec. 87, and in Northern P. R. Co. v. Ayers, [24 Land Dec. 40], wherein Secretaries Smith and Francis expressed their concurrence in the views announced by Secretaries Lamar and Vilas.

The court rested its decision largely upon this concurrence of views and long-continued practice of the Land Department, and summed up its opinion, in the following words: "If this were *done" (that construction overthrown), "it is to be apprehended that great, if not endless, confusion would ensue in the administration of the public lands, and that the rights of a vast number of people who have acquired homes under the pre-emption and homestead laws, in reliance upon the ruling of Secretary Vilas and his successors in office, would be destroyed. . . . If the practice in the Land Department could, with reason, be held to have been wrong, it cannot be said to have been so plainly or palpably wrong as to justify the court, after the lapse of so many years, in adjudging that it had misconstrued the act of July 2, 1864."

It is attempted to distinguish the case under consideration from that of Hewitt v. Schultz, by the fact that the land in controversy in this case is within the indemnity limits of a grant to a railroad passing through a state, and within the department's withdrawal of a 30-mile strip under the 6th section of the act, while the land in the Hewitt Case fell within the indemnity limits of the grant within a territory, and was beyond the 40-mile withdrawal, and was not withdrawn from sale by the 6th section, but was expressly declared to be still subject to the operations of the pre-emption laws. It is true that the lands withdrawn in that case lay within a territory and outside of the 40-mile strip required to be surveyed, while in this case the withdrawal of all the lands within the 30-mile strip operates as a withdrawal of all lands within the indemnity, as well as within the place limits, because the line ran through a state instead of a territory. But the real question is not whether the indemnity lands lay within or beyond the 40-mile limit, but whether the withdrawal can operate upon indemnity lands at all. It makes no difference in principle whether the indemnity lands are within or beyond the 40-mile limit, which is not a limit of withdrawal, but of survey, and the whole argument in Hewitt v. Schultz is directed to the question whether it is within the power of a Secretary of the Interior to withdraw indemnity, as well as place lands from settlement. The quantity of lands to be surveyed seems to have been arbitrarily fixed by Congress, with little attention to the actual limits of the grant, so as to include all lands within 40 miles of each side of the railroads, that is, 10 miles beyond the indemnity limits within the states, but 10 *miles inside of [686] those limits within the territories; but the question of withdrawal is not necessarily dependent upon the question of survey, and the fact that in that case the indemnity lands were beyond the 40-mile limit was an incident, rather than a dominant fact. As said by Mr. Secretary Lamar: "It is manifest that the said act gave no especial authority or direction to the executive to withdraw said lands, and when such withdrawal was made it was done by virtue of the general authority over such matters possessed by the Secretary of the Interior and in the exercise of his discretion." The power of the Secretary to withdraw lands is exercised for the purpose of carrying out the grant to the railroad, and to prevent lands covered by said grant from being taken up by settlers before the road is completed and the patents issued to the company; but clearly that power cannot be exercised to withdraw lands which are beyond the intended limits of the grant. It was said by Secretary Smith to have been exercised for many years, "but the right of this asserted power on the part of the executive is involved in obscurity." Northern P. R. Co. v. Davis, 19 Land Dec. 87, 88.

That the object of § 6 was to direct a survey, and not a withdrawal of lands within the 40-mile strip, seems to have been the opinion of this court in St. Paul & S. C. R. Co. v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 112 U. S. 720, 28 L. ed. 572, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, in which Mr. Justice Miller, delivering the opinion, says, p. 732, L. ed. p. 876, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 341:

"The plaintiff in error insists that the map of its line of road was filed in 1859. The court of original jurisdiction finds that, up to the time of the trial in October, 1878, a period of nearly twenty years, no selection of these lands had ever been made by that company, or anyone for it. Was there a vested right in this company, during all this time, to have, not only these lands, but all the other odd sections within the 20-mile limits on each side of the line of the road, await its pleasure? Had the settlers in that populous region no right to buy of the government because the company might choose to take them, or might, after all this delay, find out that they were necessary to make up deficiencies in other quarters? How long were such lands to be withheld from market and withdrawn from taxation, and forbidden to cultivation?

[687] "It is true that in some cases the statute requires the Land Department to withdraw the lands within these secondary limits from market, and in others, the officers do so voluntarily. This, however, is to give the company a reasonable time to ascertain their deficiencies and make their selections.

"It by no means implies a vested right in said company, inconsistent with the right of the government to sell, or of any other company to select, which has the same right of selection within those limits. Each company having this right of selection in such case, and having no other right, is bound to exercise that right with reasonable diligence; and when it is exercised in accordance with the statute, it becomes entitled to the lands as selected."

If the command of the statute were to withdraw from the market, instead of survey, all odd-numbered sections within the 40-mile strip, the position of the railroad company in this case would be impregnable; but as the withdrawal only extends to the lands "hereby granted," we must look elsewhere to ascertain the meaning of those precise words. There is good reason for withdrawing lands within the place limits, since these lands already belong to the railroad company, as soon as they are identified by the location of the line, while lands within the indemnity limits may never be required at all, and in most cases are required only to a limited extent. Undoubtedly the company acquires title to both classes of lands by the 3d section of the granting act; but it acquires a title to lands within the place limits by a present grant; but to land within the indemnity limits, only by a future power of selection. In both cases the statute is the origin of the title; but in the one case it gives instantaneously; in the other it is a mere promise to give in the future, and requires the action of the railroad to perfect it. The words "hereby granted" evidently refer to the former.

Treating this case as a reargument of the question involved in Hewitt v. Schultz, and it practically comes to that, we still adhere to the principle there announced. It seems to us the more reasonable, if not the necessary, inference to be deduced from the language of §§ 3 and 6. By the former there is "hereby granted . . . every al- [688] ternate section of public land, not mineral, designated by odd numbers, to the amount of twenty alternate sections per mile on each side of said railroad line, as said company may adopt, through the territories of the United States, and ten alternate sections of land per mile on each side of said railroad whenever it passes through any state." These words terminate the grant, the remainder of the clause being immaterial in this connection, and if the whole clause had been followed by a period, instead of a semicolon, the meaning, perhaps, would have been clearer. But there follows another clause, that "whenever, prior to said time, any of said sections, or parts of sections, shall have been granted, sold, reserved, occupied by homestead settlers, or pre-empted, or otherwise disposed of, other lands shall be selected by said company in lieu thereof, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, in alternate sections, and designated by odd numbers, not more than 10 miles beyond the limits of said alternate sections," etc. There is here a clear distinction between the lands granted in presenti in the first clause, and lands to be thereafter selected by the company, whenever the deficiency in the granted lands shall be ascertained.

The 6th section carries out the same idea. It requires a survey of 40 miles in width on both sides of the entire line, whether passing through states or territories. This would include only the granted or place limits within a territory, but within a state would cover the indemnity limits as well. There was no order in the act to withdraw any lands from settlement or sale, but such withdrawal seems to have been made in pursuance of the practice of the Interior Department, and for the purpose of preventing lands granted to the railroad company from being taken up by settlers, before the completion of the line and the final issue of patents. As was said by Mr. Secretary Lamar in the Atlantic & P. R. Co. 6 Land Dec. 84: "Waiving all questions as to whether or not said granting act took from the Secretary all authority to withdraw said indemnity limits from settlement, it is manifest that the said act gave no special authority or direction to the executive to withdraw said lands; and when [689] such withdrawal was *made it was done by virtue of the general authority over such matters possessed by the Secretary of the Interior, and in the exercise of his discretion; so that, were the withdrawal to be revoked, no law would be violated, no contract broken." But as the power to withdraw extends only to the "lands hereby granted" and all other lands, except those hereby granted, remain open to settlement, we are thrown back upon § 3 to determine what are the lands "hereby granted."

Now, as already observed, there is a clear distinction in § 3 between granted lands and lands to be selected after the deficiency in the granted lands has been ascertained. It is true that, prior to this selection being made, many of these indemnity lands may be taken up, and an insufficient amount left for the railroad (and we do not deny the force of the dissenting opinion in Hewitt v. Schultz in that connection), but we think this possibility serves rather as a basis for a further action by Congress, such as was made in the Northern Pacific case by the joint resolution of May 31, 1870 (16 Stat. at L. 378), than as a reason for withdrawing from settlement a vast amount of land which the railroad may never have occasion to require. It was said by Secretary Lamar in the case of the Atlantic & P. R. Co. 6 Land Dec. 84, 87: "As to the lands within the indemnity limits, the contract was based upon two contingencies; that of losing lands within the granted limits, and being able to find sufficient to indemnify the company among the odd-numbered sections within a further limit of 10 miles. Here the interest of the company was so remote and contingent, being a mere potentiality, and not a grant, that Congress declined to order a withdrawal for the benefit of the same, or even a survey within the territories." In view of the constant trend of population toward the western territories, it is a serious matter to withdraw these enormous tracts from settlement and hold them, as it were, in mortmain against the protest of those who stand ready to enter upon and possess them.

It becomes still more serious when, as in this case, there was a delay of twenty-seven years between the granting act and the act of selection. It seems intolerable that a settler, who had entered and paid for lands [690] in good faith, should be liable to an *ouster after a possible lapse of twenty-seven years, when the very improvements he may have put upon the lands might be the reason for their selection by the company.

We are therefore of opinion that the act of July 27, 1866, did not authorize the withdrawal by the Secretary of the Interior of the indemnity lands, that such lands remained open to homestead and pre-emption entry, and that patents issued to settlers within such indemnity limits, based upon the entries made prior to the selection by the railroad company, approved by the Interior Department, were valid as conveyances of the land as against the selection by the railroad company.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of California is therefore affirmed.

OTTO GROECK et al., Appts.,
v.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 690-692.)

Railroad land grants—withdrawal from settlement—lands within indemnity limits.

This case is governed by the decision in Southern P. R. Co. v. Bell, ante, 383.

[No. 82.]

*Argued and Submitted December 5, 6, 1901.
Decided January 13, 1902.*

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of California in favor of plaintiff in a suit to recover real property. Reversed and remanded with directions to dismiss the bill.

See same case below, 31 C. C. A. 334, 59 U. S. App. 366, 87 Fed. 970.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was a bill in equity filed in the circuit court for the southern district of California by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, plaintiff, against Otto Groeck and another, defendants, to obtain a decree declaring the company to be the rightful owner of the south half of a certain quarter section of land in Kings county, California, and that defendants hold the legal title thereto in trust for it, a conveyance of which was prayed.

The amended bill, as abstracted by the circuit court of appeals (31 C. C. A. 334, 59 U. S. App. 366, 87 Fed. 970), alleged: "That the appellant accepted the terms of the grant, fixed the general route of its road as contemplated by the act, and on January 3, 1867, filed a map thereof *in the office of [691] the Commissioner of the General Land Office; that on that date the Commissioner accepted and approved the map and the route designated by it, and on March 22, 1867, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, he withdrew the odd sections of land lying within 30 miles of the line of road from sale or location, pre-emption, or homestead entry: that on November 2, 1869, the Secretary of the Interior made an order declaring the withdrawal revoked; that on December 15, 1869, the Secretary suspended his order of November 2; that on July 26, 1870, the Secretary restored the withdrawal of March 22, 1867; that on August 15, 1887, the Secretary declared the withdrawal of March 22, 1867, revoked, as to the indemnity sections thereof; that the appellant commenced to build its road during the year 1870, and completed the construction in different sections between that date and the year 1889—the last section, extending from Huron westerly to Alcalde, having been constructed during the year 1888; that the land in suit is opposite to and contemporaneous with that section, and is within the indemnity limits of the grant, and is not included in any exception therefrom; that on September 2, 1885, the appellee Groeck settled on the land in controversy, and during the same month filed his pre-emption claim therefor in the proper land office of the United States, and thereafter complied with the land-office regulations, and on June 7, 1886, made pre-emption proof and payment for the land; that on April 11, 1890, patent was issued from the United States conveying the land to him; that, as the appellant's road was constructed in several sections, such sections were examined by commissioners appointed by the President, as provided by § 4 of the act, and that said commissioners reported that such sections had been completed as required by the act, and thereupon the President accepted and approved the reports; that a map of the definite location of said section between Huron and Alcalde was filed with and approved by the Secretary of the Interior on April 2, 1889, and the President accepted and approved the commissioners' report on that section on November 8, 1889; that on July 13, 1891, the appellant, acting under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, selected the land in suit as granted to it by the act."

NOTE.—As to land grants to railroads—see note to Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 L. ed. U. S. 794.

*To this bill defendants interposed a plea[692] setting up the various steps by which the defendant Groeck obtained the patent of the land as a qualified pre-emptor, and thereby, as alleged, obtained a legal and perfect title in fee simple; and further setting up the defense of laches to the claim of the railroad company.

The circuit court entered an order sustaining the plea upon the ground of laches, with leave to the company to reply to the plea and take issue as to the matters of fact therein alleged. 74 Fed. 585. The company having declined to avail itself of this privilege, the circuit court ordered the bill to be dismissed. Whereupon the railroad company appealed to the circuit court of appeals, which reversed the decree of the circuit court, and remanded the case for further proceedings. 31 C. C. A. 334, 59 U. S. App. 366, 87 Fed. 970. The case coming on again for hearing, a decree was rendered for the plaintiff, another appeal taken to the court of appeals, and the decree of the circuit court affirmed.

Mr. Joseph H. Call submitted the cause for appellants.

Mr. Maxwell Evarts argued the cause, and, with Mr. L. E. Payson, filed a brief for appellee.

For contentions of counsel, see their briefs as reported in Southern P. R. Co. v. Bell, ante, 383.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

This case resembles the one just decided in all its essential particulars, and is controlled by it.

The decrees of both courts are therefore reversed, and the case remanded to the Circuit Court for the Southern District of California, with directions to dismiss the bill.

MEMORANDA

OF

CASES DISPOSED OF WITHOUT OPINION

[693]RUBLEE A. COLE, Plaintiff in Error, v. F. S. GARLAND et al.* [No. 339.]

In Error to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Mr. Rublee A. Cole p. p.

Mr. Jackson H. Ralston for defendants in error.

October 21, 1901. Writ of error dismissed for the want of jurisdiction, on the authority of German Nat. Bank v. Speckert, 181 U. S. 405, 45 L. ed. 926, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 688.

ALVIN H. ARMSTRONG et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. SIMON D. MAYER et al. [No. 353.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Nebraska.

Messrs. Charles O. Whedon, L. C. Burr, and Chas. L. Burr for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Walter J. Lamb for defendants in error.

October 21, 1901. Writ of error dismissed for the want of jurisdiction, on the authority of Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 37 L. ed. 1111, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131.

STATE OF WISCONSIN ex rel. JAMES L. GATES, Plaintiff in Error, v. COMMISSIONERS OF PUBLIC LANDS et al. [No. 66.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Wisconsin.

Mr. Rublee A. Cole for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. E. R. Hicks and Charles E. Buell for defendants in error.

November 4, 1901. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction, on authority of Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 147 U. S. 531, 37 L. ed. 267, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353; Wilson v. North Carolina, 169 U. S. 595, 42 L. ed. 871, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435; Mills County v. Burlington & M. River R. Co. 107 U. S. 557, 27 L. ed. 578, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; Cook County v. Calumet & C. Canal & Dock Co. 138 U. S. 635, 655, 34 L. ed. 1110, 1117, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435; Walsh v. Columbus, H. Valley & A. R. Co. 176 U. S. 479, 44 L. ed. 553, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 393; Zadig v. Baldwin, 166 U. S. 485, 41 L. ed. 1087, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 639; Chapin v. Fye, 179 U. S. 127, 45 L. ed. 119, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71; and see State ex rel. Gates v. Public Land Comrs. 106 Wis. 584, 82 N. W. 549.

183 U. S.

J. ELLIS RODLEY, Plaintiff in Error, v. PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA.* [No. 296.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of California.

Mr. George D. Collins for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Tiley L. Ford and C. N. Post for defendant in error.

November 11, 1901. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction, on the authority of Caldwell v. Texas, 137 U. S. 692, 34 L. ed. 816, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; F. G. Osley Store Co. v. Butler County, 166 U. S. 648, 41 L. ed. 1149, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709; Powell v. Brunswick County, 150 U. S. 433, 37 L. ed. 1134, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166.

GEORGE BISSERT, Appellant, v. JAMES J. HAGAN, Warden, etc., et al. [No. 437.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

Mr. Roger M. Sherman for appellant.

Mr. Charles E. Le Barbier for appellees.

December 2, 1901. Final order affirmed, with costs, on the authority of Storti v. Massachusetts, 183 U. S. 138, ante, 120, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72; Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 172, 44 L. ed. 119, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Markusen v. Boucher, 175 U. S. 184, 44 L. ed. 124, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76, and cases cited.

CENTRAL OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY (as reorganized) et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. DANIEL J. MAHONEY. [No. 76.]

On a Certificate from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Messrs. J. H. Collins and Hugh L. Bond, Jr., for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Thomas Ewing Steele for defendant in error.

December 9, 1901. Question certified answered in the negative on the authority of Gableman v. Peoria, D. & E. R. Co. 179 U. S. 335, 45 L. ed. 220, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171.

393

UNITED STATES, Petitioner, v. AMERICAN STEAMSHIP LAURADA, ETC. [No. 64.]
On Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

[695] *Attorney General, Solicitor General Richards, and Assistant Attorney General Hoyt for petitioner.

Messrs. Andrew C. Gray and H. H. Ward for respondent.

January 6, 1902. Decree affirmed by a divided court, and cause remanded to the district court of the United States for the district of Delaware.

CHARLES MAYER, Petitioner, v. OLIVER C. FULLER, Trustee. [No. 335.]

Petition for Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Messrs. A. B. Browne, Alex. Britton, and Thos. H. Dorr for petitioner.

Mr. Charles C. Lancaster for respondent.
October 21, 1901. Denied.

LOTTIE F. POWERS, Petitioner, v. MASSACHUSETTS HOMEOPATHIC HOSPITAL. [No. 394.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

Messrs. Arthur H. Russell and Thos H. Russell for petitioner.

Mr. Solomon Lincoln for respondent.
October 21, 1901. Denied.

KATE TOOTLE et al., Petitioners, v. R. R. COLEMAN et al. [No. 399.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

Mr. R. E. Ball for petitioners.

Mr. David Smyth for respondents.
October 21, 1901. Denied.

CITY OF GALVESTON, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES MORTGAGE & TRUST COMPANY et al. [No. 404.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Messrs. James B. Stubbs and D. W. Baker for petitioner.

Messrs. Julien T. Davies, R. S. Lovett, and Brainard Tolles for respondents.

October 21, 1901. Denied.

GEORGE L. WHITMAN, Petitioner, v. KATE A. NORTON [No. 425]; GEORGE L. WHITMAN, Petitioner, v. JOHN WATTS, as Receiver [No. 426]; GEORGE L. WHITMAN, Petitioner, v. CITIZENS' BANK OF READING, PA. [No. 427].

Petitions for Writs of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. Wm. G. Wilson for petitioner.

Messrs. Chas. E. Hughes and Arthur C. Rounds for Norton.

Messrs. Wm. B. Hornblower and McCready Sykes for Watts, Rec'r and Citizens' Bank.

October 21, 1901. Denied.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY, Petitioner, v. KATE YEARGIN, Administratrix. [No. 431.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the *Eighth Circuit. [696]

Messrs. Thomas T. Fauntleroy, Shepard Barclay, and L. E. Payson for petitioner.

No opposition.

October 21, 1901. Denied.

JOHN N. STEWART, Petitioner, v. VILLAGE OF ASHTABULA, OHIO, et al. [No. 432.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Mr. Morison R. Waite for petitioner.

Mr. J. H. McGiffert for respondents.

October 21, 1901. Denied.

HENRY NELSON, Claimant, et al., Petitioners, v. H. BUCHANAN, Claimant, et al. [No. 433.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

Mr. Jackson H. Ralston for petitioners.

No opposition.

October 21, 1901. Denied.

JOHN F. KUMLER, Petitioner, v. GEORGE W. HALE, Executor, etc. [No. 326.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Messrs. Orville S. Brumback, Jos. B. Foraker, and Arthur Peter for petitioner.

Messrs. Barton Smith and Rufus H. Baker for respondent.

October 28, 1901. Denied.

CAMPBELL PRINTING PRESS & MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Petitioner, v. DUPLEX PRINTING PRESS COMPANY. [No. 340.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Mr. Louis W. Southgate for petitioner.

Messrs. T. H. Alexander and Arthur E. Dowell for respondent.

October 28, 1901. Denied.

WILCOX & GIBBS SEWING MACHINE COMPANY, Petitioner, v. THOMAS P. SHERRBORNE, JR., et al. [No. 352.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

Messrs. Preston K. Erdman, Geo. Tucker Bispham, and Hubert Howson for petitioner.

Messrs. John G. Johnson and Frank P. Prichard for respondent.

October 28, 1901. Denied.

YELLOW POPLAR LUMBER COMPANY, Petitioner, v. JOHN F. DANIEL. [No. 374.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

[697] *Messrs. Jno. W. M. Stewart, Jno. N. Baldwin, and Jno. F. Hager for petitioner.
Mr. Thomas R. Brown for respondent.
 October 28, 1901. Denied.

MORGAN'S LOUISIANA & TEXAS RAILROAD & STEAMSHIP COMPANY, Petitioner, v. SCHOONER ROBERT GRAHAM DUN, ETC. [No. 424.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. Maxwell Evarts for petitioner.
Mr. J. Parker Kirlin for respondent.
 October 28, 1901. Denied.

ROBERT HERBST, Petitioner, v. STEAMSHIP ASIATIC PRINCE. [No. 435.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. J. Hubley Ashton for petitioner.
Mr. J. Parker Kirlin for respondent.
 October 28, 1901. Denied.

KOKOMO FENCE MACHINE COMPANY, Petitioner, v. ALVA L. KITSELMAN et al. [No. 389.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Messrs. Ephraim Banning, Thomas A. Banning, and Cassius C. Shirley for petitioner.

Mr. Robert H. Parkinson opposing.
 October 28, 1901. Granted.

BANK OF TOPEKA, Petitioner, v. WILLIAM S. EATON et al. [No. 418.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

Mr. N. H. Loomis for petitioner.
Messrs. Edward H. Hutchins, Henry Wheeler, Chas. T. Gallagher, and Mayhew R. Hitch for respondents.
 November 4, 1901. Denied.

SIMPSON'S PATENT DRY DOCK COMPANY, Petitioner, v. ATLANTIC & EASTERN STEAMSHIP COMPANY. [No. 445.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

Messrs. Eugene P. Carver and E. E. Blodgett for petitioner.

Messrs. Lewis S. Dabney and F. Cunningham for respondent.
 November 4, 1901. Denied.

183 U. S.

NASHUA SAVINGS BANK, Petitioner, v. ANGL-AMERICAN LAND MORTGAGE & AGENCY COMPANY (LIMITED). [No. 415.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

Mr. John S. H. Frink for petitioner.
Mr. Omar Powell opposing.
 November 11, 1901. Granted.

*JOHN A. BRILL et al., Petitioners, v. PECK-[698] HAM MOTOR TRUCK & WHEEL COMPANY et al. [No. 444.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Messrs. Francis Rawle and Frederick P. Fish for petitioners.

Mr. Henry P. Wells opposing.
 November 11, 1901. Granted.

CITY OF AUSTIN, Petitioner, v. E. C. BARTHOLOMEW and JOSEPH NALLE, Receivers. [No. 429.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Mr. S. R. Fisher for petitioner.
 No opposition.
 November 18, 1901. Denied.

CITY OF NEW ORLEANS, Petitioner, v. JAMES JACKSON. [No. 458.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Mr. Samuel L. Gilmore for petitioner.
Messrs. J. D. Rouse, Wm. Grant, Richard De Gray, and H. M. Jordan for respondent.
 November 18, 1901. Denied. (Mr. Justice White and Mr. Justice Peckham took no part in the decision on this application.)

HARRIET M. ZANE, Petitioner, v. COUNTY OF HAMILTON. [No. 344.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Mr. George A. Sanders for petitioner.
Mr. J. M. Hamill opposing.
 November 25, 1901. Granted.

WILLIAM J. F. DWYER, Petitioner, v. LEWIS NIXON. [No. 446.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Messrs. Louis Marshall and James M. Beck for petitioner.

Mr. Wm. G. Low for respondent.
 November 25, 1901. Denied.

WILLIAM STUBER, Petitioner, v. LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY. [No. 448.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Messrs. Thomas B. Turley and Heber J. May for petitioner.

Mr. H. W. Bruce for respondent.
 November 25, 1901. Denied.

AMERICAN ORDNANCE COMPANY, Petitioner,
v. DRIGGS-SEABURY GUN & AMMUNITION
COMPANY. [No. 450.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

[699] *Mr. Wm. H. Singleton for petitioner.
Messrs. Ernest Wilkinson and S. T. Fisher for respondent.

November 25, 1901. Denied.

EUSTACE R. TRACY, Executrix, etc., et al., Petitioners, v. MARY S. EGGLESTON et al.
[No. 465.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Messrs. J. D. Rouse, Wm. Grant, and H.
M. Jordan for petitioners.

No opposition.

November 25, 1901. Denied.

SAMUEL BELL, Petitioner, v. COMMON-WEALTH TITLE INSURANCE & TRUST COM-PANY. [No. 463.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

Mr. Attorney General, Mr. Solicitor General Richards, and Mr. Assistant Attorney General Beck for petitioner.

Mr. John G. Johnson opposing.

December 2, 1901. Granted.

EMPIRE TRANSPORTATION COMPANY, Peti- tioner, v. W. H. PARSONS et al. [No. 471.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

Mr. Henry Galbraith Ward for petitioner.

Mr. Wilson R. Gay for respondents.

December 2, 1901. Denied.

CENTRAL STOCK & GRAIN EXCHANGE OF CHI-CAGO, Petitioner, v. EMMA BENDINGER.
[No. 472.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Messrs. Jacob J. Kern and Wm. M. Springer for petitioner.

Mr. Rufus S. Simmons for respondent.

December 2, 1901. Denied.

WALTER SCOTT, Petitioner, v. GOSS PRINT-ING PRESS COMPANY. [No. 464.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

Messrs. Benjamin F. Lee, Wm. H. H. Lee, and Jas. G. K. Lee for petitioner.

Messrs. L. L. Bond, M. B. Philipp, and C.
E. Pickard for respondent.

December 9, 1901. Denied.

LAKELAND TRANSPORTATION COMPANY, ETC., et al., Petitioners, v. PETER P. MILLER et al. [No. 479.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Messrs. Harvey D. Goulder, Frank S. Masten, and Frank S. Bright for petitioners.

Mr. F. H. Canfield for respondents.

December 9, 1901. Denied.

Second Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Mr. Harvey D. Goulder for petitioners.

Mr. F. H. Canfield for respondents.

January 20, 1902. Denied.

*METROPOLITAN TRUST COMPANY OF THE CITY [700]
OF NEW YORK et al., Petitioners, v. MER-CANTILE TRUST COMPANY OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK, Trustee, et al. [No. 481.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Mr. John G. Johnson for petitioners.

Messrs. Laurence Maxwell, Jr., Paul D.
Cravath, and Richard Reid Rogers for respondents.

December 9, 1901. Denied.

EDWARD J. HINGSTON et al., Petitioners, v.
STEAM VESSEL VULCAN, ETC. [No. 470.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. George Clinton for petitioners.

Mr. John C. Shaw for respondent.

January 6, 1902. Denied.

CITY OF NEW YORK et al., Petitioners, v.
SAMUEL PINE et al. [No. 491.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. George L. Sterling for petitioners.

Mr. Stephen G. Williams opposing.

January 6, 1902. Granted.

CHATTANOOGA NATIONAL BUILDING & LOAN
ASSOCIATION, Petitioner, v. WILLIAM H.
DENSON et al. [No. 492.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Mr. Robert Pritchard for petitioner.

Mr. Oscar W. Underwood opposing.

January 6, 1902. Granted.

S. S. WHITE DENTAL MANUFACTURING COM-PANY, Petitioner, v. DELAWARE INSUR-ANCE COMPANY, ETC. [No. 460.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

Messrs. Richard C. Dale and Joseph C.
Fraleay for petitioner.

Mr. John G. Johnson for respondent.

January 13, 1902. Denied.

CHARLES SWEENEY et al., Petitioners, v. KENNEDY J. HANLEY. [No. 494.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

Mr. W. B. Heyburn for petitioners.

Mr. Jno. R. McBride for respondent.

January 13, 1902. Denied.

GEORGE J. BAER, Petitioner, v. WILLIAM R. KERR et al. [No. 499.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

183 U. S.

Messrs. H. Bisbee and H. C. McDougal for petitioner.

Mr. R. H. Liggett for respondents.

January 13, 1902. Denied.

*AETNA INSURANCE COMPANY OF HARTFORD, [701] CONN., Petitioner, v. DANIEL LANGAN. [No. 500.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

Mr. Henry E. Davis for petitioner.

Mr. R. C. Langan for respondent.

January 13, 1902. Denied. (Mr. Justice Gray took no part in the disposition of this application.)

397

CASES

ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

SUPREME COURT

OF THE

UNITED STATES

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1901.

Vol. 184.

REFERENCE TABLE

OF SUCH CASES
DECIDED IN U. S. SUPREME COURT,
OCTOBER TERM, 1901,
AND REPORTED HEREIN,

VOLUME 184,

AS ALSO APPEAR IN OFFICIAL REPORTER'S EDITION.

Off. Rep. 184 U. S.	Title.	Here In.	Off. Rep. 184 U. S.	Title.	Here In.
1-2	Mueller v. Nugent	405	78-83	Illinois v. Illinois C. R. Co. ("Illinois ex rel. Hunt v. Illi- nois C. R. Co.")	442
2-4	" "	406		" "	443
4-7	" "	407		" "	444
7-8	" "	408	83	" "	445
8-10	" "	409	83-86	" "	446
10-12	" "	410	86-89	" "	447
12-15	" "	411	89-91	" "	448
15-17	" "	412	91-94	" "	449
17-18	" "	413	94-96	" "	449
18-20	Louisville Trust Co. v. Com- ingor	413	96-99	" "	449
20-23	" "	414	99	Brainard v. Buck	450
23-24	" "	415	99-101	" "	451
24-26	" "	416	101-103	" "	452
27	Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Eu- bank	416	103-104	" "	453
27-29	" "	417	104-105	" "	454
29-32	" "	418	105-107	" "	455
32-34	" "	419	107-110	" "	456
34-36	" "	420	110-111	" "	456
36-39	" "	421	111-112	Cleveland Trust Co. v. Lander	457
39-42	" "	422	112-113	" "	458
42-44	" "	423	113-115	" "	459
44-47	" "	424	115	" "	459
47-49	" "	425	115-117	Voigt v. Detroit	460
49	United States v. Southern P. R. Co.	425	117-118	" "	461
50-52	" "	426	118-120	" "	462
52	" "	427	120-123	" "	463
52-54	" "	428	123-124	{ United States v. Barlow	464
54-57	" "	429	124-127	{ Barlow v. United States	465
57-59	" "	430	127-129	" "	466
59-61	" "	431	129-132	" "	467
61	King v. Portland	431	132	" "	468
61-63	" "	433	132-134	" "	469
63-65	" "	434	134-137	" "	470
65-68	" "	435	137-139	" "	471
68-70	" "	436	139-140	" "	471
71-72	McDonald v. Thompson	437	140-142	United States v. Ewing	472
72	" "	438	142-145	" "	473
72-75	" "	439	145-147	" "	474
75-77	" "	440	147-150	" "	475
77	Illinois v. Illinois C. R. Co. ("Illinois ex rel. Hunt v. Illi- nois C. R. Co.")	440	150-151	" "	475
78	" "	441	151-152	Lake Benton First Nat. Bank v. Watt ("First Nat. Bank v. Watt")	476
184 U. S.			152	" "	477
			152-155	" "	401

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. 184 U. S.	Title.	Here In.	Off. Rep. 184 U. S.	Title.	Here In.
155	Lake Benton First Nat. Bank v. Watt ("First Nat. Bank v. Watt")	478	287-290	Terlinden v. Ames	545
156-157	League v. Texas	478	290-293	Huguley Mfg. Co. v. Galetton Cotton Mills	546
157	" "	479	293-294	" "	547
157-160	" "	480	294-295	" "	548
160-162	" "	481	295-296	" "	549
162-163	Hatfield v. King	481	297	Huguley Mfg. Co., Re	549
163-164	" "	482	297-300	" "	550
164-166	" "	483	300-301	" "	551
166-168	" "	484	301-302	" "	552
168	" "	485	302	Waite v. Santa Cruz	552
169-170	Lykins v. McGrath	485	303-306	" "	559
170-172	" "	486	306-308	" "	560
172-173	" "	487	308-311	" "	561
173-174	Marande v. Texas & P. R. Co.	487	311-314	" "	562
174-175	" "	488	314-316	" "	563
175-176	" "	489	316-319	" "	564
177-179	" "	490	319-321	" "	565
179-182	" "	491	321-324	" "	566
182-184	" "	492	324-326	" "	567
184-190	" "	493	326-329	" "	568
190-191	" "	494	329	Clark v. Titusville	569
191-192	" "	495	330-332	" "	572
192-194	" "	496	332-334	" "	573
194-197	" "	497	334	Rothschild v. Knight	573
197-198	" "	498	334-337	" "	574
199-200	Minnesota v. Northern Securi- ties Co.	499	337-338	" "	575
200-203	" "	500	339-340	" "	579
203-205	" "	501	340-342	" "	580
205-208	" "	502	342	Schuerman v. Arizona	580
208-211	" "	503	343-345	" "	581
211-213	" "	504	345-348	" "	582
213-216	" "	505	348-350	" "	583
216-219	" "	506	350-353	" "	584
219-222	" "	507	353-354	" "	585
222-224	" "	508	354-356	Skaneateles Water Works Co. v. Skaneateles	585
224-227	" "	509	356-358	" "	586
227-229	" "	510	358	" "	588
229-232	" "	511	358-359	" "	589
232-234	" "	512	360-363	" "	590
234-235	" "	515	363-366	" "	591
235-237	" "	516	366-368	" "	592
237-240	" "	517	368	Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co.	592
240-243	" "	518	369-370	" "	595
243-245	" "	519	370	" "	596
245-247	" "	520	370-371	" "	597
247	United States v. St. Louis & M. V. Transp. Co.	520	371-373	" "	598
247-248	" "	521	373-376	" "	599
248-249	" "	524	376-378	" "	600
249-252	" "	525	378-379	" "	604
252-255	" "	526	379-382	" "	605
255-257	" "	527	382-384	" "	606
257	" "	528	384-387	" "	607
258-259	Studebaker v. Perry	528	387-390	" "	608
259-261	" "	530	390-393	" "	609
261-264	" "	531	393-395	" "	610
264-266	" "	532	395-398	" "	611
266-269	" "	533	398-399	" "	612
269	" "	534	399-400	Wilson v. Standefer	612
270-271	Terlinden v. Ames	534	400-403	" "	613
271-274	" "	535	403-405	" "	614
274-276	" "	536	405-408	" "	615
276-277	" "	540	408-411	" "	617
277-280	" "	541	411-413	" "	618
280-283	" "	542	413-416	" "	619
283-285	" "	543	416	United States v. Rio Grande Dam & Irrig. Co.	619
285-287	" "	544	417-418	" "	620

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. 184 U. S.	Title.	Here In.	Off. Rep. 184 U. S.	Title.	Here In.
418-421	United States v. Rio Grande		562-564	Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe
	Dam & Irrig. Co.	621		Co.	691
421-424	" "	622	564-567	" "	692
424-425	" "	623	567-569	" "	693
425	Booth v. Illinois	623	569-571	" "	694
426-428	" "	625	572	United States v. Camou	694
428-431	" "	626	572-574	" "	695
431-432	" "	627	574-577	" "	696
432-433	Goodrich v. Detroit	627	577	" "	697
433-435	" "	628	578-579	Eidman v. Martinez	697
435-437	" "	630	579-580	" "	698
437-440	" "	631	580-582	" "	700
440-441	" "	632	582-584	" "	701
441-443	United States v. Martinez	632	584-587	" "	702
443-444	" "	633	587-589	" "	703
444-447	" "	634	589-592	" "	704
447-450	" "	635	592	" "	705
450-452	O'Brien v. Wheelock	636	593-594	Moore v. Ruckgaber	705
452-454	" "	637	594-596	" "	706
454-457	" "	638	596-598	" "	707
457-460	" "	639	598	Busch v. Jones	707
460-462	" "	640	598-599	" "	708
462-465	" "	641	599-600	" "	709
465-468	" "	642	600-602	" "	710
468-470	" "	643	602-605	" "	711
470-473	" "	644	605-607	" "	712
473-475	" "	645	607-608	" "	713
475-478	" "	646	608-610	Patton v. Brady	713
478-480	" "	647	610	" "	714
480-482	" "	651	611	" "	715
482-485	" "	652	611-613	" "	716
485-487	" "	653	613-616	" "	717
487-490	" "	654	616-618	" "	718
490-493	" "	655	618-621	" "	719
493-495	" "	656	621-623	" "	720
495-496	" "	657	623-624	" "	721
497	Tullock v. Mulvane	657	624-626	Reloj Cattle Co. v. United
497-500	" "	658		States	721
500-502	" "	659	626-628	" "	722
502-503	" "	662	628-631	" "	723
503-506	" "	663	631-634	" "	724
506-508	" "	664	634-636	" "	725
508-511	" "	665	637-638	" "	726
511-513	" "	666	638-639	" "	727
513-516	" "	667	639-641	Ainsa v. United States	727
516-519	" "	668	641-643	" "	728
519-521	" "	669	643-645	" "	729
521-524	" "	670	645-647	" "	730
524	Monroe v. United States	670	647-649	" "	731
524-526	" "	671	649	Arivaca Land & C. Co. v.
526-529	" "	672		United States	731
529-530	" "	673	649-651	" "	732
530-531	Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. El-		651-653	" "	733
	liott	673	653-654	United States v. Baca	733
531-533	" "	674	654-656	" "	734
533-534	" "	676	656-659	" "	735
534-537	" "	677	659-660	" "	736
537-539	" "	678	660-661	Emblen v. Lincoln Land Co.	736
539-540	" "	679	661-663	" "	737
540	Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe		663-664	" "	738
	Co.	679	665-666	Iron Gate Bank v. Brady
541	" "	682		("Bank of Iron Gate v.
541-544	" "	683		Brady")	739
544-546	" "	684	666-668	" "	740
546-549	" "	685	668-669	" "	741
549-552	" "	686	669-670	Gwin v. United States	741
552-554	" "	687	670-671	" "	742
554-557	" "	688	671-672	" "	743
557-559	" "	689	672	" "	744
559-562	" "	690	672	" "	745
184 U. S.					403

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. 184 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 184 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
672-673	Gwin v. United States	746	678-681	Howard v. United States
673-674	" "	747		("Howard v. United States
674	" "	748		Use of Stewart")	757
674-675	" "	749	681-684	" "	758
675	" "	750	684-686	" "	759
676	Howard v. United States		686-689	" "	760
	("Howard v. United States		689-691	" "	761
	Use of Stewart")	754	691-694	" "	762
676-678	" "	756	695-701	Memorandum Cases	763-766
404					184 U. S.

THE DECISIONS
OF THE
Supreme Court of the United States

AT
OCTOBER TERM, 1901.

[1] *ARTHUR E. MUELLER, Trustee in Bankruptcy of Edward B. Nugent, Bankrupt, Petitioner,

v.
WILLIAM T. NUGENT.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 1-18.)

Bankruptcy—amendment of response to order to show cause—power of referee—validity of order of commitment—imprisonment for debt—jurisdiction of bankruptcy court to compel surrender of property.

1. An application to amend a response to an order to show cause why respondent should not be required to pay over to a trustee in bankruptcy money belonging to the bankrupt's estate, in which he had denied jurisdiction on the ground that he had not received the money after the petition in bankruptcy was filed, by asserting that whatever money belonging to the bankrupt came to his hands was held adversely to the bankrupt, may, in the discretion of the district court, to which the question of the validity of the referee's order directing the payment of such money had been certified at the respondent's request, be denied as too late, where first made after the decision by such court had been announced and a written opinion filed, and judgment was about to be entered.
2. A referee in bankruptcy has power in the first instance to enter an order to show cause why a person should not be required to pay over to the trustee in bankruptcy money in his hands belonging to the bankrupt's estate, and, upon the hearing, to enter an order directing the payment of such money by a certain date.
3. An order of commitment of a bankruptcy court, directing that a person be imprisoned until he complies with an order made in a proceeding in equity under the bankrupt act, is not invalid because it does not run in the name of the United States.
4. A person is not imprisoned for debt by an order of the bankruptcy court directing his imprisonment until he pays over to the trustee in bankruptcy money adjudged to be in his hands belonging to the bankrupt's estate.

5. A bankruptcy court has power by summary proceedings to compel the surrender to the trustee in bankruptcy duly appointed, of property of the bankrupt which has come into the hands of a third party before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, as the agent of the bankrupt, and to which he asserts no adverse claim.

[No. 257.]

*Argued and Submitted November 13, 1901.
Decided January 20, 1902.*

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit to review a decree which reversed a decree of the District Court for the District of Kentucky directing the imprisonment of a person for violation of an order in bankruptcy proceedings. Reversed.

See same case below, 44 C. C. A. 620, 105 Fed. 581.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

Edward B. Nugent was adjudicated a bankrupt March 23, 1900, on the petition of the Wayne Knitting Mills and others, his creditors, filed in the district court of the United States for the district of Kentucky, February 19, 1900, and the matter was referred to a referee. Arthur E. Mueller was appointed trustee of the bankrupt's estate, and on the 7th of April he obtained an order from the referee requiring the bankrupt to show cause why he should not pay over the sum of $14,233.45, made up of two items of $4,133.45 and $10,100. The response of the bankrupt was held insufficient; he was ordered to pay over; on failure to do so, was adjudged guilty of contempt, and the matter was reported to the court by the referee, with a recommendation that he be committed. On the suggestion that approaching senile imbecility made the bankrupt an unfit subject of punishment, the court discharged him, without prejudice to a renewal of the matter before the referee if subsequent developments rendered it proper.

April 13, 1900, the trustee filed his petition praying that an injunction might be issued against William T. Nugent, restraining him from disposing of the sum of $14,435.45, or any part thereof, belonging to the estate of the bankrupt, and for an order requiring him to pay the money to the trustee. This petition stated that William T. Nugent was in hiding. The referee granted the injunction, and entered an order that said William T. Nugent show cause within five days from service thereof why he should not be required to pay over.

A copy of this order was served on William T. Nugent, October 8, 1900, and on October 13 he appeared in person and by counsel, and filed a response to the rule. In this respondent set forth that "neither the court or the referee in bankruptcy herein has any jurisdiction either of this respondent or the matter involved, to make any order or to require this respondent to answer thereto, because he says that said records herein show that if respondent received said money or any part thereof, it was before the petition in bankruptcy was filed; and in that event neither the court or the referee in bankruptcy can proceed against this respondent as herein attempted by order or rule to pay, and he now hereby asks that this be taken as his response herein, and that said order be set aside and vacated. He says that at no time since the filing of the petition in bankruptcy herein has he received said $14,435.45, or any part thereof."

For further response he said that he had been indicted in the district court for receiving said $14,435.45, after the filing of the petition, and with retaining the same, and [3]aiding and abetting in the retention thereof, both after the filing and the adjudication, for the purpose of defeating the bankrupt law, and that he ought not to be required to respond, and his response would tend to incriminate him.

The matter came on for hearing October 16, it being stipulated, without prejudice to the objection to the jurisdiction, that the depositions of Edward B. Nugent and others named (not including William T. Nugent), theretofore taken in the cause, might be read. The referee summarized the evidence, as appears from his certificate, thus:

"The testimony shows, and I so find, that on the 9th day of February, 1900, the bankrupt, Edward B. Nugent, borrowed from George L. Erbach and Frank Hohmann, executors, the sum of $4,500, and as security therefor executed a mortgage upon the house and lot of land owned by said Edward B. Nugent, in the city of Louisville; that after paying the taxes and expenses of procuring the loan there remained from said sum so borrowed the sum of $4,133.45; that on said day the said balance of $4,133.45 was delivered to said W. T. Nugent as the agent of the bankrupt, and the said amount has not been accounted for to the trustee in bankruptcy herein.

"I further certify that on the 19th day of February, 1900, before the hour of 2 o'clock P. M., being more than three hours before the petition praying for an adjudication of said Edward B. Nugent as bankrupt was filed in the clerk's office of said court, the stock of merchandise belonging to the bankrupt was sold to one Hermann Straus for the sum of $12,000, and on said 19th day of February, 1900, and before the hour of 2 o'clock P. M., the said $12,000 was paid to said bankrupt by said Hermann Straus, in the form of a check on the German Bank of Louisville, Ky.; that said bankrupt indorsed his name across the said check and delivered the same to said W. T. Nugent, his son, as his agent; that said W. T. Nugent received the cash upon said check on that day before the hour of 2 o'clock P. M., and paid therefrom the sum of $1,900 for rental on the building where said stock was located and the expenses of making the sale, leaving the sum of $10,100, which then and there still remained in the hands of said W. T. Nugent as the agent of said bankrupt.

"*I further find that both of said balances, [4] to wit, $4,133.45 and $10,100, belonged to the said bankrupt, and became and still are the property of Arthur E. Mueller, trustee in bankruptcy in this cause, and that said W. T. Nugent holds the same as agent or bailee only, and that he has not accounted for any part of said sums."

The referee entered an order on the same day, October 16, 1900, omitting preliminary recitals, as follows:

"And after hearing counsel, now therefore it is ordered and adjudged that the said response to the rule aforesaid be and the same is hereby held insufficient; and it appearing from the evidence in this cause that there came to the hands of W. T. Nugent $4,133.45, being the net proceeds realized from the mortgage executed by the bankrupt upon his house and lot in the city of Louisville, and that there also came to the hands of said W. T. Nugent the further sum of $10,100, being the net proceeds from the sale of the stock of merchandise sold to Hermann Straus,--the first of said sums having come to the hands of said W. T. Nugent as the agent of the bankrupt on February 9th, 1900, and the second sum, to wit, $10,100, having come to the hands of the said W. T. Nugent as the agent of the bankrupt on February 19th, 1900, before the hour of 2 o'clock P. M., on said day,--and it further appearing that the petition of the Wayne Knitting Mills and others, praying that the said Edward B. Nugent may be adjudged a bankrupt, was filed in the office of the clerk of the above-styled court on February 19th, 1900, at 5 o'clock P. M., and it appearing that said W. T. Nugent has failed to pay over said sums, or any part thereof, to the trustee in bankruptcy herein, and that said sums are the property of the bankrupt, Edward B. Nugent, and belong to said trustee as part of said estate, it is ordered that said rule be and the same is hereby made absolute to the amount of said two sums aggregating the sum of $14,233.45.

"It is further ordered that said W. T. Nugent be and he is hereby required to pay to Arthur E. Mueller, trustee in bankruptcy in this cause, on or before 9.30 o'clock A. M., on October 17th, 1900, the said aggregate sum of $14,233.45."

[5] Thereupon, October 17, William T. Nugent filed his petition *that the order of October 16 might be reviewed by the District Judge, and the referee made his certificate of the proceedings and the foregoing summary of the evidence, the depositions put in before him being returned therewith, concluding: "And the said question, to wit, the validity of the said order of October 16th, 1900, above set forth in full, is certified to the judge for his opinion thereon."

The referee also reported that William T. Nugent had failed to comply with the order in whole or in part; that he was in contempt of court; and recommended "that he be punished for contempt, and committed to prison until he shall have paid to the said trustee the said sum of $14,233.45."

The record of the district court shows that on the 1st day of November the cause came on to be heard on the petition of William T. Nugent for a review of the order of court entered by the referee requiring said Nugent to pay over, and the certification of the referee, and his recommendation that said Nugent be punished for contempt, and that the court, being fully advised, delivered a written opinion, which was ordered filed, whereupon William T. Nugent moved the court to postpone the entry of judgment until November 3, and it was so ordered.

The district judge stated the facts at length; pointed out that the response was put upon two grounds: namely, that the court and referee were without jurisdiction, and that respondent had been indicted; held that as to the indictment it was not an indictment for disobedience to the order, but under § 29 of the bankrupt act; that exculpation could not criminate; that he could have denied receiving or concealing the money, or paid it into court, but he had done neither; that he had the money, and that it belonged to the estate; that the response really rested on the denial of jurisdiction; and that the referee had the power to order the money to be surrendered. The matter was summed up in these words:

"The respondent has the money in his hands as agent or bailee only. His possession is that of his principal. His principal was his father up to a certain stage of these proceedings, but whether up to the filing of the petition or up to the adjudication we need not stop to inquire, as it is immaterial [6] in this *case. At one or the other of those times his principal, by operation of law, was changed, and an officer of this court was substituted for his father. That change in no way lessened the duty of paying the money to the proper principal upon notice and demand. After the change, however, the money was potentially in the custody of the law in these proceedings, and subject to the orders of the court. The rule and its service constituted sufficient notice and demand. The order made was that the respondent should pay the money to the proper officer. Disobedience of that order is made punishable as a contempt by the express provisions of the act.

"The court therefore has jurisdiction of the person and of the subject-matter. The rulings of the referee appear to be right, and are approved and confirmed, and his recommendation as to punishing the respondent for the contempt adjudged will be acted upon with appropriate vigor. . . .

"The judgment of the court, in the exercise of its statutory discretion, will be that the respondent, W. T. Nugent, for his contempt aforesaid, be imprisoned in the county jail until he shall deliver to Arthur E. Mueller, the trustee, said sum of $14,233.45; and the court will reserve the right to suspend or set aside this judgment and sentence upon the delivery and payment of the money as ordered." 104 Fed. 530.

On the 3d of November the respondent Nugent asked leave to file an amended response, stating that he had not made full response as to the entire facts because the referee had held he could not be examined as to transactions involved in the indictment, and denying that the $14,233.45, or any part thereof, was now in his possession or under his control, or was on October 8, 1900; and saying "that neither at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy herein against E. B. Nugent, or at any time subsequent thereto, did he have in his hands any amount of money belonging to said Nugent which he held as his agent or bailee. He says that whatever money came to his hands on February 19, 1900, belonging to said E. B. Nugent, or any such money at any subsequent date thereto, was not received or held by this respondent as agent or bailee, or in any trust *capacity whatever, but was held ad-[7] versely to said E. B. Nugent."

The district court would not permit the proposed amendment to be filed, and entered this order:

"Came William T. Nugent, respondent herein, and tendered an amended response, and moved to file same, and the court, not having postponed the imposing of the sentence for that purpose, and being of opinion that it is not discreet or admissible practice to permit amendments upon hearings such as this, especially after the delivery of an opinion of the court, declines at this stage of the proceedings to permit a further response to be filed.

"And thereupon, pursuant to the opinion of the court, filed herein on the 1st instant, it is the judgment of the court that William T. Nugent, for his contempt aforesaid, be imprisoned and confined in the county jail of Jefferson county, Kentucky, until he shall deliver or pay to Arthur E. Mueller, the trustee herein, said sum of $14,233.45, or otherwise satisfy the said trustee with respect thereto; and the court reserves the right and power to suspend or set aside the judgment and sentence upon the delivery, payment, or satisfaction aforesaid."

Thereafter William T. Nugent filed a petition for review under subdivision b, § 24, of the act, in the circuit court of appeals, praying "that the orders, judgments, and sentence of the district court be reviewed and revised in the matters of law, so as to adjudge that your petitioner be released and discharged," or "that he be permitted to further respond in said matter."

This petition alleged error in that the district court held that the referee and the court had jurisdiction to proceed against petitioner in a summary way; that the court had jurisdiction on the proceedings and recommendations of the referee to punish petitioner for contempt; that the referee had power to grant the injunction against petitioner, or to proceed on rule to show cause; that the response was insufficient; that the facts were that the money belonged to the bankrupt's estate, and was held by petitioner as the bankrupt's agent, and was not claimed adversely; that the amended [8] response should not be filed; that the petitioner was properly before the court; and that the contempt proceedings should not be dismissed and petitioner discharged.

The amended response was attached as an exhibit to this petition, although it had not been filed in the district court, or made part of the record there by certificate of exceptions or order of identification; and the petition also set up several matters and exhibits which apparently were not before the referee or the district court in the proceeding. The trustee moved to expunge these various matters and exhibits.

To expedite the hearing this motion was reserved, and it was stipulated that "such affirmative allegations of said petition for review as properly should be denied be treated as controverted of record without prejudice to the hearing of said motion."

The circuit court of appeals, December 13, 1900, filed a memorandum opinion, and entered judgment reversing the decree of the district court, with directions to that court to vacate the order of the referee on respondent to show cause and his order adjudging respondent to be in contempt thereof, and that respondent be discharged from imprisonment. An extended opinion was subsequently filed. 44 C. C. A. 620, 105 Fed. 581.

The writ of certiorari was then granted by this court. 180 U. S. 640, 45 L. ed. 711, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 927.

Mr. William W. Watts argued the cause, and, with Mr. John Richard Watts, filed a brief for petitioner:

The referee's office is "a first court in bankruptcy."

White v. Schloerb, 178 U. S. 542, 44 L. ed. 1183, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1007; Pirie v. Chicago Title & T. Co. 182 U. S. 438, 45 L. ed. 1171, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906.

The referee's certificate of the question which was presented, the summary of the evidence, and his findings and order thereon, constitute the record on which the case is to be reviewed.

Cunningham v. German Ins. Bank, 43 C. C. A. 377, 103 Fed. 932; Courier-Journal Job Printing Co. v. Schaefer-Meyer Brewing Co. 41 C. C. A. 614, 101 Fed. 699.

The exercise of the court's discretion in refusing to receive an amended response to an order to show cause, after the case has been heard and determined and a written opinion delivered, will not be disturbed on appeal or review.

Neale v. Neale, 9 Wall. 1, 19 L. ed. 590.

Even if the filing of an amended response was allowable, before the judge, at that stage of the proceedings, a conclusion of law would not be accepted. Facts on which to base intelligent action should be stated.

McCloskey v. Barr, 38 Fed. 165.

The filing of a petition in involuntary bankruptcy is a caveat to all the world, as well as to the respondent.

International Bank v. Sherman, 101 U. S. 406, 25 L. ed. 867.

One whose agency to the bankrupt is established will be summarily ordered by the court to turn over property coming to his possession before the filing of the petition, without beneficial claim in him.

Bryan v. Bernheimer, 181 U. S. 188, 45 L. ed. 814, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 557.

A court in bankruptcy, upon adjudication, coming into control of the res, has the power to inquire by rule, of one alleged to be an agent, why he shall not deliver over to the trustee in bankruptcy the property in the hands of such agent.

Re Moore, 104 Fed. 869; Re Francis-Valentine Co. 36 C. C. A. 499, 94 Fed. 793; Re Brooks, 91 Fed. 508; Re Stokes, 106 Fed. 312; Re Rosser, 41 C. C. A. 497, 101 Fed. 562.

If the law allows to receivers summary process against third persons with respect to the debtor's property, it also allows the same process to trustees in bankruptcy.

White v. Ewing, 159 U. S. 36, 40 L. ed. 67, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1018.

And the law does allow this fiduciary the summary process invoked in this case.

High, Receivers, 2d ed. § 144; Re Cohen, 5 Cal. 494; Geisse v. Beall, 5 Wis. 224; Green v. Green, 2 Sim. 430; Miller v. Jones, 39 Ill. 54; Smith, Receiverships, pp. 64, 122; Ryan v. Kingsbery, 88 Ga. 361, 14 S. E. 598; American Constr. Co. v. Jacksonville, T. & K. W. R. Co. 52 Fed. 937; Brandt v. Allen, 76 Iowa, 50, 1 L. R. A. 653, 40 N. W. 82; Griffith v. Griffith, 2 Ves. Sr. 400; People v. Rogers, 2 Paige, 103; Milcs v. New South Bldg. & L. Asso. 95 Fed. 919; Beach, Receivers, 209; Bibber-White Co. v. White River Valley Electric R. Co. 107 Fed. 177; Re Tyler, 149 U. S. 164, 37 L. ed. 689, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 785.

Two essential facts limit the power of the court in bankruptcy to order the bankrupt and all other persons to deliver over the money or property of the bankrupt. They are that the money or property directed to be delivered to the trustee or other officer of the court is a part of the bankrupt estate, and that the bankrupt or person ordered to deliver it has it in his possession or under his control at the time that the order of delivery is made.

Re Rosser, 41 C. C. A. 497, 101 Fed. 562. See also Pirie v. Chicago Title & T. Co. 182 U. S. 438, 45 L. ed. 1171, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906; Wasson v. Hawkins, 59 Fed. 233.

There being no attachment in this case for the taking of the body of the respondent, and no necessity for one, the writ need not run in the name of the government.

Foster, Fed. Pr. 2d ed. pp. 654-656.

This is not a habeas corpus case, but a review of orders made in a civil suit in equity under the provisions of the bankruptcy act.

Goldman v. Smith, 93 Fed. 182.

Mr. W. M. Smith submitted the cause for respondent. Mr. Fred Forcht, Jr., was with him on the brief.

Fraudulent transfers which have been consummated cannot be reached by this summary proceeding.

Re Mayer, 98 Fed. 840.

It may be true that if the money is under the control of the bankrupt, in the hands of a third party, he may be ordered to pay, and in case of refusal can be punished for contempt, as the money is under his control; but the transferee, obtaining possession before bankrupt proceedings, cannot be held for contempt.

Re Rosser, 41 C. C. A. 497, 101 Fed. 562; Bardes v. First Nat. Bank, 178 U. S. 524, 44 L. ed. 1175, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1000; Wall v. Cox, 181 U. S. 244, 45 L. ed. 845, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 642.

The ascertainment, as between the trustee in bankruptcy and a stranger to the bankruptcy proceedings, of the question whether certain property claimed by the trustee does or does not form part of the estate to be administered in bankruptcy, shall not be brought within the jurisdiction of the national courts solely because the rights of the bankrupt and of his creditors have been transferred to the trustee in bankruptcy.

Bardes v. First Nat. Bank, 178 U. S. 524, 44 L. ed. 1175, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1000.

These contempt proceedings are of a criminal nature, and the same rules must govern as in the trial of indictments.

See Accumulator Co. v. Consolidated Electric Storage Co. 53 Fed. 793; Kirk v. Milwaukee Dust Collector Mfg. Co. 26 Fed. 501; New Orleans v. New York Mail S. S. Co. 20 Wall. 387, 22 L. ed. 354; Re Ellerbe, 13 Fed. 532.

In civil matters, a party always has the right to plead over after action upon a plea in abatement or bar, and certainly this is the rule in criminal matters.

1 Bishop, New Crim. Proc. § 755.

The order and sentence thereunder are erroneous and void, because they do not run in the name of the government.

United States v. Wayne, Wall. Sr. 134, Fed. Cas. No. 16,654; Folger v. Hoogland, 5 Johns. 235. See also Re Bronson, 12 Johns. 460; Worden v. Searls, 121 U. S. 27, 30 L. ed. 858, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 814.

Messrs. H. M. Lane, W. M. Smith, Zach
184 U. S.

Phelps, and Fred Forcht, Jr., filed a brief for respondent on motion for certiorari.

*Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the [8] opinion of the court:

General order in bankruptcy XXVII. (172 U. S. 662, 43 L. ed. 1193, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. viii.) provides: "When a bankrupt, creditor, trustee, or other person shall desire a review by the judge of any order made by the referee, he shall file with the referee his petition therefor, setting out the error complained of; and the referee shall forthwith *certify to the judge the question presented, [9] a summary of the evidence relating thereto, and the finding and order of the referee thereon."

Respondent accordingly filed his petition for a review of the order of October 16. The referee thereupon certified to the judge the question presented, a summary of the evidence relating thereto, and the finding and order of the referee thereon. He pursued in so doing form No. 56 of the forms in bankruptcy. 172 U. S. 718, 43 L. ed. 1226, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. xlv. The question certified was "the validity of the said order of October 16th, 1900, above set forth in full." At the same time the referee reported the disobedience of William T. Nugent, and recommended that he be committed. No exception was taken before the referee or the district court to the sufficiency of the trustee's application, or to the adequacy of the certificate, and the entire evidence was transmitted.

Subdivision b of § 24 provides: "The several circuit courts of appeals shall have jurisdiction in equity, either interlocutory or final, to superintend and revise in matter of law the proceedings of the several inferior courts of bankruptcy within their jurisdiction." [30 Stat. at L. 553, chap. 541.]

The district court affirmed the order of October 16, and ordered respondent to be committed for his failure to comply therewith, and thereupon respondent filed in the circuit court of appeals his petition for review. The matters of law to be passed on by that court were the validity of the order of October 16, as affirmed by the district court, and the correctness of the order of commitment. And these were to be determined on the record of the district court.

The circuit court of appeals had in prior cases recognized the general proposition that those courts are confined on petitions for review to matters of law arising on the record of the courts below, and may well have assumed that there was no necessity for a specific ruling on the motion to expunge the new matter accompanying the petition in this instance. Cunningham v. German Ins. Bank, 43 C. C. A. 377, 103 Fed. 932; Courier-Journal Job-Printing Co. v. Schaefer-Meyer Breuing Co. 41 C. C. A. 614, 101 Fed. 699. The record of the district court in respect of the *order of October 16 [10] was the record made before the referee, who had certified the question of the validity of the order at the request of respondent, and to the adequacy of whose certificate respondent had made no objection as heretofore said.

It is true that after the decision of the district court was announced, and the final order was about to be entered, the entry of the order was suspended, on the application of the respondent, for two days, and that then the respondent undertook, by way of amendment, to set up a denial that he held the money as the bankrupt's agent or bailee, and to assert that he held adversely to him. The district court refused to allow the amendment to be made at that stage of the proceedings, and we do not understand that the court of appeals held that the district court abused its discretion in so refusing.

At an earlier stage perhaps this ruling might have been controlled by the rules of equity practice adopted by this court, but that would not be so after hearing had been had, the decision of the court had been announced, and judgment was about to be entered.

The respondent had denied the jurisdiction on the ground that he had not received the money, or any part of it, after the petition in bankruptcy was filed. When the matter came on to be heard on the rule to pay over, respondent agreed that the enumerated depositions might be read, reserving his exceptions to the jurisdiction. He then carried the matter to the district court, and after it was decided, sought to amend his response to the rule by asserting that whatever money belonging to the bankrupt came to his hands was not received as agent of, but was held adversely to, the bankrupt. He did not even then set forth what money he had received, and how and when it came to his hands, or the circumstances under which he claimed to hold it adversely, but put forward simply a conclusion of law. The district court held it not admissible practice to permit such an amendment at that stage; that is, that the application came too late after the case had been heard and determined, and a written opinion had been delivered and filed; and the district judge may have considered it a mere subterfuge in evasion of the effect of the decision, or that the proposed amendment was insufficient. *If the proposed amended response be treated as properly before us, we agree that the orders under consideration ought not to be disturbed because of this ruling made in the competent exercise of judicial discretion. And, moreover, respondent did not ask to plead over before the referee, but had the case certified to the judge as it stood.

Among the definitions set forth in § 1 of the bankruptcy act are these [30 Stat. at L. 544, chap. 541]: "Court' shall mean the court of bankruptcy in which the proceedings are pending, and may include the referee;" "judge' shall mean a judge of a court of bankruptcy, not including the referee;" "referee' shall mean the referee who has jurisdiction of the case or to whom the case has been referred, or anyone acting in his stead."

By § 2 courts of bankruptcy are vested with power to "(6) bring in and substitute additional persons or parties in proceedings in bankruptcy, when necessary for the complete determination of a matter in controversy; (7) cause the estates of bankrupts to be collected, reduced to money, and distributed, and determine controversies in relation thereto, except as herein otherwise provided; . . . (10) consider and confirm, modify or overrule, or return, with instructions for further proceedings, records and findings certified to them by referees; . . . (13) enforce obedience by bankrupts, officers, and other persons to all lawful orders, by fine or imprisonment, or fine and imprisonment; . . . (15) make such orders, issue such process, and enter such judgments in addition to those specifically provided for as may be necessary for the enforcement of the provisions of this act; (16) punish persons for contempts committed before referees."

Section 36 provides that "referees shall take the same oath of office as that prescribed for judges of United States courts."

Section 38, that referees shall have jurisdiction to "(4) perform such part of the duties, except as to questions arising out of the applications of bankrupts for compositions or discharges, as are by this act conferred on courts of bankruptcy, and as shall be prescribed by rules or orders of the courts of bankruptcy of their respective districts, except as herein otherwise provided."

And § 39, that among other duties of referees they "shall "(5) make up records embodying the evidence, or the substance thereof, as agreed upon by the parties, in all contested matters arising before them, whenever requested to do so by either of the parties thereto, together with their findings therein, and transmit them to the judges."

Section 41 provides that "a person shall not, in proceedings before a referee, (1) disobey or resist any lawful order, process, or writ;" and that "(b) the referee shall certify the facts to the judge, if any person shall do any of the things forbidden in this section. The judge shall thereupon, in a summary manner, hear the evidence as to the acts complained of, and, if it is such as to warrant him in so doing, punish such person in the same manner and to the same extent as for a contempt committed before the court of bankruptcy, or commit such person upon the same conditions as if the doing of the forbidden act had occurred with reference to the process of, or in the presence of, the court."

General order XII. provides that after the order of reference reaches the referee, "all the proceedings, except such as are required by the act or by these general orders to be had before the judge, shall be had before the referee."

General order XXIII. is: "In all orders made by a referee, it shall be recited, according as the fact may be, that notice was given and the manner thereof, or that the order was made by consent, or that no adverse interest was represented at the hearing, or that the order was made after hearing adverse interests."

And we repeat general order XXVII.: "When a bankrupt, creditor, trustee, or other person shall desire a review by the judge of any order made by the referee, he shall file with the referee his petition therefor setting out the error complained of; and the referee shall forthwith certify to the judge the question presented, a summary of the evidence relating thereto, and the finding and order of the referee thereon."

[13] No objection was made before the referee or the district court to the authority of the referee as such to entertain these proceedings, to enter the order to show cause and thereby to bring in William T. Nugent, and to enter the order of October *16; and we do not find that the act or the general orders are to the contrary.

It is now said that the only power the referee has to direct the taking possession of property is given by subsection 3 of § 38a, providing that the referee may exercise the powers of the judge in that respect on a certificate of the clerk that the judge is absent or unable to act. But that provision seems to refer only to the seizure of property by the marshal or a receiver prior to adjudication and the qualification of the trustee as provided by § 2, § 3e, and § 69, and it is at all events inapplicable here.

We think the referee has the power to act in the first instance in matters such as this, when the case has been referred, and in aid of the court of bankruptcy, and exercises in such cases "much of the judicial authority of that court." White v. Schloerb, 178 U. S. 542, 44 L. ed. 1183, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1007. By petition for review the matter can be carried to the bankruptcy court, and the entire record and findings laid before that tribunal, as was done here.

And if the order of October 16 was in itself a lawful order, the power of the district court to commit William T. Nugent until he surrendered the money to the trustee, or otherwise satisfied the trustee with respect thereto, was unquestionable under the express provisions of the bankruptcy act in that behalf, as well as the general jurisdiction of the court to enforce its orders in the collection of assets.

It is objected that the order of commitment was invalid because it did not run in the name of the United States. This objection was not made below; nor was this an attachment. It was an order to detain Nugent until he complied with an order made in a proceeding in equity under the bankrupt act. The objection is untenable. Nor was the commitment imprisonment for debt, as also contended. The order to pay over the money was not an order for the payment of a debt, but an order for the surrender of assets of the bankrupt placed in custodia legis by the adjudication.

[14] The real question was whether the order of October 16, as confirmed by the district court, was a lawful order. It was to be determined as a mere question of law on the facts found *that the money belonged to the bankrupt's estate, and was then in Nugent's possession as the bankrupt's agent, 184 U. S.

he asserting no adverse claim. And the question of the validity of that order involved the validity of the order to show cause.

The proposition was that, as matter of law, where property of a bankrupt has come into the hands of a third party before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, as the agent of the bankrupt, and to which he asserts no adverse claim, the bankruptcy court has no power by summary proceedings to compel the surrender of the property to the trustee in bankruptcy duly appointed.

In other words, the question reduces itself to this: Has the bankruptcy court the power to compel the bankrupt or his agent to deliver up money or other assets of the bankrupt, in his possession or that of some one for him, on petition and rule to show cause? Does a mere refusal by the bankrupt or his agent so to deliver up oblige the trustee to resort to a plenary suit in the circuit court or a state court, as the case may be?

If it be so, the grant of jurisdiction to cause the estates of bankrupts to be collected, and to determine controversies relating thereto, would be seriously impaired, and in many respects rendered practically inefficient.

The bankruptcy court would be helpless indeed if the bare refusal to turn over could conclusively operate to drive the trustee to an action to recover as for an indebtedness, or a conversion, or to proceedings in chancery, at the risk of the accompaniments of delay, complication, and expense, intended to be avoided by the simpler methods of the bankrupt law.

It is as true of the present law as it was of that of 1867, that the filing of the petition is a caveat to all the world, and in effect an attachment and injunction (International Bank v. Sherman, 101 U. S. 407, 25 L. ed. 867), and on adjudication title to the bankrupt's property became vested in the trustee (§§ 70, 21c) with actual or constructive possession, and placed in the custody of the bankruptcy court.

There was no pretense that at the date of the filing of this petition in bankruptcy this money of the bankrupt, $4,133.45 of which had been collected a few days, and $10,100 a few *hours, before, was held subject to any [15] adverse claim, or that the right or title thereto had been passed over to another.

The position now taken amounts to no more than to assert that a mere refusal to surrender constitutes an adverse holding in fact and therefore an adverse claim when the petition was filed, and to that we cannot give our assent.

But suppose that respondent had asserted that he had the right to possession by reason of a claim adverse to the bankrupt, the bankruptcy court had the power to ascertain whether any basis for such a claim actually existed at the time of the filing of the petition. The court would have been bound to enter upon that inquiry, and in doing so would have undoubtedly acted within its jurisdiction, while its conclusion might have been that an adverse claim, not merely colorable, but real even though fraudulent and voidable, existed in fact, and so that it must decline to finally adjudicate on the merits. If it erred in its ruling either way, its action would be subject to review.

In this case, however, respondent asserted no right or title to the property before the referee, and the circumstances under which he held possession must be accepted as found by the referee and the district court.

The decisions of this court under the present law sustain the validity of the action we are considering.

In Bardes v. First Nat. Bank, 178 U. S. 524, 44 L. ed. 1175, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1000, the question related to the jurisdiction of the district court over suits brought by trustees in bankruptcy to set aside fraudulent transfers of money or property made by the bankrupt to third parties before the institution of proceedings in bankruptcy. The court said: "Had there been no bankruptcy proceedings, the bankrupt might have brought suit in any state court of competent jurisdiction; or, if there was a sufficient jurisdictional amount, and the requisite diversity of citizenship existed, or the case arose under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States, he could have brought suit in the circuit court of the United States. . . . He could not have sued in a district court of the United States, because such a court has no jurisdiction of suits at law or in equity between private parties, except where, *by special provision of an act of Congress, a district court has the powers of a circuit court, or is given jurisdiction of a particular class of civil suits." And it was held that Congress, by the 2d clause of § 23 of the bankruptcy act, had manifested its intention "that controversies, not strictly or properly part of the proceedings in bankruptcy, but independent suits brought by the trustee in bankruptcy to assert a title to money or property as assets of the bankrupt against strangers to those proceedings, should not come within the jurisdiction of the district courts of the United States, 'unless by consent of the proposed defendant.'" The court was dealing there with a suit of the trustee against a third party to recover property fraudulently transferred to him by the bankrupt before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, and which the third party claimed as his own.

In White v. Schloerb, 178 U. S. 542, 44 L. ed. 1183, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1007, where, after an adjudication in bankruptcy and reference of the case to a referee, and before the appointment of a trustee, the referee had taken possession of the bankrupt's stock of goods in a store, a writ of replevin of part of the goods was sued out by third persons against the bankrupt from a state court and executed by the sheriff forcibly entering the store and taking possession of the goods, it was held that the district court of the United States, sitting in bankruptcy, had jurisdiction by summary proceedings to compel the return of the property seized.

In Bryan v. Bernheimer, 181 U. S. 188, 44 L. ed. 814, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 557, Ab-
412

ham, nine days before the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against him, made a general assignment to Davidson of all of his property for the benefit of his creditors. After the filing of the petition Davidson sold the property to Bernheimer. After the adjudication in bankruptcy, and before the appointment of a trustee, the petitioning creditors applied to the court for an order to the marshal to take possession of the property, alleging that this was necessary for the interest of the bankrupt's creditors. The court ordered that the marshal take possession, and that notice be given to the purchaser to appear in ten days and propound his claim to the property, or, failing to do so, be decreed to have no right in it. The purchaser came in and propounded his claim, *stating that he bought the property for cash [17] in good faith of the assignee, and praying that the creditors be remitted to their claim against the assignee for the price, or that the price be ordered to be paid by the assignee into court, and paid over to the purchaser, who thereupon offered to rescind the purchase, and waive all further claim to the property. This court held that the summary proceeding was properly entertained, that the purchaser had no title in the property superior to the bankrupt's estate, and that the equities between him and the creditors might be determined by the district court, bringing in the assignee if necessary. In that case it was observed that the remark in Bardes v. First Nat. Bank, that the powers conferred on the courts of bankruptcy after the filing of a petition in bankruptcy, and in case it was necessary for the preservation of the property of the bankrupt to authorize receivers or the marshals to take charge of it until a trustee was appointed, "can hardly be considered as authorizing the forcible seizure of such property in the possession of an adverse claimant,"—was an inadvertence, and upon a question not arising in the case then before the court, which related exclusively to jurisdiction of a suit by the trustee after his appointment." The court also said: "The general assignment made by Abraham to Davidson did not constitute Davidson an assignee for value, but simply made him an agent of Abraham for the distribution of the proceeds of the property among Abraham's creditors." And further: "The present case involves no question of jurisdiction over a suit by a trustee against a person claiming an adverse interest in himself."

In the case before us William T. Nugent held this money as the agent of his father, the bankrupt, and without any claim of adverse interest in himself. If it was competent to deal with Davidson, the assignee in the case of Bryan v. Bernheimer, by summary proceeding, William T. Nugent could be dealt with in the same way.

The cases are indeed different, for Bernheimer, the purchaser, submitted himself to the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court, and the sale was after petition filed; but nevertheless, so far as the question of subjecting a mere volunteer in possession of as-

[18] sets *belonging to the bankrupt's estate to the control of that court by summary proceedings is concerned, the ruling in Bernheimer's Case is in point.

We are of opinion that the order of October 16 was a lawful order. In arriving at that conclusion we have confined ourselves to the record of the district court. If in the effort to escape the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court, that record is not in a condition as favorable to respondent as the actual facts might have justified, he has only himself to thank for it; but lest any injustice should be done, the judgment will be:

Decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals reversed; decree and order of the District Court affirmed; and cause remanded to the latter court with liberty to take such further proceedings as it may be advised.

LOUISVILLE TRUST COMPANY, Trustee, etc., Petitioner,
v.
LEONARD COMINGOR.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 18-26.)

Bankruptcy — jurisdiction of bankruptcy court to determine adverse claim—effect of joining general assignee in petition—consent to adjudication of adverse claim—summary proceedings.

1. A court of bankruptcy has no jurisdiction to adjudicate the merits of the claim of a general assignee of the bankrupt to retain out of the bankrupt's estate money disbursed by him or claimed on account of his commission as such assignee before the bankruptcy proceedings were begun, unless such assignee consents to the exercise of such jurisdiction.
2. Because a general assignee was joined with his assignors in a petition in bankruptcy against the latter, which set up no cause of action and prayed no special relief against such assignee, he does not therefore continue to be subject to the orders of the court without other process.
3. An assignee of a bankrupt cannot be deemed to have consented to the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court to compel him by summary proceedings to pay over to the trustee in bankruptcy money of the bankrupt's estate which he had disbursed or which he had retained on account of his commissions, as such assignee before the bankruptcy proceedings were commenced, because he participated in the proceedings before the referee, where he pleaded such claims at the outset, and made formal protest to the exercise of such jurisdiction before the final order was entered.

[No. 309.]

Argued November 13, 14, 1901. Decided January 27, 1902.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit to review a decree which reversed a decree of the Circuit Court for the District of Kentucky requiring a general assignee of a bankrupt to pay to the trustee in bankruptcy money retained by him from the bankrupt's estate. Affirmed.
184 U. S.

See same case below, 47 C. C. A. 51, 107 Fed. 898.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

*December 5, 1898, Simonson, Whiteson, & [19] Company, the firm consisting of three partners, made an assignment to Leonard Comingor for the benefit of their creditors, under the statutes of Kentucky in that behalf, and a few days thereafter Comingor brought suit involving the administration and settlement of the estate in the circuit court of Jefferson county.

The state statute provided, among other things, that the assignee should give bond with good security to be approved by the county judge, conditioned for the faithful discharge of his duties as assignee, and to be recorded in the county clerk's office; that the assignee should be at all times subject to the orders and supervision of the county court, or the judge thereof in vacation, except as thereafter provided; for the final discharge of the assignee on due notice; and that the assignee or any creditor or creditors representing one fourth of the liabilities might bring suit in the circuit court for the settlement of the estate, whereupon the jurisdiction of the county court should cease, and the circuit court should have all the power and authority to administer and settle up the assigned estate conferred on the county court, in addition to its power and authority as a chancery court. Ky. Stat. 1899, p. 202, chap. 7.

Certain creditors filed a petition in the circuit court of the United States for the district of Kentucky in bankruptcy, on February 14, 1899, against the firm, to which its members tendered a plea and answer. The ground on which the petition was based was that Simonson, Whiteson, & Company had within four months of the filing of the petition made a general *assignment under [20] the statutes of Kentucky for the benefit of creditors to Comingor. The court adjudicated them bankrupts (92 Fed. 904), and one of them prosecuted an appeal to the circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit, which, July 5, 1899, reversed the judgment, with directions to take further proceedings. 37 C. C. A. 337, 95 Fed. 948.

On September 20, 1899, adjudication was again awarded, and on a second appeal was affirmed February 12, 1900. 40 C. C. A. 474, 100 Fed. 426.

Comingor was made a defendant to the petition in bankruptcy as assignee, but no relief was prayed as against him, and he moved the court to dismiss the petition as to him for want of jurisdiction, and also, without waiving the motion, tendered an answer, but the motion was not acted on nor was his answer filed.

April 1, 1899, an injunction was granted against Simonson, Whiteson, & Company and Comingor from taking any steps affecting the bankrupts' estate, and especially in the action in the Jefferson circuit court.

May 17, 1900, the case was referred to a referee, who, on May 28, without notice, entered an order that Comingor file with him an itemized and detailed statement showing his receipts and disbursements of the money and other assets belonging to the estates of Simonson, Whiteson, & Company and its members. This Comingor did, the statement showing that he had received $92,865.77; that he had disbursed $19,876.73; that he had paid his counsel $3,200; that he had drawn as commissions $3,300; that he had paid over to the receiver of the state court $59,623.61; and that he had on hand $6,766.53. This sum of $6,766.53 was subsequently paid the trustee in bankruptcy.

[21] June 20, 1900, the referee on his own motion entered an order appointing the Louisville Trust Company receiver, and directing it to apply to the Jefferson circuit court for an order directing the receiver of that court to pay over the entire fund in court, in Comingor's action there; but providing that the trust company should not appear in the Jefferson circuit court as a party to that action, nor receive any less sum than *the whole fund in that court. Application was accordingly made by the trust company, but the Jefferson circuit court declined to entertain the motion to withdraw the funds, because the trust company was not a party to the action and had no standing in court, but the circuit judge suggested that when the trust company filed its petition asserting its claim to the fund, as provided by § 29 of the Code of Kentucky, the court would then be authorized to entertain such motions and make such orders in its behalf as might be necessary and proper.

The trust company appears to have been appointed trustee by the referee June 30, 1900, its bond as such trustee being then approved.

On the same day the referee entered an order that the trust company file a petition to be made a party to the suit in the Jefferson circuit court, and thereupon such petition was filed by it as trustee, stating among other things that the officers of the court had been paid in full and had no claims on the fund in court, and that the fund, to wit, $46,305.03, belonged to the creditors of the bankrupt concern, and that nobody else had any interest therein, neither officers, attorneys, nor anybody else, and praying that the court be directed to make the trust company a defendant, and that its petition be taken as an answer, and that the receiver of the said circuit court pay to petitioner the said sum of $46,305.03, and "for all further and proper relief." The Jefferson circuit court thereupon entered an order making the trust company a party defendant, and directing that it be allowed to withdraw from the fund in court the sum of $46,305.03.

June 20 the referee, on his own motion, entered an order requiring Comingor and his counsel to appear and show cause three days thereafter why they should not pay over to the receiver the amount of the commissions and fees.

June 23 Comingor responded as to the sum of $3,398.90 that he had retained the same on account of his commissions as assignee before any bankruptcy proceedings were had, and that he relied on the fact that he would be entitled to more than that sum on the final settlement; that for services rendered to *the estate he believed this court [22] would allow at least said amount; that he was a person of no means; and had used said money from time to time, relying on the fact that it belonged to him, and had none of it left; and that he was unable to pay said money into court, as he had no money or property of any kind.

The referee held the response insufficient, and made the rule absolute. The order to show cause made on the attorneys does not appear to have been pursued, but June 28, 1900, another order was made on Comingor to show cause why he should not be required to pay to the receiver the sums of money paid to them, amounting to $3,200 in all.

June 30, 1900, Comingor responded that he had paid the $3,200 to his attorneys for services rendered him as his counsel while acting as the assignee before any proceedings in bankruptcy were taken. He further alleged that he had no money or means of any kind with which to pay, and referred to his former response and made it a part thereof, and insisted that he ought not to be compelled to pay the amount claimed.

The referee adjudged this response insufficient, and made the rule absolute.

Comingor then prayed for a review by the district court in bankruptcy of the orders adjudging his responses insufficient, and ordering him to pay to the receiver the sums of $3,398.90 and $3,200 respectively.

The referee reported his findings to be that Comingor was entitled to no compensation whatever, and that he had no legal right to pay attorneys' fees when no allowance had been made by the state court therefor, and that in contemplation of law he must be deemed to have the funds in his possession.

The district judge referred the matter back to the referee July 16, 1900, to take testimony as to the character and value of Comingor's services and those of his counsel. The referee proceeded to do this, pending which, on November 10, Comingor tendered an amended response before the referee, setting forth that as was shown by the pleadings, records, and evidence in the case, and the entire proceedings had, neither that court nor the referee in bankruptcy had any jurisdiction, either of the *respondent or the [23] matter involved, to make any such orders or require respondent to answer thereto, because the records showed that all the transactions in reference to the two sums of money took place before the petition in bankruptcy was filed, and that neither that court nor the referee in bankruptcy could proceed against respondent as attempted by order or rule to pay over or by summary process. He prayed that the rule be discharged and the orders to pay be set aside. This amended response the referee declined to entertain and it was again tendered in the district court on the filing of the referee's report.

December 11, 1900, the referee reported the evidence and his conclusions thereon, that neither Comingor nor his attorneys had rendered any services of value to the estate, and that their services had in fact been injurious to the creditors, but that the fees paid to the attorneys were usual and reasonable according to the scale of compensation allowed for such services by the state court in Louisville.

The district judge confirmed the report of the referee, and as to the objection of want of jurisdiction held that it could not be entertained by the court for the reason that, by long acquiescence in that mode of procedure, respondent must be regarded as having consented thereto. Thereupon an order was entered dismissing the petition for review, and adjudging that Comingor pay to the trust company, as trustee, the said sums of $3,398.90 and $3,200, on or before February 16, 1901, to all of which Comingor excepted, and filed his petition for review in the circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit. That court entered an order staying proceedings in the district court, and thereafter on hearing reversed the decree of the district court affirming the orders of the referee requiring Comingor to pay to the trustee the sums aforesaid, with directions to set aside its order and decree, and the orders of the referee directing Comingor to pay the trustee in bankruptcy the moneys mentioned in said orders. 47 C. C. A. 51, 107 Fed. 898.

Certiorari from this court was then granted. 181 U. S. 620, 45 L. ed. 1031.

Mr. Augustus E. Willson argued the cause and filed a brief for petitioner:

In gathering in the assets of the bankrupt under § 2 (7) of the bankruptcy act, the trustee is not required to resort to a plenary suit when proceeding against a mere agent or custodian of the property.

Bryan v. Bernheimer, 181 U. S. 188, 45 L. ed. 814, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 557.

Parties other than bankrupts may by rule be compelled to deliver assets to the trustee where such parties are not holding under adverse title.

Re Brooks, 91 Fed. 508; Re Kenney, 95 Fed. 427; Re Moore, 104 Fed. 869; Re Smith, 92 Fed. 138; Re Stokes, 106 Fed. 312.

By responding to the merits of the rule Comingor consented to the jurisdiction.

Bryan v. Bernheimer, 181 U. S. 188, 45 L. ed. 814, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 557. See also Re Steuer, 104 Fed. 976.

The jurisdiction of the state court was ousted by the adjudication in bankruptcy.

Leidigh Carriage Co. v. Stengel, 37 C. C. A. 210, 95 Fed. 637.

Mr. D. A. Sachs argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Alexander Pope Humphrey, Morris A. Sachs, J. G. Sachs, and W. M. Smith, filed a brief for respondent:

184 U. S.

Neither the referee nor district court had the right or jurisdiction to proceed in a summary way against one holding adversely to the bankrupt under a title acquired before bankruptcy proceedings were instituted.

Bardes v. First Nat. Bank, 178 U. S. 538, 44 L. ed. 1182, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1000; Wall v. Cox, 181 U. S. 244, 45 L. ed. 845, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 642.

Compulsory reference in cases involving more than $20 would be in direct violation of the 7th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, providing that "in suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed $20, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved."

United States v. Rathbone, 2 Paine, 578, Fed. Cas. No. 16,121; Howe Mach. Co. v. Edwards, 15 Blatchf. 402, Fed. Cas. No. 6,784.

Neither the referee nor district court can obtain jurisdiction in a summary proceeding by the trustee against an adverse claimant who obtained the property before the proceedings in bankruptcy were instituted by consent of the proposed defendant.

Bardes v. First Nat. Bank, 178 U. S. 538, 44 L. ed. 1182, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1000; Re Steuer, 104 Fed. 976.

Consent will not avail to give jurisdiction where the law provides the way in which the jurisdiction is to be invoked, and that way has not been complied with.

12 Enc. Pl. & Pr. p. 120.

A person may consent to the forum, but no consent of his can change the mode of procedure.

Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 282, 23 L. ed. 917.

The party complaining of the exercise of the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court is not precluded from raising such objection because he contested a rule to show cause made by such court.

Marshall v. Knox, 16 Wall. 551, 21 L. ed. 481.

*Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the [24] opinion of the court:

The circuit court of appeals was called on to review the orders of the referee as confirmed by the district judge, by which Comingor was required to pay over the sums of $3,398.90 and $3,200 respectively, and the recommendation that he be dealt with for not complying therewith.

On the face of his responses, from first to last, it appeared that Comingor insisted that the $3,200 had been paid by him to his counsel while they were acting for him, before the bankruptcy proceedings were commenced, for professional services rendered to him as assignee; and that he had retained and expended the $3,398.90 as his commissions as assignee in reliance on the belief that he was entitled to that amount on final settlement. He thus asserted a claim to each of these sums adversely to the bankrupt, and as outstanding when the petition in bankruptcy was filed, and these claims were in fact passed upon by the referee and the district judge as being adverse. This brought the controversy within the ruling in Bardes v. First Nat. Bank, 178 U. S. 524, 44 L. ed. 1175, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1000, and the questions attempted to be litigated before the referee and in the district court as to the allowance of the two amounts could only be raised in the district court by consent, and then only by plenary suit. If the jurisdiction of the district court was not consented to, then the state court, under the circumstances of this case, was the proper forum, and the matters in dispute were to be disposed of there.

The district court held that Cominger had voluntarily accepted its jurisdiction, and that he had also consented that the court might proceed against him summarily. As the circuit court of appeals said, speaking through Severens, J.: "It was upon the ground of the petitioner's implied consent to the mode adopted that the district judge justified it."

[25] So far as this view rested on the contention that, as Cominger *was joined with the bankrupts in the petition for adjudication, he therefore continued to be subject to the orders of the court without other process, we agree with the circuit court of appeals that it cannot be sustained. As we understand the record, the petition in bankruptcy set up no cause of action and prayed no special relief against Cominger, and he was apparently made a defendant because adjudication would put an end to further action by him as assignee. Clearly, as the circuit court of appeals points out, it would be inadmissible to permit creditors to deprive an assignee of his right to have his claims adjudicated by the proper court and in the customary mode of proceeding, by the device of making him a party to the petition for an adjudication and so attempting to bring him into the case for all purposes. Nor in this matter was any petition by the trustee, or by any other person, filed against Cominger to recover these sums, and the orders were entered by the referee on the record as it stood, so that there was no pretense whatever of a plenary suit in that court, in form or in substance.

The proceeding was purely summary. The determination of the merits on the facts was not open to revision by appeal or writ of error under the bankrupt law. If Cominger had been entitled to a trial by jury, he could not have obtained it as of right. The collection of the amounts found due would be enforceable, not by execution, but by commitment.

"We think that it could not have been the intention of Congress thus to deprive parties claiming property of which they were in possession of the usual processes of the law in defense of their rights." Marshall v. Knox, 16 Wall. 556, 21 L. ed. 484; Smith v. Mason, 14 Wall. 419, 20 L. ed. 748.

The question is whether the district court had jurisdiction to finally adjudicate the merits in this proceeding.

We have just held in Mueller v. Nugent, 184 U. S. 1, ante, 405, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269, that the district court has power to ascertain whether in the particular instance the claim asserted is an adverse claim existing at the time the petition was filed. And according to the conclusion reached the court will retain jurisdiction or decline to adjudicate the merits. Jurisdiction as to the subject-matter may be *limited in various ways, as to civil and criminal cases, cases at common law or in equity or in admiralty, probate cases, or cases under special statutes, to particular classes of persons, to proceedings in particular modes, and so on. In many cases jurisdiction may depend on the ascertainment of facts involving the merits, and in that sense the court exercises jurisdiction in disposing of the preliminary inquiry, although the result may be that it finds that it cannot go farther. And where, in a case like that before us, the court erroneously retains jurisdiction to adjudicate the merits, its action can be corrected on review.

We are of opinion that even if Cominger could have consented to be pursued in this manner, he did not so consent. He was ruled to show cause, and the cause he showed defeated jurisdiction over the subject-matter, that is, jurisdiction to proceed summarily. He did not come in voluntarily, but in obedience to peremptory orders, and although he participated in the proceedings before the referee, he had pleaded his claims in the outset, and he made his formal protest to the exercise of jurisdiction before the final order was entered. He had been restrained from settling his accounts in the state court in the action pending there, and the district court, instead of dissolving the injunction declining jurisdiction, and leaving the litigation to the state court, either in due course or by plenary suit, adjudicated the merits and entered a peremptory order that he should pay over, disobedience of which order was punishable by commitment. We think that in this there was error, and that the circuit court of appeals was right in its decree of reversal.

Decree affirmed.

Mr. Justice Harlan dissented.

*LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE RAIL-ROAD COMPANY, Plff in Err., [27]

v.

T. R. EUBANK, Doing Business under the Name of T. R. Eubank & Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 27-49.)

Constitutional law — charging more for shorter than for longer haul—interference with interstate commerce.

1. An unconstitutional regulation of Interstate commerce is made by Ky. Const. § 218, prohibiting common carriers from charging more for a shorter than for a longer haul, so far as its provisions extend to a long haul from a place outside of to one within the state, and a shorter haul between points on the same line and in the same direction, both of which are within the state, as the carrier is thus compelled to adjust, regulate, or fix his interstate rates with some reference to his rates within the state.

NOTE.—On state regulation of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. (Va.) 13 L. R. A. 107; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 13; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 216; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041, and Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 39 L. ed. U. S. 311.

184 U. S.

2. Any state statute which in its direct result regulates the interstate transportation of a single individual carrier violates the commerce clause of the United States Constitution.

[No. 10.]

Argued November 14, 1900. Ordered for Reargument March 25, 1901. Reargued November 8, 11, 1901. Decided January 27, 1902.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of Simpson County, State of Kentucky, to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action against a railroad corporation for unlawful transportation charges. Reversed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The railroad company has brought this case here by a writ of error to the circuit court of Simpson county, state of Kentucky, that being the highest court of the state in which a decision could be had, for the purpose of reviewing the judgment of that court in favor of the defendant in error (plaintiff below) based upon a violation of § 218 of the Constitution of Kentucky. That section reads as follows:

“It shall be unlawful for any person or corporation owning or operating a railroad in this state, or any common carrier, to charge or receive any greater compensation in the aggregate for the transportation of [28] passengers, or of property of like kind,* under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line, in the same direction, the shorter being included within the longer distance; but this shall not be construed as authorizing any common carrier, or person, or corporation owning or operating a railroad in this state to receive as great compensation for a shorter as for a longer distance: Provided, That upon application to the railroad commission such common carrier, or person, or corporation owning or operating a railroad in this state may in special cases, after investigation by the commission, be authorized to charge less for longer than for shorter distances for the transportation of passengers or property; and the commission may from time to time prescribe the extent to which such common carrier, or person, or corporation owning or operating a railroad in this state may be relieved from the operations of this section.”

This action involves the question of the validity of the above section, as construed by the court below with reference to interstate commerce.

The plaintiff, T. R. Eubank, on June 9, 184 U. S.

1899, duly filed in the clerk's office of the Simpson county circuit court a petition in which he alleged, in substance, that he was doing business in Franklin, in the state of Kentucky; that the defendant was a corporation chartered under the laws of that state as a common carrier, and that it owned and operated a line of railway for the transportation of freight and passengers from Nashville, Tennessee, running north through Franklin, Kentucky, and continuing on to Louisville, Kentucky, a distance of 185 miles, and that the distance from Franklin, Kentucky, to Louisville, Kentucky, over the defendant's line, is 134 miles, and is included in and a part of the distance of 185 miles from Nashville to Louisville; that during the years 1897 and 1898 the defendant transported tobacco for the complainant from Franklin, Kentucky, to Louisville, Kentucky, at the rate of 25 cents per 100 pounds, and that during all this time the plaintiff was shipping and did ship and transport tobacco from Nashville, Tennessee, to Louisville, Kentucky, over the same road, at the sum of 12 cents for 100 pounds; and the complainant averred in his petition *that the company had no right to [29] charge him a greater freight rate for the transportation of tobacco from Franklin, Kentucky, to Louisville, Kentucky, than 12 cents per 100 pounds, and he therefore brought suit to recover back from the defendant the difference between that sum and the sum paid by him, viz., 13 cents per 100 pounds, the amount carried being 145,245 pounds.

The defendant tendered special and general demurrers to this petition on the ground, among others, that it sought to make a law of the state of Kentucky applicable to a rate charged by defendant from Nashville, Tennessee, to Louisville, Kentucky; and that if the law were so construed it would become a regulation of interstate commerce and be invalid, because in conflict with and repugnant to subsection 3 of § 8 of article I. of the Constitution of the United States, and also in violation of the Interstate Commerce Act.

These demurrers were overruled by the court, and thereupon the defendant tendered its answer, setting up its defenses in four separate paragraphs.

By paragraph 1 it substantially admitted the transportation of the tobacco at the rates stated in the plaintiff's petition. In the 2d paragraph it averred that its rate of 12 cents per 100 pounds for the transportation of tobacco from Nashville, Tennessee, to Louisville, Kentucky, was made under and in conformity with the act of Congress called the Interstate Commerce Act, above referred to, and that in pursuance of the 6th section of that act the rate was printed, posted, and kept open to public inspection, and duly filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, and that by virtue of that act it would have been unlawful for the defendant to have charged either more or less than the rate of 12 cents per 100 pounds from Nashville, Tennessee, to Louisville, Kentucky. The defendant further averred that § 218 of the Constitution of the state of Kentucky applied only to a railroad in that state, and had no application to that portion of any railroad that was without the state of Kentucky, and hence had no application to the railroad of the defendant between Nashville, Tennessee, and the state [30] line between Tennessee and Kentucky; *and it was averred that the rates which the defendant might charge from Franklin, Kentucky, to Louisville, Kentucky, were not and could not become unlawful under the long-and-short-haul laws of Kentucky, by reason of any rates that might be charged by the defendant on traffic transported from Nashville, Tennessee, to Louisville, Kentucky; and that the long-and-short-haul laws of Kentucky could apply only when both the long and short hauls were within Kentucky, and that the hauls from Nashville, Tennessee, to Louisville, Kentucky, were not within the jurisdiction of Kentucky.

Defendant further averred that at the times named in the petition it charged no rate on tobacco to Louisville, Kentucky, from any point in the state of Kentucky on the same line with Franklin and farther from Louisville than Franklin, less than the rate of 25 cents per 100 pounds charged by it from Franklin to Louisville. It was further averred that if the constitutional provision in question were so construed as to make this rate of 25 cents per 100 pounds from Franklin, Kentucky, to Louisville, Kentucky, unlawful by reason of the less rate charged by it from Nashville, Tennessee, to Louisville, Kentucky, the result would be to regulate commerce among the states by the long-and-short-haul laws of Kentucky, and to compel the defendant to, and it would, raise its rates of 12 cents per 100 pounds from Nashville, Tennessee, to Louisville, Kentucky, unless it could obtain the authority from the railroad commission of Kentucky to charge the less rate from Nashville, Tennessee, to Louisville, Kentucky; that thereby the long-and-short-haul laws of Kentucky would regulate commerce among the states, and would be in conflict with and repugnant to the Interstate Commerce Act, and also subsection 3 of § 8, article I. Constitution of the United States, and would therefore be void; and there was contained in the paragraph the following averment: that "the defendant hereby sets up, pleads, and relies on the right and privilege secured to it by the said act of Congress and by said provisions of the Constitution of the United States, to have its interstate traffic and the commerce conducted among the states and between Kentucky and Tennessee regulated by the Constitution and the [31] laws of the *United States, and to be free from the regulation and interference of the Constitution and laws of the state of Kentucky."

By paragraph 3 the defendant set up the statute of limitations of the state of Kentucky.

By paragraph 4 the defendant averred that its rate on tobacco from Franklin to Louisville during the times mentioned was much less than the defendant's standard tariff rates for that distance, and that the less rate resulted from and was necessitated by the fact of competition existing at Franklin, Kentucky, which arose from the fact that tobacco could be and was hauled by wagon from Franklin, Kentucky, to Bowling Green, Kentucky, and then shipped to Louisville on boats plying the Green and Barren and Ohio rivers at extremely low rates of transportation, and on account of competition the defendant had to and did accept the rate of 25 cents per 100 pounds; that but for that competition it would and could have charged a much higher rate, which higher rate would have been just and reasonable, and that the rate of 25 cents per 100 pounds was just and reasonable in itself by reason of the competition.

It was further averred that Nashville, Tennessee, was situated on the Cumberland river, navigable by boats plying between Nashville and various points on the Ohio river, including Louisville, Kentucky, and that these boats transported tobacco from Nashville to Louisville at extremely low rates of transportation, and that by reason of this water competition Nashville enjoyed extremely low rates for the shipment of tobacco to Louisville and many other places; and if the defendant, at any of the times mentioned, had charged more for the transportation of tobacco from Nashville, Tennessee, to Louisville, Kentucky, than 12 cents per 100 pounds, it would not have secured the transportation of any of said tobacco from Nashville to Louisville, but the same would have been shipped from Nashville to Louisville, or some other tobacco market, at rates less than 12 cents per 100 pounds, and thereby the defendant would have wholly lost the transportation of any tobacco from Nashville to Louisville; and that the defendant succeeded in obtaining, even at the low rate of 12 cents per 100 pounds, *the [32] transportation of only twelve hogsheads of tobacco from Nashville to Louisville during the time named in the petition. It was averred that the tobacco transported by the defendant from Nashville to Louisville was transported under the circumstances and conditions thus stated, and that none of the same could have been transported at any higher rate than 12 cents per 100 pounds, and that at none of the times mentioned in the petition was the transportation of tobacco from Franklin to Louisville affected by the circumstances or conditions set forth regarding the transportation of tobacco from Nashville to Louisville, and that the competition at Nashville differed substantially from the competition at Franklin, in that it was far more effective and necessitated a much lower rate, and that in making the difference in rates between Franklin and Nashville the defendant simply recognized the substantial difference in the circumstances and conditions of the transportation from and to the two places.

It was also averred that it was to the advantage of the defendant to transport the tobacco that it might secure from Nashville to Louisville at the rate of 12 cents per 100 pounds, rather than lose such transportation altogether, as it would have done if it had attempted to charge more than the rate of 12 cents per 100 pounds; but the fact that the defendant did transport tobacco from Nashville to Louisville at 12 cents per 100 pounds did not increase the rate that it charged from Franklin to Louisville, or make the rate from Franklin to Louisville any higher than it would otherwise have been; and that if it had refused to transport tobacco from Nashville to Louisville for any less rate than the rate charged from Franklin to Louisville, the Nashville shippers of tobacco could and would have shipped it to Louisville or other tobacco markets over routes which this defendant could not control and at rates not exceeding 12 cents per 100 pounds; and that the defendant could and did engage in the transportation of tobacco from Nashville to Louisville at the rate of 12 cents per 100 pounds without in anywise injuring Franklin or any person or interest at Franklin.

Other defenses were set up not now material.

[33] *The plaintiff demurred to paragraphs 2, 3, and 4 of the defendant's answer, which demurrer was sustained by the court. The plaintiff then moved for judgment for the plaintiff upon the pleadings, which motion, under objection by the defendant, the court granted, and thereupon it was adjudged that the plaintiff recover of the defendant the sum of $188.81 and his costs.

Mr. Walker D. Hines argued the cause, and, with Mr. H. W. Bruce, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Ky. Const. § 218, as construed by the lower court, prohibits charging greater rates on tobacco from Franklin, Kentucky, to Louisville, Kentucky, than from Nashville, Tennessee, to Louisville, Kentucky, unless the railroad commission of Kentucky shall authorize a less rate from Nashville to Louisville, and is therefore in direct contravention of the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution.

Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 30 L. ed. 244, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4.

The rate from Nashville, Tennessee, to Louisville, Kentucky, which it was contended could not be charged without authority from the railroad commission of Kentucky, was established in accordance with the Interstate Commerce Act, and by virtue of that act it would have been unlawful for the railroad company to have charged either more or less than the rate thus duly established.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 39 L. ed. 910, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 802.

The policy of Congress is not to destroy, but to protect, legitimate competitive interstate traffic.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. ed. 699, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 184 U. S.

844; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. ed. 414, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45.

It is only rates for the transportation of persons and property between points within the state, that the state can prescribe; and when it undertakes to prescribe rates not to be exceeded by the carrier, it must do so with reference exclusively to what is just and reasonable, as between the carrier and the public, in respect of domestic business.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

No counsel for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Peckham*, after making the foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

The writ of error in this case does not bring up for review any judgment of the court of appeals of the state of Kentucky, the highest court of that state. It appears that the circuit court of that state is the highest court in which a decision of the case could be had, presumably on account of the amount of the judgment. There was no opinion delivered by the judge holding the court in which the case was tried, and as the case did not go to the highest court of that state, we are without the benefit of any written opinion of the courts of Kentucky in regard to the question involved. We have already held, in the case of Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 503, ante, 298, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95, that the section of the Kentucky Constitution above set forth, as applied to places all of which are within the state, violates no provision of the Federal Constitution.

The effect of the decision by the state court now under review is to hold that the provision of § 218 of the state Constitution is not confined to a case where the long and short hauls are both within the state of Kentucky, but that it extends to and embraces a long haul from a place outside of to one within the state, and a shorter haul between points on the same line and in the same direction, both of which are within the state; and the question is whether the provision of that Constitution as thus construed is or is not a violation of the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States. [34]

It would seem that the foundation upon which the validity of the constitutional provision is based is the theory that it operates solely upon the rate within the state, making that rate unlawful if it exceed the rate for the longer distance over the same line in the same direction, though, as in this case, the longer distance is from Nashville, Tennessee, to Louisville, Kentucky. The claim must be that the only effect of the provision is to regulate the rate between points within the state, and that it has no direct effect upon, nor does it in any degree regulate or affect, the rate between points outside and those points which are within the state. The contention is that the state does not prescribe or regulate the rates outside of its borders; that the company may announce and enforce any rate it pleases regarding interstate commerce. It simply directs that between points within the state of Kentucky the charge shall not be greater for a shorter haul than for a longer haul, even though such longer haul may be between a point outside and one inside of the state; that this does not constitute an interference with or a regulation by the state of interstate commerce, and hence the provision is valid.

If this contention were correct, and the constitutional provision as construed by the state court did not by its enforcement regulate or immediately and directly influence and affect the interstate commerce of defendant, either as to amount or rates, the provision in question would be valid. But is it correct? And is there no such immediate influence upon or regulation of the interstate commerce of the defendant?

By the demurrer and the motion for judgment on the pleadings it is admitted that the rates from all points on the defendant's road within the state of Kentucky to Louisville for the transportation of tobacco are not too high, but are in fact just and reasonable in themselves, and to that extent the general obligation of a carrier to make charges that are just and reasonable is fulfilled. There is also a rate for the transportation of tobacco from Nashville to Louisville of 12 cents per 100 pounds, and that rate is arrived at because of the existence [35] of water competition between the two points which absolutely prevents the company from making a greater charge, for if it did it would get no business; and yet on account of the fact that trains are to be run in any event and expenses incurred by reason of the operation of the road, it pays the company to take the tobacco at the rate named, even though it is below what would otherwise be a fair and reasonable compensation for the transportation. It follows, therefore, and the fact is averred, that although under the circumstances it pays the company to transport the tobacco from Louisville at the rate of 12 cents per 100 pounds, yet if it were confronted with the alternative of either giving up such transportation (which a charge of 25 cents per 100 pounds would necessarily result in) or of reducing the charge from Franklin to Louisville to 12 cents per 100 pounds for tobacco, it would be compelled to give up the transportation from Nashville rather than reduce the charge from Franklin to Louisville. If the state of Kentucky has the right to base its provision for the rate of a short haul within its own borders by comparison with the rate for a longer haul partly within and partly without its own borders, notwithstanding the direct effect of a limitation arrived at by such comparison may be the regulation or even the suppression of the interstate commerce of the carrier, then this provision is valid; otherwise it would seem to be the reverse.

That the railroad commission is authorized upon application to permit the company to charge less for longer than for shorter distances is immaterial. If the provision in question, if enforced, does directly affect interstate commerce, its invalidity is not cured by the fact that, if the railroad commission should choose, it might permit the interstate charges to remain. In either case the interference is illegal.

The result of the construction of this provision by the court below is in effect to prohibit the carrier from making a less charge for the transportation from Nashville to Louisville than from Franklin to Louisville, or else to make a charge that will prevent its doing any business between the states in the carrying of tobacco. The necessary result of the provision under "the circum-[36]stances set up in the answer directly affects interstate rates, or, in other words, directly affects interstate commerce, for it directly affects commerce between Nashville and Louisville. The fact is not altered by putting the proposition in another form, and saying that the constitutional provision only prevents the carrier from charging a greater sum for the shorter distance from Franklin to Louisville, both within the state, unless the consent of the railroad commission is obtained, because in either event the charge from Nashville to Louisville enters into and forms a part of the real subject-matter of the provision, the greater sum for the shorter distance within the state being compared with the lesser sum for the longer distance without the state; and the prohibition is absolute, unless the consent of the commission is obtained, from charging any more for the shorter distance within the state than for the longer distance partly within and partly without the state. And in this case, in order to maintain its state rate, it must fix its interstate rate at an amount which prohibits its doing interstate business.

We fully recognize the rule that the effect of a state constitutional provision, or of any state legislation upon interstate commerce, must be direct, and not merely incidental and unimportant; but it seems to us that where the necessary result of enforcing the provision may be to limit or prohibit the transportation of articles from without the state to a point within it, or from a point within to a point without the state, interstate commerce is thereby affected, and may be thereby to a certain extent directly regulated; and in that event the effect of the provision is direct and important, and not a mere incident.

Although not exactly in point, yet the case of Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 30 L. ed. 244, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4, is somewhat analogous in principle. In that case chapter 114 of the Revised Statutes of Illinois, § 126, came under consideration. That section enacted that if any railroad corporation should charge for the transportation of freight, etc., upon its railroad, for any distance within the state, the same or a [37] greater amount of toll or compensation than is at the same time charged, collected,* or received for the transportation in the same direction of any passenger, etc., over a greater distance of the same road, such charges should be deemed prima facie evidence of unjust discrimination prohibited by the act, and penalties were provided for its violation.

An action was brought to recover for a violation of the provisions of the act, and in the declaration it was alleged that the company had charged Elder & McKinney for transporting goods from Peoria in the state of Illinois to New York city at the rate of 15 cents per 100 pounds, and on the same day the company charged Bailey & Swannell for transporting another carload of the same kind of goods from Gilman in the state of Illinois to the city of New York at the rate of 25 cents per 100 pounds, although the carload transported for Elder & McKinney from Peoria was carried 86 miles further in the state of Illinois than the other carload of the same weight; and it was claimed that as the freight was of the same class in both instances, and carried over the same route, except as to the difference of distance, a discrimination against Bailey & Swannell was made in the charges against them, as compared with those given to Elder & McKinney, and hence suit was brought. Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of this court, in which he expressed some doubt whether the statute of Illinois had been correctly construed by the court below, yet as that court had given an interpretation to it which made it apply to commerce among the states, although the contract was made within the state of Illinois and a part of its performance was within the same state, this court was held to be bound as to the construction given to the act by the state court. What that construction was is stated by the court itself. It said:

"We see no reason to depart from the conclusion reached in this case when it was here before. See People v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 104 Ill. 476. But to avoid misapprehension we deem it advisable to state explicitly that we disclaim any idea that Illinois has authority to regulate commerce in any other state. We understand and simply hold that, in the absence of anything showing to the contrary, a single and entire contract to carry for a gross sum from Gilman, in this state,* to the city of New York, implies necessarily that that sum is charged proportionately for the carriage on every part of that distance; and that a single and entire contract to carry for a gross sum from Peoria, in this state, to the city of New York, implies the same thing; and that, therefore, when it is shown that there is charged for carriage upon the same line less from Peoria to New York (the greater distance) than from Gilman to New York (the less distance), and nothing is shown to the effect that such inequality in charge is all for carriage entirely beyond the limits of this state, a prima facie case is made out of unjust discrimination under our statute oc-curing within this state. We hold that the excess in the charge for the less distance presumably affects every part of the line of carriage between Gilman and the state line proportionately with the balance of the line. The judgment is affirmed." Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 105 Ill. 236.

[38] 184 U. S. U. S., Book 46.

In regard to this question, Mr. Justice Miller, in the course of his opinion, said:

"It becomes, therefore, necessary to inquire whether the charge exacted from the shippers in this case was a charge for interstate transportation, or was susceptible of a division which would allow so much of it to attach to commerce strictly within the state, and so much more to commerce in other states. The transportation, which is the subject-matter of the contract, being the point on which the decision of the case must rest, was it a transportation limited to the state of Illinois, or was it a transportation covering all the lines between Gilman in the one case and Peoria in the other in the state of Illinois, and the city of New York in the state of New York?"

The court held it was the latter, and said, after examining the other cases (page 575, L. ed. p. 250, Inters. Com. Rep. p. 37, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 12):

"We must therefore hold that it is not, and never has been, the deliberate opinion of a majority of this court that a statute of a state which attempts to regulate the fares and charges by railroad companies within its limits, for a transportation which constitutes a part of commerce among the states, is a valid law."

*In regard to the effect of the Illinois[39] statute upon interstate commerce, it was further said:

"Let us see precisely what is the degree of interference with transportation of property or persons from one state to another which this statute proposes. A citizen of New York has goods which he desires to have transported by the railroad companies from that city to the interior of the state of Illinois. A continuous line of rail over which a car loaded with these goods can be carried, and is carried habitually, connects the place of shipment with the place of delivery. He undertakes to make a contract with a person engaged in the carrying business at the end of this route from whence the goods are to start, and he is told by the carrier, 'I am free to make a fair and reasonable contract for this carriage to the line of the state of Illinois, but when the car which carries these goods is to cross the line of that state, pursuing at the same time this continuous track, I am met by a law of Illinois which forbids me to make a free contract concerning this transportation within that state, and subjects me to certain rules by which I am to be governed as to the charges which the same railroad company in Illinois may make, or has made, with reference to other persons and other places of delivery.' So that, while that carrier might be willing to carry these goods from the city of New York to the city of Peoria at the rate of 15 cents per 100 pounds, he is not permitted to do so because the Illinois railroad company has already charged at the rate of 25 cents per 100 pounds for carriage to Gilman, in Illinois, which is 86 miles shorter than the distance to Peoria.

[40] "So, also, in the present case, the owner of corn, the principal product of the country, desiring to transport it from Peoria, in Illinois, to New York, finds a railroad company willing to do this at the rate of 15 cents per 100 pounds for a carload, but is compelled to pay at the rate of 25 cents per 100 pounds, because the railroad company has received from a person residing at Gilman 25 cents per 100 pounds for the transportation of a carload of the same class of freight over the same line of road from Gilman to New York. This is the result of the statute of Illinois, in its endeavor to *prevent unjust discrimination, as construed by the supreme court of that state. The effect of it is that whatever may be the rate of transportation per mile charged by the railroad company from Gilman to Sheldon, a distance of 23 miles, in which the loading and the unloading of the freight is the largest expense incurred by the railroad company, the same rate per mile must be charged from Peoria to the city of New York."

Is not this reasoning applicable here? The Nashville owner of tobacco wishes to have it transported to Louisville, and asks the defendant to carry it. It responds that it would like to carry it at the rate of 12 cents per 100 pounds, but that it cannot do so because it has established a reasonable rate between points both of which are in Kentucky, and which rates are more than 12 cents, and that if it were to carry at the rate of 12 cents from Nashville to Louisville it would be necessary, on account of the law of Kentucky, to carry at the same rate all tobacco between all points in that state, which would entail a loss in the business between those points which the company would not be justified in sustaining; therefore the transportation is declined, for it cannot get more than 12 cents from the Nashville man. Is it an answer to this statement to say that the company can get this business by lowering its rates within the state to the same rate as charged from Nashville? Is it bound, in order to secure this interstate commerce, to lower its rates all through the state? If it be, is not the law which accomplishes this result a direct interference by the state with interstate commerce? And if it do not lower its state rates, and in consequence must raise its interstate rates in order to make its state rates valid, and thus must lose to an appreciable and important extent the interstate commerce, is not a law from which such necessary and direct consequences result a regulation in effect by the state, of that commerce which ought to be free therefrom?

In Hall v. De Cuir, 95 U. S. 485, 24 L. ed. 547, it was said: "But we think it may safely be said that state legislation which seeks to impose a direct burden upon interstate commerce, or to interfere directly with its freedom, does encroach upon the exclusive power of Congress."

*The vice of the provision lies in the regulation of the rates between points wholly within the state, by the rates which obtain between points outside of and those which are within the state. [41]

The facts in this case have been thus fully referred to for the purpose of showing how directly and also how injuriously such a provision might affect interstate commerce. Other cases may be supposed where the effect might not be so oppressive. But the fact which vitiates the provision is that it compels the carrier to regulate, adjust, or fix his interstate rates with some reference at least to his rates within the state, thus enabling the state by constitutional provision or by legislation to directly affect, and in that way to regulate, to some extent the interstate commerce of the carrier, which power of regulation the Constitution of the United States gives to the Federal Congress.

It has been urged that, assuming Congress to have the power to fix interstate rates, if that body should prescribe the interstate rate for the transportation of commodities (tobacco, for instance) from Nashville to Louisville, for a railroad carrier, that the state might then fix the local rates by that standard, and if so, why could it not do the same thing when the carrier itself fixes its interstate rate? In the case supposed, the rate is fixed and the interstate commerce regulated by the body which has the power to impose such rate on the carrier and to regulate its interstate commerce. The state might, in the case supposed, enact that the road should not charge more, or at a greater rate, for a short haul within the state, than Congress provided for the long interstate haul. The reason is that Congress in the case presented is assumed to have the power to direct and regulate the interstate rate, and having that power and exercising it, the state could then provide that its internal charge should not exceed that rate, and there would be in that case no interference with or regulation of interstate commerce directly or indirectly by the state, its action could have no possible effect upon the interstate rate, as the amount of the charge would be regulated by the body with which the right of regulation exists.

It seems also to be thought that there is no regulation of commerce, *provided it is not interfered with or regulated in all ways by which transportation of commodities between interstate localities may be accomplished; that if the commodity (tobacco in this case) can be transported by any other means or route, or by any other individual or corporation, than the one affected by the regulation, commerce is not regulated within the constitutional meaning. On the contrary, it seems quite clear that any law which in its direct result regulates the interstate transportation of a single individual carrier, or company of carriers, violates the provision in question; that it is no answer to say the commodity can still be transported by another carrier or by water instead of rail, so long as the direct effect of the state legislation is to regulate the transportation of the commodity by a particular means, by rail instead of by water, or by a particular individual or company.

It is also argued that if Congress should enact that an interstate rate shall be the sum of the local rates prescribed by the several states for the parts in the line within its borders, it could not correctly be maintained that such enactment would amount to an interference with the power of the state over local rates, and the mere fact that Congress accepted the local rates and made them the basis of an interstate rate could not be held to be an interference by Congress with local commerce; and if not, how can it be held an interference by the state when it recognizes existing interstate rates as a basis for its legislation concerning local rates? We think there is no analogy between the two cases.

In the case supposed the states have fixed the local rates within their respective borders, and the action of Congress in fixing their sum as the rate for interstate commerce does not in any way regulate or interfere with the respective state rates already, or from time to time, adopted by the state. In thus fixing the interstate rate Congress may most seriously interfere with or regulate interstate commerce, but that it has the right to do; and on the other hand the state by such a statute regulates the local rate, but that it has the right to do.

Congress does not directly or indirectly interfere with local rates by adopting their sum as the interstate rate.

[43] *In the case at bar the state claims only to regulate its local rates by the standard of the interstate rate, and says the former shall be no higher than the latter, but the direct effect of that provision is, as we have seen, to regulate the interstate rate, for to do any interstate business at the local rate is impossible, and if so, it must give up its interstate business or else reduce the local rate in proportion. That very result is a hindrance to an interference with, and a regulation of, commerce between the states, carried on, though it may be, by only a single company.

We are of opinion that as construed by the state court, and so far as it is made applicable to or affects interstate commerce, the 218th section of the Constitution of Kentucky is invalid, and the judgment of the Circuit Court of Simpson County, Kentucky, is therefore reversed, and the case remanded to that court for such further proceedings therein as shall not be inconsistent with this opinion.

And it is so ordered.

Mr. Justice Brewer, with whom concurred Mr. Justice Gray, dissenting:

I am unable to concur in the opinion and judgment in this case. We have just held that § 218 of the Constitution of Kentucky and § 820 of the Kentucky Statutes, based thereon, are not in conflict with the Constitution of the United States when applied to a case in which both the long and the short haul are wholly within the state. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 503, ante, 298, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95. The constitutional section, briefly stated, forbids a carrier from charging more for a short than for a long haul within which the short haul is included. The prohibition is upon the short-haul charge. There is no prohibition in respect to the long-haul charge, no restriction of the power of the carrier over it, no regulation concerning it, no prescribing by whom or how or when it shall be made,—all this is absolutely untouched by the section.

The proposition now advanced is that while the state may constitutionally prohibit a short-haul charge in excess of a long-haul charge, it can do so only when both[44] hauls are within the limits of the state. Nothing in the section makes such limitation. Nothing in the Federal Constitution, in terms, at least, restricts the power of the state in this respect over its internal commerce. This question may arise under either of two conditions, one in which Congress has prescribed the interstate rate, and the other in which it has left the matter to be fixed by the carrier.

Considering the first of these conditions, suppose Congress in the exercise of its power over interstate commerce should enact that all interstate passengers be charged exactly 4 cents a mile, and the railroad company, while obeying that statute in its charges for carrying passengers from Nashville to Louisville, should from Franklin to Louisville charge 5 cents a mile, could it be pretended that the prohibition of the state Constitution against charging more for a short haul than for a long haul was not operative because an interference with interstate commerce? Has the state no power to compel its corporations to give to parties traveling within its limits the same rates and privileges that Congress prescribes for interstate passengers? And can it not do so by simply prohibiting a greater charge for a long than a short haul clause? In other words, is it interfering with interstate commerce when the state, not prescribing the charges for interstate travel, simply requires that the passenger shall be charged no higher rates for local travel?

The form in which the state legislation is cast cannot be vital in determining the question of power. If an act which in terms prescribes a rate per mile for local travel the same as has been prescribed by Congress for interstate travel is within the power of the state (and that it is cannot be doubted), surely one accomplishing the same thing by simply forbidding the carrier to charge more for a short than for a long haul is likewise within its power. The state is merely using the standard fixed by Congress, and enforcing that standard in respect to local rates. In Miller v. Swann, 150 U. S. 132, sub nom. Miller v. Anderson, 37 L. ed. 1028, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 52, it was held that the construction of that part of the state statute which authorized the disposal of the [45] state's lands in accordance *with the provisions of the public land laws of the United States involved no Federal question. The reference to the land laws of the United States was simply by way of selecting a standard.

But if a state may select as a standard the interstate rates prescribed by Congress, and make its local rates the same, without interfering with interstate commerce, it would certainly seem that it could in like manner take the interstate rates which the carrier himself prescribes, and compel conformity of local rates thereto, and still not be subject to the charge of interfering with interstate commerce. It is strange to be told that the action of a carrier in fixing interstate rates is potent to render unconstitutional the legislation of the state respecting local rates, when the like action of Congress in prescribing interstate rates is not so potent. In other words, action by the carrier in pursuit of its own financial interests overturns the Constitution and statute of the state when like action by Congress in the exercise of its constitutional power does not.

It must be borne in mind that there is here no question of reasonableness of rates. It is true the carrier avers that the rate of 25 cents per 100 pounds from Franklin to Louisville was just and reasonable, but it also avers that it made that charge only by reason of water competition, whereas "but for that competition the defendant would and could have charged a much higher rate, which higher rate would have been just and reasonable." According to these allegations, while 25 cents was a just and reasonable rate, a much higher rate would also be just and reasonable; and it is nowhere alleged that a rate of 12 cents—that from Nashville to Louisville—would have been unreasonable as a rate between Franklin and Louisville. If invalid at all, it is not because it is no higher than the rate between Nashville and Louisville, but because it is in and of itself unreasonably low for the services rendered. As the amount of tobacco which the defendant shipped from Nashville to Louisville between February 23 and July 15 was only twelve hogsheads, weighing 20,910 pounds, and paying $25.09 freight, it is obvious that the loss of this entire amount of freight would not have worked a confiscation of the defendant's railroad property, if that be the test of reasonableness so far as *the power of the legis- [46] lature over rates is concerned, though as to the true test of reasonableness, see Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. 183 U. S. 79, sub nom. Cotting v. Godard, ante, 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30.

The question may be looked at in another light. The railroad company avers that it made its rate of 12 cents from Nashville to Louisville in conformity with the act of Congress; that the said rate was duly printed, posted, and kept open to public inspection, and that by virtue of the Interstate Commerce Act it was unlawful for it to charge either more or less than the rate of 12 cents from Nashville to Louisville. Suppose the legislature of Kentucky, accepting that statement as correct, should pass an act in terms prohibiting this company from charging more than 12 cents from Franklin to Louisville, who would undertake to say that such act was unconstitutional without evidence that in and of itself the rate of 12 cents was unreasonable within some recognized definition of reasonableness? Does the act become prima facie unconstitutional because, instead of naming 12 cents, the legislature forbids the carrier from charging more than 12 cents, which the carrier has fixed as its rate from Nashville to Louisville?

Again, Louisville is on the northern border of the state, and the route of defendant's railroad extends through the state, and thence southward to Nashville. Every place on the line of the road within the limits of Kentucky makes, therefore, a shorter haul to Louisville than the haul from Nashville, and is included in the latter. Under the reasoning of this opinion the state of Kentucky has no power to prescribe a rate from any point within the state of Kentucky to Louisville which shall be less than the rate which the company has fixed from Nashville to Louisville. Nor are we to suppose that competition between Nashville and Louisville is limited to the matter of the transportation of tobacco. It is a competition between water and railroad transportation, and naturally extends to all articles of freight, as well as to passengers. By the reasoning of the opinion the state of Kentucky would be powerless to compel the Louisville & Nashville Company to charge a less than the competitive Nashville rate, no matter how reasonable, from any *point with- [47] in its borders to Louisville. It does not seem to me that much is left of state control over local rates.

In the opinion of the court it is said:

"The result of the construction of this provision by the court below is in effect to prohibit the carrier from making a less charge for the transportation from Nashville to Louisville than from Franklin to Louisville, or else to make a charge that will prevent its doing any business between the states in the carrying of tobacco. The necessary result of the provision under the circumstances set up in the answer directly affects interstate rates, or, in other words, directly affects interstate commerce, for it directly affects commerce between Nashville and Louisville. . . . We fully recognize the rule that the effect of a state constitutional provision, or of any state legislation, upon interstate commerce, must be direct, and not merely incidental and unimportant; but it seems to us that where the necessary result of enforcing the provision may be to limit or prohibit the transportation of articles from without the state to a point within it, or from a point within to a point without the state, interstate commerce is thereby affected, and may be thereby to a certain extent directly regulated; and in that event the effect of the provision is direct and important, and not a mere incident."

The fallacy of this is that it makes transportation by the Louisville & Nashville Company essential to commerce between Nashville and Louisville. The burden of the complaint on the part of the company is that there is competition at Nashville for the transportation of tobacco to Louisville, and that it must make a low charge to get a share of that transportation; not that the tobacco will not be transported, not that commerce will be interfered with, but that this company will lose some portion of that transportation. In other words, the power of the state of Kentucky over this corporation, which it has created, in respect to local rates, is denied in order that the corporation may obtain some portion of interstate transportation. I think we may well recall what was said only three weeks since by this court in the opinion in the case referred to, of this same company against the commonwealth of Kentucky:

[48] "It may be that the enforcement of the state regulation forbidding discrimination in rates in the case of articles of a like kind carried for different distances over the same line may somewhat affect commerce generally; but we have frequently held that such a result is too remote and indirect to be regarded as an interference with interstate commerce; that the interference with the commercial power of the general government to be unlawful must be direct, and not the merely incidental effect of enforcing the police powers of a state. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 158 U. S. 431, 439, 39 L. ed. 1043, 1046, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896; Henderson Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 166 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 953, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532."

Another matter is worthy of consideration. Suppose that Congress enacts that an interstate rate shall be the sum of the local rates prescribed by the several states for the parts of the through line within their borders. Will it be contended that this is an interference with the power of the state over local rates? Does the mere fact that Congress accepts the local rates and makes them the basis of an interstate rate make it an interference by Congress with local commerce? And if that be not so, how, on the other hand, can it be held that a mere recognition by the state of existing interstate rates as a basis for its legislation concerning local rate is an interference with interstate commerce?

I do not suppose it will be seriously contended that the defendant can invalidate all the local rates which the legislature of Kentucky may see fit to enforce by simply saying that outside of the state it somewhere touches a competitive point, and is forced to reduce its interstate rates by reason of the competition there existing. In other words, if in the present case there was in fact no water competition between Nashville and Louisville, or if there was no tobacco shipped from Nashville to Louisville, I take it no one would seriously contend that the railroad company, by affirming that there was, could upset the provisions of the Kentucky legislation. There would be a question of fact to be determined, even according to the theory that competition in interstate rates has anything to do with local rates, and that question of fact might be presented in actions like the present,—actions for overcharges, actions in which the parties would have the right to trial by jury. Suppose that one jury, upon the testimony presented before it, should find that there was water competition between Nashville and Louisville, and that there was tobacco shipped between the two places, and another jury, upon the testimony introduced in a succeeding case, exactly the contrary, is the legislation of Kentucky to be declared unconstitutional in one case and constitutional in the other?

It seems to me, in conclusion, that a state legislature has full power over local rates, subject only to the restriction that it cannot require a carrier to carry without reasonable compensation, and that when it legislates for local rates alone it may fix those rates by figures, or upon the basis of any standard which it sees fit to adopt, and the mere fact that it bases them upon some standard is not legislation regulating that standard,—the local rates are alone the matter regulated. For these reasons I cannot concur in the opinion and judgment.

I am authorized to state that Mr. Justice Gray agrees with this dissent.

UNITED STATES, Appt.,
v.
SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY, George Loomis, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 49-61.)

Public lands—bona fide purchasers of patented lands—notice that government questions the patentee's title—bona fide purchasers of unpatented lands.

1. Purchasers for value and in good faith, of lands patented to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company as within the scope of the grant made to that company by the act of March 3, 1871 (16 Stat. at L. 573, chap. 122), are bona fide purchasers and as such are protected by act of March 2, 1896 (29 Stat. at L. 42, chap. 39), although they had notice of a change of opinion on the part of the officers of the government as to the validity of the title of the railroad company to such lands.
2. Persons who have contracted with the Southern Pacific Railroad Company for unpatented lands so situated with respect to its constructed road as to be apparently within the scope of its grant are protected by the act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 556, chap. 376), not only as to purchases prior to the date of such act, but as to any made before the time of final adjustment.
3. One is not a bona fide purchaser, from a grantee of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, of lands apparently within the scope of its grant, which had not been conveyed to or for the use of such company, so as to be protected by the act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 556, chap. 376), § 5, who pays nothing therefor except by giving his legal services and making advances of money in the way of taxes, under his agreement with such grantee to protect it in its purchase money and receive for himself whatever he could obtain over and above that sum.

[No. 25.]

Argued April 18, 19, 1901. Decided January 27, 1902.

APPPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of California, which quieted the title of the United States government to land within the limits of a forfeited railroad grant. Affirmed in part and reversed in part.

See same case below, 38 C. C. A. 637, 98 Fed. 45.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

[50] *This is a continuation of the case which was before this court and decided in 1897. 168 U. S. 1, 42 L. ed. 355, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18. It was brought to quiet the title of the government to some 700,000 acres of land within the limits of the forfeited grant to the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company, and claimed by the defendants under certain junior grants to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company. The decree in the circuit court quieted, as against the Southern Pacific Company, the title of the government to all the lands. The other defendants asserted title or claimed rights to certain portions of the land by virtue of conveyances from or contracts with the Southern Pacific Company, and the decree provided: "Nor shall this decree in anywise affect any rights which the defendants, or any of them, other than the said Southern Pacific Railroad Company, now have or may hereafter acquire in, to, or respecting any of the lands hereinbefore described, in virtue of the act of Congress entitled 'An Act to Provide for the Adjustment of Land Grants Made by Congress to Aid in the Construction of Railroads and for the Forfeiture of Unearned Lands and for Other Purposes,' approved March 3, 1887."

This decree was affirmed by this court so far as the Southern Pacific Company as well as the trustees in its mortgage were concerned, the court saying, in reference to that portion of the decree just quoted (p. 65, L. ed. p. 382, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 34):

[51] *"Instead of leaving undetermined the matters in dispute between the United States and the defendants other than the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, the circuit court should have determined, by its final decree, what rights those defendants have by virtue of the above act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 556, chap. 376), in the lands or any of them now in dispute and claimed by the United States. The effect of the decree is to leave undetermined the question whether the defendants who claim under the Southern Pacific Railroad Company are protected by that or any other act of Congress. The government was entitled to a decree quieting its title to all the lands described in its pleadings, except those, if any, that are protected, in the hands of claimants, by acts of Congress. United States v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 165 U. S. 463, 41 L. ed. 789, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368; Winona & St. P. R. Co. v. United States, 165 U. S. 483, 41 L. ed. 798, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 381. But as the government has not appealed, the decree cannot be reversed for the error of the circuit court in not finally disposing of the issues between the United States and the individual defendants who claim under the Southern Pacific Railroad Company.
426

"The result is that the decree must be affirmed in all respects as to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, as well as to the trustees in the mortgage executed by that company, and affirmed also as to the other defendants, subject, however, to the right of the government to proceed in the circuit court to a final decree as to those defendants, and it is so ordered."

On the return of the mandate to the circuit court the United States dismissed their bill against the defendants other than the railroad company and its mortgage trustee, without prejudice as to all, except certain specified tracts, amounting in the aggregate to about 52,600 acres, of which amount 9,284 were patented by the United States to the Southern Pacific, the patents bearing date March 29, 1876, April 4, 1879, December 27, 1883, and January 9, 1885, and 43,315 remained unpatented. In respect to these tracts the case proceeded to final hearing, which resulted in a decree in favor of the defendants (88 Fed. 832), confirming their title to the lands patented, and adjudging them bona fide purchasers within the meaning of the act of Congress of March 3, 1887, of the lands not patented. From *this decree the United States appealed to [52] the court of appeals for the ninth circuit, which affirmed the decree (38 C. C. A. 637, 98 Fed. 45), and thereupon the United States brought the case here on appeal.

Mr. Joseph H. Call argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

Purchasers with notice of the adverse claims of the government to these lands are not bona fide purchasers.

Pom. Eq. Jur. 745; United States v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 165 U. S. 463, 483, 41 L. ed. 789, 798, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368, 381; Simmons Creek Coal Co. v. Doran, 142 U. S. 417, 35 L. ed. 1063, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 239; Nesbit v. Independent Dist. 144 U. S. 610, 36 L. ed. 562, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 746; Lytle v. Lansing, 147 U. S. 59, 37 L. ed. 78, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 254; Sutliff v. Lake County, 147 U. S. 230, 37 L. ed. 145, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318.

The lands granted to the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company by the act of 1866, within both granted and indemnity limits, were not operated upon by the subsequent grants to the Southern Pacific Company, and were, by operation of the act of Congress of July 6, 1886, restored to the public domain, and were subject to entry under the settlement laws of the United States.

Coble v. Southern P. R. Co. 6 Land Dec. 679, 812; Re Southern P. R. Co. 6 Land Dec. 816, 16 Land Dec. 317; Moore v. Kellogg, 17 Land Dec. 391; Re Union Oil Co. 25 Land Dec. 351.

Those who purchased or made payments to the railroad after the passage of the act are affected with notice, and charged by that act with knowledge of the rights of the United States.

United States v. Southern P. R. Co. 146 U. S. 570, 36 L. ed. 1091, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152; Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 168 U. S. 1, 42 L. ed. 355, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18.

The adjustment act of March 3, 1887, as amended by the acts of 1896, is not prospective in its operation.

Gilson v. Robinson, 68 Cal. 539, 10 Pac. 193; Durand v. Martin, 120 U. S. 372, 30 L. ed. 678, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 587.

A third person who purchases a right or an interest in property under litigation from a party to the suit is bound by the judgment entered to the same extent as if a formal party to the record, and in contemplation of law such purchaser is represented by the party from whom he purchased.

Murray v. Ballou, 1 Johns. Ch. 566; Whiteside v. Haselton, 110 U. S. 296, 28 L. ed. 152, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Union Trust Co. v. Southern Inland Nav. & Improv. Co. 130 U. S. 565, 32 L. ed. 1043, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 606.

To constitute a purchase there must also be a payment, and as to all payments made after notice there is no protection extended to the purchaser.

Lytle v. Lansing, 147 U. S. 59, 37 L. ed. 78, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 254.

Where partial payments have been made upon executory contracts, the legal title remains in the railroad company, if not in the government, which is held until full payment shall be made, and an equitable right remains in the purchaser to the extent of the payments.

Williams v. United States, 138 U. S. 514, 34 L. ed. 1026, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 457; Jennison v. Leonard, 21 Wall. 302, 22 L. ed. 539; 1 Story, Eq. Jur. 396.

The acts of Congress of March 3, 1887, February 12, 1896, and March 2, 1896, relating to the rights of bona fide purchasers from land-grant railroads, are upon the same subject, and being in pari materia should be construed together and all treated as a single law determining the rights of such bona fide purchasers.

United States v. Hcaley, 160 U. S. 136, 40 L. ed. 369, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; Frost v. Wenie, 157 U. S. 46, 39 L. ed. 614, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. United States, 127 U. S. 406, 32 L. ed. 180, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1194; District of Columbia 184 U. S.

v. Hutton, 143 U. S. 18, 36 L. ed. 60, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 369.

The acts of February 12, 1896, and March 2, 1896, referring to the act of 1887, make further provisions as to "bona fide purchasers." The definition thus given to a "bona fide purchaser" is necessarily carried into all these acts.

Clafin v. Commonwealth Ins. Co. 110 U. S. 81, 28 L. ed. 76, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 507.

Mr. Maxwell Eyarts argued the cause, and, with Mr. L. E. Payson, filed a brief for appellees:

The bona fides referred to in the acts of March 3, 1887, and March 2, 1896, are not the same as the bona fides of the common law, but is any "honest transaction between a purchaser and a railroad company."

United States v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 165 U. S. 463, 483, 41 L. ed. 789, 798, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368, 381. See also 6 Land Dec. 272; Sethman v. Clise, 17 Land Dec. 307; Osborn v. Knight, 23 Land Dec. 216.

The law deals tenderly with one who, in good faith, goes upon the public lands with a view of making a home thereon.

Clements v. Warner, 24 How. 394, 16 L. ed. 695; Tarpey v. Madsen, 178 U. S. 215, 44 L. ed. 1042, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 849.

Persons who have bought under contract and paid only a portion of the purchase price are protected by § 3 of the act of March 2, 1896, which speaks of "bona fide purchasers . . . by deed or contract or otherwise."

Schneider v. Linkswiller, 26 Land Dec. 407; Sethman v. Clise, 17 Land Dec. 307; Re Barton, 26 Land Dec. 489.

It is unimportant whether the immediate transferee of the railroad was a foreigner or not, so long as the owner at the time of the adjustment of the title to the lands was a citizen.

Sethman v. Clise, 17 Land Dec. 307; 11 Land Dec. 229.

All the patented lands involved herein were purchased from the railroad by bona fide purchasers within the meaning of the adjustment acts.

Neilsen v. Central P. R. Co. 26 Land Dec. 252; Re Seaver, 23 Land Dec. 108.

Mr. M. D. Brainard argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee, Loomis:

This statute is remedial in character.

Act of March 3, 1887; 6 Land Dec. 272.

Statutes of this character are to be construed liberally for the suppression of the mischief and the advancement of the remedy.

23 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 414.

The whole right of the purchaser from the railroad company to purchase from the government under this section of the act of 1887 is based upon the good faith of the purchase from the company, and the question of notice of defect in the title is immaterial.

United States v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 165 U. S. 463, 41 L. ed. 789, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368.

*Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The questions now to be determined arise between the United States and parties holding title or claiming rights to lands by deed from or contract with the railroad company. The title of the company having been adjudged void, the defendants rely upon the acts of Congress of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 556, chap. 376), February 12, 1896 (29 Stat. at L. 6, chap. 18), and March 2, 1896 (29 Stat. at L. 42, chap. 39). These acts were passed for the purpose of upholding the titles of parties who in good faith had purchased from railroad companies lands which, though supposed to be part of their grants, proved not to be so. This legislation was fully considered in United States v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 165 U. S. 463, 41 L. ed. 789, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368; and Winona & St. P. R. Co. v. United States, 165 U. S. 483, 41 L. ed. 798, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 381, and any further discussion of its scope is unnecessary. In respect to it we said:

"The act of 1896 confirming the right and title of a bona fide purchaser, and providing that the patent to his lands should not be vacated or annulled, must be held to include one who, if not in the fullest sense a 'bona fide purchaser,' has nevertheless purchased in good faith from the railroad company.

"Our conclusion is that these acts operate to confirm the title to every purchaser from a railroad company of lands certified or patented to or for its benefit, notwithstanding any mere errors or irregularities in the proceedings of the Land Department, and notwithstanding the fact that the lands so certified or patented were, by the true construction of the land grants, although [53] within *the limits of the grants, excepted from their operation, providing that he purchased in good faith, paid value for the lands, and providing, also, that the lands were public lands in the statutory sense of the term, and free from individual or other claims." P. 481, L. ed. p. 797, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 373.

In the present case the deeds to the patented lands were executed by the company at different dates, commencing July 23, 1885, and ending July 19, 1892. These lands were apparently within the grant made to the Southern Pacific by the act of March 3, 1871 (16 Stat. at L. 573, chap. 122); that is, they were public lands in the statutory sense of the term along the line of the Southern Pacific as authorized by that act and within the place or indemnity limits of the grant. The road had been constructed, and the Land Department of the United States, the tribunal charged with the duty of administering the public lands, had decided that the company had earned the lands, and had caused patents therefor to be issued to it. No third party claimed title; either the government or the company was the owner. Under those circumstances the purchasers bought the lands; bought them in good faith; paid value for them.

These facts bring the case within the 1st section of the act of March 2, 1896, as heretofore construed by us: "But no patent to any lands held by a bona fide purchaser shall be vacated or annulled, but the right and title of such purchaser is hereby confirmed."

Against this conclusion it is contended that purchasers with notice that the government questioned the company's title to these lands are not bona fide purchasers. And counsel say that "in the year 1886 every department of the government began to operate to protect the title of the United States to these lands, and in every public way gave notice to the world of the rights of the government to them," enumerating the act of Congress of July 6, 1886, forfeiting the grant to the Atlantic & Pacific Company; various rulings of the Interior Department, from that on June 7, 1887 (Gordon v. Southern P. R. Co. 5 Land Dec. 691), to the date of the last deed, to the effect that the lands granted to the Atlantic & Pacific were not operated upon by the subsequent grants to the Southern Pacific, and were by the for-[54] feiture act restored to the public domain; and the commencement of the several suits by the government to establish its title to these lands and others similarly situated. Counsel also refer to Winona & St. P. R. Co. v. United States, 165 U. S. 483, 41 L. ed. 798, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 381, in which it was held that one cannot claim to be a purchaser in good faith from a railroad company if at the time he has notice of facts outside the records of the Land Department disclosing a prior right in some third party.

But we do not think a mere change in the opinions of the officers of the government, as to the validity of the company's title, although made known to parties proposing to purchase from such company, is sufficient to take away from them the protection of good faith. A party may have notice of conflicting claims, and still, in the exercise of an honest judgment as to the rightful owner, buy property and pay for it, and be acting in good faith. So far as suits are concerned, all the decisions of the courts had been, up to the date of the last deed, in favor of the title of the company. Thus the purchasers had not merely the action of the Land Department in issuing the patents, but all past decisions of the courts, justifying their conclusions. The conditions are not like those in Winona & St. P. R. Co. v. United States. That was a suit to cancel a certification of a tract of land made for the benefit of a railroad company, and also a deed from it. The certification was wrongfully made, and the company in fact took no title. The purchaser sought protection under these statutes. Before any certification, or any pretense of right in the company, as well as at the time of the conveyance to its grantee, there was and had been for many years a party in actual possession of the land under a title prima facie regular and valid, and it was held that the grantee, charged with notice of that occupancy and that claim of title, could not be adjudged a bona fide purchaser from the railroad company within the meaning of the statute. "The statute was not intended to cut off the rights of parties continuing after the certification, and of which at the time of his purchase the purchaser had notice. Only the purely technical claims of the government were waived." Nothing of that kind appears here; no independent and out-

[55]side *facts are shown, no title in any third party,—simply a change of opinion on the part of the officers of the government as to the validity of the title of the Southern Pacific Company; and it would be harsh indeed if remedial statutes like these were shorn of their beneficent application by reason of the fact that the officials of the government had changed their views of the law. We think the circuit court was right in confirming the title to the lands patented.

With reference to the unpatented lands, they, like the former, were so situated with respect to the constructed road of the Southern Pacific as to be apparently within the scope of its grant, and the same general comments are appropriate here as in reference to the patented land. The act of 1896 refers only to lands patented or certified, and the parties who contracted with the company for unpatented lands must rely for protection upon the act of 1887. Most of the transactions in respect to them were after the date of this act, and it is contended that it is not prospective in its operation, and only purports to protect prior transactions.

The ruling of the Land Department has been to the contrary effect. In Sethman v. Clisc, 17 Land Dec. 307, a purchase from the railroad company was made prior to the act of 1887, but after the act the purchaser conveyed to a transferee, and it was held that the latter was entitled to relief under the statute.

"The act directed the manner of making adjustments, and it was the evident intention of Congress, as expressed in the 5th section of the act, that when, in the adjustment of these grants, it was ascertained that land had been bought from the railroad companies for which they could convey no good title, such buyers or their transferees, if bona fide, should be allowed to purchase the tracts claimed by them. And it can make no difference, I think, whether a transferee, otherwise entitled to purchase, bought the land before or after the day of the approval of the act, if it was originally purchased in good faith from any said company." P. 312.

In Andrus v. Balch, 22 Land Dec. 238, was presented the case of a purchase from the railroad company after the act of March 3, 1887, and it was held that that did not

[56]prevent the *operation of the act. The same proposition was reaffirmed in Briley v. Beach, 22 Land Dec. 549; Re Seaver, 23 Land Dec. 108; Grandin v. La Bar, 25 Land Dec. 194; Neilsen v. Central P. R. Co. 26 Land Dec. 252. There has been no decision to the contrary. This uniform ruling and practice of the Land Department would, in case of doubt, be of great weight in determining the true construction of the act. Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 56, 92, 44 L. ed. 969, 975, 990, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Fairbank v. United States, 181 U. S. 283-306, 44 L. ed. 862-872, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648.
184 U. S.

But the act itself bears upon its face evidence that it was not intended to be limited to cases of purchases from the railroad company prior to its date. While the 1st section directs the Secretary of the Interior "to immediately adjust" the several land grants, § 3 provides "that if, in the adjustment of said grants, it shall appear that the homestead or pre-emption entry of any bona fide settler has been erroneously canceled on account of any railroad grant or the withdrawal of public lands from market, such settler upon application shall be reinstated in all his rights, and allowed to perfect his entry by complying with the public land laws." This seems to imply an intent that all mistakes of the nature referred to which shall have occurred up to the very completion of the adjustment may be rectified. Section 4 makes provision for the issue of patents to certain purchasers from railroad companies, providing proof shall be made "within such time and under such rules as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior, after the grants respectively shall have been adjusted." While other sections may not be so specific, yet, placing them alongside of those from which quotations have been made, it is reasonable to hold that the act applies not merely to transactions had before its date, but to any had before the time of final adjustment. In this case the several grants to the Southern Pacific have not yet been finally adjusted. Further, it must be borne in mind that this is a remedial statute, and is to be construed liberally, and so as to effectuate the purpose of Congress and secure the relief which was designed; and the mere date of the transaction between the purchaser and the railroad company is not of itself vital in determining *whether there is or is not an equity in[57] behalf of the purchaser. As said in Potter's Dwarrior on Statutes, 231:

"A remedial act shall be so construed as most effectually to meet the beneficial end in view, and to prevent a failure of the remedy. As a general rule, a remedial statute ought to be construed liberally. Receiving an equitable, or rather a benignant, interpretation, the letter of the act will be sometimes enlarged, sometimes restrained, and sometimes it has been said the construction made is contrary to the letter; which should be read, ultra the letter, and confined to ancient statutes."

See also the letter of Attorney General Garland to the Secretary of the Interior, in response to a question as to the true construction of this act (6 Land Dec. 275):

"The whole scope of the law from the 2d to the 6th sections, inclusive, is remedial.

Its intent is to relieve from loss settlers and bona fide purchasers who, through the erroneous or wrongful disposition of the lands in the grants, by the officers of the government, or by the railroads, have lost their rights or acquired equities. . . . The 5th section expressly refers to such lands as had been sold, which had not been conveyed 'to or for the use of such companies.' It is not required that the sale by the railroad companies shall have been made on its part in good faith, but only that the purchaser shall have bought in good faith. That it was sold under a claim of the grant to another in good faith is the ground of his equity."

The remaining question arises on the ruling that one of the defendants, Jackson A. Graves, was a bona fide purchaser, and entitled to the protection of the 5th section of the act of March 3, 1887, and affects something like 35,000 acres. These were purchased from the railroad company in 1885 by the Atlantic & Pacific Fibre Importing & Manufacturing Company, Limited, a corporation organized under the laws of Great Britain. This suit was commenced on May 17, 1890. On September 25, 1891, an amended bill of complaint was filed, in which the fibre company was made party defendant. Its answer was filed March 14, 1892. On January 27, 1893, it conveyed the lands to Graves, who thereafter caused himself to be substituted for it as party defendant. Said § 5, so far as is applicable, reads:

"Sec. 5. That where any said company shall have sold to citizens of the United States, or to persons who have declared their intention to become such citizens, as a part of its grant, lands not conveyed to or for the use of such company, said lands being the numbered sections prescribed in the grant, and being conterminous with the constructed parts of said road, and where the lands so sold are for any reason excepted from the operation of the grant to said company, it shall be lawful for the bona fide purchaser thereof from said company to make payment to the United States for said lands at the ordinary government price for like lands, and thereupon patents shall issue therefor to the said bona fide purchaser, his heirs or assigns."

The fibre company was an alien, and therefore not within the terms of the section. Graves, it is true, was a citizen, and the ruling of the Department has been that the right of purchase from the government conferred by this section is not limited to the immediate purchaser from the company, but may be exercised by a subsequent grantee who has the necessary qualifications, and that in such case it is immaterial what were the qualifications of such purchaser. See letter of Secretary Noble to the Commissioner of the General Land Office (11 Land Dec. 229), in which the Secretary said:

"It can make no difference, in my judgment, whether the applicant is the immediat purchaser from the company or a purchaser one or more degrees removed. If he is a bona fide purchaser of the land and has the required qualifications as to citizenship he is within the intendment of the statute, and if he be not the original purchaser from the company it is immaterial what the qualifications of his immediate grantor, or the intervening purchasers, may have been. If his immediate grantor was a foreigner, and his purchase was simply for the purpose of acquiring title from the government for the benefit of the foreigner, he would not be a bona fide purchaser, and would not therefore come within the terms of the act." Union P. R. Co. v. McKinley, 14 Land Dec. 237; Union Colony v. Fulmele, 16 *Land[59] Dec. 273; Sethman v. Clise, 17 Land Dec. 307; Ray v. Gross, 27 Land Dec. 707.

Within the scope of these rulings Graves is entitled to the protection of the statute if he can be considered a bona fide purchaser. He bought pendente lite, and while he testified that he purchased in good faith and for value, that he was holding the lands under the conveyances, and had paid all legal taxes and assessments levied and assessed since the deeds, he further testified as follows:

Q. 19. Did you buy these lands in good faith?—A. Yes, expecting to make title to them.

Q. 20. And do you hold them as said purchaser and as a citizen of the United States?—A. I do.

Q. 21. And as an innocent purchaser?—A. Well——

Q. 22. For value received?—A. I hold them for a valuable consideration.

Q. 23. Well, do you claim to be an innocent purchaser of said lands, under the act of Congress of March 3, 1887?—A. I think I am protected under the act of Congress of 1887. I would like to understand this "innocent." What you mean by that? Of course I have notice of the defect,—I have notice of the congressional action taken, and of the pendency of this suit; had it when I bought. Outside of that I consider myself an innocent purchaser. Of course I had that notice of that suit. There is no use denying that. At the same time, I understand—I think I understand—the act of Congress of 1887, and I think I am protected under it.

Cross-examination:

Q. 24. How much did you pay the Atlantic & Pacific Fibre Importing & Manufacturing Company for these lands?—A. I have not paid them anything in coin. But I have agreements with them which are the equivalent of the coin.

Q. 25. What is the nature of the agreements?—A. I am to protect them in the title, that is, protect them in their original purchase money; make what I can out of it over and above that.

Q. 26. And devote your legal services to that end?—A. Yes. They have to have somebody on this end.

[60] *Now while the statute is, as we have stated, remedial and to be liberally construed, in order to carry out the purpose of its enactment, yet to sustain this purchase as one made in good faith would ignore the plainest provisions of law in respect to bona fide purchasers, and would uphold almost any kind of speculative purchase. Congress expressly limited the privileges granted by the act of 1887 to citizens of the United States or those who had declared their intention to become such. It excluded aliens, and in so doing acted in harmony with the general scope of public land legislation. True, in the act of 1896, in respect to patented lands, it recognized aliens as entitled to the benefits of a bona fide purchase, but the fact that in a later statute, and in respect to a different class of lands, it extended certain privileges, is no reason for ignoring the limitations contained in this act as applied to the lands covered by it.

While according to the construction of the Land Department the grantee of a purchaser from the railroad company is entitled to invoke the protection of this statute, yet it is one who is himself a bona fide purchaser, and not one whose "purchase was simply for the purpose of acquiring title from the government for the benefit of the foreigner." It seems to us that the testimony plainly discloses a purely speculative transaction. Graves paid nothing. His agreement was, as he says, to protect the company in its title, or rather in its purchase money, and then he would make what he could over and above that. He was not buying with the purpose of owning the land, but was simply engaged in an effort to secure to the original purchaser from the railroad company the money which it had invested in its purchase, advancing, it is true, in that effort, some money in the way of taxes, and devoting his legal services to that end, and hoping to make a profitable speculation out of the matter.

Another matter worthy of notice, as tending to show a community of interest with the fibre company, is his testimony in respect to the matter of possession. When asked, "Q. Are you in possession of the same?" he replied, "A. Well, we are exercising possession; we are keeping other people off of them. Not farming them, but,—yes, we are in possession."

We do not think that defendant Graves [61] has shown that he *was a purchaser in good faith. As to him the decree cannot be sustained. The decree of the Court of Appeals will therefore be affirmed in all respects except as to the lands standing in the name of Jackson A. Graves. As to those lands it will be reversed, and the case remanded to the Circuit Court for the Southern District of California, for further proceedings in conformity with this opinion.

184 U. S.

A. N. KING, P. J. Mann, A. S. Nichols, Multnomah Investment Company, and Fred N. Pendleton, Plffs. in Err.,
v.

CITY OF PORTLAND, Board of Public Works, Common Council of said City, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 61-70.)

Constitutional law—due process of law—assessments for street improvements.

Property is not taken without due process of law by an assessment for the cost of a street improvement, under a city charter providing for the assessment upon each abutting lot of the full cost of the improvement of half of the street in front of and abutting on such lot, and of a proportionate share of the cost of improving street intersections, where the cost of such improvement is apportioned according to the benefits, which are equal to such cost, and the charter not only gives a hearing upon the question of benefits to the property owner before the formation of the district to be improved, but, as construed by the state courts, gives notice and an opportunity to contest the assessment.

[No. 307.]

Argued November 18, 19, 1901. Decided January 27, 1902.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon to review a decision which affirmed a judgment of the trial court sustaining the validity of assessments for local improvements. Affirmed.

See same case below, 38 Or. 402, 63 Pac. 2. The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Martin L. Pipes argued the cause, and, with Mr. Arthur P. Tiff, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

A rule of assessment that places the whole burden upon particular property without apportionment is not taxation, but taking property without compensation for public use.

Thomas v. Gain, 35 Mich. 154, 24 Am. Rep. 535; Norwood v. Baker, 172 U. S. 269, 43 L. ed. 443, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; State, Agents, Prosecutor, v. Newark, 37 N. J. L. 416, 18 Am. Rep. 729; Tide-water Co. v. Coster, 18 N. J. Eq. 519, 90 Am. Dec. 634;

NOTE.—As to the validity of assessments upon abutting property made by charging upon each piece the cost of the improvement in front of it—see Davis v. Litchfield (Ill.) 21 L. R. A. 563, and note.

As to the necessity of special benefit to sustain assessments for local improvements—see Re Madera Irrig. Dist. Bonds (Cal.) 14 L. R. A. 755, and note.

As to what constitutes due process of law—see Kuntz v. Sumption (Ind.) 2 L. R. A. 655, and note; Re Gannon (R. I.) 5 L. R. A. 359, and note; Ulman v. Baltimore (Md.) 11 L. R. A. 224, and note; Gilman v. Tucker (N. Y.) 13 L. R. A. 304, and note. And see notes to People v. O'Brien (N. Y.) 2 L. R. A. 258; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436, and Wilson v. North Carolina ex rel. Caldwell, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

Re Canal Street, 11 Wend. 154; Cooley, Taxn. 453, 454; Cooley, Const. Lim. 3d ed. p. 508; Hutcheson v. Storrie, 92 Tex. 685, 45 L. R. A. 289, 51 S. W. 848; Seattle v. Yesler, 1 Wash. Ter. 572; Dexter v. Boston, 176 Mass. 247, 57 N. E. 379.

A rule of assessment that charges each lot with the cost of the improvement in front of it is void.

Norwood v. Baker, 172 U. S. 269, 43 L. ed. 443, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187; Motz v. Detroit, 18 Mich. 495; Davis v. Litchfield, 145 Ill. 313, 21 L. R. A. 563, 33 N. E. 888; Cooley, Taxn. 453, 454; Cooley, Const. Lim. 3d ed. p. 508; Burrough, Taxn. 465, note 5; Woodbridge v. Detroit, 8 Mich. 301; People v. Lynch, 51 Cal. 23, 21 Am. Rep. 677; Chicago v. Larned, 34 Ill. 203; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Bloomington, 76 Ill. 447; New Whatcom v. Bellingham Bay Improv. Co. 9 Wash. 639, 38 Pac. 163; State, Van Tassel, Prosecutor, v. Jersey City, 37 N. J. L. 129; St. John v. East St. Louis, 50 Ill. 92; Hutcheson v. Storrie, 92 Tex. 685, 45 L. R. A. 289, 51 S. W. 848.

A rule of assessment is void that is not based upon benefits to the property assessed, and the assessment limited to the benefits.

Re Madera Irrig. Dist. Bonds, 92 Cal. 296, 14 L. R. A. 755, 28 Pac. 272, 675; Norwood v. Baker, 172 U. S. 269, 43 L. ed. 443, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187; McKee v. Pendleton, 154 Ind. 652, 57 N. E. 532; Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 26 L. ed. 238; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Decatur, 147 U. S. 190, 37 L. ed. 132, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 293; Hutcheson v. Storrie, 92 Tex. 685, 45 L. R. A. 289, 51 S. W. 848; Bauman v. Ross, 167 U. S. 548, 42 L. ed. 270, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 966; Masters v. Portland, 24 Or. 167, 33 Pac. 540; Bloomington v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 134 Ill. 458, 26 N. E. 366; Elma v. Carney, 9 Wash. 466, 37 Pac. 709; Allegheny City v. Western Pennsylvania R. Co. 138 Pa. 375, 21 Atl. 763; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Bloomington, 76 Ill. 447; Bridgeport v. New York & N. H. R. Co. 36 Conn. 255, 4 Am. Rep. 63; Hammett v. Philadelphia, 65 Pa. 146, 3 Am. Rep. 615; Chicago v. Larned, 34 Ill. 279; Tide-water Co. v. Coster, 18 N. J. Eq. 518, 90 Am. Dec. 634; Wilson v. Salem, 24 Or. 512, 34 Pac. 9, 691; Meier v. Kelly, 20 Or. 96, 25 Pac. 73; Paulson v. Portland, 16 Or. 450, 1 L. R. A. 673, 19 Pac. 450; Oregon & C. R. Co. v. Portland, 25 Or. 229, 22 L. R. A. 713, 35 Pac. 452; Charles v. Marion, 98 Fed. 166; Fay v. Springfield, 94 Fed. 409.

The benefits must be special—that is, must make the property more accessible or more enjoyable in its use, and do not include benefits common to the community, nor those merely speculative.

Tide-water Co. v. Coster, 18 N. J. Eq. 518, 90 Am. Dec. 634; New York & N. H. R. Co. v. New Haven, 42 Conn. 279, 19 Am. Rep. 534; State, Kellogg, Prosecutor, v. Elizabeth, 40 N. J. L. 274; State, New Jersey R. & Transp. Co., Prosecutor, v. Elizabeth, 37 N. J. L. 330; Boston v. Shaw, 1 Met. 130; Kersten v. Milwaukee, 106 Wis. 200, 48 L. R. A. 851, 81 N. W. 948, 1103.

Property that from its physical situation cannot be benefited cannot be assessed for improvements, and the courts will inquire into and decide this question.

Oregon & C. R. Co. v. Portland, 25 Or. 229, 22 L. R. A. 713, 35 Pac. 452; Bloomington v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 134 Ill. 458, 26 N. E. 366; Allegheny City v. Western Pennsylvania R. Co. 138 Pa. 375, 21 Atl. 763; State, New Jersey R. & Transp. Co., Prosecutor, v. Elizabeth, 37 N. J. L. 330.

The owner must have notice and an opportunity to contest the amount of his assessment and the extent of his benefits.

Paulsen v. Portland, 149 U. S. 30, 37 L. ed. 637, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 753; Tide-water Co. v. Coster, 18 N. J. Eq. 519, 90 Am. Dec. 634; Philadelphia v. Miller, 49 Pa. 440; People ex rel. Butler v. Saginaw County, 26 Mich. 22; Wilson v. Salem, 24 Or. 509, 34 Pac. 9, 691; Cook v. Portland, 35 Or. 383, 58 Pac. 353; Norfolk v. Young, 97 Va. 728, 47 L. R. A. 574, 34 S. E. 886; Charter of Portland, § 138; Sess. Laws 1898, p. 156.

Mr. Joel M. Long argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error:

The notices required by the city charter when given by the common council constituted a sufficient notification to those interested and gave them an opportunity to be heard before the council. This constitutes due process of law.

Lent v. Tillson, 140 U. S. 316, 35 L. ed. 419, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 825; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Paulsen v. Portland, 149 U. S. 30, 37 L. ed. 637, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750; Fallbrook Irrig. Dist. v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 112, 41 L. ed. 369, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56; Mattingly v. District of Columbia, 97 U. S. 687, 24 L. ed. 1098; Parsons v. District of Columbia, 170 U. S. 45, 42 L. ed. 943, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 521; Wight v. Davidson, 181 U. S. 371, 45 L. ed. 900, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616; King v. Portland, 38 Or. 402, 63 Pac. 2; Wilson v. Salem, 24 Or. 504, 34 Pac. 9, 691; Bellingham Bay & B. C. R. Co. v. New Whatcom, 172 U. S. 320, 43 L. ed. 463, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 873; Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 345, 31 L. ed. 763, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921; Kelly v. Pittsburgh, 104 U. S. 78, 26 L. ed. 658; Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321, sub nom. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; French v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 181 U. S. 324, 45 L. ed. 879, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625; Norwood v. Baker, 172 U. S. 269, 43 L. ed. 443, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187; Tonawanda v. Lyon, 181 U. S. 389, 45 L. ed. 908, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Webster v. Fargo, 181 U. S. 394, 45 L. ed. 912, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 623, 645; Cass Farm Co. v. Detroit, 181 U. S. 396, 45 L. ed. 914, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644, 645; Detroit v. Parker, 181 U. S. 399, 45 L. ed. 917, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 624.

The legislature has power to create and fix a district which shall be liable for a given tax without any hearing as to benefits, for the purpose of assessing upon the lands within the district the cost of a local improvement.

Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Fallbrook Irrig. Dist. v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 112, 41 L. ed. 369, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56; Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 345, 31 L. ed. 763, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921.

The legislature has a right to decide for itself the question of benefits.

Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 345, 31 L. ed. 763, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921; Walston v. Nevin, 128 U. S. 578, 32 L. ed. 544, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; Fallbrook Irrig. Dist. v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 112, 41 L. ed. 369, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56; Cass Farm Co. v. Detroit, 181 U. S. 396, 45 L. ed. 914, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 624; Wight v. Davidson, 181 U. S. 371, 45 L. ed. 900, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616.

The legislative taxing district and apportionment is determined by the provisions of the charter providing for the manner of laying the assessment, and is due process of law.

Walston v. Nevin, 128 U. S. 578, 32 L. ed. 544, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 107, 24 L. ed. 621; Mattingly v. District of Columbia, 97 U. S. 687, 24 L. ed. 1098; Lent v. Tillson, 140 U. S. 316, 35 L. ed. 419, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 825; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 26 L. ed. 238; Fallbrook Irrig. Dist. v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 112, 41 L. ed. 369, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56; Tonawanda v. Lyon, 181 U. S. 389, 45 L. ed. 908, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Webster v. Fargo, 181 U. S. 394, 45 L. ed. 912, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 623, 645; Wight v. Davidson, 181 U. S. 371, 45 L. ed. 900, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616.

The notices issued under the statute were all the notices that plaintiffs were entitled to upon the question of apportionment, and as such, they constituted due process of law.

Paulsen v. Portland, 149 U. S. 30, 37 L. ed. 637, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750; Lent v. Tillson, 140 U. S. 316, 35 L. ed. 419, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 825; Wight v. Davidson, 181 U. S. 371, 45 L. ed. 900, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616.

The state's interpretation of the law whereby due process of law is secured is controlling upon a tax question.

Lombard v. West Chicago Park Comrs. 181 U. S. 33, 45 L. ed. 731, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 507; Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 345, 31 L. ed. 763, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921; Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 674, 42 L. ed. 622, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Eldridge v. Trezevant, 160 U. S. 452, 40 L. ed. 490, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 345.

The notices given by the board of the proposed acceptance of the work, and by the auditor, were sufficient to require the complainants to make objections, if they had any, as to the apportionment of the assessment, and as to whether the assessment had been correctly apportioned as required by the statute.

Lent v. Tillson, 140 U. S. 316, 35 L. ed. 419, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 825; Paulsen v. Portland, 149 U. S. 30, 37 L. ed. 637, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750; King v. Portland, 38 Or. 402, 63 Pac. 2.

184 U. S.

*Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court: [61]

The object of this suit was to restrain the enforcement of certain street assessments levied upon the property of the plaintiffs in error under the charter of the city of Portland, Oregon.

The question presented is whether the ordinances under which the assessments were made deprived plaintiffs in error of their property without due process of law, and thereby violated the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

The assessments were sustained by the trial court, and its judgment was affirmed [62] by the supreme court of the state (38 Or. 402, 63 Pac. 2), and the case was then brought here by writ of error.

The charter of the city was passed by the legislature in 1898 (Special Session 1898, p. 101), and the provisions for improving streets are found in §§ 126 to 161 inclusive. They were summarized by the supreme court of the state as follows:

"By § 127 the common council are authorized to improve streets. By § 128 the common council are not authorized to improve any streets until they pass a resolution of intention so to do, and describe the improvement, which resolution shall be posted for ten days, and published for ten days, and also posted on the street. All these notices shall state the fact of the passage of the resolution aforesaid, the character of the work proposed, and the time within which written objections or remonstrances may be made. Section 130 provides that if no remonstrance is filed by a majority of the property owners the common council shall be deemed to have acquired jurisdiction.

"Section 131 provides that the auditor shall immediately transmit this ordinance to the board of public works.

"Section 132 requires the city engineer to file with the board estimates and specifications. When these are filed they shall give notice that they will let the contract to bidders.

"Section 133 provides that proposals for doing the work shall conform as near as possible to estimates prepared by city engineer.

"Section 136 provides that the city auditor shall prepare an apportionment of the expenses of the street work.

"Section 137 provides that when the work is so far completed as to enable the board to determine the cost of the whole thereof, the city engineer shall file written acceptance of the work completed. Thereupon the board shall advertise in an official paper for six days, stating when and where any objection may be heard to the said improvement, and any person may at this time appear and object to the acceptance thereof. If no objections are filed, or if the objections are overruled and the street is accepted, the board shall report the same to the common council.

"By § 138 the auditor is required to prepare an assessment and report the same to the common council. Section 138 also provides how the cost shall be apportioned, viz.: Each lot or part thereof within the limits of the proposed street improvement abutting upon the street shall be liable for the full cost of making the improvement upon one half of the street in front and abutting upon it, and also for the proportionate share of improving the intersections of two streets.

"Section 139 provides that when the probable cost of any improvement has been ascertained or determined, and the proportionate share thereof chargeable to each lot, the common council must declare the same by ordinance and direct the auditor to enter a statement in the docket of liens.

"Section 138 provides that regular lots are 50 feet by 100 feet; regular blocks are 200 feet square. It also particularly provides for irregular blocks and apportionment of the assessment upon unplatted tracts."

The main issues of fact were found against plaintiff in error by the trial court as follows:

"That the city engineer did make a report and estimate of the probable cost of the improvement mentioned in the complaint.

"That the common council did, before making said improvement, estimate the probable cost thereof, and give notice of the said probable cost.

"That in making the assessments upon the property of the plaintiff, set forth in the complaint, the common council did take into consideration whether the property of plaintiffs was benefited by said proposed improvements, and the amount of said benefits.

"That said common council did apportion the cost of making the said improvement according to the benefits to the said property from said improvement.

"That the property set forth in the complaint can be used in connection with the said elevated roadway, and it is accessible from said elevated roadway, and it is so situated that it is and can be benefited by said roadway.

[64] "That the costs assessed against said property do not exceed *or equal the benefits that have accrued to said property by reason of said improvement.

"That plaintiffs, and each of them, did have notice of the amount of said assessment before the said assessments were made and before the same were entered in the docket of city liens, and before said work was fully completed by said contractors, and said plaintiffs and each of them did have an opportunity to be heard to contest the fairness of said apportionment. And plaintiffs, and each of them, did have an opportunity to contest the question whether their said property was benefited and the amounts of the benefits, and also as to the amounts of the assessments.

"That said assessments were not made or entered on said city lien docket without any notice.

"That in making said assessments the common council did not act arbitrarily or unjustly, and that the common council did use and exercise discretion and judgment concerning said assessments and the amounts thereof.

"That in accepting said improvement the board of public works did not act arbitrarily or unjustly, and said board of public works, in accepting said improvement, did use and exercise their discretion and judgment concerning the same.

"That upon the giving of the notice of intention to make said improvement, and prior to the passage of the time and manner ordinance set out in plaintiffs' complaint, the common council considered the question of cost of said improvement in front of each of the lots within the limits of the proposed street improvement and abutting upon said street, and also the proportionate share of the cost of improving intersections of two of the streets bounding the blocks in which such lot is situated, and found that each of said lots abutting on said street, and each of said lots assessed for intersection of blocks, would be benefited by said improvement in an amount greater than the cost of said improvement as assessed against each of said lots."

Afterwards the court made an additional finding of fact in accordance with a stipulation "that the plaintiffs and each of them did not have any notice or knowledge of the amount of the assessments before the assessments were made, or before the *same were [65] entered into the docket of city liens, or before said work was fully completed by said contractors, other than as stated in the complaint and the proceedings therein set forth."

That is, as we understand, except such notice as was given by the proceedings preceding the making of the assessment.

The findings of the court has narrowed our inquiry. That the improvement was a benefit to the abutting property must be accepted as true, and that the benefits were equal to the cost of the improvement; and, further, that the common council of the city apportioned the cost according to the benefits. Our inquiry therefore is confined to the validity of the rule of assessments prescribed by § 138, and to whether the plaintiffs in error were afforded an opportunity to contest the assessment.

Nor need we follow the details of counsel's arguments. The contentions of plaintiffs in error are made to depend upon the validity of the rule of assessment prescribed by the city charter, and upon what notice the charter requires to be given to property owners, and what opportunity such property owners are given to be heard upon the benefits to them of the contemplated improvement, the relation of benefits to cost, and the apportionment of the assessment; and these several propositions in turn depend upon the opinion of the supreme court of the state.

The duty of defining the district to be improved is devolved by the charter of Portland upon the council of the city, to be exercised by passing a resolution of intention so to do, and giving notice thereof, which notice was required to "state the fact of the passage of the resolution aforesaid, its date, and, briefly, the character of the work or improvement proposed, and the time within which written objection or remonstrance may be made thereto."

A resolution of intention was passed in the case at bar, and notice thereof in accordance with the charter was posted in the places and by the officers required, and published as required, and proof made thereof.

Passing upon the action of the council and the provisions of the charter, the supreme court of the state said:

[66] *"Now let us look at the law, and ascertain, if we can, whether it is legally sustainable upon principle. The common council is empowered by the legislature to fix and determine the taxing district. This it did by adopting the resolution of intention to make the improvement. Its action in this regard is legislative in character, and it was not requisite that the legislature should have provided for notice before the council was authorized to act. In prescribing the district it must be presumed, as would have been the case if the legislature had itself acted directly, that it took into consideration the exceptional benefits that would accrue to the property which it was intended should be charged with the burden, because it could inaugurate or make such an assessment upon no other basis. A notice in the present instance was required by the charter, and given, however, and, while it was for the purpose of acquiring jurisdiction, it gave the property holders an opportunity to appear and file objections to the improvement; and it was perfectly competent for them to raise both the objection that as a district the costs would be in excess of the exceptional benefits to the property involved, and that as it respects individual holders and between themselves the assessment would not be proportional to the relative benefits to be derived from the improvement. This is what in fact was done by the plaintiffs, as shown by the record, and upon this issue they were accorded a hearing. It was also possible for the common council to determine the matter with reasonable accuracy, as the probable cost and distributive share thereof among the holders was known to them, as was also the locality and situation of the property to be assessed."

The charter therefore gives a hearing on the question of benefits to the property owner before the formation of the district to be improved. And the trial court found that the common council before making the improvement estimated the probable cost thereof, and that it "considered the question of cost of said improvement in front of each of the lots within the limits of the proposed street improvement and abutting upon said street, and also the proportionate share of the cost of improving intersections of two of the streets bounding the blocks in which such lot is situated, and found that each of said lots *abutting on said street, and[67] each of said lots assessed for intersection of blocks, would be benefited by said improvements in an amount greater than the cost of said improvement as assessed against each of said lots." And especially as to the property of plaintiffs in error it was found that the council took into consideration whether that property was benefited by the improvements and the amount of the benefits, and that the cost assessed against the property did not exceed, or equal, the benefits which would accrue. Every requirement of due process of law, therefore, was satisfied as to plaintiffs in error.

What notice the charter of the city gives to property owners of the specific amount of the assessment against their property, and what opportunity to be heard thereon was afforded, the supreme court observed as follows:

"There are four several notices required along the way: First, of the proposed improvement; second, inviting proposals for doing the work; third, touching the acceptance of the work; fourth, ten days' notice of the entry of the assessment in the docket of city liens. Ample opportunity was thus afforded the owners to appear and interpose the constitutional objections, which is all that is sought to be done in this proceeding."

That is, as we understand, to object not only to the rule of assessment, but to the amount of the assessment, for the court further said:

"The improvement consists of an elevated roadway ranging from 10 to 15 feet in height throughout, except at one intersection, which was a fill, and it is apparent that the cost of the work was practically uniform throughout, and the assessment against the lots was therefore as nearly proportional according to benefits as could be devised. At least, it is not apparent that there is any substantial excess of costs above benefits, nor is there such a disproportionate distribution of the burden as to justify the court in declaring the assessment an arbitrary exaction by the legislature. It is beyond the power of human ingenuity to adopt any plan or mode of assessment that will operate to produce exact uniformity, and all that may be expected is a reasonable approximation to such a standard, and the rule adopted under the charter fulfils that condition as applied *to the present contro-[68] versy. There is no doubt that the property was benefited in excess of the costs and expenses."

But it is denied that the rule of the Portland charter constitutes an apportionment of the taxes, and it is said, quoting Cooley on Taxation, p. 453:

"If such a regulation constitutes the apportionment of a tax, it must be supported when properly ordered by or under the authority of the legislature. But it has been denied, on what seem the most conclusive grounds, that this is permissible. It is not legitimate taxation, because it is lacking in one of its indispensable elements. It considers each lot by itself, compelling each to bear the burden of the improvement in front of it, without reference to any contribution to be made to the improvement by any other property; and it is consequently without any apportionment. From accidental circumstances, the major part of the cost of an important public work may be expended in front of a single lot, those circumstances not at all contributing to make the improvement more valuable to the lot thus specially burdened, perhaps even having the opposite consequence. But whatever might be the result in particular cases, the fatal vice in the system is that it provides for no taxing districts whatever."

But if "accidental circumstances" may take from the rule the effect of apportionment, they do not prevent the application of the rule to cases where such circumstances do not exist. Where they exist they can be properly dealt with. Presumably the rule of the Portland charter was prescribed by the legislature in view of the conditions which existed in that city and in the expectation that the common council would so exercise its power and judgment in the creation of districts that the cost of the improvement ordered would be apportioned by the application of the rule prescribed. The expectation has been justified by the experience of the city. Under the rule of the charter the opening and grading of the streets have been done for years, and the courts have been watchful against abuses,—watchful to protect the rights of property owners. In Oregon & C. R. Co. v. Portland, 25 Or. 229, 22 L. R. A. 713, 35 Pac. 452, the collection of an assessment was enjoined because it was imposed on [69] property which was not benefited by the improvement ordered. And in its opinion in the case at bar the supreme court said:

"But we are inclined to believe that the better doctrine, deducible from adjudged cases, including those of the Supreme Court of the United States, is that the assessment will be upheld wherever it is not patent and obvious from the nature and location of the property involved, the district prescribed, the condition and character of the improvement, the cost and relative value of the property to the assessment, that the plan or method adopted has resulted in imposing a burden in substantial excess of the benefits, or disproportionate within the district as between owners."

From which we infer that the plan or method of assessment must have that result of itself. If that result is produced by a particular application of the plan or method, the latter will not be enforced, as was the case in Oregon & C. R. Co. v. Portland, 25 Or. 229, 22 L. R. A. 713, 35 Pac. 452.

Upon the claim of plaintiffs in error that they did not have "notice or knowledge of the amount of assessments before the assessments were made, or before the same were entered into the docket of city liens, or before said work was completed," we need not deal at length. The taxing district being formed upon a consideration of the utility of the work proposed, and the benefits to property owners, and the cost of the work and its apportionment, the amount of the assessment then followed as a certain deduction, and the property owner having notice of all the proceedings and the right to contest them, it would seem useless to give him a further right to contest the assessment. But if notice and an opportunity to contest the assessment be necessary, the supreme court has interpreted the statute as giving such notice and opportunity. The court said:

"The manner of notice and the specific period of time in the proceedings when he may be heard are not very material so that reasonable opportunity is afforded before he has been deprived of his property or the lien thereon is irrevocably fixed. So it has been held that it is sufficient if the party is accorded the right of appeal or to be heard upon an application for abatement (see Towns v. Klamath County, 33 Or. 225, 53 Pac. 604; *Weed v. Boston, 172 Mass. 28, 42 L. R. A. [70] 642, 51 N. E. 204), or the assessment is to be enforced by a suit to which he is to be made a party (Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Walston v. Nevin, 128 U. S. 578, 32 L. ed. 544, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192), or the right of injunction against collection is accorded, by which the validity of the assessment may be judicially determined. McMillen v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 37, 24 L. ed. 335. In such case he cannot be heard to complain that his property is being taken without due process of law. The case of Paulsen v. Portland, 149 U. S. 30, 37 L. ed. 637, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750, covers the question of the right to notice and a hearing quite fully, and it is significant that special reference is made to the ten days' notice required to be given under § 104 of the charter as it then stood, after the assessment had gone upon the docket of city liens and before collection can be proceeded with, which is almost the exact provision now contained in § 141. While the court at the time declined to decide that such a notice was sufficient, yet, if the cause had been dependent upon it alone, it is not altogether clear that it would have held it insufficient. So it was held by this court, in conformity with the prevailing rule, that if provision is made for notice to and hearing of each proprietor at some stage of the proceeding upon the question of what proportion of the tax shall be assessed upon his land, there is not a taking without due process of law. Wilson v. Salem, 24 Or. 504, 34 Pac. 9, 691."

We are of the opinion, therefore, that, under the facts of this case and the interpretation given of the charter of Portland by the supreme court of the state, plaintiffs in error have not been deprived of their property without due process of law, and the judgment of the Supreme Court is affirmed.

[71]*JOHN W. McDONALD, Receiver, etc.,
Appt.
v.
DAVID E. THOMPSON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 71-77.)

Limitation of actions—statutory liability of shareholders in national banks—action by receiver to enforce—demand.

1. An action brought by a receiver of a national bank under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5234, to enforce the individual liability of a shareholder prescribed by § 5151, is not an action upon a "contract or promise in writing," within the meaning of the Nebraska statute of limitations, but is governed by the provision of that statute requiring actions "upon a contract not in writing, express or implied," or "upon a liability created by statute," to be begun within four years.
2. The objection that the statute of limitations does not bar the right of the creditors of a national bank, under the act of June 30, 1876, § 2 (19 Stat. at L. 63, chap. 156), to enforce the individual liability of its shareholders prescribed by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5151, so long as there are any outstanding claims against the bank, cannot be raised by the receiver of a national bank, in an action brought by him under § 5234 to recover an assessment upon a stockholder, with interest from the date when payable, in which a demurrer to the bill on the ground that it sets forth a cause of action barred by the statute of limitations has been sustained.
3. A demand which starts the running of the statute of limitations against the right of a receiver of a national bank to enforce the statutory liability of its shareholders is shown by the allegations of the bill filed by the receiver to enforce such liability, that on a specified date the Comptroller of the Currency made an assessment upon the shareholders of such bank, and "did thereby make demand upon each and every share of the capital stock of the said association," and directed the receiver to take proceedings by suit to enforce the individual liability of the shareholders.

[No. 95.]

Argued January 13, 14, 1902. Decided February 3, 1902.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the District of Nebraska dismissing a bill in a suit to enforce the statutory liability of a shareholder in a national bank. Affirmed.

See same case below, 41 C. C. A. 290, 101 Fed. 183.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was a bill in equity originally filed May 20, 1898, in the circuit court for the district of Nebraska, by Kent K. Hayden, receiver of the Capital National Bank of Lincoln, Nebraska (of whom the present appellant is the successor in office), against David E. Thompson, to recover defendant's proportion of an assessment upon the stockholders of the bank to the amount of the par value of their shares. The bank failed on January 23, 1893, and a receiver was shortly thereafter appointed. On June 10, 1893, the Comptroller of the Currency ordered the assessment, which was made payable July 10, 1893.

The bill alleged Thompson to have been the owner of 210 shares of the capital stock, which he had acquired upon subscription to such stock and as a part of the original issue; that he, knowing the bank to be in a failing condition and practically insolvent, and in anticipation of its approaching failure, had sold and caused such stock to be transferred to certain irresponsible parties, and that such transfer was made with intent to defraud the bank, its depositors and creditors.

Defendant demurred upon the ground that it appeared by the bill that the cause of action was barred by the statute of limitations. The demurrer was sustained, the bill amended, another demurrer interposed and sustained, and the bill dismissed. An appeal was taken to the circuit court of appeals, which affirmed the judgment of the circuit court.

Mr. J. R. Webster argued the cause, and Messrs. John H. Ames and A. E. Harvey filed a brief for appellant:

The receiver of a national bank cannot exercise the right to enforce the individual liability of the stockholders in the absence of a direction so to do by the comptroller, because the latter is alone in a situation to know whether and to what extent the necessity for so doing exists.

Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. 498, 19 L. ed. 476.

The right of action is solely in the receiver in all cases for the collection of the assets of the bank, and in only this particular instance is the authority of the comptroller requisite, and that solely for the special reason named.

National Bank of the Metropolis v. Kennedy, 17 Wall. 19, 21 L. ed. 554.

The stockholder's liability, besides being a contract liability, is a liability not to the bank, but to its creditors.

Richmond v. Irons, 121 U. S. 27, 30 L. ed. 864, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 788.

It is a part of the assets of the bank, so long as the claim of creditors can be enforced against any of the bank's assets.

Irons v. Manufacturers' Nat. Bank, 21 Fed. 197; Richmond v. Irons, 121 U. S. 27, 30 L. ed. 864, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 788; Mokelumne Hill Canal & Min. Co. v. Woodbury, 14 Cal. 265; Allen v. Sewall, 2 Wend. 327; Moss v. Oakley, 2 Hill, 265; Harger v. McCullough, 2 Denio, 119; Corning v. McCullough, 1 N. Y. 47, 49 Am. Dec. 287; Schalucky v. Field, 124 Ill. 617, 16 N. E. 904; 1 Wood, Limitation of Actions, § 149; Fleischer v. Rentchler, 17 Ill. App. 402.

In order to start the running of the statute of limitations there must first be a call or assessment by the board of directors or by a court of equity, and a demand of and refusal of payment.

Glenn v. Howard, 81 Ga. 383, 8 S. E. 650;

Glenn v. Saxton, 68 Cal. 353, 9 Pac. 420; Aldrich v. Yates, 95 Fed. 78; Western Nat. Bank v. Reckless, 96 Fed. 70; Scovill v. Thayer, 105 U. S. 143, 26 L. ed. 968; Hawkins v. Glenn, 131 U. S. 319, 33 L. ed. 184, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Glenn v. Liggett, 135 U. S. 533, 34 L. ed. 262, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 867; Glenn v. Williams, 60 Md. 93.

The order of the comptroller does not suffice until followed by an actual demand.

Aldrich v. Yates, 95 Fed. 78.

If the action is upon the contract of subscription or of shareholdership the contract is in writing.

Stuart v. Hayden, 169 U. S. 1, 42 L. ed. 639, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 274; Richmond v. Irons, 121 U. S. 27, 30 L. ed. 864, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 788; Peninsular R. Co. v. Duncan, 28 Mich. 147; Lewis v. Glenn, 84 Va. 947, 6 S. E. 866.

A party can be held liable upon a contract in writing without his signature being subscribed to such contract, and the acceptance of a certificate by defendant was equivalent to signing, and makes his contract a written one within the meaning of the statute of limitations.

Plumb v. Campbell, 129 Ill. 101, 18 N. E. 790; Kennedy v. Siemers, 120 Mo. 73, 25 S. W. 512; Indianapolis Natural Gas Co. v. Kibbey, 135 Ind. 357, 35 N. E. 392; Rigdon v. Conley, 141 Ill. 565, 23 N. E. 1060; Campbell v. McFadin, 71 Tex. 28, 9 S. W. 138; Grove v. Hodges, 55 Pa. 516; Vogel v. Pekoc, 157 Ill. 339, 30 L. R. A. 491, 42 N. E. 386; Johnson v. Dodge, 17 Ill. 440; Stone v. Pennock, 31 Mo. App. 544; Griffin v. Bristle, 39 Minn. 456, 40 N. W. 523; Brandon Mfg. Co. v. Morse, 48 Vt. 327; Bulwinkle v. Cramer, 27 S. C. 376, 3 S. E. 776; Schmucker v. Sibert, 18 Kan. 104, 26 Am. Rep. 765; Howell Bros. v. Roberts, 29 Neb. 483, 45 N. W. 923; Davis v. Weed, 44 Conn. 569; Howell v. Manglesdorf, 33 Kan. 194, 5 Pac. 759; Pittsburgh & C. R. Co. v. Clarke, 29 Pa. 146.

Mr. Halleck F. Rose argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee:

The statute imposing the liability sought to be enforced, being in derogation of the common law, is to be strictly construed, and not extended beyond its plain terms.

Dane v. Dane Mfg. Co. 14 Gray, 488; Gray v. Coffin, 9 Cush. 192; Ripley v. Sampson, 10 Pick. 371; Coffin v. Rich, 45 Me. 507, 71 Am. Dec. 559; Moyer v. Pennsylvania Slate Co. 71 Pa. 293; Means's Appeal, 85 Pa. 75; Libby v. Tobcy, 82 Me. 397, 19 Atl. 904; Chase v. Lord, 77 N. Y. 1.

The liability of the individual shareholder of a national bank under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5151, rests upon an implied contract not in writing.

Carrol v. Green, 92 U. S. 509, 23 L. ed. 738; Terry v. McLure, 103 U. S. 442, 26 L. ed. 403; Terry v. Little, 101 U. S. 216, 25 L. ed. 864; First Nat. Bank v. Hawkins, 174 U. S. 372, 43 L. ed. 1011, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742; Metropolitan R. Co. v. District of Columbia, 132 U. S. 1, 33 L. ed. 231, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 19; Van Pelt v. Gardner, 54 Neb. 705, 74 N. W. 1083, 75 N. W. 874; Aldrich v. McClaine, 45 C. C. A. 631, 106 Fed. 791; Thomp- son v. German Ins. Co. 76 Fed. 892; Hutchings v. Lampson, 82 Fed. 960; Hayden v. Thompson, 17 C. C. A. 592, 36 U. S. App. 361, 71 Fed. 60; Hawkins v. Iron Valley Furnace Co. 40 Ohio St. 512.
438

The statute of limitations commences to run against a stock subscription, payable as called for, from the date of the call.

Hawkins v. Glenn, 131 U. S. 319, 33 L. ed. 184, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Glenn v. Liggett, 135 U. S. 533, 34 L. ed. 262, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 867; Glenn v. Marbury, 145 U. S. 499, 36 L. ed. 790, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 914.

The assessment made by the comptroller is held, by analogy, equivalent to a call upon the shareholder; and the cause of action on the assessment therefor accrues on the day when, by the terms of the comptroller's order, it is made due and payable.

Glenn v. Marbury, 145 U. S. 499, 36 L. ed. 790, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 914; Aldrich v. Yates, 95 Fed. 81; Aldrich v. Campbell, 38 C. C. A. 347, 97 Fed. 663.

The allowance of a claim against the corporation by the receiver does not operate to suspend the statute of limitations in favor of the stockholder.

Green v. Beckman, 59 Cal. 545; Moore v. Boyd, 74 Cal. 167, 15 Pac. 670; Stilphen v. Ware, 45 Cal. 110; Young v. Rosenbaum, 39 Cal. 646; Hynan v. Coleman, 82 Cal. 653, 23 Pac. 62; Carrol v. Green, 92 U. S. 509, 23 L. ed. 738; Terry v. McLure, 103 U. S. 442, 26 L. ed. 403; Metropolitan R. Co. v. District of Columbia, 132 U. S. 1, 33 L. ed. 231, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 19.

*Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion [72] of the court:

This bill is founded upon Rev. Stat. § 5151, which declares that "the shareholders of every national banking association shall be held individually responsible, equally and ratably, and not one for another, for all contracts, debts, and engagements of such association, to the extent of the amount of their stock therein at the par value thereof, in addition to the amount invested in such shares," etc. By § 5234 the Comptroller of the Currency is authorized to appoint a receiver of insolvent banks, who "may, if necessary to pay the debts of such association, enforce the individual liability of the stockholders."

The case turns upon the applicability of the state statute of limitations, which, so far as it is material, reads as follows:

"Sec. 5. Civil actions can only be commenced within the time prescribed in this title after the cause of action shall have accrued."

"Sec. 10. Within five years, an action upon a specialty, or any agreement, contract, or promise in writing, or foreign judgment.

"Sec. 11. Within four years, an action upon a contract not in writing, express or implied; an action upon a liability created by statute other than a forfeiture or penalty."

As the cause of action in this case accrued on July 10, 1893, when the assessment was made payable (Hawkins v. Glenn, 131 U. S. 319, 33 L. ed. 184, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Glenn v. Marbury, 145 U. S. 499, 36 L. ed. 790, 12 [73] Sup. Ct. Rep. 914; *Thompson v. German Ins. Co. 76 Fed. 892; Van Pelt v. Gardner, 54 Neb. 701, 74 N. W. 1083, 75 N. W. 874), and the action was begun on May 20, 1898, more than four but less than five years thereafter, the case really turns upon the question whether the action is upon a "contract or promise in writing," or "upon a contract not in writing, express or implied," or "upon a liability created by statute." If the cause of action be upon a written contract, the action was brought in time. If upon a contract not in writing, or a statutory liability, the statute of limitations is a complete bar.

Used in this connection and as distinguished from a contract not in writing, express or implied, we think it entirely clear that § 10 contemplates an action between the immediate parties or their privies to a written contract, and that the only contract covered by that definition in this case is the one arising from the allegation of the bill that Thompson was the owner of 210 shares of the original capital stock, and "that he acquired the same upon subscription to such capital stock," and by a receipt of certificates for such shares. The only contract to be gathered from this allegation is one between the bank on the one hand and the defendant on the other, by which the latter agreed to take and pay for a certain number of shares, and the former agreed to issue certificates to him for the same. Had the action been brought upon this contract,—as, for instance, by the bank to recover an unpaid assessment upon the original shares,—the case would have fallen within § 10, and the suit might have been brought within five years.

But there was no contract in writing with the creditors or depositors of the bank, and none with the bank itself, to which the receiver could be said to be a privy, except to pay for the stock as originally issued. Granting there was a contract with the creditors to pay a sum equal to the value of the stock taken, in addition to the sum invested in the shares, this was a contract created by the statute, and obligatory upon the stockholders by reason of the statute existing at the time of their subscription; but it was not a contract in writing within the meaning of the Nebraska act, since the writing—that is, the subscription—contained no reference whatever to the statutory obligation and no promise to respond beyond the [74] amount of the subscription. In *none of the numerous cases upon the subject in this court is this obligation treated as an express contract, but as one created by the statute and implied from the express contract of the stockholders to take and pay for shares in the association. Carrol v. Green, 92 U. S. 509, 512, 23 L. ed. 738, 739; Terry v. Little, 101 U. S. 216, 25 L. ed. 864; First Nat. Bank v. Hawkins, 174 U. S. 364, 43 L. ed. 1007, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Matteson v. Dent, 176 U. S. 521, 44 L. ed. 571, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 184 U. S.

419; Whitman v. National Bank, 176 U. S. 559, 44 L. ed. 587, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 477.

While § 10 does not use the words "express contract," but the words "contract or promise in writing," we think that, taken in connection with § 11, which is confined to contracts not in writing, express or implied, express contracts are primarily and principally intended by the earlier section. These are defined to be those contracts in which the terms of the agreement are fully and openly incorporated at the time the contract is entered into, while implied contracts are such as arise by legal inference and upon principles of reason and justice from certain facts, or where there is circumstantial evidence showing that the parties intended to make a contract. 2 Bl. Com. 443. As contracts for subscription to stock contain no stipulation with reference to the rights of creditors and depositors, it is clear that such rights can only be asserted upon the theory that the subscriber impliedly bound himself to respond to any liability arising indirectly from his contract of subscription.

Whether the promise raised by the statute was an implied contract not in writing or a liability created by statute, it is immaterial to inquire. For the purposes of this case it may have been both. The statute was the origin both of the right and the remedy, but the contract was the origin of the personal responsibility of the defendant. Did the statute make a distinction between them with reference to the time within which an action must be brought, it might be necessary to make a more exact definition; but as the action must be brought in any case within four years, it is unnecessary to go farther than to declare what seems entirely clear to us, that it is not a contract in writing within the meaning of § 10 of the Nebraska act. Hawkins v. Iron Valley Furnace Co. 40 Ohio St. 507.

*Plaintiff, however, insists that defendant's [75] contract here sought to be enforced was not entered into between him and the bank, but between him and the creditors of the bank; that the order of the Comptroller of the Currency for the assessment of the shareholders did not create a cause of action or set the statute of limitations running, nor in any way affect the validity or duration of the right which belongs to the creditors to have this liability enforced; and that the action not being upon the contract of subscription, but upon the contract of the shareholder with the creditors of the bank, entered into by himself with the creditors through the agency of the officers of the bank, different considerations apply, and the statute of limitations does not operate as a bar so long as there are any outstanding claims against the bank.

In support of this proposition we are referred to § 2 of the act of June 30, 1876 (19 Stat. at L. 63, chap. 156), which declares "that when any national banking association shall have gone into liquidation under the provisions of § 5220 of said [Revised] Statutes, the individual liability of the shareholders provided for by § 5151 of said Statutes may be enforced by any creditor of such association, by bill in equity in the nature of a creditors' bill, brought by such creditor on behalf of himself and of all other creditors of the association against the shareholders thereof," etc.; and we are cited to several cases holding that claims against shareholders under similar statutes do not become barred until the expiration of the time at which the claims against the corporation also became barred.

There are several answers to this position. Section 5220, to which the 2d section of the act of June 30, 1876, is supplementary, contemplates only a voluntary liquidation, providing, as it does, that "any association may go into liquidation and be closed by the vote of its shareholders owning two thirds of its stock." Richmond v. Irons, 121 U. S. 27, 47, 30 L. ed. 864, 870, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 788, 797. Now, the Capital National Bank did not go into voluntary liquidation, but, as averred in the bill, "the Comptroller of the Currency of the United States became and was satisfied of the insolvency of the said Capital National Banking Association," and thereupon appointed a receiver. In other [76] words, the proceedings *were taken under § 5234 as supplemented by § I of the act of June 30, 1876, authorizing the Comptroller of the Currency to appoint a receiver when the association had refused to pay its circulating notes and is in default, or he is otherwise satisfied of its insolvency.

But it is also sufficient to say of this that the action is not brought by the creditors under the 2d section of the act of June 30, 1876, but by the receiver under Rev. Stat. § 5234. In such cases no debt becomes due to the receiver as such until a deficiency has been ascertained and an assessment made, when the statute begins to run. Scovill v. Thayer, 105 U. S. 145, 26 L. ed. 963; Hawkins v. Glenn, 131 U. S. 319, 33 L. ed. 184, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739. Upon the theory of the plaintiff, if the statute of limitations were pleaded, it would become necessary for the receiver to show that there were outstanding claims against the bank which were not barred by the statute, and therefore that the bill might be maintained. This would involve a departure from the whole theory of the bill in this case, which is based upon the allegation that the Comptroller of the Currency made an assessment upon the stockholders June 10, 1893, payable July 10, from which latter date plaintiff claimed interest. Defendant demurred to this upon the ground that the bill set forth a cause of action barred by the statute, and plaintiff went to a hearing upon this demurrer and was defeated. Obviously he cannot now set up a right to recover, if the creditors had brought a bill under another statute, to which no allusion is made in the bill in this case, and which provides for a wholly separate and independent remedy.

Plaintiff's final contention, that no cause of action arises until a demand has been made, is also fully met by the allegation of the bill that on June 10, 1893, the Comptroller of the Currency made an order in which he declared that he had made an assessment and requisition upon the shareholders, "and that he did thereby make demand upon each and every share of the capital stock of the said association," and directed the receiver to take proceedings by suit to enforce the individual liability of the shareholders. Having made this allegation himself, we do not understand upon what theory the plaintiff now assumes that no demand was made.

*In the view we take of the statute of limitations, we have not thought it worth while to consider the points made by the defendant, that the action should have been at law, and that the bill is defective for the want of proper parties.

There was no error in the decree of the court below, and it is therefore affirmed.

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS
ex rel. GEORGE HUNT, Attorney General, Appt.,

v.
ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 77-99.)

Appeal—conclusiveness of prior decision on second appeal—effect of decision on subsequent proceedings in lower court—piers erected by riparian proprietors—extension beyond point of practical navigability—question of fact—concurrent findings.

1. Every matter embraced by a decree of a United States circuit court, and not left open by a decree of the United States Supreme Court affirming the former decree in all respects but one, and as to that one remanding the case for further investigation of the facts upon which it depended, is conclusively determined, as between the parties, by such affirmation, and is not subject to re-examination on a second appeal.
2. In determining whether piers erected in Lake Michigan by a railroad company by virtue of its riparian proprietorship extended into the lake beyond the point of practical navigability, having reference to the manner in which commerce in vessels is conducted on the lake, the circuit court to which the cause has been remanded for further investigation of the facts on which this question depends is not confined to the consideration of the size and capacity of vessels habitually employed on the lake at the commencement of the litigation or at the date of its original decree.
3. Piers, docks, and wharves erected in Lake Michigan by a railroad company by virtue of its riparian proprietorship cannot be said to extend into the lake beyond the point of practical navigability, having reference to the manner in which commerce in vessels is conducted on that lake, where such structures extend no farther into the lake than is necessary to accommodate a great number of vessels of moderate capacity, and the average depth of water at the outer line of the structures is insufficient for the accommodation of a vast amount of commerce carried on in vessels on the lake.

NOTE.—On the conclusiveness of prior decisions on subsequent appeals—see note to Hastings v. Foxworthy (Neb.) 34 L. R. A. 321.

4. The concurrent findings of the two lower courts that piers, docks, and wharves erected in Lake Michigan by a railroad company by virtue of its riparian proprietorship do not extend into the lake beyond the point of practicable navigability will not be disturbed unless clearly in conflict with the evidence.

[No. 28.]

Argued March 15, 1901. Decided February 3, 1902.

A PPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court of Cook County, Illinois, confirming the title of the Illinois Central Railroad Company to certain piers, docks, and wharves constructed by it on the lake front of the city of Chicago. Affirmed.

See same case below, 34 C. C. A. 138, 91 Fed. 955.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John H. Hamline argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Edward C. Akin, Frank H. Scott, and Frank E. Lord, filed a brief for appellant:

The opinion forms a part of the mandate and this court may construe its own mandate.

Re Sanford Fork & Tool Co. 160 U. S. 256, 40 L. ed. 414, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291.

The lower court should have looked into the opinion in construing the mandate.

Ibid.

It erred in construing the inquiry to relate to the date of the final decree, rather than to the time the bill was filed or the structures built. Docks built pendente lite are at builders' risk.

Miller v. New York, 109 U. S. 392, 27 L. ed. 971, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 228.

Twenty feet was declared to be beyond the line of practical navigability at Detroit, though the Michigan courts recognize the right of riparian owners to dock out in Detroit river.

Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Baekus, 46 Fed. 215.

Messrs. Benjamin F. Ayer and John N. Jewett argued the cause, and, with Mr. J. M. Dickinson, filed a brief for appellee:

Whatever was presented and decided on the former appeal in this case has become res judicata, and the same matter between the same parties cannot be reopened and subsequently considered.

Sibbald v. United States, 12 Pet. 488, 9 L. ed. 1167; Roberts v. Cooper, 20 How. 467, 15 L. ed. 969; Himely v. Rose, 5 Cranch, 313, 3 L. ed. 111; Skillern v. May, 6 Cranch, 267, 3 L. ed. 220; Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat. 304, 4 L. ed. 97; Browder v. M'Arthur, 7 Wheat. 58, 5 L. ed. 397; The Santa Maria, 10 Wheat. 431, 6 L. ed. 359; West v. Brash-ear, 14 Pet. 51, 10 L. ed. 350; Washington Bridge Co. v. Stewart, 3 How. 413, 11 L. ed. 658; Chaires v. United States, 3 How. 611, 11 L. ed. 749; Corning v. Troy Iron & Nail 184 U. S.

Factory, 15 How. 451, 14 L. ed. 768; Sizer v. Many, 16 How. 98, 14 L. ed. 861; Peck v. Sanderson, 18 How. 42, 15 L. ed. 262; Roberts v. Cooper, 20 How. 467, 15 L. ed. 969; Whyte v. Gibbs, 20 How. 541, 15 L. ed. 1016; Ex parte Dubuque & P. R. Co. 1 Wall. 69, sub nom. Dubuque & P. R. Co. v. Litchfield, 17 L. ed. 514; Noonan v. Bradley, 12 Wall. 121, 20 L. ed. 279; Tyler v. Magwire, 17 Wall. 253, 21 L. ed. 576; Wayne County v. Kennicott, 94 U. S. 498, 24 L. ed. 260; The Lady Pike, 96 U. S. 461, sub nom. Pearce v. Germania Ins. Co. 24 L. ed. 672; Stewart v. Salamon, 97 U. S. 361, 24 L. ed. 1044; Clark v. Keith, 106 U. S. 464, 27 L. ed. 302, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 568; Chaffin v. Taylor, 116 U. S. 567, 29 L. ed. 727, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Re Washington & G. R. Co. 140 U. S. 91, 35 L. ed. 339, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Northern P. R. Co. v. Ellis, 144 U. S. 458, 36 L. ed. 506, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 740; Gaines v. Rugg, 148 U. S. 228, sub nom. Gaines v. Caldwell, 37 L. ed. 432, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611; Re Sanford Fork & Tool Co. 160 U. S. 247, 40 L. ed. 414, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291; Great Western Teleg. Co. v. Burnham, 162 U. S. 339, 40 L. ed. 991, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 850; Re Potts, 166 U. S. 263, 41 L. ed. 994, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 520; Thompson v. Maxwell Land Grant & R. Co. 168 U. S. 451, 42 L. ed. 539, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121.

To serve a useful purpose, a wharf must reach water of sufficient depth to float vessels when laden. They must of necessity occupy a part of the stream (or lake) over which a vessel could float if they were not there.

Ailee v. Northwestern Union Packet Co. 21 Wall. 393, 22 L. ed. 620.

The concurrent decisions of two courts upon a question of fact will not be disturbed unless it is manifest that some serious or important mistake has been made in the consideration of the evidence. The burden is always on the appellant to show the error and the proof of error must be plain and palpable.

The Carib Prince, 170 U. S. 655, sub nom. Wuppermann v. The Carib Prince, 42 L. ed. 1181, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 753; Stuart v. Hayden, 169 U. S. 1, 42 L. ed. 639, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 274; Baker v. Cummings, 169 U. S. 189, 42 L. ed. 711, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 767; Compania De Navigacion La Flecha v. Brauer, 168 U. S. 104, 42 L. ed. 398, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 12; Dravo v. Fabel, 132 U. S. 487, 33 L. ed. 421, 10 Sup. Ct. 170; The Richmond, 103 U. S. 540, sub nom. The Sabine v. The Richmond, 26 L. ed. 313; The Mareellus, 1 Black, 414, sub nom. Baxter v. Camp, 17 L. ed. 217; Morewood v. Enequist, 23 How. 491, 16 L. ed. 516.

*Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion-[78] ion of the court:

This case has been heretofore in this court. Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 146 U. S. 387, 36 L. ed. 1018, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110. The decree then under review was affirmed in all respects except one, and as to that one the cause was remanded for further investigation of the facts upon which it depended.

The case involved the asserted ownership by the Illinois Central Railroad Company of certain piers, docks, and wharves constructed by it on the lake front of the city of Chicago, east of Michigan avenue.

The state contended that the structures in question were erected, without authority of law, on lands belonging to it, and that the decree now before us was erroneous in not so declaring.

The railroad company contended that the mandate of this court on the former appeal left open for consideration by the circuit court only one question, namely, whether those structures extended beyond the point of practical navigability, having reference to the manner in which commerce in vessels is conducted on Lake Michigan; and that that issue of fact having been found in its favor, the circuit court could not properly have passed any other decree than one confirming the company's title to such structures.

The history of the litigation relating to this property is fully disclosed in Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, above cited. But it will be appropriate and will contribute to a clear understanding of the present appeal if the essential facts be restated in this opinion.

In the year 1883 an information was filed in the circuit court of Cook county, Illinois, by the People of that state against the Illinois Central Railroad Company, the city of Chicago, and the United States of America. That case was removed into the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of Illinois, and a motion to remand it to the state court was overruled. 16 Fed. 881. In the same case the city of Chicago filed a cross bill against the state and its codefendants. At the same time there was pending in the circuit court of the United States for the same district an information [79] in *equity filed by the government against the Illinois Central Railroad Company, the Michigan Central Railroad Company, the Chicago, Burlington, & Quincy Railroad Company, the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company, and the city of Chicago.

At the hearing of those causes in the circuit court certain maps were used; one being known as the map of "Fort Dearborn addition to Chicago" made by direction of the Secretary of War, under the authority of an act of Congress approved March 3d, 1819; the other being known as the Morehouse map. Both maps were made part of the opinion of this court in Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, and for convenience are here reproduced [See opposite page.]

[82] *The questions involved in the above suits are indicated by the following extract from the opinion of the circuit court at the original hearing: "The state, in the original suit, asks a decree establishing and confirming her title to the bed of Lake Michigan, and her sole and exclusive right to develop the harbor of Chicago by the construction of docks, wharves, etc., as against the claim by the railroad company that it has an absolute title to said submerged lands, described in the act of 1869,†*and the right—[83] subject to the paramount authority of the United States in respect to the regulation of commerce between the states—to fill the bed of the lake, for the purposes of its business, east of and adjoining the premises between the river and the north line of Randolph street, and also north of the south line of lot 21; and also the right, by constructing and maintaining wharves, docks, piers, etc., to improve the shore of the lake for the purposes of its business and for the promotion generally of commerce and navi-

†"An act in relation to a portion of the submerged lands and Lake Park grounds, lying on and adjacent to the shore of Lake Michigan, on the eastern frontage of the city of Chicago. Passed over veto, April 16, 1869." The 3d section of that act reads:

"§ 3. The right of the Illinois Central Railroad Company under the grant from the state in its charter, which said grant constitutes a part of the consideration for which the said company pays to the state at least 7 per cent of its gross earnings, and under and by virtue of its appropriation, occupancy, use, and control, and the riparian ownership incident to such grant, appropriation, occupancy, use, and control, in and to the lands, submerged or otherwise, lying east of the said line, running parallel with and 400 feet east of the west line of Michigan avenue, in fractional sections 10 and 15, township and range as aforesaid, is hereby confirmed; and all the right and title of the state of Illinois in and to the submerged lands constituting the bed of Lake Michigan, and lying east of the tracks and breakwater of the Illinois Central Railroad Company, for the distance of 1 mile, and between the south line of the south pier extended eastwardly and a line extended eastward from the south line of lot 21, south of and near to the roundhouse and machine shops of said company, in the south division of the said city of Chicago, are hereby granted in fee to the said Illinois Central Railroad Company, its successors and assigns: Provided, however, that the fee to said lands shall be held by said company in perpetuity, and that the said company shall not have power to grant, sell, or convey the fee to the same; and that all gross receipts from use, profits, leases, or otherwise of said lands, or the improvements thereon, or that may hereafter be made thereon, shall form a part of the gross proceeds, receipts, and income of the said Illinois Central Railroad Company, upon which said company shall forever pay into the state treasury, semiannually, the percentum provided for in its charter, in accordance with the requirements of said charter: and Provided, also, that nothing herein contained shall authorize obstructions to the Chicago harbor, or impair the public right of navigation; nor shall this act be construed to exempt the Illinois Central Railroad Company, its lessees or assigns, from any act of the general assembly which may be hereafter passed regulating the rates of wharfage and dockage to be charged in said harbor: and Provided, further, that any of the lands hereby granted to the Illinois Central Railroad Company, and the improvements now, or which may hereafter be, on the same, which shall hereafter be leased by said Illinois Central Railroad Company to any person or corporation, or which may hereafter be occupied by any person or corporation other than said Illinois Central Railroad Company, shall not, during the continuance of such leasehold estate or of such occupancy, be exempt from municipal or other taxation."

gation. The state insisting that the company has, without right, erected, and proposes to continue to erect, wharves, piers, etc., upon the domain of the state, asks that such unlawful structures be directed to be removed, and the company enjoined from constructing others. The city, by its cross bill, insists that since June 7th, 1839, when the map of Fort Dearborn addition was recorded, it has had the control and use for public purposes of that part of section 10 which lies east of Michigan avenue and between Randolph street and fractional section 15; and that, as successor of the town of Chicago, it has had possession and control since June 13th, 1836, when the map of fractional section 15 addition was recorded, of the lands in that addition north of block 23. It asks a decree declaring that it is the owner in fee, and of the riparian rights thereunto appertaining, of all said lands, and has, under existing legislation, the exclusive right to develop the harbor of Chicago by the construction of docks, wharves, and levees, and to dispose of the same, by lease or otherwise, as authorized by law; and that the railroad company be enjoined from interfering with its said rights and ownership. The relief sought by the United States is a decree declaring the ultimate title and property in the 'Public Ground' shown on the plat of the Fort Dearborn addition, south of Randolph street, and also in the open space shown on the plat of fractional section 15 addition, to be in the United States, with the right of supervision and control over the harbor and navigable waters aforesaid; that the railroad companies and the city be enjoined from exercising any right, power, or control over said grounds, or over the waters or shores of the lake; that the Illinois Central Railroad Company be restrained from making or constructing any piers, wharves, or docks, and from driving piles, building walls, or filling with earth or other materials in the said lake, or from using any made-ground, or any piers, wharves, or other constructions made or built by or for it in or about the outer harbor, to the east of the 200-foot strip of its way-ground, or from taking or exacting any toll for such use; and that the Illinois Central Railroad Company be required to abate and remove all obstructions placed by it in said outer harbor, and to quit possession of all lands, waters, and made-ground taken and held by it without right as aforesaid. The state, the city, and the general government all unite in contending that the lake front act of 1869 is inoperative and void." 33 Fed. 730, 750.

[80]

[81]

MOREHOUSE MAP.

A final decree was rendered in the circuit court on the 24th day of September, 1888. By that decree it was adjudged that the fee of certain streets, avenues, and grounds was in the city of Chicago in trust for public use; and that the city of Chicago, as riparian owner of such grounds on the east or lake front of said city, between the north line of Randolph street and the north line of block 23, each of the lines being produced to Lake Michigan, and in virtue of authority to that end conferred by its charter, had, among other powers, the power to establish, construct, erect, and keep in repair on the lake front, east of such premises, within the lines given, and in such manner as would be consistent with law, public landing places, wharves, docks, and levees, subject, however, in the execution of that power, to the authority of the state by legislation to prescribe the lines beyond which piers, docks, wharves, and other structures, other than those erected by the general government, might not be extended into the waters of the harbor that were navigable in fact, and to such supervision and control as the United States might rightly exercise in and over such harbor, and subject also [85] to the enjoyment by the Illinois *Central Railroad Company of the rights then to be defined and described.

It was further adjudged:

"That the Illinois Central Railroad Company is the owner in fee of all the wharves, piers, and other structures erected by it in the city of Chicago, east of Michigan avenue, south of Chicago river, and north of the north line of Randolph street, extended eastwardly as shown upon said Morehouse map, including the station grounds lying west of the slip C, the pier marked C, lying east of slip C, and represented upon the Morehouse map to have been built in 1867, and piers 1, 2, and 3, lying east of pier C last mentioned, and represented upon said map to have been built as follows: Pier 1 in 1872 and 1873, pier 2 in 1881, and pier 3 in 1880, and is also entitled to the use, for the purposes of its business, of the slips marked on said Morehouse map.

"That said company is likewise the owner in fee of all the wharves, piers, and other works made and constructed by it in the city of Chicago, east of its main tracks, between the north line of block 23, in fractional section 15 addition to Chicago, and the center line of Sixteenth street extended, including the pier or line of piling represented upon the said Morehouse map to have been built in 1870, and the station grounds lying west of the said pier and contiguous thereto; also of the wharf or pier projecting into the lake from the grounds last mentioned, and represented upon the said Morehouse map to have been built in 1885; which said wharves, piers, and other works so constructed and so far as constructed by the said Illinois Central Railroad Company, as aforesaid, are lawful structures and not encroachments upon the domain of the state of Illinois or upon the public right of navigation, or upon the property interests or estate of the said city of Chicago."

"And the court doth further find and declare, and it is hereby adjudged and decreed, that the 3d section of the act of the general assembly of the state of Illinois, passed over the governor's veto April 16, 1869, entitled, 'An Act in Relation to a Portion of the Submerged Lands and Lake Park Grounds Lying on and Adjacent to the Shore of Lake Michigan, on the Eastern *Frontage of [86] the City of Chicago,' so far, at least, as it confirms 'the right of the Illinois Central Railroad Company under the grant from the state in its charter, . . . and under and by virtue of its appropriation, occupancy, use, and control, and the riparian ownership incident to such grant, appropriation, occupancy, use, and control in and to the lands, submerged or otherwise, lying east of the said line running parallel with and 400 feet east of the west line of Michigan avenue in fractional sections 10 and 15,' is a valid and constitutional exercise of legislative power, and legalizes as well what was done by said company prior to April 16th, 1869, in the way of filling in the lake and constructing wharves, piers, tracks, warehouses, and other works between the Chicago river and the north line of Randolph street extended eastwardly, as its occupancy and use for way-ground of the two said triangular pieces of ground immediately south of Randolph street; and that the subsequent act of the general assembly of Illinois, passed April 15th, 1873, in so far as it sought by repealing the said act of April 16th, 1869, to revoke or annul said confirmatory clause of the last-named act, was void under the Constitution both of Illinois and of the United States; but the court is of opinion, and so adjudges and decrees, that the said act of April 15th, 1873, repealing said act of April 16th, 1869, had the effect in law to withdraw from said railroad company the grant to it, its successors and assigns, by the 3d section of said act of April 15th (16th), 1869, of 'all the right and title of the state of Illinois in and to the submerged lands constituting the bed of Lake Michigan and lying east of the tracks and breakwater of the Illinois Central Railroad Company for the distance of 1 mile, and between the south line of the pier extended eastwardly and a line extended eastward from the south line of lot 21, south of and near to the roundhouse and machine shops of said company, in the south division of said city of Chicago;' and to reinvest the state with such right and title as it had in and to said premises prior to the passage of said act of April 16th, 1869; and said repealing act had the further effect to withdraw from said company the additional power conferred upon it by said act of April 16th, 1869, to improve the harbor [87] of Chicago, and *to engage in the business of constructing and maintaining wharves, piers, and docks for the benefit of commerce and navigation generally, and not in the prosecution of its business as defined and limited by its original charter and the laws of the state, saving, however, to said company as unaffected by said repeal the right to hold and use as part of its way-ground or right of way, and not otherwise, the before-mentioned part of the submerged lands east of its breakwater between Monroe and Washington streets extended eastwardly, which was reclaimed from the lake in 1873, presumably upon the faith of the act of 1869, and is marked on the Morehouse map with the words 'built 1873.'

"It is further ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the defendant, the Illinois Central Railroad Company, be, and it is hereby, perpetually enjoined and restrained from erecting structures in or filling with earth or other materials any portion of the bed of Lake Michigan as it now exists and as shown on said Morehouse map east or in front of said fractional sections 10 and 15,—that is, east or in front of the grounds now occupied and used by it between Chicago river and the north line of Randolph street extended eastwardly, or east or in front of the grounds now occupied and used by it between the north line of Randolph and the center line of Sixteenth street, each extended eastwardly, except that said company may complete the slip or basin already commenced immediately north of Sixteenth street extended, with a wharf on each side of it not exceeding 100 feet in width each, where vessels coming into such slip or basin may load and unload, and upon which tracks of the company may be laid; and it is considered and ordered by the court that the Illinois Central Railroad Company and the city of Chicago each pay one half of the costs herein, and that execution issue therefor."

The railroad company not having obtained all it claimed, the cause was brought by it to this court, which affirmed the decreed of the circuit court except as modified in certain particulars, to be presently indicated. Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 146 U. S. 387, 449, 464, 36 L. ed. 1018, 1041, 1046, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110, 117, 122.

Referring to the 3d section of the act of the Illinois legislature *of 1869 this court [88] said: "The section in question has two objects in view: one was to confirm certain alleged rights of the railroad company under the grant from the state in its charter and under and 'by virtue of its appropriation, occupancy, use, and control, and the riparian ownership incident thereto, in and to the lands submerged or otherwise lying east of a line parallel with and 400 feet east of the west line of Michigan avenue, in fractional sections 10 and 15. The other object was to grant to the railroad company submerged lands in the harbor. The confirmation made, whatever the operation claimed for it in other respects, cannot be invoked so as to extend the riparian right which the company possessed, from its ownership of lands in sections 10 and 15 on the shore of the lake. Whether the piers or docks constructed by it after the passage of the act of 1869 extended beyond the point of navigability in the waters of the lake must be the subject of judicial inquiry upon the execution of this decree in the court below. If it be ascertained upon such inquiry and determined that such piers and docks do not extend beyond the point of practical navigability, the claim of the railroad company to their title and possession will be confirmed; but if they, or either of them are found on such inquiry to extend beyond the point of such navigability, then the state will be entitled to a decree that they, or the one thus extended, be abated and removed to the extent shown, or for such other disposition of the extension as, upon the application of the state and the facts established, may be authorized by law."

The modifications in the original decree of 1888 which this court directed to be made are distinctly shown by the following extract from our opinion:

"It follows from the views expressed, and it is so declared and adjudged, that the state of Illinois is the owner in fee of the submerged lands constituting the bed of Lake Michigan, which the 3d section of the act of April 16th, 1869, purported to grant to the Illinois Central Railroad Company, and that the act of April 15th, 1873, repealing the same, is valid and effective for the purpose of restoring to the state the same control, dominion, *and ownership of said [89] lands that it had prior to the passage of the act of April 16th, 1869.

"But the decree below, as it respects the pier commenced in 1872, and the piers completed in 1880 and 1881, marked 1, 2, and 3, near Chicago river, and the pier and docks between and in front of Twelfth and Sixteenth streets, is modified so as to direct the court below to order such investigation to be made as may enable it to determine whether those piers erected by the company, by virtue of its riparian proprietorship of lots formerly constituting part of section 10, extend into the lake beyond the point of practical navigability, having reference to the manner in which commerce in vessels is conducted on the lake; and if it be determined upon such investigation that said piers, or any of them, do not extend beyond such point, then that the title and possession of the railroad company to such piers shall be affirmed by the court; but if it be ascertained and determined that such piers, or any of them, do extend beyond such navigable point, then the said court shall direct the said pier or piers, to the excess ascertained, to be abated and removed, or that other proceedings relating thereto be taken on the application of the state as may be authorized by law; and also to order that similar proceedings be taken to ascertain and determine whether or not the pier and dock constructed by the railroad company in front of the shore between Twelfth and Sixteenth streets extend beyond the point of navigability, and to affirm the title and possession of the company if they do not extend beyond such point, and, if they do extend beyond such point, to order the abatement and removal of the excess, or that other proceedings relating thereto be taken on application of the state as may be authorized by law. Except as modified in the particulars mentioned, the decree in each of the three cases on appeal must be affirmed, with costs against the railroad company; and it is so ordered." Illinois Central R. Co. v. Illinois, 146 U. S. 387, 449, 464, 36 L. ed. 1018, 1041, 1046, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110, 117, 122.

The mandate of this court embodied the above extract from its opinion, and upon the return of the causes to the circuit court the parties took additional proof on the single matter so reserved for investigation.

[90] *Upon final hearing in the circuit court, May, 1896, a decree was entered by which it was found and adjudged "that the said piers and docks referred to in the aforesaid judgment and mandate of the Supreme Court and there described as piers marked 1, 2, and 3, near Chicago river, and the piers and docks constructed by the said railroad company in front of the shore between Twelfth and Sixteenth streets, all in the city of Chicago, in the state of Illinois, do not extend, nor does either of them extend, into the lake beyond the point of practical navigability, having reference to the manner in which commerce in vessels is conducted on the lake. It is therefore ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the title and possession of the said Illinois Central Railroad Company to the said piers, and each of them and every part thereof, be, and the same is hereby, affirmed."

That decree was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals (34 C. C. A. 138, 91 Fed. 955), and the case is here upon appeal by the state of Illinois. No appeal was taken by the United States or by the city of Chicago.

In view of these facts, what matters are open for consideration on this appeal?

446

This question was fully discussed at the bar. It is not in our opinion difficult of solution.

We have seen that by the original decree of the circuit court rendered September 24th, 1888, the railroad company was adjudged to be the owner in fee of the particular structures in question, namely, the piers marked 1, 2, and 3 on the Morehouse map, as well the piers and docks between and in front of Twelfth and Sixteenth streets, and were entitled to use and control them in its business. This court held that view to be correct, provided the structures did not "extend into the lake beyond the point of practical navigability, having reference to the manner in which commerce in vessels is conducted on the lake." If, upon investigation, it was found that the structures referred to did in fact extend beyond that point, then the circuit court was directed to make such decree as would effect their removal "to the excess ascertained;" and if the contrary was found to be the case, then a decree was to be entered recognizing the right of the railroad company in respect of the structures in question to be such as were declared by the original decree of the circuit court.

*As already shown, the circuit court found, [91] upon full inquiry, that the structures did not extend beyond the point of practical navigability, having reference to the manner in which commerce was conducted on the lake; and in conformity with the mandate a decree was entered confirming the title of the railroad company.

In Sibbald v. United States, 12 Pet. 488, 492, 9 L. ed. 1167, this court said: "A final decree in chancery is as conclusive as a judgment at law. 1 Wheat. 355, 4 L. ed. 119; 6 Wheat. 113, 116, 5 L. ed. 219, 220. Both are conclusive on the rights of the parties thereby adjudicated. No principle is better settled, or of more universal application, than that no court can reverse or annul its own final decrees or judgments, for errors of fact or law, after the term in which they have been rendered, unless for clerical mistakes (3 Wheat. 591, 4 L. ed. 467; 3 Pet. 431, 7 L. ed. 731); or to reinstate a cause dismissed by mistake (12 Wheat. 10, 6 L. ed. 534); from which it follows that no change or modification can be made which may substantially vary or affect it in any material thing. . . . Whatever was before the court, and is disposed of, is considered as finally settled. The inferior court is bound by the decree as the law of the case, and must carry it into execution, according to the mandate. They cannot vary it, or examine it for any other purpose than execution, or give any other or further relief, or review it upon any matter decided on appeal for error apparent, or intermeddle with it, further than to settle so much as has been remanded. . . . After a mandate, no rehearing will be granted. . . . and on a subsequent appeal nothing is brought up but the proceeding subsequent to the mandate. 5 Cranch, 316, 3 L. ed. 112; 7 Wheat. 58, 59, 5 L. ed. 397; 10 Wheat. 443, 6 L. ed. 362."

In Roberts v. Cooper, 20 How. 467, 481,

184 U. S.

15 L. ed. 969, 973, the court said: "On the last trial the circuit court was requested to give instructions to the jury contrary to the principles established by this court on the first trial, and nearly all the exceptions now urged against the charge are founded on such refusal. But we cannot be compelled on a second writ of error in the same case to review our own decision on the first. It has been settled by the decisions of this court, that after a case has been brought here and decided, and a mandate issued to [92] the court *below, if a second writ of error is sued out it brings up for revision nothing but the proceedings subsequent to the mandate. None of the questions which were before the court on the first writ of error can be reheard or examined upon the second. To allow a second writ of error or appeal to a court of last resort on the same questions which were open to dispute on the first would lead to endless litigation. In chancery a bill of review is sometimes allowed on petition to the court; but there would be no end to a suit if every obstinate litigant could, by repeated appeals, compel a court to listen to criticisms on their opinions, or speculate of chances from changes in its members. . . . We can now notice, therefore, only such errors as are alleged to have occurred in the decisions of questions which were peculiar to the second trial." To the same effect are numerous cases, some of which are cited in the margin.†

It is clear, under the adjudged cases, that upon the return of this cause to the circuit court nothing was before that court except to inquire whether the structures erected by the railroad company, and specifically described in the opinion and mandate of this court, extended into the lake beyond the point of practical navigability, having reference to the manner in which commerce in vessels was conducted on the lake. That matter, and nothing more, has been or could have been determined by the final decree of the circuit court, and therefore on this appeal we can only inquire as to the soundness or unsoundness of its conclusion upon the sole question reserved for investigation. We therefore do not stop to consider, as the appellant insists we should do, whether this court erred in any particular *in its opin-[93] ion or judgment on the former appeal, in respect of any matter then determined. Every matter embraced by the original decree of the circuit court, and not left open by the decree of this court, was conclusively determined, as between the parties, by our former decree, and is not subject to re-examination on this appeal.

We come, then, to consider the merits of the case as involved in the only question now before us, namely, whether the structures referred to extend beyond the point of practical navigability, having reference to the manner in which commerce in vessels is conducted on the lake.

Judge Showalter in the circuit court found that the facts relating to the structures north of Randolph street and those between Twelfth and Sixteenth streets fully protected the railroad company under the rule prescribed by the mandate of this court. Referring to vessels of the largest class continuously used in lake navigation, he said: "Such vessels, when laden, require from 16 to 20 feet of water in which to float. A vessel drawing more than 12 feet, as I find from the evidence in the case, would hardly reach the structure here in question in the ordinary stages of water, and in the lowest water vessels requiring more than 10 feet could not reach or land at these docks. Without being specific as to the exact depth of the water, I find that the two piers and docks between Twelfth and Sixteenth streets do not extend into the lake beyond the point of practical navigability, having reference to the manner in which commerce in vessels is conducted on the lakes, and I make the same finding as to the piers and docks north of Randolph street.

In the circuit court of appeals, Judge Jenkins, speaking for the court, said: "The right [of the riparian owner] is a relative right, having relation, in the language of the Supreme Court in this cause, 'to the manner in which commerce in vessels is conducted on the lake.' To serve any useful purpose these piers must reach water of sufficient depth to float vessels when laden, and alongside of which vessels can be brought to be conveniently loaded or unloaded. A sufficient depth of water to float vessels such as navigate the waters of the lake is essential, and *it is a necessary incident of the riparian [94] right that the pier shall penetrate the water to a distance from the shore necessary to reach water which shall float vessels, the largest as well as the smallest, that are engaged in the commerce of the lakes. Atlee v. Northwestern U. Packet Co. 21 Wall. 393, 22 L. ed. 620; Langdon v. New York, 93 N. Y. 151. . . . We must have regard to the object for which this right is conferred. It is to reach out to accommodate the vessels that plow the waters of the lake. It is in aid of the commerce of the lake, and that right for that purpose should be liberally interpreted and upheld."

†Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat. 304, 355, 4 L. ed. 97, 110; Browder v. M'Arthur, 7 Wheat. 58, 5 L. ed. 397; Washington Bridge Co. v. Stewart, 3 How. 413, 425, 11 L. ed. 658, 664; Chaires v. United States, 3 How. 611, 620, 11 L. ed. 749, 753; Corning v. Troy Iron & Nail Factory, 15 How. 451, 466, 14 L. ed. 768, 774; Peck v. Sanderson, 18 How. 42, 15 L. ed. 262; Whyte v. Gibbs, 20 How. 541, 15 L. ed. 1016; Ex parte Dubuque & P. R. Co. 1 Wall. 69, 73, sub nom. Dubuque & P. R. Co. v. Litchfield, 17 L. ed. 514, 515; Noonan v. Bradley, 12 Wall. 121, 129, 20 L. ed. 279, 281; Wayne County v. Kennicott, 94 U. S. 498, 24 L. ed. 260; Stewart v. Salamon, 97 U. S. 361, 24 L. ed. 1044; Brooks v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co. 102 U. S. 107, 26 L. ed. 91; Northern P. R. Co. v. Ellis, 144 U. S. 458, 464, 36 L. ed. 504, 506, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 724; Gaines v. Rugg, 148 U. S. 228, 241, sub nom. Gaines v. Caldwell, 37 L. ed. 432, 436, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611; Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co. 157 U. S. 683, 691, 39 L. ed. 859, 863, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 733; New Orleans v. Citizens' Bank, 167 U. S. 371, 396, 42 L. ed. 210, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; Re Sanford Fork & Tool Co. 160 U. S. 247, 40 L. ed. 414, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291.

After referring to the harbor line adopted by the United States government at the request of the city of Chicago, the court proceeded: "Without undertaking to say to what extent these proceedings of the city of Chicago were authorized as between it and the people of the state of Illinois, it is sufficient to say that these things have been done without any adverse action on the part of the state of Illinois. If they have no other effect, they tend to strengthen, if support be needed, the general drift of all the evidence in the case, that the necessities of the commercial marine of the Great Lakes require substantially a depth of water of 20 feet to float the larger class of vessels, and indicate that that depth at the present time marks 'the point of practical navigability, having reference to the manner in which commerce in vessels is conducted on the lake.' It is conceded that the piers in question do not intrude into the waters of the lake to that extent, and that the depth of water can be obtained at them only by dredging. Conceding, then, as we must, the right of the railroad company to reach that point of practical navigability, these structures were not and are not unlawful, and its rights to them must be sustained. The title to submerged lands resting in the state is held in trust in aid of navigation. Courts have at all times been diligent to protect and enforce rights of navigation, in aiding and protecting whatever may tend to build up and encourage commerce upon the seas. It does not comport with our sense of duty in the protection of a mere naked legal title to submerged land, to deny a conceded riparian right—conceded because so declared by the ultimate tribunal—when that [95] bare legal title is *held in trust for the very purpose to which these structures are devoted, namely, the accommodation of the commerce of the lake. To compel the abatement or removal of these structures to the extent demanded, or to any extent, in view of the establishment of the harborline as indicated, would be to render them useless for the accommodation of the commerce of the lakes, and to practically deny to the appellee a substantial and valuable riparian right to which the Supreme Court has determined it is entitled."

The words of our mandate, "practical navigability, having reference to the manner in which commerce in vessels [on the lake] is conducted," admonished the circuit court that the question as to the extent to which the railroad company could rightfully continue to occupy the bed of the lake with piers, docks, or wharves was not to be determined upon narrow, technical grounds, but upon grounds which, under all the circumstances, would be fair and reasonable as between the company and the public, having reference to the manner in which commerce was commonly or habitually conducted in vessels of various sizes.

It is said that, in determining whether the piers and docks in question extended into the lake beyond the point of practical navigability, the circuit court could only take into view the size and capacity of vessels habitually employed on the lake at the commencement of this litigation or at the date of the original decree in the circuit court.

We are of opinion that nothing in our mandate or opinion compelled the circuit court to frame its decree upon that theory. That court was directed to ascertain whether the structures complained of extended beyond practical navigability, having reference to the manner in which commerce "is conducted on the lake." There was no intention to withhold the power to determine the particular matter reserved for investigation in the light of the situation as it was when that investigation was made. If this court had intended that investigation should relate to the situation as it was when the litigation commenced, or when the original decree was rendered, it would have so declared. If, having reference to the manner in which commerce *in vessels was con- [96] ducted at the time of the investigation below, the structures in question did not extend into the lake beyond the point of practical navigability, then the circuit court, in the execution of the mandate of this court, properly confirmed the title and possession of the railroad company as established by the original decree.

It appears from the evidence that in 1847 the largest vessel on the lake had capacity sufficient to carry 18,000 bushels of corn; that in 1860 some grain vessels carried as much as 20,000 bushels, having a draft of about 12 or 12½ feet. In 1869 some vessels had a draft of 13 feet. Later, and during the period covered by the investigation, there were vessels on the lake carrying 100,000 bushels of corn, while others carried as much as 160,000 bushels, the latter drawing from 16 to 18 feet of water. The proof shows that the tendency for many years prior to the rendition of the decree was to increase the carrying capacity of vessels. That was particularly so in the case of metal steamers, some of which carried as much as 4,000 or 5,000 tons, while others varied in draft from 10 to 18 feet. There were, at the time of the investigation below, vessels regularly engaged in commerce on the lake whose draft was as much as 20 feet.

It is safe to say that according to the evidence in the cause a wharf or pier in the lake would not have adequately accommodated commerce, as carried on in many vessels on the lake, unless it had reached water not less than from 14 to 18 feet deep; and even such a structure could not have been used by the largest vessels on the lake. It was shown by soundings that the structures in question extended no farther into the lake than was necessary to accommodate a great number of vessels of moderate capacity. When the investigation below was entered upon, pursuant to our mandate, the depth of water in the channel of Chicago river over the La Salle and Washington streets tunnels was about 16 feet and 8 inches,—a greater depth than exists at the outer edge of the piers, docks, and wharves in question, except that at the mouth of the Chicago river, against the ends of some of the company's structures, there is a depth [97] of 18 to 20 feet, obtained *by dredging. The average depth of water at the outer line of the structures in question does not exceed 12 or 13 feet at the utmost, which is insufficient for the accommodation of a vast amount of commerce carried on in vessels on the lake. An examination of the evidence will disclose this fact beyond all serious controversy.

We are therefore of opinion that there was no error in holding that, in view of the manner in which commerce was conducted on the lake during the period of the investigation below, such structures did not extend into the water beyond the point of practical navigability. Regard being had to the weight of the proof, the same conclusion would be reached if we looked at the capacity of the vessels used on the lake at the time of the original decree in the circuit court.

Confirmation of these views will be found in the testimony of many witnesses whose opinions are entitled to respect. Captain Marshall of the Engineer Corps of the United States Army, having accurate knowledge of the harbor of Chicago and⁸ of its needs, was asked the question: "Having reference to the manner in which commerce in vessels is now conducted on the lakes at the port of Chicago, what, in your opinion, is the reasonable and necessary depth of water in a slip or dock for the accommodation of that commerce?" His answer was: "At present no vessel with a deeper draft than about 16 feet can carry on commerce in the Chicago river, so that I should think that a foot deeper than that—17 feet—would be a proper depth to accommodate the largest as well as the smallest vessels that come to Chicago now." He was also asked: "If you were to construct a pier or wharf in the said outer harbor for the accommodation of vessels engaged in lake commerce, or were to advise in relation thereto, what would be the depth of the water you would consider it necessary to reach in order that such pier or dock should be available for the uses intended?" He replied: "17 feet at present, and ultimately they should construct their docks with 20 feet of water. Piling and bulkheads so as to stand dredging to 20 feet." Many other witnesses testified substantially to the same effect.

[98] *It does not follow from what has been said that the railroad company can, of right, further extend into the lake either the structures in question or new structures. While sustaining the title and possession of the railroad company in respect to piers and docks, so far as then constructed, the original decree of 1888 perpetually enjoined the railroad company from erecting structures in or filling with earth or other materials any portion of the bed of Lake Michigan as it then existed and was shown on the Morehouse map east or in front of the fractional sections 10 and 15, that is, "east or in front of the grounds now [at the date of the original decree] occupied and used by it between Chicago river and the north line of Randolph street extended eastwardly, or east or in front of the grounds now [then] occupied and used by it between the north line of Randolph and the center line of Sixteenth street, each extended eastwardly, except that said company may complete the slip or basin already commenced immediately north of Sixteenth street extended, with a wharf on each side not exceeding 100 feet in width each, where vessels coming into such slip or basin may load or unload, and upon which tracks of the company may be laid." These restrictions imposed by the original decree were confirmed by the former decree of this court, leaving open only the question whether the structures complained of, and as then constructed and maintained, extended into the lake beyond the point of practical navigability. So that the railroad company cannot acquire by the present decision any authority to further extend its structures into the lake. It must stand upon the original decree of the circuit court in respect of its rights.
184 U. S.

We may add that, the circuit court and the circuit court of appeals having concurred in finding that the structures in question did not extend into the lake beyond the point of practical navigability,—which is largely, if not entirely, a question of fact,—the decree should not be disturbed unless it was clearly in conflict with the evidence. Compania de Navegacion la Flecha v. Brauer, 168 U. S. 104, 123, 42 L. ed. 398, 406, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 12; Stuart v. Hayden, 169 U. S. 1, 14, 42 L. ed. 639, 643, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 274; Baker v. Cummings, 169 U. S. 189, 198, 42 L. ed. 711, 716, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 767; The Carib Prince, 170 U. S. 655, sub nom. Wupperman v. The Carib Prince, 42 L. ed. 1181, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 753.

*For the reasons stated, the decree of [99] which the State complains must be affirmed. It is so ordered.

The CHIEF JUSTICE, having been of counsel for the city of Chicago in the earlier stages of this litigation, took no part in the consideration or decision of this case.

WILLIAM H. BRAINARD, Edward Albert Brainard, and Eva Hammore, Appts.,
v.

LEFFERT L. BUCK and James Coleman.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 99-111.)

Pleading—amendment changing cause of action—conclusiveness of concurrent findings—resulting trust—laches.

1. An amendment to a bill in equity does not set forth a new and different cause of action, so as to forbid its allowance in the court's discretion, although the reasons for relief are stated more fully and in some respects differently from those in the original bill, where the purpose of both bills is the same,—to establish a resulting trust arising from the same transactions and based on the same general rule of law applicable to resulting trusts.

NOTE.—On resulting trusts—see notes to Fink v. Umscheid (Kan.) 2 L. R. A. 146; Hinton v.

2. The concurrent decisions of two courts upon a question of fact will be followed unless shown to be clearly erroneous.
3. Delay in commencing a suit to establish a resulting trust is not such laches as will bar the relief sought, where complainant first learned the facts shortly before the death of the resulting trustee, and, after the death of the latter's wife, who was complainant's sister and who conveyed the premises to him and was by him permitted to remain thereon until her death, took and retained possession with no reason to believe that his title was not perfect until ejectment was brought against him, when he discovered that the legal title to the premises did not pass to his sister under the will of her husband because it was after-acquired property, and commenced the suit within a year after the ejectment suit was begun.
4. One seeking to establish a resulting trust in real property is entitled to the legal title, and not merely to a decree for an accounting, where the evidence shows that his money alone has been paid for such premises, and that, while such money was used in the purchase with his assent, he was unaware that the title was taken in his agent's name.

[No. 110.]

Argued January 15, 16, 1902. Decided February 24, 1902.

APPEAL from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia establishing a resulting trust and enjoining the further prosecution of an action of ejectment. Affirmed.

See same case below, 16 App. D. C. 595.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The above appellants seek a review in this court of the judgment of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia in this case, affirming a judgment of the supreme court of the district enjoining the appellants from the further prosecution of an action of ejectment brought by them against appellee Coleman in the supreme court of the district, to recover a one-fifth interest in a house and lot in the city of Washington, in the possession of Coleman as tenant of appellee Leffert L. Buck, who claims to be the owner thereof. The appellees, Buck and Coleman, commenced this suit in April, 1898, and in their bill of complaint they alleged the bringing of the action of ejectment on or about July 26, 1897, by William H. Brainard, as one of the heirs of his brother, the late Charles F. Brainard, to recover an undivided one-fifth interest in the real estate mentioned. The bill further alleged that the complainant Buck was the brother of one Cornelia A. Brainard, whose husband was Charles F. Brainard, both of whom lived in the city of Washington up to the time of the death of Charles on May 13, 1881, and the *widow thereafter continued to live in that city until her death on March 31, 1892. On June 12, 1872, Charles F. Brainard, the husband, made and executed his last will and testament, by which he devised and bequeathed to his wife all of his property of every kind and description for her own use and benefit. Afterwards and on July 18, 1879, there was conveyed to Charles F. Brainard by deed the premises in question. After the death of Charles F. Brainard and on March 31, 1882, his widow, by deed, duly conveyed her title to the premises to her brother, the complainant Buck. The bill then contained the following averments:

"8. The plaintiffs further show that the plaintiff, Leffert L. Buck, was the brother of the said Cornelia A. Brainard, and that her husband, the said Charles F. Brainard, was in his lifetime employed as a clerk in the Treasury Department; that he had little or no means of support outside of the salary which he received, and that the plaintiff, Leffert L. Buck, being willing to aid and assist his sister, and being solicited by her and her husband so to do, furnished and advanced the money to pay for the said property and premises first above described; that the said premises were purchased with money so advanced by the said plaintiff, L. L. Buck, in part directly to the said Brainard to pay for and on account of said property, and in part to the wife of the said Brainard, and in part in taking up and paying encumbrances which had been put upon said property for the purchase price thereof; that said money was so advanced and said property purchased for the sole and only purpose of giving to the said Cornelia A. Brainard, the sister of the said L. L. Buck, a home, and that it was so understood by the said Brainard at the time of said purchase; that the said property was conveyed to the said Brainard instead of to his wife for the reason that prior to said conveyance the said Brainard had executed his will, by which said will he had devised and bequeathed to his said wife all of his property of every kind, and it was understood and believed by the said Brainard and his wife that if she should survive him the property would descend to her, and that in event she should not survive him, her said husband, she would have a home on said property during her lifetime, *and that during said period said Brainard should hold the title to said property as trustee for said plaintiff, Leffert L. Buck."

The bill then set forth the names of the

Pritchard (N. C.) 10 L. R. A. 401, and Ducie v. Ford, 34 L. ed. U. S. 1091.

As to laches as a defense—see notes to Hammond v. Hopkins, 36 L. ed. U. S. 135; Felix v. 450

Patrick, 36 L. ed. U. S. 720; Middletown v. Newport Hospital (R. I.) 1 L. R. A. 191; Calhoun v. Delhi & M. R. Co. (N. Y.) 8 L. R. A. 248, and Coffey v. Emigh (Colo.) 10 L. R. A. 125.

184 U. S.

surviving heirs at law of Charles F. Brainard, and averred that some of them had quitclaimed the property to the plaintiff Buck. It is also averred that from the time of the death of Charles F. Brainard his widow lived in the house, and that she conveyed the premises to Buck by deed on March 31, 1882, and that he believed that the legal title was in him until the commencement of the ejectment suit, when he was advised that the will of Charles F. Brainard did not convey the property to his sister for the reason that it was acquired by Brainard after the execution of the will, which did not operate to convey after-acquired property.

For relief, the bill asked that the plaintiffs in the action of ejectment might be perpetually enjoined from further prosecuting the same, and that it might be declared that the land in question was charged with a trust in favor of, and ought to be held for, the use and benefit of the plaintiff Buck, and that the defendants, or such of them as should appear to have the legal title to the lands, should be decreed to convey such legal title free and clear of all encumbrances done or suffered by them or any or either of them unto the plaintiff Buck.

The defendant William H. Brainard demurred to the bill on the ground, among others, that the promise set forth in the bill was not in writing or signed by the deceased, Charles F. Brainard, and was within the meaning of the statute for the prevention of frauds and perjuries; also that Buck had been guilty of gross and inexcusable laches in bringing his suit.

The demurrer was sustained with leave to the plaintiffs to amend. Pursuant to such leave the plaintiff served an amended bill, which was a full and complete bill, taking the place of the original, and restated all the facts set forth in the original bill, but left out the above quoted 8th paragraph. The complainants in the 9th, 10th, 11th, and 12th paragraphs of the amended bill made the following averments:

[102] "9. That from March 12, 1875, until June 3, 1880, the said plaintiff, Leffert L. Buck, sent to the said Charles F. Brainard, for investment as agent for him, the said Leffert L. Buck, various *sums of money,—the particular amounts of which, and the dates at which they were received by said Charles F. Brainard, deceased, are stated in 'Exhibit D,' hereto annexed,—and authorized the said Charles F. Brainard, as agent for him, the said Leffert L. Buck, to invest the same in real estate, bonds, and securities in the city of Washington; that on or about the 18th day of July, 1879, the said Charles F. Brainard purchased the said property and premises hereinbefore described for the sum of $6,350, and paid on said purchase price the sum of $2,550 out of the moneys so sent to him for investment by the said plaintiff, Leffert L. Buck, as aforesaid; that upon said purchase the said Charles F. Brainard took the deed of said property to himself without the knowledge, consent, or authority of said plaintiff so to do; that said deed is the same deed hereinbefore mentioned as 'Exhibit B;' that thereafter and on or about March 12, 1880, said Charles F. Brainard made a further payment of $1,266.66 on said property out of said moneys so sent to him for investment by said plaintiff, Leffert L. Buck, as aforesaid; that on the 8th day of June, 1880, there still remained in the hands of said Charles F. Brainard out of the said moneys so received by him for investment as agent for the said plaintiff, Leffert L. Buck, the sum of $793.58, no part of which has ever been repaid to or received by said plaintiff; that on or about the 25th day of July, 1879, said Charles F. Brainard executed to John F. Waggaman and James A. Harban, trustees, a deed of trust on said property to secure payment of the balance of the purchase money then unpaid thereon, and that said deed of trust was executed without the knowledge, consent, or authority of said plaintiff, Leffert L. Buck; that after the 8th day of June, 1880, and before his death, the said Charles F. Brainard made further payments on said property, not exceeding in amount the sum of $650, out of the said moneys so received by him from said plaintiff for investment as aforesaid, the particular dates of which payments plaintiffs are unable more definitely at this time to state, for the reason that the books and accounts of the Western Building Association, to which said payments were made, have been destroyed.
184 U. S.

*"10. That after the death of the said Charles Brainard the plaintiff Leffert L. Buck was informed by his said sister, Cornelia A. Brainard, that she held the legal title to said property under the last will and testament of her said husband, which is the instrument hereinbefore mentioned as 'Exhibit A,' and that there remained unpaid upon said trust deed the sum of $1,971.81; that thereupon, and on or about the 17th day of March, 1882, said plaintiff, Leffert L. Buck, paid the balance due upon said trust deed, which was thereupon discharged, to wit, the sum $1,971.81; and thereafter, and on the 31st day of March, 1882, the said Cornelia A. Brainard conveyed the said property to him by the deed referred to as 'Exhibit C,' and the said plaintiff, Leffert L. Buck, thereupon and on that day entered into and has ever since remained in undisturbed possession of said premises.

"11. And the plaintiffs further show that all of the moneys that were paid for the purchase of said property, including the whole consideration thereof, were paid by the plaintiff Leffert L. Buck.

"12. And the plaintiffs further show that not until after the said action at law No. 41,274, which is the suit of said William H. Brainard against James Coleman, had been brought, had the plaintiff Leffert L. Buck any information that the legal title to said premises did not pass to his sister, the said Cornelia A. Brainard, under the will of her said husband, Charles F. Brainard."

The defendants demurred to this amended bill on the same grounds stated in the demurrer to the original bill, and also on the ground that a new and different cause of action had been set up in the amended bill from the one in the original bill. The demurrer was overruled, and the defendants thereupon answered, in which, among other things, they denied complainants' allegation as to the payments for the premises by Buck, and averred that the purchase money for the premises had been paid out of Charles F. Brainard's own funds in cash or by his notes secured by deed of trust, which notes were subsequently paid by Brainard.

[104] Upon the trial there was a final decree in favor of the complainants, and the defendants were enjoined from prosecuting the action at law, and they were directed to convey, quitclaim, and release the real estate unto the complainant Buck, and in default of their doing so it was adjudged that the decree then given should operate and stand as such conveyance, quitclaim, and release.

Messrs. Leo Simmons and Hugh T. Taggart argued the cause, and, with Mr. D. W. Baker, filed a brief for appellants:

The amendments made to sworn bills must be consistent with the original bill.

Marble v. Bonhotel, 35 Ill. 248; 1 Dan. Ch. Pl. & Pr. § 404, note 1; Ogden v. Moore, 95 Mich. 293, 54 N. W. 899; Hill v. Hill, 53 Vt. 582; Shields v. Barrow, 17 How. 120, 15 L. ed. 158.

A party is not allowed to state one case in a bill or answer and to make out a different one by proof.

Boone v. Chiles, 10 Pet. 179, 9 L. ed. 388; Henry v. Suttle, 42 Fed. 94.

Even if Buck and Brainard agreed to buy the property together, each to pay equally and each to own one half, and the fact was established that at various times Buck's money had been used to pay all the purchase money, he would not be entitled to have the entire property, but only one half of it, and an accounting, with a lien for the balance due him.

Dickson v. Patterson, 160 U. S. 584, 40 L. ed. 543, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 373.

Transactions, although impeachable in equity at the time of inception and for some time afterwards, on the ground of fraud, may become unimpeachable by a subsequent confirmation, by acquiescence, or by mere lapse of time.

Kerr, Fraud & Mistake, 296.

The doctrine of acquiescence applies as between trustee and cestui que trust, even in cases of express trusts.

Kerr, Fraud & Mistake, 303.

All the parties concerned in or having any knowledge of the transactions are dead, save Buck alone. In his effort to enforce alleged obligations of the dead his averments of fact in his pleadings in regard to such obligations should be clear and consistent, and his testimony in support of them should be clear and consistent with them; if not he must take the risk of presumptions against him.

Crosby v. Buchanan, 23 Wall. 420, 23 L. ed. 138.

No fraud in the transaction being shown, the mere fact that Brainard saw fit to buy the property on his own account, and to use a part of the money in making the cash payment, giving his own notes to secure the remainder, is not sufficient to raise a resulting trust.

White v. Carpenter, 2 Paige, 241; Bibb v. Hunter, 79 Ala. 352; McGowan v. McGowan, 14 Gray, 119, 74 Am. Dec. 668. See also Bailey v. Hemmaway, 147 Mass. 326, 17 N. E. 645; Sayre v. Townsend, 15 Wend. 651; Olcott v. Bynum, 17 Wall. 59, 21 L. ed. 574; Ducie v. Ford, 138 U. S. 592, 34 L. ed. 1095, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 417; Parkhurst v. Van Cortlandt, 1 Johns. Ch. 281.

Lapse of time and the death of the parties to the deed have always been considered, in a court of chancery, entitled to great weight, and almost controlling circumstances when the controversy grows out of stale transactions.

Jenkins v. Pye, 12 Pet. 254, 9 L. ed. 1075; Hammond v. Hopkins, 143 U. S. 224, 36 L. ed. 134, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

If the case, as it appears at the hearing, is liable to the objection of staleness, by reason of the laches of the complainants, the court will, upon that ground, be passive, and refuse relief.

Richards v. Mackall, 124 U. S. 187, 31 L. ed. 399, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437.

Nothing can call forth this court into activity but conscience, good faith, and reasonable diligence. Where these are wanting the court is passive and does nothing.

Smith v. Clay, 3 Bro. Ch. 640, note; Speidel v. Henrici, 120 U. S. 387, 30 L. ed. 720, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 610; Brown v. Bucna Vista County, 95 U. S. 157, 24 L. ed. 422.

Mr. E. V. Brookshire argued the cause, and, with Mr. Nelson L. Robinson, filed a brief for appellees:

If an agent invests his principal's money in land, and takes a deed in his own name, with or without the principal's consent, a trust will arise.

Witts v. Horney, 59 Md. 584; Keller v. Keller, 45 Md. 270; Crocker v. Crocker, 31 N. Y. 507, 88 Am. Dec. 291; Moffatt v. Shepard, 2 Pinney (Wis.) 66; Depeyster v. Gould, 3 N. J. Eq. 474, 29 Am. Dec. 723; Hall v. Sprigg, 7 Mart. (La.) 243, 12 Am. Dec. 506; Rose v. Hayden, 35 Kan. 106, 10 Pac. 554; Burden v. Sheridan, 36 Iowa, 125, 14 Am. Rep. 505; 2 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1037; Philips v. Crammond, 2 Wash. C. C. 441, Fed. Cas. No. 11,092; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. 13th ed. §§ 1201, 1211a, 1265.

Where a trustee or other person standing in a fiduciary capacity makes a profit out of any transaction within the scope of his agency or authority, that profit will belong to the cestui que trust. In cases of this sort the cestui que trust is not bound at all by the act of the other party. He has, therefore, an option to insist upon taking the property, or he may disclaim title thereto and proceed upon any other remedies to which he is entitled, either in rem or in personam.

Story, Eq. Jur. 13th ed. §§ 1261, 1262; Day v. Roth, 18 N. Y. 448.

It is not necessary to an equitable estoppel that there should be a design to mislead.

Manufacturers' & T. Bank v. Hazard, 30 N. Y. 226; Blair v. Wait, 69 N. Y. 113.

A party need not have acted affirmatively upon a declaration, to claim an estoppel, if he has been led thereby to refrain from using means to retrieve his position.

Continental Nat. Bank v. National Bank, 50 N. Y. 575; Voorhis v. Olmstead, 66 N. Y. 113.

An owner of an equitable title in possession is not obliged to take steps to establish his title until his possession is disturbed or his title attacked.

18 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. title Laches, subdiv. VII. § 7, p. 125; Townsend v. Vanderwerker, 160 U. S. 176, 40 L. ed. 385, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258; Ruckman v. Cory, 129 U. S. 387, 32 L. ed. 728, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 316.

Moreover, Mr. Buck, a nonresident, is not chargeable with notice of the law of the District of Columbia, now obsolete, that a will did not then pass after-acquired realty.

Stedman v. Davis, 93 N. Y. 32.

Mr. James Coleman filed a brief for appellee Leffert L. Buck:

If the original and amended bills stated different causes of action, the appellants' remedy was, not by demurrer, but to strike the amended bill from the files.

Jones v. Van Doren, 130 U. S. 684, 32 L. ed. 1077, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 685.

It was a proper exercise of discretion on the part of the court below to permit the plaintiffs to amend their bill.

Story, Eq. Pl. § 834; Richmond v. Irons, 121 U. S. 27, 30 L. ed. 864, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 788; Neale v. Neale, 9 Wall. 1, 19 L. ed. 590; Hardin v. Boyd, 113 U. S. 756, 28 L. ed. 1141, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 771; Jones v. Van Doren, 130 U. S. 684, 32 L. ed. 1077, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 685.

The demurrer to the amended bill having been overruled, it follows that if the court shall find that the evidence sustains the bill the decree of the court below should be affirmed, unless the court should also find that the court below erred in permitting the plaintiffs to amend their bill. This, we submit, was not error.

Story, Eq. Pl. 884; Hardin v. Boyd, 113 U. S. 756, 28 L. ed. 1141, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 771.

If the property in question was paid for by the plaintiff Buck, or with money in the hands of Charles F. Brainard belonging to said Buck, an implied or constructive trust is created by operation of law, by which the property became vested in him.

Anderson, Law Diet. title Trusts; Perry, Tr. § 168; Pom. Eq. Jur. p. 1049; 1 Story, Eq. Jur. p. 187; Adams, Eq. p. 36; Michigan Air Line R. Co. v. Mellen, 44 Mich. 321, 6 N. W. 845; Johnson v. Dougherty, 18 N. J. Eq. 406; Watson v. Thompson, 12 R. I. 466; McMurry v. Mobley, 39 Ark. 309; Hall v. Linn, 8 Colo. 264, 5 Pac. 641; Conant v. Riseborough, 139 Ill. 383, 28 N. E. 789; Smith v. Profitt, 82 Va. 832, 1 S. E. 67; Balloch v. Hooper, 6 Mackey, 421; Ferguson v. Williamson, 20 Ark. 272; McDonald v. McDon- ald, 24 Ind. 68; Hidden v. Jordan, 21 Cal. 92; Follansbe v. Kilbreth, 17 Ill. 522, 65 Am. Dec. 691; Brown v. Dwelley, 45 Me. 52; Chastain v. Smith, 30 Ga. 96; Smith v. Boquet, 27 Tex. 507.
184 U. S. U. S., Book 46.

The plaintiff Buck is not chargeable with laches in not asserting his title to the premises.

Ruckman v. Cory, 129 U. S. 387, 32 L. ed. 728, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 316.

The defendant William H. Brainard is not entitled to relief, neither should he be permitted to prosecute his suit at law by reason of his laches.

Richards v. Mackall, 124 U. S. 187, 31 L. ed. 399, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Speidel v. Henrieli, 120 U. S. 377, 30 L. ed. 718, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 610; Brown v. Buena Vista County, 95 U. S. 157, 24 L. ed. 422; Crutehfield v. Hewitt, 2 App. D. C. 373; Cammack v. Carpenter, 3 App. D. C. 219; Baker v. Cummings, 4 App. D. C. 273; Levis v. Kengla, 8 App. D. C. 230.

*Mr. Justice Peckham, after stating the [104] above facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellants insist that the supreme court of the District had no power to authorize the amendment which was made by the appellees to their original bill in this suit, because, as they assert, the cause of action set forth in the amendment is new, different, and distinct from that set forth in the original bill, and that therefore the demurrer to the amended bill should have been sustained.

We fully agree with the courts below in holding that the allowance of the amendment was within the discretion of the court, and that the demurrer on the grounds stated was properly overruled. The case comes within the principle of Jones v. Van Doren, 130 U. S. 684, 32 L. ed. 1077, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 685. The purpose in both bills was the same,—to establish a resulting trust in favor of the complainant Buck on account of the transactions set forth in the bills; and while the reasons are stated more fully in the amended bill, and in some respects differently from those in the original bill, yet the purpose is the same, arising from the same transactions and based upon the same general rule of law applicable to resulting trusts.

Upon the merits of the case, the two courts below have come *to the same conclu- [105] sion. The general finding of the trial court in favor of the complainants was a finding in their favor of all the material facts alleged in the amended bill, and those facts have been repeated and affirmed in the court of appeals, and we are now asked to review and reverse those findings upon the testimony contained in the record. It ought not to be done in this case. It is the settled doctrine of this court that the concurrent decisions of two courts upon a question of fact will be followed, unless shown to be clearly erroneous. The Carib Prince, 170 U. S. 655, 658, sub nom. Wuppermann v. The Carib Prince, 42 L. ed. 1181, 1185, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 753.

and cases there cited. After examining the evidence in the case, we are not convinced that the findings of the court below were erroneous, but, on the contrary, it seems to us that they are justified by the evidence.

In regard to the evidence on the part of the complainants given on the trial, defendants assert it to be different from and inconsistent with the statements of fact contained in the amended bill, but a careful perusal of the whole evidence fails to convince us that there exists any such real and material inconsistency, but, on the contrary, the evidence substantially corroborates and justifies the averments of the amended bill.

The account book of the deceased Brainard was put in evidence, and some criticism has been made by counsel for the defendants in regard to the manner in which the deceased kept his accounts, as evidenced in that book, and some faint claim seems to have been made that the book showed that moneys had been sent by Brainard to Buck instead of the reverse, as claimed by Buck. This criticism arises on account of the position of the words "Dr." and "Cr." with regard to the statement of the account between the two people. However, a perusal of the accounts in the book, taken in connection with the statement of the account between the parties made by Brainard in his lifetime and in his handwriting and given to complainant Buck, shows beyond any controversy that the moneys were advanced by Buck to Brainard, and not the reverse. There is really no contradiction of the evidence on the part of the complainants that it was the money of Buck, and his alone, which paid for the property in question.

[106] From the evidence which was taken upon the trial, and upon *which the trial court gave judgment in favor of the complainants, the court of appeals itself found the facts similar to the averments in the amended bill, and stated them as follows:

"Leffert L. Buck was a civil engineer and a bachelor. His residence was in the city of New York; but his professional engagements called him to different parts of the world. He testified that he went to Peru in 1875, and before leaving sent about $200 to Brainard for investment. He continued to send sums of money from time to time from 1877 to 1880, and during the latter year. Brainard invested from time to time in bonds which he sold for reinvestment.

"Brainard kept an account book, which has been preserved, and the entries therein of money received from Buck correspond with a statement rendered to the latter and produced by him in evidence.

"Buck testified that he suggested the joint purchase of the house and lot in controversy, which Brainard wrote him could be had for $6,350. Brainard made the purchase at that price on July 18, 1879, making a cash payment thereon of $2,550 with Buck's money, as the account book shows. The remainder was raised by mortgage. The account book, under the same date, shows the charge of the cost of recording the deed, and of insurance against Buck. The deed was made to Brainard.

454

"Buck testified that early in 1880 he learned that the deed was in the name of Brainard alone, and suggested to the latter to convey to him and he would pay the balance, and Brainard and wife could occupy the house as a home. Brainard was then in bad health. He did not wish to make the transfer then, saying that when he recovered he would be able to go on and pay the balance on the property, and would also be able to pay for Buck's half, and he thought that better than to go to the expense of making two transfers. He said that, in any event, the property would go to his wife with everything that he had in case of his death. He was sick and nervous, and Buck did not press the matter. Brainard died of Bright's disease, and was suffering therefrom at the time, though it was not then known.

*"On March 12, 1880, he paid $1,266.66 on [107] the mortgage with Buck's money in his hands.

"Some time after that Brainard made a statement in writing of the cost of the property, showing the payments made with Buck's money, and stating therein that he proposed to convey to Buck a half interest in the property, and to give him his note for the excess paid over one half. He expected to be able to pay back to Buck this excess, and also to finish paying for the property.

"Buck testified that he did not agree to this, but let matters run on because of Brainard's nervous condition, and because he expected the will of Brainard would invest the legal title in his sister. Brainard died without completing the payment for the property.

"Mrs. Brainard remained in possession, claiming under the will, but conveyed the title to Buck, who paid the last mortgage, amounting to nearly $2,000. Mrs. Brainard made her home there until she died on March 31, 1892. Buck was frequently there, and contributed to her support. When she died he leased the property and has since collected the rents, kept the property in repair, and paid all the taxes.

"Without going into further details, it is sufficient to say that the evidence on behalf of Buck, corroborated on all material points by the entries in the book of Brainard, shows clearly that the purchase of the property was made with his money in the hands of Brainard for investment; and that Brainard was his agent and trustee, and not his debtor for money lent for the purpose. From these facts it is clear that a trust resulted in favor of Buck, which entitled him to a conveyance of the legal title. 2 Pom. Eq. § 1037." [16 App. D. C. 595.]

We think the law in this respect was correctly stated by the court below.

The defendants also rely upon the defense of laches on the part of the complainants, in that they permitted so long a time to elapse after they knew that the title was in the name of Brainard.

We also agree with the court below that this defense is not sustained. When the [108] knowledge came to the complainant *Buck that the title was in Brainard, Buck asked him to transfer it to the complainant, and stated that he (Buck) would pay the balance of the purchase money unpaid on the premises. This Brainard disliked to do, and wanted Buck to wait and see if he (Brainard) could not make payments, and thus keep the house for himself. During this time Brainard was ill, and, as it subsequently appeared, was then suffering from Bright's disease, although he did not then know the cause of his illness, and the complainant says that he acquiesced because he did not wish to worry Brainard, and so the matter ran on for a little while, and was terminated by the sudden death of Brainard without anything having been done.

This did not amount to any settlement, nor did it in any way bar the rights otherwise existing in favor of the complainant Buck. It was a mere hope expressed on the part of Brainard that he might thereafter be able to pay for the house and a passive acquiescence on the part of the complainant that such effort might be made. As is said, nothing was ever in fact done, and no real alteration was ever made in the position of the two parties.

We have, then, the conditions of the title taken to the property in the name of Brainard, unknown to the complainant at the time, and the money furnished by Buck to Brainard as his agent, and put into the purchase of the house and lot. Subsequently, and a short time before the death of Brainard, Buck discovers the fact, and Brainard and his wife are then living on the premises. He knows that Brainard has made a will in favor of his wife, for he has been told by Brainard that upon his death everything was to go to her, and wants his sister to have a home, and is entirely satisfied in that way. He believed that the property would pass to the wife by the will in case of the death of Brainard. After Brainard's death, his widow (complainant's sister) remains in the house, and Buck contributes to her support while living there. She conveys the premises to him by deed, and he supposed that he thereby acquired full title to the premises, and paid the balance of the purchase money. After the death of his sister he takes possession of the property, and has continued in possession ever since, [109] and it *was not until after the commencement of the action of ejectment that the complainant Buck had any knowledge that the legal title to the premises did not pass to his sister under the will of her husband, because it was acquired subsequently to that will. That action of ejectment was commenced in 1897, and this bill was filed April 15, 1898. These facts, we think, are sufficient to excuse all the delay that has been shown to exist in this case. It is covered by the principles laid down in Ruckman v. Cory, 129 U. S. 387, 389, 32 L. ed. 729, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 316, and Townsend v. Vanderwerker, 160 U. S. 171, 185, 186, 40 L. ed. 383, 388, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258.

184 U. S.

Upon this subject we fully agree with what was said by Mr. Justice Shepard, in delivering the opinion in this case in the court of appeals, as follows:

"Buck entertained affection for, and had perfect confidence in, Brainard. He was anxious to secure a comfortable home for his sister. Brainard became seriously ill, and his condition was such that Buck would not aggravate it by importunity. Besides, he was assured that Brainard would devise the property to his sister. In fact, Brainard had made, and executed with due formality, a will leaving everything to his wife. This will was then, and until the institution of the action of ejectment, supposed to operate a conveyance of the property in question. Buck, so believing, took a conveyance from his sister, who was childless, and paid off the last encumbrance. He suffered her to occupy the house until her death. In the meantime, none of the heirs-at-law of Brainard made any claim to the property. Their apparent acquiescence tended to confirm Buck, who was in actual possession all of the time, in the belief that his title was perfect. There was nothing, therefore, to suggest the necessity or importance of resorting to a court of equity for the confirmation of that title, until the institution of the action of ejectment. When aroused to action, he was diligent in taking it. This long, undisturbed possession, under a title supposed to be perfect, presents a stronger excuse for delay, also, than that held sufficient in Ruckman v. Cory, 129 U. S. 387, 389, 32 L. ed. 729, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 316, 317, wherein it was said: 'Nor has the plaintiff been guilty of any such laches as would close the doors of a court of equity against him. He was in the peaceful occupancy of the premises for some years prior to *any assertion of title [110] upon the part of the defendant under the deed of 1872. If he had not been all the time in the possession of the premises, controlling them as if he were the absolute owner, the question of laches might be a more serious one than it is. The bringing of the action of ejectment was, so far as the record shows, the first notice he had of the necessity of legal proceedings for his protection against the legal title held by the defendant. As proceedings to that end were not unreasonably delayed, we do not perceive that laches can be imputed to him. Laches are rather imputed to the defendant, who, although claiming to have been the absolute owner of the lands since 1862, took no action against the plaintiff until the ejectment suit was instituted.'"

The last objection made by the appellants consists in an assertion that in no possible view of the evidence, even upon a proper bill, could Buck be properly held to be entitled as a matter of equitable right to more than a decree for an accounting, wherein he should be credited with advances of money made by him to Brainard in the latter's lifetime and invested by the latter in the property, and further credited with the sum paid by him after Brainard's death in the settlement of Brainard's debt to the building association secured by the deed of trust (thus subrogating him to the rights of the association), and charged with rents and other proper offsets and with an equitable lien on the property for the balance thus found to be due, if any.

Taking the facts as found by the courts below, this claim is not well founded. The moneys of the complainant Buck were used by his agent Brainard in the purchase of the premises, and at the time of the death of the agent the whole purchase price had not been paid. After his death that balance was paid by Buck, who thus paid every dollar that has gone into the purchase price of the premises, and the substance of the whole evidence tends directly to show that while the funds were used by the agent with the assent of his principal, Buck, the taking of the title in Brainard's name was unknown to his principal. Buck's money, and Buck's money alone, has been paid for the whole premises, and there is neither [111] equity nor justice in refusing*him the legal title to the property purchased with his own money.

The judgment should be affirmed.

CLEVELAND TRUST COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

M. A. LANDER, Treasurer of Cuyahoga County, Ohio.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 111-115.)

Tax on shares of trust company—distinguished from tax on property of company—exemption of investments in United States bonds.

A tax on the shares of stock in a trust company under the Ohio statutes is not equivalent to a tax on the property of the corporation, and therefore the shareholders are not entitled, under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 3701, to have a deduction, from the value of the shares, of the amount of the capital stock of the company which is invested in United States bonds.

[No. 88.]

Argued January 10, 1902. Decided February 24, 1902.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Ohio to review a decision affirming a judgment dismissing on demurrer a suit for an injunction against the collection of a tax on shares of stock in a trust company. Affirmed.

See same case below, 62 Ohio St. 266, 56 N. E. 1036.

Statement by Mr. Justice McKenna:

This, a writ of error, to review the judgment of the supreme court of the state of Ohio, which sustained the ruling of the court of common pleas of Cuyahoga county, dismissing upon the demurrer of the defendant in error the petition of the plaintiff in error praying for an order and decree restraining the collection of taxes levied upon the shares of the stockholders of plaintiff in error. 62 Ohio St. 266, 56 N. E. 1036.

The plaintiff (plaintiff in error was plaintiff in the court below) is a banking corporation with a capital stock of $500,000, divided into 5,000 shares of $100 each, all of which are paid up, and for which certificates are outstanding and owned by a large number of persons, most of whom reside in Ohio.

The plaintiff made in due time return of its resources and liabilities, in accordance with § 2765 of the Revised Statutes of Ohio, to the auditor of the county, together with a full statement of the names and residences of the stockholders of the company, and with the number of shares held by each and the par value thereof, as required by the statute. The return included its real estate and 174 bonds*of the United States of the denom-[112] ination of $1,000 each, "then and for a long time prior thereto owned by the plaintiff and in which the plaintiff had invested its capital stock." The plaintiff valued these bonds at the sum of $213,274.81, and in its return deducted that sum from the $500,000 par value of paid-in capital stock included among the liabilities of the plaintiff, leaving a balance of $286,725.19.

The county auditor refused to allow the deduction of the government bonds, and fixed the value of the shares of the capital stock at $333,700, exclusive of the assessed value of the real estate. No notice of this action was given plaintiff or its stockholders, nor did plaintiff or its stockholders know until the 11th of November, 1898, that said bonds had been included in fixing the valuation of the shares of the bank.

It is alleged in the petition that it is the custom of banks and banking institutions throughout the state of Ohio to deduct the value of government bonds from the paid-in capital stock returned, "although not so apparent upon the face of their returns to the several county auditors; that said bonds were by the banks and banking associations of this state so deducted in the returns for 1897; that similar deductions of the United States government bonds are likewise made by unincorporated banks in the state of Ohio under and by virtue of the Revised Statutes of state of Ohio, § 2759; that the auditor of Cuyahoga county and the county auditors elsewhere throughout the state, as this plaintiff is informed and believes, did not include United States government bonds so owned in fixing the total value for 1898 of the shares of the several incorporated banks of Ohio, as directed by § 2766 of the Revised Statutes of Ohio."

The county auditor entered the valuation of the property of plaintiff, including said government bonds, upon the tax duplicate of the county, and assessed taxes against the same at the rate of .02955 cents on each dollar's valuation of the shares, making an excess of taxation of $4,283.71, and that that sum stands against said shareholders upon the tax duplicate in the hands of the defendant, "together with the remaining amount of taxes lawfully assessed against them upon the valuation so fixed by the county auditor."

[113] *The plaintiff tendered the sum which it regarded as legally due, and alleged the grounds upon which it claimed equitable relief.

The error in the judgment of the supreme court of the state is assigned as follows:

"First. The court erred in affirming the judgment of the circuit court in sustaining the judgment of the court of common pleas on the demurrer of the defendant to the petition of the plaintiff.

"Second. The court erred in holding and deciding that the Cleveland Trust Company was not entitled, in making its statement to the auditor of Cuyahoga county, Ohio, under § 2765 of the Revised Statutes of Ohio, to deduct, for the purpose of taxation, from its capital and surplus, the amount of the United States government bonds owned by it under and by virtue of § 3701 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as claimed in the original petition of the plaintiff."

Mr. James R. Garfield argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Harry A. Garfield and Frederic C. Howe, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The Constitution of the state of Ohio specifically requires that the property of corporations, and especially of banking institutions, shall be taxed.

Exchange Bank v. Hines, 3 Ohio St. 1.

The supreme court of Ohio has construed the various tax laws of the state as various methods provided by the legislature to carry into effect the plain mandate of the Constitution that all property of banks shall be taxed.

Ibid.; Fayette County Treasurer v. People's & Drivers' Bank, 47 Ohio St. 503, 10 L. R. A. 196, 25 N. E. 697; Chapman v. First Nat. Bank, 56 Ohio St. 310, 47 N. E. 54.

A tax upon the shares of stock of a corporation in the hands of the owner is a tax upon a kind of property separate and distinct from the property of the corporation itself, and such a tax is not equivalent to a tax upon the property of the corporation.

Van Allen v. The Assessors, 3 Wall. 573, sub nom. Churchill v. Utica, 18 L. ed. 229; New York v. New York City & County Tax & A. Comrs. 4 Wall. 244, 18 L. ed. 344; Shelby County v. Union & Planters' Bank, 161 U. S. 149, 40 L. ed. 650, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558; Owensboro Nat. Bank v. Owensboro, 173 U. S. 664, 43 L. ed. 850, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 537.

If it be held that the tax provided for under §§ 2762 and 2769 is an equivalent of a tax upon the property of the corporation, then it must follow that all bonds of the United States owned by the bank may be deducted in fixing the value of the shares.

Bank Tax Case, 2 Wall. 200, 17 L. ed. 793; First Nat. Bank v. Kentucky, 9 Wall. 353, 19 L. ed. 701.

Unless incorporated banks and trust companies organized under the laws of Ohio are permitted to deduct government bonds from their resources for the purpose of taxation, there is a gross discrimination in favor of unincorporated banks and bankers.

Exchange Bank v. Hines, 3 Ohio St. 10.

The property of an Ohio corporation being subject to tax, the shares of stock of such corporation in the hands of the owner are exempted from taxation.

Jones v. Davis, 35 Ohio St. 474; Hubbard v. Brush, 61 Ohio St. 252, 55 N. E. 829.

The right to tax the shares of national banks does not rest upon the distinction between shares and property, but upon the direct permission granted by Congress.

Owensboro Nat. Bank v. Owensboro, 173 U. S. 664, 43 L. ed. 850, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 537; State, Fox, Prosecutor, v. Haight, 31 N. J. L. 399; State, Mutual Life & Casualty Ins. Co., Prosecutors, v. Haight, 34 N. J. L. 128; Van Allen v. The Assessors, 3 Wall. 573, sub nom. Churchill v. Utica, 18 L. ed. 229; City Nat. Bank v. Paducah, 2 Flipp. 75, Fed. Cas. No. 2743; Commercial Nat. Bank v. Chambers, 182 U. S. 556, 45 L. ed. 1227, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 863.

Apart from the statutory permission granted by Congress, there is no power in the states to tax the shares of corporations, unless, in estimating the value of such shares, the government bonds owned by the corporation are deducted.

Weston v. Charleston, 2 Pet. 449, 7 L. ed. 481; New York ex rel. Bank of Commerce v. New York City & County Tax Comrs. 2 Black, 620, 17 L. ed. 451; Bank Tax Case, 2 Wall. 200, 17 L. ed. 793; State, Mutual Life & Casualty Ins. Co., Prosecutors, v. Haight, 34 N. J. L. 128; State, North Ward Nat. Bank, Prosecutor, v. Newark, 39 N. J. L. 380.

The deduction by state banks of their holdings in government bonds will not affect the power of the state of Ohio to tax the shares of national banks.

Van Slyke v. State, 23 Wis. 655, Affirmed in 154 U. S. 581, and 20 L. ed. 240, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1168; Frazer v. Siebern, 16 Ohio St. 615.

The term "moneyed capital" as used in the provision of the national banking act that "taxation of national bank shares shall not be at a greater rate than is assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of such state," is taxable moneyed capital.

Mercantile Nat. Bank v. New York, 121 U. S. 138, 30 L. ed. 895, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Exchange Nat. Bank v. Miller, 19 Fed. 373.

Mr. P. H. Kaiser argued the cause, and, with Messrs. O. L. Neff and W. W. Boynton, filed a brief for defendant in error:

A state may tax the shares of stock in an incorporated bank at their full value, notwithstanding the capital of the bank is partially or wholly invested in nontaxable United States bonds.

Van Allen v. The Assessors, 3 Wall. 573, sub nom. Churchill v. Utica, 18 L. ed. 229; New York v. New York City & County Tax & A. Comrs. 4 Wall. 244, 18 L. ed. 344; Frazer v. Siebern, 16 Ohio St. 614.

The scheme of taxation contained in 64 Ohio Laws, 204, is essentially the same as that found in Ohio Rev. Stat. §§ 2762-2769, and was evidently the result of a decision of a United States court regarding the taxation of shares of national banks.

The Supreme Court of the United States had held that the imposing of a tax upon the property owned by a state bank was not the legal equivalent of a tax imposed upon the shares of stock in a national bank.

Van Allen v. The Assessors, 3 Wall. 573, sub nom. Churchill v. Utica, 18 L. ed. 229.

No inference that it is the corporation's property, and not the shares of stock, that is being taxed, can be drawn from the provision of Ohio Rev. Stat. § 2762, requiring shares of stock in an incorporated Ohio bank to be listed and taxed where the bank is located, on the theory that the situs of the shares of stock is at the place of residence of the owners of those shares, as the Ohio supreme court has held that the situs of intangible property is a matter wholly within the control of the legislature.

Hubbard v. Brush, 61 Ohio St. 252, 55 N. E. 829.

The national bank tax decisions, and the law of Congress on which they rest, make it impossible for Ohio to tax shares of stock in national banks if Ohio taxes the taxable corporate property of her state banks. But shares of stock in national banks may be taxed in Ohio.

Chapman v. First Nat. Bank, 56 Ohio St. 310, 47 N. E. 54; Niles v. Shaw, 50 Ohio St. 370, 34 N. E. 162; First Nat. Bank v. Chapman, 173 U. S. 205, 43 L. ed. 669, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407.

These decisions, therefore, are conclusive to the effect that Ohio does tax shares of stock in state banks, and not merely the taxable property owned by those banks.

[113] *Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

The argument of the plaintiff in error claims a greater immunity from taxation for the shares of the trust company than § 5219 of the Revised Statutes of the United States gives to shares in national banks. That section permits the states to assess and tax the shares of shareholders in national banks, with the limitations only "that the taxation shall not be at a greater rate than is assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of such state;" and that the shares of nonresidents "shall be taxed in the city or town where the bank is located, and not elsewhere." The authorized by the statute was a tax on the shares, the property of the shareholder, not a tax on the capital of a bank, the property of the corporation. The validity of the statute was sustained, and interpreting it the court said that it authorized the taxation of such shares, and shares were defined to be the whole interest of the holder without diminution on account of the kind of property which constituted the capital stock of the bank. Of the provisions of the act expressing this purpose and the right of the state to tax, the court said nothing "could be made plainer or more direct and comprehensive." The case was subsequently affirmed. 4 Wall. 244, 259, 18 L. ed. 344, 350; 121 U. S. 138, 30 L. ed. 895, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826.

[114] prayer of the petition* is also opposed by decisions of this court. In Van Allen v. The Assessors, 3 Wall. 573, sub nom. Churchill v. Utica, 18 L. ed. 229, the provision contained in § 5219—then a part of the act of Congress of June 3, 1864—came up for consideration. There was a dispute as to the meaning of the statute, and its validity was also assailed. The court asserted a distinction between the property of the bank and corporation as such, and the property of the shareholders as such, and held that the tax

The plaintiff concedes the distinction between the property of the corporation represented by its capital stock and the property of the shareholders represented by their shares, and bases an argument upon that distinction, and yet excludes from consideration, as immaterial to the questions at issue, the laws of Congress governing the taxation of the shares. The reasoning advanced is that under the laws and Constitution of the state of Ohio the property of the trust company "must be and is subject to taxation;" and "that the sections of the statutes of the state of Ohio which provide the method for determining this tax value, so far as they apply to such trust company, simply prescribe a convenient method for arriving at the true value in money of the property of the corporation." And the deduction is made "that, in determining the value of such property for taxation, the trust company is entitled to deduct from its capital and surplus the value of the United States government bonds then owned by it." In other words, the contention is that the tax on the shares being equivalent to a tax on the property of the trust company, there must be deducted from the value of the shares that portion of the capital of the company invested in United States bonds. [115]

The answer to the contention is obvious and may be brief. The contention destroys the separate individuality recognized, as we have seen, by this court, of the trust company and its shareholders, and seeks to nullify one provision of the Revised Statutes of the United States (§ 5219) by another (§ 3701), between which there is no want of harmony. And what the Constitution of the state of Ohio requires, or what the statutes of the state require as to taxation, must be left to be decided by the supreme court of the state, and whether that court has decided, logically or illogically, that a tax authorized by the laws of the United States on the shares of the company satisfies the Constitution of the state as a tax on the corporation, is not open to our review or objection. The manner of taxation being legal under the statutes of the United States, its effect cannot be complained of in the Federal tribunals. We do not mean to be understood as implying that the plaintiff's view of the Constitution of the state, or of the laws of the state, is correct. The inquiry is not necessary. Accepting such view as correct, plaintiff shows no right, under the Constitution or laws of the United States, which has been violated. Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Justice Harlan did not hear the argument, and took no part in the decision.

EDWARD W. VOIGT, Plff. in Err.,
v.

CITY OF DETROIT and Thomas M. Lucking, Receiver of Taxes of Said City of Detroit.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 115-123.)

Constitutional law—due process of law—assessments for benefits—sufficiency of notice.

1. Failure to provide for any notice or opportunity to be heard on the question, what lands shall be included in an assessment district, or what shall be the maximum aggregate amount to be assessed upon the district, does not make Mich. Comp. Laws 1897, § 3406, unconstitutional on the ground that a person compelled to pay an assessment on his property is denied due process of law, since his constitutional rights in this respect are fully protected by the opportunity which the statute gives him to be heard on the question of the amount of the assessment apportioned to his property, and this the statute limits to the amount of benefits which the property receives from the improvement.
2. A rule or standard of assessment sufficient to satisfy the constitutional guaranty of due process of law is furnished by Mich. Comp. Laws 1897, § 3406, which, as interpreted by the supreme court of the state, provides that a municipal council may assess the whole, or such part as it may deem just, of the cost of a local improvement, upon such lands in the vicinity thereof as are benefited thereby, and limits the amount of the assessment upon each lot to the amount of benefits.

[No. 83.]

Argued December 6, 1901. Decided February 24, 1902.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Michigan to review a decision of NOTE.—As to what constitutes due process of law—see Kuntz v. Sumption (Ind.) 2 L. R. A. 655, and note; Re Gannon (R. I.) 5 L. R. A. 359, and note; Ulman v. Baltimore (Md.) 11 L. R. A. 224, and note; Gilman v. Tucker (N. Y.) 13 L. R. A. 304, and note. And see notes to People v. O'Brien (N. Y.) 2 L. R. A. 258; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436, and Wilson v. North Carolina ex rel. Caldwell, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

On notice and hearing required to constitute due process of law—see notes to Kuntz v. Sumption (Ind.) 2 L. R. A. 657; Chauvin v. Valiton (Mont.) 3 L. R. A. 194, and Ulman v. Baltimore (Md.) 11 L. R. A. 225.

As to the necessity of special benefit to sustain assessments for local improvements—see Re Madera Irrig. Dist. Bonds (Cal.) 14 L. R. A. 755, and note.

184 U. S.

that court affirming a judgment sustaining a demurrer to a bill in equity for an injunction against the sale of lands for an assessment for a city improvement. Affirmed.

See same case below, 123 Mich. 547, 82 N. W. 253.

Statement by Mr. Justice McKenna:

*This is a bill in equity brought by plaintiff in error in the circuit court for Wayne county, Michigan, to restrain the sale of his lands for an assessment levied by the city of Detroit for city improvements, on the ground that the law under which the assessment was imposed is repugnant to the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, and that the assessment, therefore, puts a cloud upon plaintiff's title. A demurrer was filed to the bill by defendants, which was sustained, and the bill dismissed. That action was affirmed by the supreme court of the state. 123 Mich. 547, 82 N. W. 253. A writ of error was then allowed by the chief justice of the state, and the case brought here.

The bill alleged that plaintiff was the owner of certain lots (describing them), which were a part of the subdivision of the "Voigt Park Farm," a plat of which had been made and recorded by plaintiff. Upon the plat was designated a street called "Second avenue," and to extend that street proceedings were instituted, which resulted in a verdict opening the same as a public necessity. Damages were awarded for the property taken to the amount of $73,732.68.

The verdict was confirmed by the court, and the judgment of confirmation was transmitted to the common council of the city, and was referred to the committee on street openings. The committee reported, recommending that $49,155.12 of the award be assessed on a local assessment district and the balance be paid by the city. A resolution was then adopted by the common council fixing and determining the assessment district, and including therein the property of plaintiff. The resolution recited "that it is hereby determined that the sum of $49,155.12 is a just proportion of the compensation awarded by the jury for the property taken for said improvement which should be paid by the owners" of the property included in said assessment district; and it was further resolved that said amount be assessed and levied upon the several parcels of said property by the board of assessors of the city. It was also alleged that *plaintiff in error "had no notice of the intention of said common council to impose and have assessed upon a local assessment district a part of the damages awarded by the jury in said condemnation proceedings, and no notice to appear before said council or any committee thereof in relation to the matter of determining the limits of such district and the amount to be assessed thereon, and that he was given no opportunity to appear and be heard before said common council or any committee thereof with reference thereto."

An assessment roll was subsequently prepared, "being street assessment roll No. 111," and confirmed by the common council. By the assessment roll the sums assessed against the property of plaintiff aggregated the sum of $9,957. The roll was placed in the hands of the defendant, Thomas M. Lueking, receiver of taxes of the city, for collection, and plaintiff notified of the assessment against his property, and payment of the amount assessed was demanded. And it is alleged that the receiver will, unless restrained, advertise and sell plaintiff's property for the amount assessed thereon.

The condemnation proceedings were instituted and conducted under the provisions of § 3406 of the Compiled Laws of the state of Michigan, and it is alleged those provisions violate the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, in that they deprive plaintiff of his property without due process of law, for the following reasons:

"1. Because said law does not provide for giving to the property owners interested any notice of the proceedings of the common council for the determination of the limits of the local assessment district, and the amount or proportion of the award of the jury to be assessed thereon, and does not provide for the giving to the property owners interested notice of any hearing by such common council as to the amount of land to be included in such assessment district and as to the amount or proportion of such award to be assessed thereon.

"2. Because said law does not fix the basis upon which or the standard by which the common council are to determine what is the just proportion of the compensation awarded by the jury to be assessed upon the assessment district.

[118] "3. Because the said law does not require that the amount of the award of the jury which the common council may order to be assessed upon such assessment district shall not exceed the total amount of the benefits derived by the lands in said district from the improvement to pay the expense of which such award was made.

"That the proceedings of said common council, hereinbefore set forth, in determining said assessment district and the amount to be assessed upon it, are invalid for the reasons aforesaid, and for the further reason that it does not appear by the resolution fixing said district and determining the amount to be assessed thereon upon what basis or standard or by what method the council determined the proportion of the award to be assessed upon said district, or that the amount to be assessed did not exceed the total amount of benefits derived by the property to be assessed from the improvement."

Mr. Hinton E. Spalding argued the cause, and, with Mr. Hoyt Post, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Parties whose property is to be taken under summary tax proceedings are entitled as of right to be heard at some stage of the proceedings before the tax shall become an established charge against them or their property.

Thomas v. Gain, 35 Mich. 155, 24 Am. Rep. 535.

The decision in Norwood v. Baker, 172 U. S. 269, 43 L. ed. 443, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187, was based on the violation of the principle of assessing without a hearing.

While in questions of general taxation the legislature has absolute discretion in fixing the amount of revenue and the sources from which it is to be derived, yet, before a tax can become an established charge against an individual, he has a constitutional right to be heard on all matters by which he is peculiarly affected,—for example, the valuation of his property.

Cooley, Taxn. 361-363.

And it is for this reason that the distinction is taken on the right of hearing between specific taxes and those based on valuation.

Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 709, 28 L. ed. 572, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663.

Where the legislature delegates to a board or officer a duty involving discretion and affecting individual rights, notice is required, though the legislature itself might have acted without.

Re Curren, 25 Misc. 432, 54 N. Y. Supp. 917; Parsons v. District of Columbia, 170 U. S. 45, 42 L. ed. 943, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 521; Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 345, 31 L. ed. 763, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. § 802a; Fallbrook Irrig. Dist. v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 112, 41 L. ed. 369, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56; French v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 181 U. S. 324, 45 L. ed. 879, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625.

Due process of law "must be adapted to the end to be attained; and wherever it is necessary for the protection of the parties it must give them an opportunity to be heard respecting the justice of the judgment sought."

Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 708, 28 L. ed. 572, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663.

Hearing is equally needful for protection, whether private rights are to be affected by the decision of a common council, or by that of a purely administrative board or officer.

Spring Valley Waterworks v. Schottler, 110 U. S. 347, 28 L. ed. 173, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48.

Special benefit is the constitutional limit of special assessment.

Norwood v. Baker, 172 U. S. 269, 43 L. ed. 443, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187.

Mr. C. D. Joslyn argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error:

The fixing of an assessment district and the determination of the gross amount of the tax to be spread upon that district are public questions, in the consideration of which the individual taxpayer has no right to take part or be heard.

Paulsen v. Portland, 149 U. S. 30, 37 L. ed. 637, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750.

The statute under which the assessment was made gives the taxpayer an opportunity ty to be heard on all questions which concern him individually.

Beccher v. Detroit, 92 Mich. 268, 52 N. W. 731.

The fact that the same court had already affirmed the doctrine "that parties whose property is to be taken under summary tax proceedings are entitled of right to be heard at some stage in the proceedings before the tax shall become an established charge against them or their property" adds force to this conclusion.

Thomas v. Gain, 35 Mich. 164, 24 Am. Rep. 535.

Mr. Timothy E. Tarsney also argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error:

A property owner is not entitled to notice of the fixing of the assessment district and of the amount to be apportioned upon such district, and what portion of the award shall be apportioned to such district, and what portion to the city at large.

Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 345, 31 L. ed. 763, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921; Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 26 L. ed. 238; Walston v. Nevin, 128 U. S. 578, 32 L. ed. 544, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; Williams v. Eggleston, 170 U. S. 305, 42 L. ed. 1047, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Parsons v. District of Columbia, 170 U. S. 45, 42 L. ed. 943, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 521; Wight v. Davidson, 181 U. S. 371, 45 L. ed. 900, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616.

[118] *Mr. Justice McKenna, after stating the case, delivered the opinion of the court:

The proceedings in the case were had under the provisions of an act of the state of Michigan entitled "An Act to Authorize Cities and Villages to Take Private Property for the Use or Benefit of the Public, and to Repeal Act No. 26, Public Acts of 1882." This act is reproduced in the Compiled Laws of Michigan of 1897 as §§ 3392-3415.

The particular provisions attacked are contained in § 3406 (§ 15 of the original act), and are as follows:

"When the verdict of the jury shall have been finally confirmed by the court, and the time in which to take an appeal has expired, or, if an appeal is taken, on the filing in the [119] court below *of a certified copy of the order of the supreme court affirming the judgment of confirmation, it shall be the duty of the clerk of the court to transmit to the common council, board of trustees, or board of supervisors, a certified copy of the verdict of the jury, and of the judgment of confirmation, and of the judgment, if any, of affirmance; and thereupon, the proper and necessary proceedings, in due course, shall be taken for the collection of the sum or sums awarded by the jury. If the common council, or board of trustees, or board of supervisors believe that a portion of the city, village, or county in the vicinity of the proposed improvement will be benefited by such improvement, they may, by an entry in their minutes, determine that the whole or any just proportion of the compensation awarded by the jury shall be assessed upon the owners or occupants of real estate deemed to be thus benefited; and thereupon they shall, by resolution, fix and determine the district or portion of the city [or] village or county benefited, and specify the amount to be assessed upon the owners or occupants of the taxable real estate therein. The amount of the benefit thus ascertained shall be assessed upon the owners or occupants of such taxable real estate, in proportion, as nearly as may [be], to the advantage which such lot, parcel, or subdivision is deemed to acquire by the improvement. The assessment shall be made and the amount levied and collected in the same manner and by the same officers and proceeding, as near as may be, as is provided in the charter of the municipality for assessing, levying, and collecting the expense of a public improvement when a street is graded. The assessment roll containing said assessments, when ratified and confirmed by the common council, board of trustees, or board of supervisors, shall be final and conclusive, and prima facie evidence of the regularity and legality of all proceedings prior thereto, and the assessment therein contained shall be and continue a lien on the premises on which the same is made until payment thereof. Whatever amount or portion of such awarded compensation shall not be raised in the manner herein provided shall be assessed, levied, and collected upon the taxable real estate of the municipality, the same as other general taxes are assessed and collected in such city, village, *or county. At [120] any sale which takes place of the assessed premises, or any portion thereof, delinquent for nonpayment of the amount assessed and levied thereon, the city [or] village or county may become a purchaser at the sale."

184 U. S.

Plaintiff in error makes two objections to the law:

"First. That it does not afford to the property owner notice and opportunity of hearing upon the questions of what lands, if any, are specially benefited by the improvement, and therefore to be included in the assessment district, and what is the amount of the special benefit, and therefore the maximum amount to be paid by the district.

"Second. That it does not require the amount imposed upon the district to be limited to the amount of special benefit."

The common council proceeded as required by the ordinance. They determined that a portion of the city was benefited by the improvement, created a district of the property benefited, determined also that $49,155.12 was a just proportion of the compensation awarded by the jury to be assessed upon the property owners of the district created, and directed the board of assessors to make the assessment. The assessment roll was subsequently made out and was ratified and confirmed by the council. The assessment against the property of plaintiff in error was nearly $10,000.

Passing on the ordinance the supreme court said: "No provision is made for a notice to property owners of a time and place of hearing upon either the question of fixing a taxing district or the question of the amount of the award to be spread thereon." But the court observed that such notices were not necessary to vindicate the statute from the charge of being unconstitutional, because "the statute provides for a hearing in relation to the proportion each piece of property shall bear to the whole cost of the improvement, and the proper notice of this hearing was given." And further:

"When the proceeding has reached that stage where it becomes necessary to decide what proportion of the cost of the proposed improvement shall be assessed to any given description of land, there must be an opportunity given to the owner of the land to be heard upon that question.

[121] *"There is no claim in the bill that complainant's property is not benefited by the proposed improvement, in excess of the amount assessed; nor is there any claim that he was not allowed to be heard in relation to the amount which should be assessed against his property, thus avoiding the difficulties found in the cases cited by the counsel for complainant. We do not think it can be said that complainant's property is taken without due process of law. This statute has been construed in Beecher v. Detroit, 92 Mich. 268, 52 N. W. 731, and Smith v. Detroit, 120 Mich. 572, 79 N. W. 808, and the action taken by the common council thereunder upheld."

It was urged by plaintiff in error in the supreme court of the state, as it is now urged here, that—

"The act is bad because it does not fix any rule or standard by which the council are to determine the just proportion of the award of the jury to be assessed upon the district, nor limit the total assessment of the district to the amount of its benefits.

"The constitutional limit of the amount to be imposed upon the district is the total benefit to the district. The law might therefore permit the council, when, in their judgment, a portion of the city in the vicinity of the improvement is benefited thereby, to determine the amount of such benefit and to require a just proportion of the compensation awarded by the jury, not exceeding the total benefit, to be assessed upon such local district. This act contains no such limitation. The council are empowered, when they believe that a local district is benefited, to assess what in their judgment is a just proportion of the whole award upon the district, without requiring that proportion to be limited by the amount of benefit."

To the contention the supreme court of the state replied:

"We do not think this is a fair construction of the language of the statute. Before the council can create the district at all they must believe that a portion of the city in the vicinity of the proposed improvement will be benefited by such improvement, and then provide for an apportionment of the compensation awarded by the jury upon the property deemed to be benefited. 'The amount of the benefit thus ascertained shall be assessed upon the owners or occupants of such taxable real estate *in proportion, as [122] nearly as may [be], to the advantage which such lot, parcel, or subdivision is deemed to acquire by the improvement.' We think this language makes it clear that the amount of tax which may be assessed upon the district or upon any given parcel of land cannot exceed the benefit. Provision is then made for the assessment, levy, and collection of the tax."

The law, then, as we understand the decision of the supreme court of the state, provides for the formation of a district in the vicinity of the proposed improvement, the limits of the district to be determined by the benefits derived from that improvement, and further provides that the common council shall determine what proportion of the cost of the improvement ("compensation awarded by the jury") shall be assessed upon the owners of the real estate benefited. The language of the statute is: "The amount of the benefit thus ascertained shall be assessed upon the owners or occupants of such taxable real estate, in proportion, as nearly as may [be], to the advantage which such lot, parcel, or subdivision is deemed to acquire by the improvement."

It would be difficult to find any provision fairer than this in purpose and which so essentially satisfies every requirement of due process of law. And such purpose cannot be defeated if a hearing to the property owner can prevent defeat. He is given a thoroughly efficient opportunity to be heard to test the legality of the charge upon him. And it is only with the charge upon him that he is concerned, and of that alone can he complain. In the legality of that charge is necessarily involved the legality of all which precedes it and of which it is the consequence. The supreme court of the state decided, as we have seen, "that the amount of the taxes which may be assessed upon the district or upon any given parcel of land cannot exceed the benefits." On the hearing given, therefore, the property owner can show a violation of the rule, if a violation there be, and the showing will take his land out of the district and relieve it from the tax.

The contentions of plaintiff in error seem to be based on the assumption that a property owner must have notice of every step of the proceedings. Such assumption is untenable. *Weyerhaeuser v. Minnesota, 176 [123] U. S. 550, 44 L. ed. 583, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485, and cases cited; King v. Portland, 184 U. S. 61, ante, 431, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 290.

Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Justice Harlan did not hear the argument and took no part in the decision.

UNITED STATES, Appt.,

v.

BYRON BARLOW, James E. Blackwell, and James M. Dougan, Partners as Byron Barlow & Co.

BYRON BARLOW, James E. Blackwell,
and James M. Dougan, Partners as Byron Barlow & Co., Appts.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 123-140.)

Contracts—public works—conclusiveness of decision as to quality by engineer in charge—extra work.

1. Approval, by the engineer in charge of the work of constructing a dry dock for the United States, of the quarry from which the sandstone for the ashlar was to be taken, is not made final by the contract provision that such stone must be "of quality approved by the engineer," so as to forestall the latter's judgment of the stone actually furnished, or the judgment of any "other competent officer or person or persons" who, under the contract, might be designated by the Navy Department, with power to inspect or reject any material deemed unsuitable for the purpose intended; but the decision of such engineer as to quality is only final as to stone actually cut and delivered.
2. The Secretary of the Navy may direct or consent to a change in a contract for the construction of a dry dock for the United States, which he was authorized by law to construct, although such contract provides that changes can only be made upon written order of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, as, under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 420, the duties of the bureaus of the Navy Department are performed under his control, and their orders are considered as emanating from him, and have "full force and effect as such."
3. An order of the Secretary of the Navy directing contractors, against their protest, to sink by the "water-jet system" the piles required in the construction of a dry dock for the United States, is not a "change or modification" within the meaning of the contract, which will preclude the contractors from recovering the expense incurred in the unsuccessful experiment with such system because not agreed upon in writing by the parties.
4. The expense caused to contractors engaged in the construction of a dry dock for the United States, by the suspension of regular work, due to an unsuccessful experiment with the "water-jet system" in driving piles, undertaken against their protest, in obedience to an improper order of the Secretary of the Navy, is properly allowed as for extra work, as well as the expenditure in the experiment.
5. The additional cost to contractors engaged in the construction of a dry dock for the United States, of additions required by the Navy Department to be made in correcting a mistake in the performance of the contract, which had no relation to such mistake, but would have been required irrespective thereof, is properly allowed as for extra work.
6. A claim as for extra work, of the additional cost to contractors engaged in a public work, of replacing defective work at the command of the engineer in charge, which has been approved and accepted by his predecessor, will be disallowed, where the contract provides that all labor and materials shall be of the best kind and quality, and subject, not only to the approval of the engineer at a particular time, but to the approval of any engineer subsequently appointed, with full power to reject any material or work which he may deem unsuitable for the purpose intended, and to cause any inferior work to be taken down and satisfactorily replaced at the contractors' expense.

[Nos. 127 and 128.]

Argued January 23, 1902. Decided February 24, 1902.

CROSS APPEALS from the Court of Claims to review a judgment for petitioners for extra work done and extra materials furnished under a contract with the United States. Reduced and affirmed.

See same case below, 35 Ct. Cl. 514.

Statement by Mr. Justice McKenna:

These are cross appeals. The appellees in No. 127, appellants in No. 128, filed three separate petitions against the United States in the court of claims for extra work done and extra materials furnished under a contract with the United States. The petitions were consolidated and tried as one case. On some of the claims the decision was in favor of petitioners, and on others in favor of the United States.

*The claimants entered into a contract [124] with the United States for the construction of a dry dock at Puget sound, in the state of Washington. The contract was in writing, and was very full. There are only a few of its provisions in controversy, and those only need to be quoted:

"First. The constructors will . . . construct and complete, ready to receive vessels, a dry dock, to be located at the place shown on a plan accompanying this contract, at the naval station, Puget sound, Washington; and will, at their own risk and expense, furnish and provide all labor, materials, tools, implements, and appliances of every description—all of which shall be of the best kind and quality adapted for the work as described in the specifications—necessary or requisite in and about the construction of said dry dock and the caisson, pumping machinery, pump house, culverts, and all other accessories and appurtenances, in accordance with the aforesaid plans and specifications, subject to the approval of the civil engineer, or such other competent officer or person or persons as may for that purpose be designated by the party of the second part; it being further mutually stipulated and agreed that the officer or officers, person or persons, thus designated shall and may, from time to time during the progress of the work, inspect all material furnished and all work done under this contract, with full power to reject any material or work, in whole or in part, which he or they may deem unsuitable for the purpose or purposes intended, or not strict conformity with spirit and intent of this contract and with the aforesaid plans and specifications, and to cause any inferior or unsafe work to be taken down, by and at the expense of the contractors; and that all such rejected material shall be at once removed from the station and replaced by material satisfactory to such inspector, and that all such inferior or unsafe work shall be replaced by satisfactory work, by and at the expense of the contractors. Such inspectors shall at all times during the progress of the work have full access thereto, and the contractors shall furnish them with full facilities for the inspection and superintendence of the same.

NOTE.—On extra work—see notes to Gibson County v. Cincinnati Steam Heating Co. (Ind.) 12 L. R. A. 502, and Ingle v. Jones, 17 L. ed. U. S. 762.

[125] "Seventh. The construction of the said dry dock and its accessories *and appurtenances herein contracted for shall conform in all respects to and with the plans and specifications aforesaid, which plans and specifications are hereto annexed, and shall be deemed and taken as forming a part of this contract, with the like operation and effect as if the same were incorporated herein. No omission in the plans or specifications of any detail, object, or provision necessary to carry this contract into full and complete effect, in accordance with the true intent and meaning hereof, shall operate to the disadvantage of the United States, but the same shall be satisfactorily supplied, performed, and observed by the contractors, and all claims for extra compensation by reason of, or for or on account of, such extra performance, are hereby, and in consideration of the premises, expressly waived; and it is hereby further provided, and this contract is upon the express condition, that the said plans and specifications shall not be changed in any respect, except upon the written order of the Bureau of Yards and Docks; and that if at any time it shall be found advantageous or necessary to make any change or modification in the aforesaid plans and specifications, such change or modification must be agreed upon in writing by the parties to the contract, the agreement to set forth fully the reasons for such change, and the nature thereof, and the increased or diminished compensation, based upon the estimated actual cost thereof which the contractors shall receive, if any: Provided, That whenever the said changes increase or decrease the cost by a sum exceeding five hundred dollars ($500) the actual cost thereof shall be determined by a board of naval officers appointed for the purpose, and the contractors shall be bound by the determination of said board, or a majority thereof, as to the amount of increased or diminished compensation they shall be entitled to receive in consequence of such change or changes: And provided also, That no further payment shall be made unless such supplemental or modified agreement shall have been signed before the obligation arising from such change or modification was incurred, and until after its approval by the party of the second part: And provided further, That no change herein provided for shall in any manner affect the validity of this contract.

*"Eighth. The aforesaid dry dock and its [126] accessories and the appurtenances and each and every part thereof, shall be constructed of approved materials and in a thoroughly substantial and workmanlike manner, in accordance with the true intent, meaning, and spirit of the contract, plans, and specifications, to the satisfaction of the party of the second part.

"Fourteenth. It is expressly understood, covenanted, and agreed by and between the parties to the contract, that if any doubts or disputes as to the meaning or requirements of anything in the contract, or if any discrepancy appear between the aforesaid plans and specifications and this contract, the matter shall be at once referred for the consideration and decision of the chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, and his decision thereon shall be final, subject, however, to the right of the contractors to appeal from such decision to the Secretary of the Navy, who, in case of such appeal, shall be furnished by the contractors with a full and complete statement of the grounds of their appeal, in writing, and shall thereupon take such action in the premises as, in his judgment, the rights and interest of the respective parties to this contract shall require, and the parties of the first part hereby bind themselves and their heirs and assigns, and their personal and legal representatives, to abide by his, the said Secretary's, decision in the premises."

The specifications referred to in the contract contain the following provision:

"The ashlar must be of granite or sandstone, of quality approved by the engineer. All stones must be hard, clean, and free from seams and imperfections, and of good bed and build. They must be laid true on their natural beds, and without pinning."

The largest item in the contentions of the parties arises on that provision of the specifications.

The court found that a bid based on the use of sandstone was accepted, and that shortly after the inception of the work the claimants tendered to U. S. G. White, civil engineer in charge of the work, a sample of the sandstone which was proposed to be used in the ashlar of the dock, and offered at the *same time to exhibit to him the [127] quarry from which the stone was taken. Early in the spring of 1893 the engineer visited the quarry, satisfied himself by certain inspections (which are detailed in the findings) of the quality of the stone, observed its satisfactory use elsewhere, and made numerous examinations with a glass magnifying six or eight diameters, looking to the detection of any mica or other substances in its composition, and found none, the texture appearing uniform and good under the glass, and he subsequently made a test to determine the percentage of absorption. As the result of this examination he approved the sandstone from the Tenino quarry, and informed the claimants that the same would be accepted for all work under the contract.

On May 4, 1893, the claimants (appellees), relying on the assurance of the engineer, entered into a contract "with the owners of the quarry to furnish them from said quarry all of the sandstone required for the work." By the contract (which is set out in full in the findings) the Tenino Stone Quarry Company covenanted to furnish and deliver "all of the sandstone required for the stone entrance of the United States dry dock, Puget sound, Washington, according to drawings and schedules of courses, numbers, and sizes furnished by the parties of the second part, and which form a part of this contract, for the sum of forty (40) cents per cubic foot, and all of the stone for the boiler and pump house trimmings for the sum of fifty-five (55) cents per cubic foot." And it was covenanted "that the stone shall be Tenino bluestone of good, even, regular texture, of quality approved and acceptable to the civil engineer United States Navy, in charge of construction." Also that "payments of 90 per cent to be made monthly for all stone delivered the previous month upon acceptance, approval, and estimate of the civil engineer. United States Navy, in charge of construction, and as soon as payment is received therefor from the government by the parties of the second part, and the remaining 10 per cent upon completion of the setting of the stonework and upon the approval and acceptance of the stone by the said civil engineer, United States Navy."

[128] Afterwards the claimants entered into a contract with Albert* and Lewis Beaudette, stonecutters, to cut the stone. Subsequently 2,377 cubic feet of stone arrived at the site of the dock, which amounted to $1,545.05 at 65 cents per foot, and was included in the vouchers rendered by claimants in the month of June, 1893, to which the following certificates, signed by the engineer officially, were annexed:

"Having fully examined the labor and materials above charged, I certify that they are of good quality and in all respects in conformity with the written contract of date October 29, 1892."

"Received the above labor and materials in good order at Puget Sound Naval Station this 1st day of July, 1893."

The amount rendered by the claimants, which included the said sum $1,545.05, was approved by the commandant, John C. Morong, July 8, 1893. The Navy Department struck out the item for $1,545.05 on account of a communication from the Tacoma Trades Council of the State of Washington, complaining of the quality of the stone. A report on the quality of the stone was called for from the commandant, and the latter in turn called for a report from the engineer in charge. The engineer reported favorably on the quality of the stone, and attached to his report letters from the chief engineer of the Northern Pacific Railroad and others. The commandant accepted the report as his own, and forwarded it to the Navy Department.

184 U. S.

June 14, 1893, the claimants addressed a letter to the Department describing the qualities of the stone, and stated the protest against it was prompted by a "spirit of boycotting."

On the 21st of August, 1893, the claimants sent a letter to the engineer in charge, including their bill for the sandstone, and reciting the circumstances which led to its selection, and insisted "on immediate payment for said stone and the bureau's decision as to the remaining stone."

On the 31st day of August, 1893, the chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks announced by letter to the commandant of the Puget Sound Naval Station that the Tenino stone would not be accepted as material for construction, and on the 8th of September, 1893, the engineer in charge notified the claimants of this decision.

*Upon being informed of this decision the [129] claimants protested against the requirement, but offered stone from Sueia island, and also from Dog Fish point, which was accepted and used in the construction of the dock.

Upon their tendering such stone to the civil engineer in charge, he wrote them under date of March 29, 1894:

Messrs. Byron Barlow & Co.

Charleston, Washington,

Gentlemen:—

The receipt of your favor of yesterday is acknowledged, and in reply would say that the stones referred to therein, having been approved by the bureau, will be accepted by me, subject to inspection under such specifications as I may be furnished with by the bureau.

2. The specifications forming a part of your contract being of no effect under existing circumstances, I have asked for such specifications as will doubtless be furnished therewith before any stone will be delivered here.

Very respectfully,

U. S. G. White,

Civil Engineer, U. S. Navy, in Charge of Construction.

Upon receiving the communication in regard to the quality of the Tenino stone the Navy Department, through the Bureau of Yards and Docks, instituted an examination into the qualities of the stone and its fitness, "with the result that said Navy Department, through the chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, reached the conclusion that said Tenino sandstone was not fit and suitable for the purposes to which it was proposed to use said stone; that said stone did not fulfil the requirements of the contract and specifications as above recited; that it was not a hard stone, nor a clean stone, nor free from imperfections; that its absorbent qualities were too high; that its crushing strength was too low, and that it was in many essential particulars totally unfit and unsuitable and undesirable for the use in the ashlar of this dry dock; and thereupon, to wit, on the 29th day of August, 1894, the contractors were notified of this decision of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, and were required to furnish other and better sandstone. From this decision of the chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks the *claimants appealed to the Secretary of the Navy, who concurred in the opinion of the said chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, and concurred in his order requiring a different and better sandstone. The tests and analyses of said Tenino sandstone were made from samples furnished to the Bureau of Yards and Docks by the contractors and by the commandant of the Puget Sound Station. The delay in arriving at the ultimate determination to require a better quality of sandstone, which was reached on the 24th of August, 1894, was partly caused by the fact that the claimants were in correspondence with the Secretary of the Navy in an endeavor to persuade him to accept said Tenino sandstone. The tests and analyses of said stone, as above recited, were made promptly."

And it was found by the court:

"The amount of Tenino sandstone quarried, cut, and delivered was 2,349 cubic feet, amounting, at 65 cents a cubic foot, to $1,526.85.

"The claimants had also, before receiving notice of the rejection of the Tenino sandstone by the Bureau of Yards and Docks, caused to be quarried and cut, but not transported, 7,280 cubic feet, amounting, at 65 cents a foot, less the cost of transportation, 10½ cents a foot, 54½ cents a foot, to $3,967.60, making a total for stone actually quarried and cut, and part of which was delivered, of $5,494.45. That sum, however, has not been paid by the claimants to the owners of the said Tenino stone quarry, nor does it appear that any action or suit has ever been brought against the said claimants for said sum of money.

"The total amount expended by the claimants for furnishing, delivering, and cutting the stone which actually went into the construction of said dry dock from Sucia island and Dog Fish point, as aforesaid, was $23,556.23.

"If they had been allowed to furnish Tenino stone they could have done so at a cost of $17,948.80. The additional cost, therefore, to the claimants of furnishing the stone which they did furnish, over and above what it would have cost them to furnish the Tenino stone, is the difference between the two sums last named, amounting to $15,607.43." [35 Ct. Cl. 514.]

In the execution of the contract claimants made a mistake in *the cutting off of certain piling, which mistake could be corrected in two ways. One of the ways was accepted by the Navy Department and executed by the claimants as required, but claimants were also required to make some additions which "had no relation to the error which had been made in the original construction of the sheet piling, but would have been required irrespectively of any such error having been made. The additional cost to the contractors amounted to $59.30." (Finding IX.)

It was discovered during the progress of the work that the soil at the bottom of the dock was of a very tenacious and unyielding character, so as to be difficult of penetration for piles driven by the ordinary drop-hammer process, and was so reported by the contractors.

It was stated, on the 15th of February, 1894, that penetration was from 8 to 10 feet, and while the Bureau of Yards and Docks thought this might be satisfactory, yet the bureau also thought that the piles should be driven, if possible, 15 feet below the bottom of the excavation. There was no claim made by the contractors at that time that they could not reach a greater depth than theretofore reported. After some correspondence the bureau telegraphed definite instructions to accept no piles driven to a less depth than 15 feet. The contractors made no attempt to show that this could not be done, but employed experts to give an opinion, after tests upon the piles driven, that the bureau was wrong. "In view of these facts, the Secretary of the Navy, on the 21st day of May, 1894, and upon the occasion of a visit to said dock by that official, verbally authorized and directed the contractors to sink the piles by a method known as the water-jet system; that is to say, by forcing water into the ground by means of a sink pipe operated by the hydraulic system, thus forming a hole into which the pile is set. The contractors objected to and protested against this method of driving the piles upon the ground that it destroyed and weakened the bottom of the pit, and subsequently a board of naval experts was convened for the purpose of reporting upon the advisability of sinking the piles by this system. The board reported adversely to this system, and recommended that *the piles be driven in accordance with [132] the provisions of the contract and by the ordinary drop-hammer process. the piles to be driven to a minimum of 6 feet. The remaining 696 piles, which were driven after this report by the drop-hammer process, reached an average depth of 10 feet 4 inches."

The same board of naval experts, under the direction of the Secretary of the Navy, passed upon the expense caused the contractors by the use of the water-jet system, and recommended an allowance of $1,156.76. The allowance was approved by the Secretary and a voucher drawn therefor; "but when the same came before the Auditor for the Navy Department for audit and before the Comptroller of the Treasury for payment, it was refused, upon the ground that the services required were not extra and additional, but that they were such as the contract contemplated, and upon the further ground that the Secretary of the Navy, under the specific requirements of § 7 of the original contract, had no power or authority to authorize or direct the incurring of this expense unless the cost of the same was first ascertained by a board of officers provided for that purpose before the expense was incurred, and reduced to writing, as required by the 7th clause of the contract. Whereupon the Secretary of the Navy procured the reference of this item to this court under and pursuant to the provisions of Revised Statutes, § 1063." (Finding XI.)

The reasonable value of the work set forth and described in the finding is $1,156.-76.

The foregoing statement of facts is applicable to the appeal of the United States. The findings applicable to the appeal of claimants (No. 128) are given in the opinion.

Mr. George A. King argued the cause, and, with Mr. Rufus H. Thayer, filed a brief for Barlow & Co.:

The decision of the engineer as to quality was final.

United States v. Shrewsbury, 23 Wall. 508, 23 L. ed. 78; Kihlberg v. United States, 97 U. S. 398, 24 L. ed. 1106; Sweeney v. United States, 109 U. S. 618, 27 L. ed. 1053, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344; Kennedy v. United States, 24 Ct. Cl. 122; Ogden v. United States, 9 C. C. A. 251, 13 U. S. App. 615, 60 Fed. 725; Martinsburg & P. R. Co. v. March, 114 U. S. 549, 29 L. ed. 255, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1035; Chicago, S. F. & C. R. Co. v. Price, 138 U. S. 185, 34 L. ed. 917, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 290; Elliott v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 21 C. C. A. 3, 40 U. S. App. 61, 74 Fed. 707.

The subcontractors could not, by bringing actions or recovering judgments against the principal contractors, claimants in this case, either enlarge or restrict the liability of the United States.

Masterton v. Brooklyn, 7 Hill, 61, 43 Am. Dec. 38; Chandler v. United States, 17 Ct. Cl. 1; Hobbs v. McLean, 117 U. S. 567, 29 L. ed. 940, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 870; Price v. Forrest, 173 U. S. 410, 43 L. ed. 749, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434.

Doubtful expressions should be construed most strongly against the government, by which the contract and specifications were drawn.

Simpson v. United States, 31 Ct. Cl. 217, Affirmed in 172 U. S. 372, 43 L. ed. 482, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222.

The Secretary of the Navy had authority by oral direction to vary the terms of a written contract wherein was provided a formal method of varying such contract.

Ford v. United States, 17 Ct. Cl. 60.

A parol contract has been sustained which was made by a mere subordinate with a party with whom the government had no written contract whatever, after the contract had been executed and the government had received the benefit of the services rendered or the supplies furnished.

Clark v. United States, 95 U. S. 539, 24 L. ed. 518.

Expense due to delay in experimentation with water jet was properly allowed.

United States v. Smith, 94 U. S. 214, 24 184 U. S.

L. ed. 115; United States v. Mueller, 113 U. S. 153, 28 L. ed. 946, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 380.

Mr. George A. King filed a separate brief in reply for Barlow & Co.:

Upon all matters arising under the contract, which the engineer had power to decide, there could be no disagreement. His decision upon these subjects was absolutely final and conclusive upon the parties.

Hasbrouck v. Milwaukee, 17 Wis. 266. See also Pashby v. Birmingham, 18 C. B. 2; Mason v. Bridge, 14 Me. 468, 31 Am. Dec. 66.

The submission of a question arising in the progress of the work, to the responsible officer of the government, has been deemed to be the very thing which fixed and determined the liability of the government.

Hawkins v. United States, 96 U. S. 689, 24 L. ed. 607.

Mr. George Hines Gorman argued the cause, and, with Assistant Attorney General Pradt, filed a brief for the United States:

The United States can only be required to make compensation to the contractor for damages which he has actually sustained by its default in the execution of its undertakings to him; but this is the extent of its liability in the court of claims. More than compensation for damages actually sustained can never be awarded against the United States.

United States v. Smith, 94 U. S. 214, 24 L. ed. 115.

If it be contended that the government is given the advantage by the contract, the complete answer is, such is the contract.

Delaware & H. Canal Co. v. Pennsylvania Coal Co. 8 Wall. 276, 19 L. ed. 349; Sun Printing & Pub. Co. v. Moore, 183 U. S. 642, ante, 366, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240.

An express contract and an implied contract cannot exist concerning the same transaction at the same time.

Hawkins v. United States, 96 U. S. 689, 24 L. ed. 607.

The provision of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 3744, requiring the Secretary of the Navy to cause all contracts made by his Department to be reduced to writing and signed by the contracting parties with their names at the end thereof, has been held to be a statute of frauds as clearly as that of 29 Car. II., and contracts not made in conformity with its provisions are absolutely void.

Clark v. United States, 95 U. S. 541, 24 L. ed. 519; South Boston Iron Co. v. United States, 118 U. S. 37, 30 L. ed. 69, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 928; Calvary Cathedral v. United States, 29 Ct. Cl. 269.

A public officer is limited in the exercise of his capacity as an agent of the government by the positive commands of statute law, and can bind the government only when he has express authority to do the very identical thing and to make the very identical promise which he does or makes.

Whiteside v. United States, 93 U. S. 256, 23 L. ed. 884; Story, Agency, 6th ed. 307a; Lee v. Munroe, 7 Cranch, 367, 3 L. ed. 373; Baltimore v. Eschbach, 18 Md. 282; State ex rel. Blakeman v. Hays, 52 Mo. 578; Dela- field v. Illinois, 26 Wend. 228; Baltimore v. Reynolds, 20 Md. 10, 83 Am. Dec. 535.

The promise of a Cabinet officer, or any other agent of the government, to pay money or to obligate the government for the payment of money, if made without authority of law, is absolutely void.

Stansbury v. United States, 8 Wall. 33, 19 L. ed. 315; United States v. Garlinger, 169 U. S. 316, 42 L. ed. 762, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364.

The government does not guarantee the capacity, fidelity, or integrity of its officers or agents, and all persons dealing with them must know at their peril the extent to which they have authority to bind the government, and their ignorance on this subject cannot increase the government's risk.

United States v. Beebe, 180 U. S. 343, 45 L. ed. 563, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 371; Dox v. Postmaster General, 1 Pet. 318, 7 L. ed. 160; McElrath v. United States, 12 Ct. Cl. 201, Affirmed in 102 U. S. 426, 26 L. ed. 189; Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. United States, 164 U. S. 207, 41 L. ed. 405, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Hume v. United States, 132 U. S. 406, 33 L. ed. 393, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 134; Moffat v. United States, 112 U. S. 24, 28 L. ed. 623, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Steele v. United States, 113 U. S. 129, 28 L. ed. 952, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; United States v. Barlow, 132 U. S. 271, 33 L. ed. 346, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77.

Delays incident to the experimentation with the water-jet system do not entitle the claimants to additional or further compensation, but merely entitle them to additional time for the completion of the structure.

United States v. Garlinger, 169 U. S. 316, 42 L. ed. 762, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364.

If the contract as written did not express the intention of the parties, it was the claimants' folly to have signed it.

Brawley v. United States, 96 U. S. 173, 24 L. ed. 624; Simpson v. United States, 172 U. S. 379, 43 L. ed. 484, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222.

[132] *Mr. Justice McKenna, after stating the case as above, delivered the opinion of the court:

The principal claim of appellees and the [133] largest item in the judgment awarded them grows out of the rejection of the Tenino sandstone. That item was based upon the provision in the specifications which required it to be "of quality approved by the engineer." But that provision, it is contended by the United States, must be read and construed with those covenants of the contract which require, (1) that all materials used in the dry dock shall be of the best kind, "subject to the approval of the civil engineer, or such other competent officer or person or persons as may for that purpose be designated by the party of the second part," which officer or persons may, "from time to time during the progress of the work, inspect all material furnished, . . . with full power to reject any material, in whole or in part, which he or they may deem unsuitable for the purpose or purposes intended, or not in strict conformity with the spirit and intention of this contract, and the aforesaid plan and specifications." And the United States also relies upon the covenants contained in the 14th subdivision of the contract set out in the statement of facts.

And we think these provisions are harmonious and determine the rights of the parties. We think, indeed, that the engineer in charge of the work was the appointee of the parties, and that his decision upon the quality of sandstone was final when properly exercised, but it could not be exercised in advance of the work and forestall his judgment of stone furnished or about to be used, or the judgment of any "other competent officer or person or persons" who might be designated by the Navy Department. To so hold would destroy the power reserved by the United States to appoint any competent person to inspect the work and material. The engineer was given power to judge, not a type of stone, but particular stones. It was such stones which were to be "hard, clean, and free from seams and imperfections, and of good bed and build." Such was the power of the engineer in charge, but who should be the "engineer in charge" depended upon the appointment of the Navy Department; and the power of appointment was reserved to be exercised at any time. A useless right if one appointee could anticipate and control the judgment of his successor.

The influence which these considerations have in the interpretation of the contract is [134] not destroyed by answering that every stone from the Tenino quarry might have satisfied every requirement and have been approved by every and any person designated to inspect the work. This, indeed, might be so; but, on the other hand, not one stone might have passed the test. Besides, claimants are not in a position to urge that consideration. Every stone which might be tendered for inspection was subject to be rejected, but claimants seek to recover as for an acceptance. They rely, not upon approval of stones, but upon the approval of the quarry, and they rest the quality of the quarry upon the general inspection of the engineer and certain instances of satisfactory use. In opposition stand the covenants of the contract already mentioned, and the test the Bureau of Yards and Docks made of samples of Tenino stone furnished by claimants. And there is no pretense that the test was unfairly made. It, at least, convinced the bureau that the Tenino stone was not a hard stone, nor a clean stone, nor free from imperfections.

The court of claims did not pass upon the issue raised as to the quality of the stone. It accepted the decision of the engineer as being final as a matter of law. We cannot concur to the full extent of the decision, and must limit, therefore, the recovery of claimants to the price of stone inspected and approved. On this the finding is that "the amount of Tenino sandstone quarried, cut, and delivered was 2,349 cubic feet, amounting, at 65 cents a cubic foot, to $1,526.85."

These views render it unnecessary to consider that provision of the contract which makes the decision of the chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks final, only subject to appeal to the Secretary of the Navy, of "any doubts or disputes as to the meaning or requirement of anything" in the contract.

2. The next item of importance is the expense to which the claimants were subjected in experimenting with the water-jet system. The court found that the experiment was ordered by the Secretary of the Navy against the protest of the claimants, and the board of inspectors found that the cost of the experiment to the claimants was $1,156.76, and recommended the payment of that sum. This action was approved by the [135] Secretary, *and vouchers drawn accordingly. It was refused when it came for audit and payment, because "under the specific requirements of § 7 of the original contract, [he] had no power or authority to authorize or direct the incurring of this expense unless the cost of the same was first ascertained by a board of officers provided for that purpose before the expense was incurred, and reduced to writing, as required by the 7th clause of the contract. Whereupon the Secretary of the Navy procured the reference of this item to this court under and pursuant to the provisions of Revised Statutes, § 1063."

There was certainly nothing in the contract or in the specifications which required the contractors to experiment with the water-jet system. There was nothing in the contract which required them to experiment with ineffectual or detrimental methods. Their obligation was to drive the piles in the construction of the dock to a sufficient depth, and it is not found that the depth attained, when the Secretary of the Navy interfered, was not sufficient. The Bureau of Yards and Docks conceived a greater depth to be necessary, and that it could be attained. Some controversy arose, and there were reports to and correspondence with the Bureau of Yards and Docks, and finally the bureau "telegraphed definite instructions" "to accept no piles driven to a less depth than 15 feet." In view of the facts the Secretary of the Navy, on the occasion of a visit to the dock, "verbally authorized and directed the contractors to sink the piles" by the water-jet system. The contractors protested and predicted failure. Failure occurred and the system was abandoned upon an adverse opinion of its utility given by a board of naval experts.

It is contended by the United States that the direction of the Secretary of the Navy was a change or modification of the contract within the meaning of the 7th subdivision of the contract, and that the Secretary had no power to direct or consent to such change more than the "humblest laborer employed upon the work," and besides, that no such change could be made except by an agreement in writing.

We have no doubt of the power of the Secretary of the Navy. His power is manifest from the contract, and is given by law.

[136] *The duties of the bureaus of the Navy Department are performed under the control of the Secretary of the Navy. Their orders are considered as emanating from him and have "full force and effect as such." Rev. Stat. § 420. And the act of 1891, which provided for the construction of the dry dock, authorized the Secretary of the Navy to have it constructed by contract. He especially stood for the United States in such contract, and was invested with its power, and was charged with the duty of seeing that the dock was adequately constructed.

It is further contended by the government that the experiment with the water-jet system was a "change or modification" of the contract, and because not agreed to in writing by the parties that the expense incurred by the contractors in making the experiment cannot be recovered.

If both contracting parties were individuals, it would easily be seen that subdivision 7 was inserted in the contract for their benefit, to be insisted upon or waived as to them might seem best. What precluded that freedom and useful power to the government? If not precluded it certainly could have been exercised, and, as we have seen, through the Secretary of the Navy. If the power to insert the provision in the contract or to omit it was given, the power to dispense with it was also given, unless it was necessary to be inserted, and could not be dispensed with, on account of some injunction of the law. Such injunction, as we understand counsel, is claimed by virtue of § 3744 of the Revised Statutes, which requires the Secretary of the Navy to cause all contracts made by his department to be reduced to writing and signed by the contracting parties with their names at the end thereof. It is certainly disputable if the requirement of the section applies to alterations, which may become necessary in the progress of work regularly conducted under contract. And this court has held that the requirements of the section did not preclude a recovery for property or services "as upon an implied contract for a quantum meruit." Clark v. United States, 95 U. S. 539, 24 L. ed. 518. But we are not required to decide on this record the question suggested. We do not think that the order of the Secretary of *the Navy directing the experiment with the water-jet system was a "change or modification" of the contract within the sense of subdivision 7. It was an exercise of superintendence and unwarrantable superintendence. The experiment was forced upon the contractors. They were powerless to do anything but protest and yield. The interference with the work of driving the piles by the drop-hammer process was an improper interference, and brings the claim of the contractors within the rule in Clark's Case, 6 Wall. 546, 18 L. ed. 917; Smoot's Case, 15 Wall. 47, 21 L. ed. 110; the case of the Amoskeag Company, 17 Wall. 592, 21 L. ed. 715, and within the ruling of United States v. Smith, 94 U. S. 214, 24 L. ed. 115, where the other cases are cited and approved. By denominating the order of the Secretary as an improper interference, we mean in a legal sense. The facts show that he considered the order as a proper exercise of his authority, and beneficial to the United States. Nor did he intend to be oppressive to the contractors. He subsequently recognized their right to reimbursement for the expenses which they had incurred.

The measure of damages adopted by the court of claims, we think, was correct. The expense caused to the claimants by the suspension of the regular work was as definite and as directly assignable to the action of the Secretary as the expenditure in the experiment.

There was no error in allowing the sum of $59.30 for the extra work set forth in finding IX.

The summary of our views upon the appeal of the United States is that the court of claims erred in allowing the following claims:

Tenino stone quarried and not delivered	$3,967 60
Difference in cost between Tenino stone and that which was furnished	15,607 43
	<hr/>
	$19,575 03

The appeal of the claimants is based on the action of the court of claims in denying recovery for the extra work and materials described in findings VIII. and X.

Those findings are as follows:

[138] *"VIII. The plans for the foundations of the boilers and boiler house were submitted to the civil engineer in charge of the work and approved by him, and the work was then done on said foundations in accordance with the directions of said engineer. The foundations for the boiler house were completed and accepted by said engineer and included in his monthly estimate and paid for. The foundations for the boilers were made in accordance with the drawings so submitted to said engineer, and were completely laid at about the time the engineer first in charge of said work was detached therefrom. Subsequently another engineer was placed in charge of the work. In his opinion the foundations were imperfect and insecure because of defective construction on the part of the claimants, and he required that they be relaid. The claimants, protesting that it was not competent to require them to change the foundations after they had laid the same to the acceptance of the engineer in charge at the time of the original construction, relaid the same in accordance with the direction of the engineer thus subsequently in charge. The matter was subsequently referred to the chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, and he decided that the work was required to be done by the terms of the contract. It does not appear that the claimants appealed to the chief of the bureau before doing the work, or that it was ordered by him.

470

"The total additional cost of said work to the claimants was—

For the extra foundations for the boiler house	$312 12
And for the extra foundations for the boilers	384 56

Making a total of $696 68"

"X. In refilling the dirt after the altars were in place no part of the filling was rammed or sluiced except the clay puddling. This was in accordance with the instructions of the engineer in charge of the work. The claimants discussed the matter with him, and he informed them that it was not required to be rammed or sluiced. He embraced the work done in that way in his monthly estimates, and the claimants received payment for a large portion of the work done in that way at *the contract rate of 'filling and grading per cubic yard, 30 cents.' In the latter part of August, 1894, however, there was a change in the office of engineer in charge of the work for the United States. The new engineer then placed in charge required the claimants to ram or sluice all back fillings. The claimants protested, insisting that the contract did not require anything more than depositing the material and evenly grading the surface to correspond with the grade of the station. The new engineer, however, required all the work to be thoroughly sluiced with water, and all but a small part thoroughly rammed, and the claimants did the work in that way under protest.

"The additional cost to the claimants of doing this work, over and above what would have been required had they not been required to ram or sluice the same, would be 10 cents a yard, making, for 37,227 yards, $3,722.70. The engineer who ordered the work done in the manner stated referred the question of so requiring it, at the request of the claimants, to the chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, and the latter informed said engineer that the Department approved his requirement, for the reason, as shown by the bureau, that the contract plainly required it."

The claims were rightly disallowed. Some of the observations already made apply to them. The contract is very explicit in that all labor and materials "shall be of the best kind and quality adapted for the work," and subject, not only to the approval of the civil engineer at a particular time, but subject to the approval of any engineer subsequently appointed, "with full power to reject any material or work, in whole or in part, which he or they (some other competent officer or person or persons) may deem unsuitable for the purpose or purposes intended. . . . And to cause any inferior or unsafe work to be taken down by, and at the expense of, the contractors, . . . and replaced by material satisfactory to such inspector . . . by and at the expense of the contractors."

In addition to these views, we quote from the opinion of the court of claims as follows:

184 U. S.

[140] "As to the causes of action set forth in findings VIII. and X. the court is of the opinion that the claimants should have submitted the requirements of the engineer in charge to the chief of the bureau before proceeding with the work. They were required to do so by the terms of the contract, and authority to compel them to do additional work was thereby reserved to the chief of the bureau."

Judgment is reduced to the sum of $5,367.96, and for that amount affirmed.

Mr. Justice Brewer and Mr. Justice Peckham dissented.

Justice Harlan did not hear the argument, and took no part in the decision.

UNITED STATES, Appt.,

v.

WILLIAM T. EWING.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 140-151.)

Postmaster's salary — readjustment.

A readjustment of the salary of a postmaster under the acts of Congress of March 3, 1883, chap. 119 (22 Stat. at L. 487) and August 4, 1886 (24 Stat. at L. 256, 307, chap. 903, § 8), when the quarterly returns for a period of two years show that his salary is 10 per cent less than his commissions would have been for that period under the act of June 22, 1854 (10 Stat. at L. 298, chap. 61), must be made to begin with the next succeeding quarter, and cannot apply to the biennial period for which the returns have been made.

[No. 225.]

Argued November 12, 13, 1901. Decided February 24, 1902.

A PPEAL from a judgment of the Court of Claims readjusting the salary of a postmaster. Reversed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The government appeals from a judgment of the court of claims awarding to the petitioner the sum of $1,264.83 upon a readjustment of salary for his services as postmaster at Gadsden, in the state of Alabama, between July 1, 1866, and June 30, 1874. The original petition was filed in October, 1888, in consequence of the passage of the act of March 3, 1883, chap. 119 (22 Stat. at L. 487), which reads as follows:

"That the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to readjust the salaries of all postmasters and late postmasters of the third, fourth, and fifth the terms of § 8 of the act of June 12, 1866, who made sworn returns of receipts and business for readjustment of salary to the Postmaster General, the First Assistant Postmaster General, or the Third Assistant Postmaster General, or who made quarterly returns in conformity to the then existing laws and regulations, showing that the salary allowed was 10 per centum less than it would have been upon the basis of commissions under the act of 1854; such readjustments to be made in accordance with the mode presented in § 8 of the act of June 12, 1866, and to date from the beginning of the quarter succeeding that in which such sworn returns of receipts and business, or quarterly returns were made: Provided, That every readjustment of salary under this act shall be upon a written application signed by the postmaster or late postmaster or legal representative entitled to said readjustment; and that each payment made shall be by warrant or check on the Treasurer or some assistant treasurer of the United States, made payable to the order of said applicant, and forwarded by mail to him at the postoffice within whose delivery he resides, and which address shall be set forth in the application above provided for."

[141] classes, under the classification provided for in the act of July 1, 1864, whose salaries have not heretofore been readjusted under 184 U. S.

The petitioner claimed that by a readjustment of his salary under that act he was entitled to be paid a difference of $1,264.83 between the salary actually paid him and the amount to which he was entitled by reason of such act.

By the act of June 22, 1854 (10 Stat. at L. 298, chap. 61), Congress provided for the compensation of postmasters by allowing them commissions on the postage collected at their respective offices in each quarter of the year, and in due proportion for any period less than a quarter. The compensation awarded was as follows:

On any sum not exceeding $100, 60 per cent;

On any sum over and above $100, and not exceeding $400, 50 per cent;

On any sum over and above $400, and not exceeding $2,400, 40 per cent;

*On all sums over $2,400, 15 per cent. [142]

This method of compensation was changed by Congress by the passage of the act of July 1, 1864. 13 Stat. at L. 335, chap. 197. By that act it was provided that the annual compensation of postmasters should be at a fixed salary in lieu of commissions, the postmasters to be divided into five classes, with compensation respectively as follows:

First class to receive not more than $4,000, nor less than $3,000;

Second class to receive less than $3,000, and not less than $2,000;

Third class to receive less than $2,000, and not less than $1,000;

Fourth class to receive less than $1,000, and not less than $100;

Fifth class to receive less than $100.

The 1st section of the act then proceeds as follows:

"Whenever the compensation of postmasters of the several offices (except the office of New York) for the two consecutive years next preceeding the 1st day of July, 1864, shall have amounted to an average annual sum not less than $3,000, such offices shall be assigned to the first class; whenever it shall have amounted to less than $3,000, but not less than $2,000, such offices shall be assigned to the second class; whenever it shall have amounted to less than $2,000, but not less than $1,000, such offices shall be assigned to the third class; whenever it shall have amounted to less than $1,000, but not less than $100, such offices shall be assigned to the fourth class; and whenever it shall have amounted to less than $100, such offices shall be assigned to the fifth class. To offices of the first, second, and third classes shall be severally assigned salaries, in even hundreds of dollars, as nearly as practicable in amount the same as, but not exceeding, the average compensation of the postmasters thereof for the two years next preceeding; and to offices of the fourth class shall be assigned severally salaries, in even tens of dollars, as nearly as practicable in amount the same as, but not exceeding, such average compensation for the two years next preceeding; and to offices of the fifth class shall be severally assigned *salaries, in even dollars, as nearly as practicable in amount the same as, but not exceeding, such average compensation for the two years next preceeding. Wherever returns showing the average of annual compensation of postmasters for the two years next preceeding the 1st day of July, 1864, shall not have been received at the Post Office Department at the time of adjustment, the same may be estimated by the Postmaster General for the purpose of adjusting the salaries of postmasters herein provided for. And it shall be the duty of the Auditor of the Treasury for the Post Office Department to obtain from postmasters their quarterly accounts with the vouchers necessary to a correct adjustment thereof, and to report to the Postmaster General all failures of postmasters to render such returns within a proper period after the close of each quarter.

"See. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Postmaster General shall review once in two years, and in special cases, upon satisfactory representation, as much oftener as he may deem expedient, and readjust, on the basis of the preceeding section, the salary assigned by him to any office; but any change made in such salary shall not take effect until the first day of the quarter next following such order, and all orders made assigning or changing salaries shall be made in writing and recorded in his journal, and notified to the Auditor for the Post Office Department."

Subsequently by § 8 of the act of June 12, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 59, 60, chap. 114), § 2 of the act of 1864 was amended by adding the following:

"Provided, That when the quarterly returns of any postmaster of the third, fourth, or the fifth class show that the salary allowed is 10 per centum less than it would be on the basis of commissions under the act of 1854, fixing compensation, then the Postmaster General shall review and readjust under the provisions of said section."

The court of claims finds that the petitioner was, as postmaster of Gadsden, Alabama, paid:

"For his services between July 1, 1866, and June 30, 1868, $73 per year, or for two years.....	$146 00
*For his services between July 1, 1868, and June 30, 1870, at $220 per year, or for two years.....	440 00	[144]
For his services between July 1, 1870, and June 30, 1872, at $460 per year, or for two years.....	920 00
For his services between July 1, 1872, and June 30, 1874, at $540 per year, or for two years.....	1,080 00
In addition thereto since said service for the two years between July 1, 1868, and June 30, 1870, $45.95 per year, amounting for the two years to.....	91 90
And for the two years between July 1, 1870, and June 30, 1872, $47.50 per year, amounting for the two years to.....	95 00

Amounting in all to..... $2,772 90

"During his first biennial term his adjusted salary was less than $100.

"During his second, third, and fourth biennial terms his adjusted salary was more than $100 and less than $1,000 per annum.

"III. He made application in writing to the Postmaster General for readjustment and payment of salary (under chapter 119 of the Laws of 1883) for service as postmaster, in accordance with chapter 61 of the Laws of 1854 and § 8 of chapter 114 of the Laws of 1866. This he did prior to January 1, 1887. The Postmaster General thereupon stated plaintiff's account, as shown later in these findings. This statement shows that (if plaintiff be correct in his contention as to the law) his salary for the four biennial terms between July 1, 1866, and June 30, 1874, should have been $4,037.73, whereas he has been paid in all for said terms but $2,772.90; so (if he be correct) there is still due him as readjusted salary $1,264.83."

The court also sets out certain correspondence between its clerk (under its direction) and the Postmaster General in regard *to papers in the Post Office Department, showing or tending to show what action, if any, had been taken by the department on request of petitioner for readjustment of salary under the act of 1883. It does not clearly appear therefrom that Postmaster General Wanamaker, to whom the clerk addressed his communication, had readjusted the salary, but subsequently to the correspondence the court of claims finds, in its 5th finding, that on November 19, 1897, Postmaster General Gary certified and returned to the court of claims a readjustment of the petitioner's salary and documents relating to the action of the Post Office Department in this and similar cases, and the court in such 5th finding concludes thus:

"If the foregoing readjustment of Postmaster General Wanamaker is the readjustment prescribed and intended by the statutes therein referred to, there is no balance of salary remaining due the plaintiff. If the readjustment hereinafter set forth of Postmaster General Gary is the readjustment prescribed and intended by the said statutes, there remains due to the plaintiff the sum of $1,264.83."

But the court, by its conclusion of law, finds that no legal readjustment of salary was made by Postmaster General Wanamaker, and that the readjustment made by Postmaster General Gary was valid under the statute, and therefore ordered judgment for $1,264.83.

Assistant Attorney General Pradt argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant.

Mr. Harvey Spalding argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee.

Contentions of counsel sufficiently appear in the opinion.

[145] Mr. Justice Peckham*, after stating the above facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

The question at issue between the parties is as to the proper construction of the act of Congress approved March 3, 1883, and which is set forth in the foregoing statement of facts. It is contended, on the part of the petitioner, that when application is made to the Postmaster General for a readjustment of salary between the period from [146] 1864 to 1874 that it is his duty, *under the statute of 1883, to compare the salary which the petitioner received in each biennial period with what he would have received in commissions on the receipts of his office, as shown by the sworn returns of the receipts and business of such office, under the statute of 1854 during the same term, and if on such comparison it should appear that the salary thus allowed was 10 per cent, or more, less than such commissions, then to readjust the salary for the biennial term by allowing the petitioner the difference between the salary and the commission for that particular term. This has been done by the court of claims in its judgment in this case.

The government, on the other hand, contends that to do so would be a plain violation of the statute, which provides that the readjustments shall be made in accordance with the mode prescribed in § 8 of the act of June 12, 1866, and that they shall date from the beginning of the quarter succeeding that in which such sworn returns of receipts and business or quarterly returns were made. In other words, the petitioner claims that upon a comparison of the actual salary paid him in a two-year period, with what he would have received for the same period upon the basis of commissions on the sum of the quarterly returns for that period, if the salary paid him were 10 per cent less than the commissions, he was entitled to be paid the difference for that particular biennial term, whereas the government contends that by virtue of the statute the readjustment is to date from the immediately succeeding quarter.

Going back to the statute of 1854, providing for compensation by commission, we find the act authorized the Postmaster General to allow the commissions to postmasters at the rates named therein and to be based on the postage collected at their respective offices in each quarter of the year. Then came the act of July 1, 1864, providing for payment to postmasters by salary, and classifying them according to the salary received. There were five classes thus made, and they were arranged at the commencement by reference to the compensation paid to the office for the two years next preceding July 1, 1864. The 2d section of the act provides for a review by the Postmaster General once in two years, and a readjustment of the salaries *on the basis [147] of the preceding section, but any change made in the salary, the statute provided, should not take effect until the first of the quarter next following such order. In special cases, upon satisfactory representation, the Postmaster General might also review and readjust the salary assigned to any office as much oftener than once in two years as he might deem expedient.

Prior to this act of 1864 it will be seen that postmasters received their compensation by commission based upon each quarterly return of the amount of sales made at the particular office, but under the act of 1864, instead of compensation by commission, postmasters were to be paid under that act salaries for two years based upon the average amount of the receipts at their offices, as shown by their quarterly returns for the two years preceding the 1st day of July, 1864, as provided for in the act of June 22, 1854, and this salary was to be reviewed every two years.

Thus, at the end of a biennial period the amount of receipts, as shown by the quarterly returns for the past two years, was taken, and upon that amount the salary for the coming two years was fixed, so that, assuming from 1864 to 1866 the amount of the quarterly receipts made a total of $2,000, that sum would be fixed upon as the salary for the two years from 1866 to 1868. It was obviously an effort to make the compensation by salary equivalent to the compensation by commissions, and this was the way in which it was to be done. It is equally obvious that a failure to attain this result would frequently occur in the practical operation of the act. The amount of the compensation by salary from 1866 to 1868, for instance, fixed by a resort to the quarterly returns for the two years preceding, would, in rapidly growing communities, fail to reach the amount of compensation which the postmasters would have received had it been fixed by commissions for those years, 1866 to 1868.

[148] The amount of the sales of stamps might have quadrupled in those years over the amount of such sales for the period from 1864 to 1866, and yet, as the compensation for the years from 1866 to 1868 was measured by the sales from 1864 to 1866, there was no relief to be had, and the postmaster in such case *would have received less salary than the amount of the compensation he would have received had he been paid by commissions on sales of stamps as under the act of 1854. Such being the obvious result of the act of 1864, the 2d section was amended in 1866, which amendment provided that when the salary allowed as fixed, pursuant to the provisions of the act of 1864, proved to be 10 per cent less than it would have been on the basis of commissions, under the act of 1854, fixing the compensation, then in that event the Postmaster General was directed to review and readjust the salaries under the provisions of that act. And even then the readjustment would not take effect until the first day of the quarter next following the order for the same, as that is the condition of the act of 1864, which is not altered in that respect by the act of 1866. It has been held that under this statute of 1866 no action could be maintained in the court of claims until there had been a readjustment of the salary of the petitioner for the period for which he claimed to recover. United States v. McLean, 95 U. S. 750, 24 L. ed. 579.

The quarterly returns mentioned in the act of 1866 do not refer to any one quarterly return during the biennial term. The question arose in United States ex rel. McLean v. Vilas, 124 U. S. 86, 31 L. ed. 329, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 422, when, referring to the amendment of 1866 to the act of 1864, the court, through Mr. Justice Miller, said: "What quarterly returns are here meant, as showing that the salary is 10 per cent less than the commissions under the act of 1854? The argument of counsel is, that when any one quarterly return shall show this condition of affairs, the Postmaster General, on the request of the postmaster, must make a readjustment; but such is not the language of the statute. The expression used is 'when the quarterly returns' shall show this, and inasmuch as the law had already established that readjustments must be made on the basis of the quarterly returns for two years, it is reasonable to suppose that that was the meaning of Congress in this proviso."

Under such a construction, the readjustment could not be had until eight quarterly returns of the biennial period had been made, so that it would appear therefrom that the salary allowed during that term [149] was at least 10 per cent less than *it would have been if fixed on the basis of commissions under the act of 1854, in which case the Postmaster General was directed to review and readjust salaries under the provisions of said section, but the change was not to take effect until the first day of the quarter next following such order of the Postmaster General. Then comes the act of 1883, which also provides for a case for readjustment of salary where sworn returns of receipts and business have been made, or where quarterly returns, in conformity to the then existing regulations, have been made, showing that the salary allowed was 10 per cent less than it would have been upon the basis of commissions under the act of 1854. In such case the Postmaster General was authorized and directed to readjust those salaries in accordance with the mode prescribed in § 8 of the act of June 12, 1866, already referred to.

The sworn quarterly returns referred to in the act of 1883 are those contained in the biennial period, and the act does not refer to one return alone, any more than did the act of 1866. Having stated the circumstances in which a readjustment could be had, the act of 1883 proceeded to state from what period such readjustment should take effect, and it stated that it was "to date from the beginning of the quarter succeeding that in which such sworn returns of receipts and business or quarterly returns were made." This language is plain and unambiguous, and the court is bound by its terms. The readjustment cannot take effect in the same term for which the sworn returns were reviewed. It is postponed to the beginning of the next quarter.

It is said that as thus construed the statute leads in many cases to great injustice, and hence such construction should not be adopted. The difficulty is that any other construction violates the clear directions of the law, and although the result may be to withhold its benefits from some who might be regarded as otherwise entitled to it, yet we cannot for that reason alter its terms so as to include them, and thus ourselves enact instead of construing the law.

In United States v. Verdier, 164 U. S. 213, 219, 41 L. ed. 407, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 42, it was held that the act of 1883 created an indebtedness voluntarily assumed *by the [150] government in regard to those who claimed under its provisions. It rested entirely with Congress to say who should have its benefits and how the same should be arrived at, and from what date the readjustment should take effect, and as Congress has plainly stated the date there is nothing for the court to do but follow the clear direction of the statute. If Congress had intended to provide for the readjustment taking effect at the commencement of a biennial term subsequent to that in which the quarterly returns were made upon which the compensation was fixed, we are at a loss to think of what language it could use which would more certainly and specifically prove that intention than does the language actually used in this statute.

The method of reviewing and readjusting the salaries of postmasters under the act of 1883 with reference to the acts of 1864 and 1866, pursued by the Post Office Department, by which the readjustments based upon the quarterly returns have been made prospectively for the next biennial term thereafter, was approved by Congress as a correct administration of the act of March 3, 1883, and the readjustments which had been made under that act and in that method by the department, were ratified as a correct disposition of the claims which had been considered and disposed of, and Congress enacted that in considering all claims not yet readjusted the same method thus approved by it should be pursued, and it directed that any and every different method of readjustment of salaries during the period between 1864 and 1874 should be prohibited. 24 Stat. at L. 256, 307, chap. 903, § 8, act approved August 4, 1886. When this act was passed the salary of the petitioner had not been readjusted.

While the declaration of Congress in the act of 1886, approving the construction which had been put upon the act of 1883 by the Post Office Department, and ratifying its method of reviewing and readjusting salaries under that act, could have no binding force upon the courts as to the proper construction of that act in cases of salaries already readjusted, yet its direction, "that in considering all claims not yet readjusted, the same method shall be pursued which is hereby approved; and any and every different method of readjustment [151] of salaries of *such postmasters and late postmasters during the period between July 1, 1864, and July 1, 1874, than is herein approved, is hereby prohibited," is a valid legislative enactment, and must be followed by the courts. The readjustment of the salary of petitioner has not been according to this direction.

Construing the acts of 1883 and 1886 as we think their terms require, the judgment of the court of claims is erroneous, and must be reversed and the case remanded to that court with instructions to enter a judgment in conformity to the directions of those statutes and the opinion of this court.

We feel called upon to say that the charges of misconduct, maladministration, and fraud against the officers of the Post Office Department, so freely scattered through the pages of the briefs of counsel for appellee, are entirely unwarranted by anything contained in the record before us, and ought not to have been made.

Reversed.

Mr. Justice McKenna did not sit in this case, and took no part in its decision.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF LAKE BENTON, MINNESOTA, Plff. in Err.,

v.

JOHN W. WATT.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 151-155.)

Usury by national banks—action to recover back usurious interest—measure of recovery.

NOTE.—On usury by national banks—see note to Farmers' & M. Nat. Bank v. Dearing, 23 L. ed. U. S. 196.

184 U. S.

Twice the amount of the entire interest paid, and not twice the sum by which the interest received exceeded the lawful rate, is the measure of recovery from a national bank for collecting usurious interest, under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5198, providing for a forfeiture of the entire interest whenever taken, received, reserved, or charged at a usurious rate, and for the recovery, "in case the greater interest has been paid," of twice the amount of the interest thus paid.

[No. 103.]

Submitted January 15, 1902. Decided February 24, 1902.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the trial court in favor of plaintiff in an action to recover back usurious interest. Affirmed.

See same case below, 79 Minn. 266, 82 N. W. 1118.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

By this action, which was commenced in a court of the state of Minnesota, recovery was sought from the First National Bank of *Lake Benton, Minnesota, plaintiff in error here, of twice the amount of the entire interest which it was alleged had been paid to that bank by Watt, plaintiff below, who is the defendant in error on this record. The right to the relief was based on the averment that the bank had, in violation of the law of the United States, received from Watt usurious interest. The cause was tried to a jury and a verdict returned in favor of Watt. From an order denying a motion for a new trial an appeal was taken to the supreme court of the state of Minnesota, and that court affirmed the judgment. 76 Minn. 458, 79 N. W. 509. Upon the return of the record to the trial court, judgment was entered on the verdict of the jury. Another appeal was then taken and the judgment was affirmed. 79 Minn. 266, 82 N. W. 1118. The case was then brought to this court by writ of error.

Messrs. Frank B. Kellogg and C. A. Severance submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

In the absence of statutory regulation, the debtor's claim to relief went only to the usurious excess, and not to the entire interest.

Jones v. Barkley, 2 Dougl. 697; Fitzroy v. Gwillam, 1 T. R. 153; Dey v. Dunham, 2 Johns. Ch. 191; Fanning v. Dunham, 5 Johns. Ch. 123, 9 Am. Dec. 283; Palmer v. Lord, 6 Johns. Ch. 95; Zeigler v. Scott, 10 Ga. 389, 54 Am. Dec. 395; Clarkson v. Garland, 1 Leigh, 147; Dole v. Northrop, 19 Wis. 249; Baum v. Thoms, 150 Ind. 378, 50 N. E. 357.

A practice which has prevailed so long should be given the benefit of any possible doubt.

Farmers' & M. Nat. Bank v. Dearing, 91 U. S. 29, 23 L. ed. 196.

The statute under consideration is penal in its nature, and should therefore be strictly construed.

Barnet v. Muncie Nat. Bank, 98 U. S. 555, 25 L. ed. 212; Nash v. White's Bank, 37 Hun, 57; Monson v. Chester, 22 Pick. 385. See also Farmers' & M. Nat. Bank v. Dearing, 91 U. S. 29, 23 L. ed. 196; Oates v. First Nat. Bank, 100 U. S. 239, 25 L. ed. 580.

That statutes prescribing a penalty for the taking of usurious interest are to be strictly construed, see—

Tiffany v. National Bank, 18 Wall. 409, 21 L. ed. 862; United States v. Kansas P. R. Co. 4 Cent. L. J. 174, Fed. Cas. No. 15,506; Pardoe v. Iowa State Nat. Bank, 106 Iowa, 345, 76 N. W. 800.

General words of a penal statute are to be restrained for the benefit of him against whom the penalty is inflicted.

The Industry, 1 Gall. 114, Fed. Cas. No. 7,028.

This court in its strict construction of the statute under consideration has gone so far as to hold that the remedy provided for therein is exclusive in this sense,—that the action to recover back must be a separate and independent one, and that the remedy cannot be availed of by way of counterclaim.

Barnet v. Muncie Nat. Bank, 98 U. S. 555, 25 L. ed. 212.

The question has been judicially determined in accordance with the contention of plaintiff in error.

Hintermister v. First Nat. Bank, 64 N. Y. 212; Bobo v. People's Nat. Bank, 92 Tenn. 444, 21 S. W. 888; Hardin v. Trimmier, 30 S. C. 391, 9 S. E. 342; National Bank v. Johnson, 104 U. S. 271, 26 L. ed. 742; Nash v. White's Bank, 37 Hun, 57; First Nat. Bank v. Denson, 115 Ala. 650, 22 So. 518.

The act of usury is never regarded as consummated until actual payment is not only exacted, but is made under such contract.

Wycoff v. Longhead, 2 Dall. 92, 1 L. ed. 303; Musgrove v. Gibbs, 1 Dall. 216, 1 L. ed. 107; Turner v. Calvert, 12 Serg. & R. 46.

The borrower does not become entitled to his action of recovery back under § 5198, until something beyond principal and legal interest has been paid by him on the alleged usurious contract.

Brown v. Marion Nat. Bank, 169 U. S. 416, 42 L. ed. 801, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; National Bank v. Ragland, 181 U. S. 45, 45 L. ed. 738, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 536; McBroom v. Scottish Mortg. & Land Invest. Co. 153 U. S. 318, 38 L. ed. 729, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 852.

In the cases cited it was held that the two-year limitation upon the action to recover back did not begin to run until the usurious excess was actually paid. This has also been held in the state courts.

First Nat. Bank v. Denson, 115 Ala. 650, 22 So. 518.

The law clearly omits to provide for the case where the borrower under a usurious contract pays merely the principal and legal interest, thereby enforcing the theory of the existence of a locus penitentiæ.

Brown v. Marion Nat. Bank, 169 U. S. 416, 42 L. ed. 801, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396.

Mr. F. L. Janes submitted the cause for defendant in error:

Where illegal interest has been knowingly stipulated for, but not paid, only the sum lent, without interest, can be recovered.

Lucas v. Government Nat. Bank, 78 Pa. 231; Lebanon Nat. Bank v. Karmany, 98 Pa. 65; Guthrie v. Reid, 3 Thompson, Nat. Bank Cas. 753; Brown v. Marion Nat. Bank, 169 U. S. 416, 42 L. ed. 801, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396.

Where a national bank takes, receives, or charges more than the legal rate of interest on the discount of the note, the interest-bearing power of the note is destroyed. It is a dead note thereafter so far as interest is concerned. Not only is the usurious interest forfeited, but the interest accruing by law thereafter is forfeited, and the bank cannot recover more than the face of the note.

Alves v. Henderson, 3 Thompson, Nat. Bank Cas. 452; Petersborough Nat. Bank v. Childs, 3 Thompson, Nat. Bank Cas. 469.

Where the greater rate of interest has been paid, then twice the amount of the entire interest so paid can be recovered in a penal action of debt, or suit in the nature of such action, against the offending bank, brought by the person paying the same, or his legal representative.

Hill v. National Bank, 21 Blatchf. 258, 15 Fed. 433; Crocker v. First Nat. Bank, 4 Dill. 358, Fed. Cas. No. 3,397; National Bank v. Davis, 8 Biss. 100, Fed. Cas. No. 10,038; Lebanon Nat. Bank v. Karmany, 98 Pa. 65, 3 Thompson, Nat. Bank Cas. 746; Schuyler Nat. Bank v. Bullong, 24 Neb. 825, 40 N. W. 413, 3 Thompson, Nat. Bank Cas. 561; First Nat. Bank v. Garlinghouse, 22 Ohio St. 492, 10 Am. Rep. 751; Monongahela Nat. Bank v. Overholt, 96 Pa. 329; National Bank v. Trimble, 40 Ohio St. 629; Louisville Trust Co. v. Kentucky Nat. Bank, 87 Fed. 143, 102 Fed. 442; National Exch. Bank v. Moore, 2 Bond, 174, Fed. Cas. No. 10,041; First Nat. Bank v. McInturff, 3 Kan. App. 536, 43 Pac. 839; First Nat. Bank v. Turner, 3 Kan. App. 352, 42 Pac. 936; Boerner v. Traders' Nat. Bank, 90 Tex. 443, 39 S. W. 285; Colgin v. City Nat. Bank, 16 Tex. Civ. App. 346, 40 S. W. 634; Marion Nat. Bank v. Thompson, 101 Ky. 277, 40 S. W. 903; First Nat. Bank v. Denson, 115 Ala. 650, 22 So. 518.

The foregoing construction has been substantially followed in this court.

Brown v. Marion Nat. Bank, 169 U. S. 416, 42 L. ed. 801, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390. See also National Bank v. Ragland, 181 U. S. 45, 45 L. ed. 738, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 536.

The statute in question is remedial as well as penal, and is to be liberally construed to effect the object Congress had in view in enacting it.

Ordway v. Central Nat. Bank, 47 Md. 217, 28 Am. Rep. 455; Farmers' & M. Nat. Bank v. Dearing, 91 U. S. 29, 23 L. ed. 196. See also Gray v. Bennett, 3 Met. 522.

Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The contention of the plaintiff in error is that the state court erroneously condemned it to pay twice the amount of the entire interest which it had collected because it had taken a usurious rate, whilst under the law of the United States, it is insisted, the recovery should have been, not twice the amount of the entire interest, but only twice the sum by which the interest received exceeded the lawful rate. To dispose of this contention involves ascertaining the meaning of §§ 5197 and 5198 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, which are as follows:

[153] "Sec. 5197. Any association may take, receive, reserve, and charge on any loan or discount made, or upon any note, bill of exchange, or other evidences of debt, interest at the rate allowed by the laws of the state, territory, or district where the bank is located, and no more, except that where by the laws of *any state a different rate is limited for banks of issue organized under state laws, the rate so limited shall be allowed for associations organized or existing in any such state under this title. When no rate is fixed by the laws of the state, or territory, or district, the bank may take, receive, reserve, or charge a rate not exceeding seven per centum, and such interest may be taken in advance, reckoning the days for which the note, bill, or other evidence of debt has to run. And the purchase, discount, or sale, of a bona fide bill of exchange, payable at another place than the place of such purchase, discount, or sale, at not more than the current rate of exchange for sight drafts in addition to the interest, shall not be considered as taking or receiving a greater rate of interest.

"Sec. 5198. The taking, receiving, reserving, or charging a rate of interest greater than is allowed by the preceding section, when knowingly done, shall be deemed a forfeiture of the entire interest which the note, bill, or other evidence of debt carries with it, or which has been agreed to be paid thereon. In case the greater rate of interest has been paid, the person by whom it has been paid, or his legal representatives, may recover back, in an action in the nature of an action of debt, twice the amount of the interest thus paid from the association taking or receiving the same; provided, such action is commenced within two years from the time the usurious transaction occurred. (That suits, actions, and proceedings against any association under this title may be had in any circuit, district, or territorial court of the United States held within the district in which such association may be established, or in any state, county, or municipal court in the county or city in which said association is located having jurisdiction in similar cases.)"

The argument that the recovery should have been limited to twice the amount by which the usurious interest exceeded the legal rate is predicated on what is assumed to be the correct construction of the second sentence of § 5198 above quoted. The sentence relied on is as follows:

[154] "In case the greater rate of interest has been paid, the person by whom it has been paid, or his legal representatives, may recover back, in an action in the nature of an action of debt, twice *the amount of the interest thus paid from the association taking or receiving the same; provided such action is commenced within two years from the time the usurious transaction occurred."

It is urged that the statute is penal in its character and must be strictly construed, therefore the sentence relied upon must be interpreted as relating solely to the usurious portion of the interest paid, and not to so much of the rate of interest as was lawful. Although it be conceded that the statute is penal in character, we do not consider, even under the strictest rule of construction, it is possible to give to it the meaning contended for without departing from its unambiguous letter, and thereby frustrating its obvious intent. The first sentence of the section provides that "the taking, receiving, reserving, or charging a rate of interest greater than is allowed, . . . when knowingly done, shall be deemed a forfeiture of the entire interest which the note, bill, or other evidence of debt carries with it, or which has been agreed to be paid thereon." This, without the slightest ambiguity, provides for the forfeiture, not of the amount by which the usurious has exceeded the lawful rate, but of the entire interest. When the statute then proceeds, in the very next sentence, to say, "In case the greater rate of interest has been paid, the person by whom it has been paid, or his legal representatives, may recover back . . . twice the amount of the interest thus paid," it cannot in reason be held that the words, "the interest thus paid," refer to any other sum than the entire interest as provided in the previous sentence. To hold otherwise would be to decide that the statute forfeited the entire amount of interest whenever a usurious rate had been taken, received, reserved, or charged, and yet limited the debtor's right to recover back only to twice the amount of the excess of the usurious over the legal rate. This would be to interpret the law as in one sentence imposing a forfeiture of the entire interest, whilst in the next sentence it rendered such forfeiture, in many cases, absolutely nugatory. That such would be the result becomes apparent when it is considered that whilst it is conceded that in case usurious interest is received the entire amount is forfeited, it is yet argued that in case suit is brought *to[155] recover the forfeited usurious interest, the entire interest received cannot be awarded. The contention otherwise stated is this: The entire interest, in the event usurious interest is received, is forfeited at the election of the creditor, such election on his part, by which the forfeiture is escaped, being manifested by his insisting on retaining the money taken by him in violation of the statute. This, however, involves, not only the conflict pointed out by the considerations just mentioned, but the further contradiction that the greater the violation of the statute the lesser the penalty which it imposes. The disregard of the text and the confusion as to the purpose of the law, which the argument involves, disappears if the statute be harmoniously enforced according to its letter and spirit. By both it is apparent that the statute, on the one hand, causes a forfeiture of the entire interest to result from the taking, receiving, reserving, or charging a rate greater than is allowed by law, and, on the other, subjects the creditor to pay twice the amount of the entire interest illegally exacted if by persistence in wrongdoing he subjects the debtor to the necessity of suing to recover.

Whilst the question here presented has not been heretofore passed upon by this court, the circuit courts of the United States have had occasion frequently to consider it, and have uniformly construed the statute in accordance with its plain import as we have just expounded it. National Bank v. Davis, 8 Biss. 100, Fed. Cas. No. 10,038; National Exch. Bank v. Moore, 2 Bond, 174, Fed. Cas. No. 10,041; Crocker v. First Nat. Bank, 4 Dill. 358, Fed. Cas. No. 3,397; Hill v. National Bank, 21 Blatchf. 258, 15 Fed. 433; Louisville Trust Co. v. Kentucky Nat. Bank, 87 Fed. 143, 149, 102 Fed. 442. The state courts of last resort have also, as a general rule, upheld the same construction. Boerner v. Traders' Nat. Bank, 90 Tex. 443, 39 S. W. 285, and authorities there cited. True it is that in a few cases some state courts have hesitatingly taken an opposite view; but we think, for the reasons which we have given, the letter of the statute is too plain and its intention too manifest to justify such an interpretation.

Affirmed.

[156] *J. C. LEAGUE, Plff. in Err.,
v.
STATE OF TEXAS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 156-162.)

Constitutional law—change of remedy—due process of law.

1. A state may adopt new remedies for the collection of taxes, and apply those remedies to taxes already delinquent, without any violation of the Federal Constitution.
2. A claimant of land sold to the state by administrative sale for the nonpayment of taxes is not deprived of his property without due process of law by judicial proceedings to collect such delinquent taxes, under a statute enacted subsequent to such sale, although the ordinary expenses attending such proceedings are chargeable as costs, which were not provided for by the prior statute in reference to sales for unpaid taxes, since the state may waive the rights obtained by such sale, and may prescribe the terms on which such waiver will be made.

NOTE.—On retrospective statutes—see notes to Otoe County v. Baldwin, 28 L. ed. U. S. 331; People v. O'Brien (N. Y.) 2 L. R. A. 255; Ex parte Medley, 33 L. ed. U. S. 835; and Baruitz v. Beverly, 41 L. ed. U. S. 94.

As to what constitutes due process of law—see Kuntz v. Sumption (Ind.) 2 L. R. A. 655, and note; Re Gannon (R. I.) 5 L. R. A. 359, and note; Ulman v. Baltimore (Md.) 11 L. R. A. 224, and note; Gilman v. Tucker (N. Y.) 13 L. R. A. 304, and note. And see notes to People v. O'Brien (N. Y.) 2 L. R. A. 255; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina ex rel. Caldwell, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

478

3. A state may provide that taxes which have already become delinquent shall bear interest from the time the delinquency commenced, without conflicting with any provisions of the Federal Constitution.

[No. 137.]

Argued and Submitted January 29, 1902.
Decided February 24, 1902.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Texas to review a judgment affirming a decree of the Court of Civil Appeals which modified a judgment of the District Court of San Augustine County in favor of the state in an action to recover unpaid taxes. Affirmed.

See same case below, 93 Tex. 553, 57 S. W. 34.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

On August 6, 1898, the state of Texas filed a petition in the district court of San Augustine county, Texas, averring that the defendant was justly indebted to the state of Texas and the county of San Augustine in the sum of $1,305.87, on account of taxes, interest, penalties, and costs due on certain described lands for the years 1884, 1885, 1886, 1887, 1888, 1889, 1890, 1891, 1892, 1894, 1895, and 1896. The prayer was for a recovery of the taxes, interest, etc., and for a decree establishing and enforcing a lien upon the several tracts for the amounts found due upon each. An answer was filed and a trial had, which resulted, on September 9, 1889, in a finding that there was due the state the amount claimed for taxes, etc., a decree that the state recover the amount thereof from the defendant, and adjudging a lien upon the several tracts therefor, and directing a foreclosure and sale. On appeal to the court of civil appeals the decree was modified by striking out the taxes of 1884, all penalties and the personal judgment against the defendant, leaving the decree to stand as a finding of the amount due for taxes subsequent to the year 1884, interest and costs, and a foreclosure of a lien therefor upon the several tracts. This modification reduced the amount of the recovery to $1,232.77, with interest at 6 per cent from September 9, 1899, the date of the decree in the district court. On error to the supreme court of the state the decree of the court of civil appeals was affirmed (93 Tex. 553, 57 S. W. 34), whereupon this writ of error was sued out. [157]

Mr. F. Charles Hume submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

Prior to the enactment of Tex. Gen. Laws 1897, chap. 103, the collector of taxes was empowered by law to levy upon and sell, after the 1st day in January in each year, the lands assessed for taxes for the preceding year.

McFadden v. Longham, 58 Tex. 519.

Any right of a purchaser at a tax sale to review or continue the lien for taxes must depend on some statutory law of the state in force and effect when the sales were made.

184 U. S.

Desty, Taxn. 1011, 1020; Robson v. Osborn, 13 Tex. 307.

The act of the legislature of Texas (Laws 1897, chap. 103) is a violation of the constitutional guaranty of due process, in so far as its provisions are intended to avoid the legal effect of a prior sale for taxes, by directing a second foreclosure proceeding for collection of the same taxes.

Yenda v. Wheeler, 9 Tex. 408; Clegg v. State, 42 Tex. 605; Meredith v. Coker, 65 Tex. 31; Cooley, Taxn. 527; Blackwell, Tax Titles, 3d ed. 527.

The title passed by a tax sale in Texas is derivative, and the lien is fixed by the assessment.

Yenda v. Wheeler, 9 Tex. 408; Clegg v. State, 42 Tex. 605; Meredith v. Coker, 65 Tex. 31; Tex. Const. art. 8, § 15.

Plaintiff in error was deprived of his property without due process of law by the foreclosure, in this suit, of the alleged lien and the sale of his property to enforce collection of charges or burdens retroactively imposed by act of the legislature of the state of Texas (Gen. Laws 1897, chap. 103) under the guise of interest, fees and costs, and added to the delinquent taxes that had accrued prior to the passage of said act.

Cooley, Const. Lim. *353, *369; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 38 L. ed. 896, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Ryan v. State ex rel. Eller, 5 Neb. 276; Camp v. Rogers, 44 Conn. 291; State, Dixon, Prosecutor, v. Jersey City, 37 N. J. L. 39; Redwood County v. Winona & St. P. Land Co. 40 Minn. 515, 41 N. W. 465, 42 N. W. 477.

Interest is not an incident of a tax, and not authorized without statutory authority.

Edmonson v. Galveston, 53 Tex. 157; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. State, 55 Tex. 317; Anderson County v. Kennedy, 58 Tex. 622; Heller v. Alvarado, 1 Tex. Civ. App. 411, 20 S. W. 1003; Cave v. Houston, 65 Tex. 619.

The constitutional guaranty of due process operates with equal force upon the legislative, judicial, and executive departments of government, and upon all agencies by which state law is made and enforced.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 38 L. ed. 896, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Burton v. Plattner, 4 C. C. A. 95, 10 U. S. App. 657, 53 Fed. 901.

The purchaser at a void tax sale cannot recover even the taxes assessed upon the land and paid by his purchase.

McCormick v. Edwards, 69 Tex. 106, 6 S. W. 32.

Mr. D. E. Simmons argued the cause, and, with Mr. C. K. Bell, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The state has an election of remedies in the collection of taxes. It may proceed under the summary power of seizure and sale given an administrative officer, or it may provide for collection by means of a suit and foreclosure of the tax lien. The right to redeem after two years from date of sale, not being a vested right, may be changed by the legislature. After forfeiture by sale to the state, the resulting rights of the state may be waived, there being no other parties interested therein.
184 U. S.

Tex. Const. 1876, art. 8, §§ 3, 13, 15; Tex. Rev. Stat. 1895, arts. 5176-5189; Acts 25th Legis. chap. 103; Henrietta v. Eustis, 87 Tex. 14, 26 S. W. 619.

It is within the power of the legislature to provide whatever procedure seems best adapted for collecting taxes, and for foreclosure of the lien which is given by the Constitution and the laws; such law being one which affects the remedy, and not depriving delinquents of any substantial rights.

State ex rel. Garnes v. McCann, 21 Ohio St. 210; State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds, 15 Wall. 300, sub nom. Cleveland, P. & A. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 21 L. ed. 179; Dollar Sav. Bank v. United States, 19 Wall. 227, 22 L. ed. 80; Cave v. Houston, 65 Tex. 619; Lufkin v. Galveston, 73 Tex. 343, 11 S. W. 340; Henrietta v. Eustis, 87 Tex. 14, 26 S. W. 619; San Antonio v. Berry, 92 Tex. 319, 48 S. W. 496; Clarke v. Strickland, 2 Curt. C. C. 439, Fed. Cas. No. 2,864; Hodgdon v. Burleigh, 4 Fed. 111; Masterson v. State, 17 Tex. Civ. App. 91, 42 S. W. 1003; Conklin v. El Paso (Tex. Civ. App.) 44 S. W. 883; Traylor v. State, 19 Tex. Civ. App. 86, 46 S. W. 81; Fristoe v. Blum, 92 Tex. 80, 45 S. W. 998.

The legislature has the power to waive any rights which may have accrued to the state by reason of a sale to the state of property delinquent for taxes. The courts, in the trial of a case, are limited to the issues made by the pleadings of parties to the suit. It is necessary to prove only those issues which are in dispute.

Sansom v. Mercer, 68 Tex. 488, 5 S. W. 62; Ogden v. Bosse, 86 Tex. 344, 24 S. W. 798.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion [157] of the court:

In 1897 the legislature of Texas passed an act for the collection by judicial proceedings of delinquent taxes upon real estate. Texas Gen. Laws 1897, chap. 103, p. 132. The contention of the defendant, now plaintiff in error, is that prior thereto the collection of taxes was enforced by an administrative sale made by the collector of taxes after January 1 of the succeeding year; that the state's lien for taxes was merged in the estate passed or vested by that sale; that the status of the rights of the state or other purchaser was fixed by the sale, and must depend upon the legality of the title acquired under the collector's deeds, and that any right of a purchaser at such sale, whether state or private individual, to revive or continue any lien for taxes, must depend upon some statute existing at the time of the sale; and that, hence, this act of the legislature providing for the collection of delinquent taxes by judicial proceedings was a violation of the constitutional guaranty of due process in so far as it avoided the legal effect of the prior administrative sale and directed a further and judicial sale with the rights attending thereon.

[158] *There is no pretense that the taxes levied for these several years were invalid, or that the proceedings up to and including the collector's sale were irregular. On the contrary, the delinquent tax record in evidence, duly certified and filed, which by § 3 of the act is made prima facie evidence of the regularity of all prior proceedings and also that the amount of the tax against any real estate is a true and correct charge, showed taxes due as found by the court. It does not appear that the lands were assessed to the defendant, or that he was the owner of them at the time of the early assessments. Indeed, he alleges in his answer that he acquired title about the year 1889, but does not allege that this title was from the state. Apparently he had purchased from some individual who claimed title. His argument assumes that the taxes had not been paid, and that the lands had been sold by the collector to the state. The case, therefore, presented is one of a party, admitting that valid taxes have been duly levied on his property and have not been paid, who is contesting the manner in which the state shall collect them, and insisting that the only method which it can adopt for such collection is one which has hitherto proved ineffectual.

That a state may adopt new remedies for the collection of taxes, and apply those remedies to taxes already delinquent, without any violation of the Federal Constitution, is not a matter of doubt. A delinquent taxpayer has no vested right in an existing mode of collecting taxes. There is no contract between him and the state that the latter will not vary the mode of collection. Indeed, generally speaking, a party has no vested right in a mere matter of remedy; that is subject to legislative change. And a new remedy may be resorted to unless in some of its special provisions a constitutional right of the debtor or obligor is infringed. "There is no vested right in a mode of procedure. Each succeeding legislature may establish a different one, providing only that in each are preserved the essential elements of protection." Backus v. Fort Street Union Depot Co. 169 U. S. 557, 570, 42 L. ed. 853, 859, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 445, 450. That in the new remedy in the case at bar, as well as in the change from the old to the new, there was no violation of the Constitution of the state of Texas, is

[159] for *us settled by the decisions of its highest court. West River Bridge Co. v. Dix. 6 How. 507, 12 L. ed. 535; Bucher v. Cheshire R. Co. 125 U. S. 555, 31 L. ed. 795, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 974; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 41 L. ed.

683, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 685, 41 L. ed. 1165, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718.

Defendant further contends that interest, expenses, and costs are included in the new remedy by judicial proceedings which were not provided for by the prior statutes in reference to collector's sales. The court of civil appeals and the supreme court of the state dealt with this question in these ways. The latter, in its opinion, quoted the following averment from the sworn answer of the defendant:

"And for answer in this behalf, defendant denies all and singular the allegations of plaintiff's petition; and further answering, defendant shows that he purchased the lands described in plaintiff's petition and exhibits about the year 1889; that said lands have been sold by the collector of taxes of San Augustine county for 1884 taxes and for the taxes of subsequent years, and they have, in every instance, been bid in by the collector of taxes for the state of Texas, in obedience to the laws of the said state."

Upon this it observed that it had granted the writ of error upon a question of the validity of the charge for interest, and added:

"However, upon the point on which the writ was granted, we will say that the answer of the defendant sets up the sale of the lands for taxes and the purchase of them by the state, insisting that the state is bound by its purchase. No attack is made upon the sale, nor upon any of the proceedings leading up to it, and it stands before the court, under the defendant's allegations, as a valid sale by which the title passed to the state. The state, having acquired the title, had the power to waive its right, and, in order to perfect the claim beyond all dispute, to foreclose its lien on the land as against the then claimant, and in doing so had the authority to prescribe such terms as it deemed proper and just. The claimant of the lands, being a party defendant, could have disclaimed any interest in them, and might thus have escaped any cost for proceedings had after such disclaimer. The defendant chose not to pursue this course, and he has no cause of complaint as the case stands before this court, because, by his own showing, he had no title to be affected by it, and depended solely upon the grace of the state for whatever he might get out of the land."

The court of appeals said:

"The lands were forfeited to the state by the sale for the taxes of 1884, the forfeiture to become absolute in two years. The offer of the state is to waive this forfeiture and restore the land to the owner if he will only pay the taxes accruing since then and 6 per cent interest thereon, together with the costs which had been incurred in making the sale, and in making up the delinquent lists, and of the suit. The state has waived its right of forfeiture on condition that the taxes, with interest and costs, shall be enforced against the land. This it might do." 56 S. W. 264.

Whichever be the true view of the effect of the answer (and, of course, so far as the two courts differ, we must accept the view expressed by the highest court of the state as controlling), the same result will follow. Whether the title which passed by the sale was conditional or absolute, the state may waive the rights obtained by such sale and prescribe the terms upon which it will waive them. In the one view it waives the right to a forfeiture; in the other, the title acquired by the sale; and in either case the state may fix the conditions of its waiver.

The costs referred to are simply the ordinary expenses which attend proceedings of the character prescribed, to wit, compensation to the collector for preparing the delinquent list and certifying it to the commissioners; to the county attorney for conducting the suit; to the sheriff for selling the land, and to the district clerk for making the court records. There is no pretense that any separate charge is exorbitant or unreasonable. And if the state is compelled to resort to such proceedings for the collection of its taxes it may provide reasonable compensation for the officials charged with any duty in connection therewith, and incorporate the charges therefor as costs in the case. Liability for these costs and expenses can be avoided by payment of taxes; and a delinquent taxpayer—one who fails to discharge his obligations to the state, compelling it to go into court to enforce payment of the taxes due upon his [161] land—*has no ground of complaint because he is charged with the ordinary fees and expenses of a law suit.

While the matter of interest stands upon a little different basis, yet, so far as the Federal Constitution is concerned, there is nothing to prevent its collection. The statute may be retroactive, but a statute of a state is not brought into conflict with the Federal Constitution by the mere fact that it is retroactive in its operation. In Baltimore & S. R. Co. v. Nesbit, 10 How. 395, 401, 13 L. ed. 469, 472, it was said:

"That there exists a general power in the state governments to enact retrospective or retroactive laws, is a point too well settled to admit of question at this day. The only limit upon this power in the states by the Federal Constitution, and therefore the only source of cognizance or control with respect to that power existing in this court, is the provision that these retrospective laws shall not be such as are technically ex post facto, or such as impair the obligation of contracts. Thus, in the case of Watson v. Mercer, 8 Pet. 110, 8 L. ed. 884, the court says: 'It is clear that this court has no right to pronounce an act of the state legislature void, as contrary to the Constitution of the United States, from the mere fact that it divests antecedent vested rights of property. The Constitution of the United States does not prohibit the states from passing retrospective laws generally, but only ex post facto laws. Now, it has been solemnly settled by this court that the phrase ex post facto is not applicable to [164] U. S.

civil laws, but to penal and criminal laws.' For this position is cited the case of Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. 386, 1 L. ed. 648; already mentioned; of Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 138, 3 L. ed. 178; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 266, 6 L. ed. 624, and Satterlee v. Matthewson, 2 Pet. 380, 7 L. ed. 458."

This decision, it is true, was before the 14th Amendment, and the restrictions placed by that amendment upon state action apply to retrospective, as well as prospective, legislation. But it contains no prohibition of retrospective legislation as such, and therefore now, as before, the mere fact that a statute is retroactive in its operation does not make it repugnant to the Federal Constitution.

As the state may, in the first instance, enact that taxes shall bear interest from the time they become due, so, without conflicting *with any provision of the Federal Consti- [162] tution, it may in like manner provide that taxes which have already become delinquent shall bear interest from the time the delinquency commenced. This is adding no novel or extraordinary penalty, for interest is the ordinary incident to the nonpayment of obligations.

We see nothing else in the record calling for notice, and, finding no error, the judgment of the Supreme Court of Texas is affirmed.

S. D. HATFIELD and Nancy C. Rutherford, Appts.,
v.

HENRY C. KING.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 162-168.)

Appeal—appearance.

A decree entered against persons not served with process, but for whom an unauthorized appearance has been entered by an attorney, will be reversed.

[No. 221.]

Submitted January 7, 1901. Submission Set Aside January 21, 1901. Submitted on Motion for Rule November 11, 1901. Decided February 24, 1902.

A PPEAL from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of West Virginia quieting title to lands. Reversed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

On October 8, 1898, the appellee commenced this suit in the circuit court of the United States for the district of West *Vir- [163] ginia to quiet his title to certain lands. In the bill he alleged that he was the owner in fee and in the actual possession of a large tract, known as the "Robert Morris 500,000,-

NOTE.—As to the effect of a judgment obtained upon an unauthorized appearance by attorney—see note to Williams v. Johnson (N. C.) 21 L. R. A. 848.

Acre Grant," which was granted by Virginia in 1795 to Robert Morris, of Philadelphia, and is situated partly in West Virginia, and partly in Kentucky and Virginia. He followed this general allegation with a detailed statement of his chain of title and of certain tax proceedings. After these averments tending to show his own rights and title, he charged that Aly and Joseph Hatfield, father and son, had at different times obtained pretended titles to certain small tracts within the limits of his grant, stating how these titles were obtained and wherein he claimed they were invalid. He further averred that both the Hatfields were dead; that their only heirs were the two defendants, now appellants, the widow and daughter of Joseph Hatfield, who wrongfully claimed the tracts last mentioned and thereby cast a cloud upon the plaintiff's title. No process was issued, but on June 8, 1899, a demurrer was filed on behalf of the defendants, signed by one appearing as their attorney. This demurrer was overruled on May 16, 1900, and leave given to file answer. Thereupon, as the record states, the defendants declined to answer but elected to stand upon their demurrer, and on June 2, 1900, a decree was entered in favor of plaintiff, quieting his title to the lands claimed by the defendants. From this decree an appeal was prayed and allowed to this court, and the appeal papers were filed here on January 3, 1901.

The bill was so framed as to invite a consideration, in some aspects, of the question of forfeiture for nonpayment of taxes, presented to this court in King v. Mullins, 171 U. S. 404, 43 L. ed. 214, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 925.

At the beginning of this term one of the appellants, Nancy C. Browning (erroneously, as she states, called Nancy C. Rutherford in the record) moved for a rule against the attorney who had appeared for her, to show by what authority he had assumed to so appear and why he should not be attached and his name stricken from the roll of attorneys for falsely assuming to act as her attorney and imposing upon the circuit and this court a false, fictitious, and manufactured case for the purpose of obtaining an opinion and judgment on a false state-

[164]ment *of facts, to her injury and the injury of others similarly situated but not parties to the suit or appeal. She also asked that the alleged final decree of the circuit court be declared null and void, and that this appeal and the cause be dismissed. At the same time other parties, claiming to be interested in the Robert Morris tract, appeared and represented that the entire proceedings had in this case were feigned and fictitious; that the litigation on both sides was controlled by the counsel for the plaintiff King, and asked an examination as to the truth of the charge so made. A substantially similar motion was made on behalf of the state of West Virginia. The counsel named in the record have answered, denying these charges and asserting the fullest integrity in the matter. Quite a number of affidavits have been filed, and also some documentary evidence presented.

Mr. Henry C. Fleisher submitted the cause for appellants on the first submission.

Mr. Maynard F. Stiles submitted the cause for appellee on the first submission.

Mr. Edgar P. Rucker submitted the cause for the State of West Virginia on motion for rule, etc.:

By a long line of decisions, this court has held that upon a motion it will intervene and dismiss an appeal when it clearly appears that the suit is fictitious and that there is no real issue between the parties.

East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Southern Teleg. Co. 125 U. S. 695, 31 L. ed. 853, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1391; South Spring Hill Gold Min. Co. v. Amador Medcan Gold Min. Co. 145 U. S. 302, 36 L. ed. 713, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921; American Woodpaper Co. v. Hest, 8 Wall. 333, 19 L. ed. 378; Little v. Bowers, 134 U. S. 547, 33 L. ed. 1016, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620; California v. San Pablo & T. R. Co. 149 U. S. 308, 37 L. ed. 747, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876.

'It is highly reprehensible and a contempt of court for an individual to carry on both sides of a suit for the purpose of obtaining a decision to advance his personal interests.

Cleveland v. Chamberlain, 1 Black, 419, 17 L. ed. 93; Lord v. Veazie, 8 How. 254, 12 L. ed. 1069.

Defendants are at liberty to show that the appearance for them was unauthorized. If they show this, they are not bound by the proceedings of the court, whose judgment as to them is a nullity.

Shelton v. Tiffin, 6 How. 163, 12 L. ed. 387.

The power to disbar an attorney "is possessed by all courts who have authority to admit attorneys to practice."

Ex parte Robinson, 19 Wall. 505, 22 L. ed. 205.

It is not necessary that proceedings against attorneys for malpractice, or any unprofessional conduct, should be founded upon formal allegations against them.

Randall v. Brigham, 7 Wall. 523, 19 L. ed. 285.

In order to make any acts or conduct ground for striking the name of an attorney from the rolls, it is not essential that they be such as would subject him to indictment or to any civil liability; any conduct on the part of an attorney evidencing his unfitness for the confidence and trust which attend the relation of attorney and client and the practice of law before the courts, or showing such a lack of personal honesty or of good moral character as to render him unworthy of public confidence, constitutes a ground for his disbarment.

3 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 302.

The confidence which attorneys receive, and the responsibility which they are obliged to assume, demand, not only ability of high order, but the strictest integrity.

Randall v. Brigham, 7 Wall. 523, 19 L. ed. 285.

Messrs. Holmes Conrad and Edward C. Lyon submitted the cause for petitioners on such motion:

Judgment rendered on an appearance by an agent has been held to be a nullity because "it does not appear that he had authority to waive process and defend the suit."

Shelton v. Tiffin, 6 How. 186, 12 L. ed. 397.

Mr. W. P. Hubbard submitted the cause for interveners on such motion. Messrs. C. W. Campbell and John H. Holt were with him on the brief:

Where a collusive or fictitious suit is shown, or where it appears that the plaintiff or defendant was in the beginning or became the dominus litis on both sides, the court will, according to the circumstances of the particular case, either simply dismiss the appeal, or dismiss the appeal and remand the cause, or reverse the judgment of the court below and remand the cause.

Lord v. Veazie, 8 How. 251, 12 L. ed. 1067; Cleveland v. Chamberlain, 1 Black, 419, 17 L. ed. 93; American Woodpaper Co. v. Heft, 8 Wall. 333, 19 L. ed. 378; Little v. Bowers, 134 U. S. 557, 33 L. ed. 1020, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620; South Spring Hill Gold Min. Co. v. Amador Medean Gold Min. Co. 145 U. S. 300, 36 L. ed. 712, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921.

Mr. Maynard F. Stiles submitted the cause in opposition to such motion:

An appearance by authorized counsel is as effectual to give jurisdiction of a party as the personal appearance of such party, and the appearance of either cures defects in or want of process.

Hill v. Mendenhall, 21 Wall. 453, 22 L. ed. 616; Pollard v. Dwight, 4 Cranch, 421, 2 L. ed. 666; Creighton v. Kerr, 20 Wall. 8, 22 L. ed. 309.

There would be no safety to opposing parties if reliance could not be put upon the presumed authority of counsel.

Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 739, 6 L. ed. 204.

The jurisdiction of the court over the parties is always one of the first subjects of inquiry, and must be presumed to have been examined into by the court; and where it depends upon the authority of counsel the court must be presumed to have satisfied itself upon the matter before proceeding further, and to have judicially settled the question.

Preston v. Kindrick, 94 Va. 760, 27 S. E. 588; Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co. 157 U. S. 683, 39 L. ed. 859, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 733. See also Hills v. Ross, 3 Dall. 331, 1 L. ed. 623.

[164] Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

It is contended by the appellants that the decree in the circuit court against them ought to be set aside because they have not had the hearing in that court to which they were entitled by law; that they were not served with process; that counsel unauthorized by them entered their appearance, and after having wrongfully entered their appearance failed to take the proper steps for the protection of their rights.

It is also contended (though by other parties than the appellants) that there was no real controversy between the parties *nominally opposed to each other, and that the litigation was in fact carried on under the direction and control of the plaintiff. It is well settled that questions of this kind may be examined, upon motion, supported by affidavits, and that it is the duty of a court to make such inquiry, in order that it may not be imposed on by an apparent controversy to which there are really no adverse parties. Shelton v. Tiffin, 6 How. 163, 186, 12 L. ed. 387, 397; Lord v. Veazie, 8 How. 251, 12 L. ed. 1067; Cleveland v. Chamberlain, 1 Black, 419, 426, 17 L. ed. 93, 94; American Wood-Paper Co. v. Heft, 8 Wall. 333, 19 L. ed. 378; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Southern Tcleg. Co. 125 U. S. 695, 31 L. ed. 853, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1391; South Spring Hill Gold Min. Co. v. Amador Medean Gold Min. Co. 145 U. S. 300, 36 L. ed. 712, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921; California v. San Pablo & T. R. Co. 149 U. S. 308, 37 L. ed. 747, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876.

In Cleveland v. Chamberlain it was said, quoting from Lord v. Veazie: "Any attempt, by a mere colorable dispute, to obtain the opinion of the court upon a question of law, which a party desires to know for his own interest or his own purposes, when there is no real and substantial controversy between those who appear as adverse parties to the suit, is an abuse which courts of justice have always reprehended and treated as a punishable contempt of court."

In Shelton v. Tiffin the question was as to the validity of a judicial sale, and it appeared that one of the defendants in the proceedings had not been served with process; that an attorney had entered an appearance for him but had done so inadvertently and without authority, and it was said: "An appearance by counsel under such circumstances, to the prejudice of a party, subjects the counsel to damages; but this would not sufficiently protect the rights of the defendant. He is not bound by the proceedings, and there is no other principle which can afford him adequate protection. The judgment, therefore, against L. P. Perry must be considered a nullity, and consequently did not authorize the seizure and sale of his property."

If it be true, as claimed by some of the moving parties, that this is a collusive suit, that there is no real controversy between the plaintiff and defendants, that the plaintiff has been controlling the litigation on both sides with a view of obtaining an opinion on a matter of law in which he is interested, the transaction is one which as stated courts of justice have always *reprehended, and should be treated as a punishable contempt, and no decree entered under those circumstances should be permitted to stand.

So far as respects permitting the decree to stand, the same result would follow, even though there were no collusion, if the appearance of counsel was, in fact, not authorized or ratified by the defendants; and to that matter alone shall we direct our attention.

Before any proceedings could rightfully be taken against the defendants it was essential that either they be brought into court by service of process, or that a lawful appearance be made in their behalf. Confessedly they were not served with process, and they now deny the right of counsel to have entered an appearance for them. The evidence upon this, as well as kindred questions, is principally in ex parte affidavits. The appellants were respectively the widow and daughter of Joseph Hatfield, and claimed title to the various tracts by inheritance from him. It appears that in 1895 an action of ejectment was brought by King against several parties, these appellants among the number. Mrs. Hatfield was led to employ in that case the same counsel who entered her appearance in this. We do not stop to inquire into the circumstances which it is alleged attended that employment. She swears that it was simply for that action and a suit ancillary thereto brought to enjoin the cutting of timber; that she never employed him in any other matter, and knew nothing of the pendency of this suit until after the decree against her and the appeal to this court. She also swears that she never attempted to act for her daughter in preparing for the defense of any suit or action, or in making any arrangements for her. Mrs. Browning testifies that at the time of the ejectment suit she was the widow of John Rutherford; that on December 25, 1895, she married her present husband, Albert Browning; that she had no notice or knowledge of the present suit, and never directly or indirectly employed or authorized anyone to appear for her therein, or in any other controversy or matter pertaining to said lands; and further, never authorized any person to employ said counsel or any other attorney to appear and represent her in this suit.

[167] *On the other hand, the counsel's affidavit is that he was employed by Mrs. Hatfield in the prior action, and supposed he was authorized by the scope of that employment to appear for her in this suit; that he had the title papers of both the appellants in his possession, and had no suggestion of any revocation of his authority. He introduced a copy of a letter from Mrs. Hatfield, which supported his claim of employment, at least in the ejectment case. While he testifies to having met and conversed with Mrs. Hatfield, he does not state that he ever met Mrs. Browning or had any conversation or correspondence with her, although he does state in a general way that she sanctioned and ratified the action of her mother in employing him.

We do not deem it necessary to mention all the matters of evidence, but it seems to us quite clear that, whatever may have been his understanding of the matter, the counsel was not authorized to appear for Mrs.

Browning. She had in fact never employed him in any litigation in respect to these lands or otherwise, nor had she authorized anyone to employ him, and she had no notice of the pendency of this suit. As to Mrs. Hatfield, while she did at one time employ him in other litigation, she knew nothing of the pendency of this suit until after the decree and the appeal, and if the employment in the ejectment action was sufficiently broad to cover all future litigation of any kind in respect to the land, it would seem to have been so only in consequence of a contract which she says was made, and which, if made, would stamp the whole transaction with wrong.

We do not stop to inquire whether the course pursued by counsel was under the circumstances the best that could have been taken for the protection of the appellants' rights. They were entitled to notice of the pendency of the suit to select such counsel as they chose, and to be guided by his advice and judgment, even though that advice and judgment should prove to be erroneous.

We have refrained from spreading upon our records a detailed statement of the charges and countercharges made in the various motions and affidavits that have been filed, and have only referred to so much as seemed necessary for the *present disposition [168] of the case. But our reticence in this respect must not be taken as expressive of a purpose to ignore them. The charges are serious ones, affecting the integrity of counsel commended, by the fact of admission to the bar of the circuit court, to the confidence of the community. They involve the due administration of justice in that court, and cannot be passed without notice and action. It is not enough that the doors of the temple of justice are open; it is essential that the ways of approach be kept clean. We refrain from extended comment because, as, heretofore stated, the testimony is mainly by ex parte affidavits, which are often, this case being no exception, quite unsatisfactory, and it is only through the sifting process of cross-examination that the real facts can be disclosed. When the truth is ascertained, if there be wrongs as charged, the language of judicial condemnation should be clear and emphatic, and a punishment inflicted such as the wrongs deserve; and if no wrong has been done the conduct of counsel will be cleared from suspicion. It is fitting that this investigation should be had in the first place in the court where the wrong is charged to have been done and before the judge who, if the charges are correct, has been imposed upon by counsel, and it may be wise that both examination and cross-examination be had in his presence.

The order therefore is that this case be remanded to the Circuit Court, with instructions to set aside the decree as well as the appearance of defendants, and to proceed thereafter in accordance with law; and also to make a full investigation, in such manner as shall seem to it best, of the various charges of misconduct presented in the motions filed in this court, and to take such action thereon as justice may require.

Mr. Justice Harlan was not present at the argument of this case, and took no part in its decision.

[169] *W. C. LYKINS and E. W. W. Lykins, Plffs. in Err.,
v.

MRS. R. McGRATH.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 169-173.)

Public lands—restriction on alienation by Indian patentee—retroactive effect of consent by Secretary of Interior.

Consent of the Secretary of the Interior to a conveyance by an Indian patentee whose patent prohibited alienation by him or his heirs without such consent may be given after the death of the Indian grantor, and when so given is retroactive in its effect, and relates back to the date of the conveyance, so as to cut off any claim of the heirs of such grantor to the land.

[No. 90.]

Argued and Submitted January 13, 1902.
Decided February 24, 1902.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Kansas to review a judgment for defendant in an action of ejectment. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

Under and by virtue of the provisions of a treaty between the United States of America and the Kas-kas-kia, Peoria, and other confederated tribes of Indians, concluded on the 30th day of May, 1854, proclaimed August 10, 1854 (10 Stat. at L. 1083). and an act of Congress approved March 3, 1859 (11 Stat. at L. 431, chap. 82), the southeast quarter of section No. fifteen (15), in township No. seventeen (17), south of range No. twenty-three (23) east, in the territory, now state, of Kansas, and other lands, were on November 1, 1859, conveyed by the United States of America by letters patent to Ma-cha-co-meyah, or David Lykins, a member of the said Peoria tribe of Indians, being "Peoria Reserve No. 14." The patent contained the following provision: "That said tracts shall never be sold or conveyed by the grantee or his heirs without the consent of the Secretary of the Interior for the time being." On June 3, 1864, the patentee, David Lykins, conveyed the land to one Baptiste Peoria, by deed of that date, which deed was on March 10, 1865, presented to the Secretary of the Interior, and by him approved. Intermediate the making of the deed and the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, to wit, on August 14, 1864, the patentee died, leaving the two plaintiffs in error (plaintiffs below) as his sole heirs. *This action in ejectment was commenced by them on March 18, 1899, in the circuit court of the United States for the district of Kansas against the defendant, in possession and claiming title under the deed to Baptiste Peoria. A demurrer to an amended petition was sustained, and judgment entered in favor of the defendant, whereupon this writ of error was sued out.

Mr. W. M. Springer argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Robinson, Bowling, & McCluer, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

Making and sending a deed to the Secretary for his approval was not as strong as giving him a power of attorney to sell; and that would have been revoked by death.

Hunt v. Rousmanier, 8 Wheat. 175, 5 L. ed. 590.

A deed by an attorney in fact, executed before, but delivered after, the death of the principal, is inoperative.

Kent v. Cecil (Tex. Civ. App.) 25 S. W. 715.

This decision was rendered in a state where it is held that, if the attorney has power to convey, the conveyance is binding on the principal, and conveys his title, though made without reference to him.

Trinity County Lumber Co. v. Pinecard, 4 Tex. Civ. App. 671, 23 S. W. 720, 1015.

A conveyance in the name of a person who was dead at the time would be a manifest absurdity.

Hunt v. Rousmanier, 8 Wheat. 202, 5 L. ed. 596.

The decisions hold that the retroactive efficacy of the ratification is subject to the qualification that the intervening rights of third persons cannot be defeated by the ratification.

Pickering v. Lomax, 145 U. S. 310, 36 L. ed. 716, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 860; Murray v. Wooden, 17 Wend. 531; Clark v. Akers, 16 Kan. 166. See also McGannon v. Straightledge, 37 Kan. 87, 14 Pac. 452; Pennock v. Monroe, 5 Kan. 578; Miami County v. Wanzoppc-che, 3 Kan. 364; Kansas Indians, 5 Wall. 737, sub nom. Blue Jacket v. Johnson, 18 L. ed. 667; Stevens v. Smith, 2 Kan. 243, 10 Wall. 321, 19 L. ed. 933.

The doctrine of relation is a fiction of law, and cannot be operative upon a void agreement.

Doc ex dem. DePeyster v. Howland, 8 Cow. 277, 18 Am. Dec. 445; Kansas City v. O'Connor, 82 Mo. App. 655.

Messrs. W. C. Perry and Daniel B. Holmes submitted the cause for defendant in error. Mr. Frank M. Sheridan was with them on their brief:

The controversy does not involve a Federal question.

Little York Gold-Washing & Water Co. v. Keyes, 96 U. S. 199, 24 L. ed. 656; Germania Ins. Co. v. Wisconsin, 119 U. S. 473, 30 L. ed. 461, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 260; McCain v. Des Moines, 174 U. S. 168, 43 L. ed. 936, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Blackburn v. Portland Gold Min. Co. 175 U. S. 571, 44 L. ed. 276, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222.

The allottee, having sold and conveyed the land, having performed every act in his power to divest the title, the consent of the Secretary could be given at any time, and, when given, it related back to the date of the deed.

Pickering v. Lomax, 145 U. S. 310, 36 L. ed. 716, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 860; Godfrey v. Beardsley, 2 McLean, 412, Fed. Cas. No. 5,497; Jackson ex dem. Gillet v. Hill, 5 Wend. 532; Gibson v. Chouteau, 13 Wall. 92, 20 L. ed. 534.

[170] *Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

It is contended by the plaintiffs that the deed from David Lykins, not having been approved before his death, became thereby an absolute nullity; that title immediately vested in them, free from any claim of the grantee in the deed; that they never asked for the approval of the Secretary of the Interior; never consented that it should be given; never in any way ratified or assented to the deed of their ancestor, and that the Secretary was without any authority after the death of the patentee to approve the latter's deed.

The 11th section of the act of 1859, superseding in this respect the treaty of 1854, contained a general provision in reference to restricted patents to Indians in Kansas, that the Secretary of the Interior should cause them to be issued "upon such conditions and limitations, and under such guards or restrictions, as may be prescribed by said Secretary," and in pursuance of this section the restriction referred to was placed in this patent. That the consent of the Secretary was effective, though given after the execution of the deed, was determined in Pickering v. Lomax, 145 U. S. 310, 36 L. ed. 716, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 860. In that case the patent to the Indian contained a stipulation, authorized by treaty, that the land should not be conveyed "to any person whatever, without the permission of the [171] President of the United States." A *deed was made by the Indian holder of the title on August 3, 1858, which was approved by the President on January 21, 1871, nearly thirteen years thereafter, and it was held that the approval related back to the time of the execution of the deed, and made it valid as of that date. In other words, the antecedent approval of the President was not a condition of the validity of the deed. It was enough that he approved what had been done. It is true that it does not appear that the Indian grantor had died intermediate the making of the deed and the approval of the President (and in this respect that case differs from the present), but the grantee from the Indian had died during such interval, and only by way of relation could the action of the President be considered as making effective an otherwise void deed to a dead man. That case came before this court a second time (Lomax v. Pickering, 173 U. S. 26, 27, 43 L. ed. 601, 602, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 416, 417), and in the opinion then filed the scope of the prior decision was thus stated: "The case was reversed by this court upon the ground that the approval subsequently given by the President to the conveyance was retroactive, and was equivalent to permission before execution and delivery."

It must therefore be considered as settled that the consent of the Secretary of the Interior to a conveyance by one holding under a patent like the present may be given after the execution of the deed, and when given is retroactive in its effect and relates back to the date of the conveyance.

But the applicability of the doctrine of relation is denied on the ground that the interests of new parties, to wit, the plaintiffs, have sprung into being intermediate the execution of the conveyance and the approval of the Secretary. But one of the purposes of the doctrine of relation is to cut off such interests, and to prevent a just and equitable title from being interrupted by claims which have no foundation in equity. The doctrine of relation may be only a legal fiction, but it is resorted to with the view of accomplishing justice. What was the purpose of imposing a restriction upon the Indian's power of conveyance? Title passed to him by the patent, and but for the restriction he would have had the full power of alienation the same as any holder of a fee-simple title. The restriction was placed upon *his alienation in order [172] that he should not be wronged in any sale he might desire to make; that the consideration should be ample; that he should in fact receive it, and that the conveyance should be subject to no unreasonable conditions or qualifications. It was not to prevent a sale and conveyance, but only to guard against imposition therein. When the Secretary approved the conveyance it was a determination that the purposes for which the restriction was imposed had been fully satisfied: that the consideration was ample; that the Indian grantor had received it, and that there were no unreasonable stipulations attending the transaction. All this being accomplished, justice requires that the conveyance should be upheld, and to that end the doctrine of relation attaches the approval to the conveyance and makes it operative as of the date of the latter.

Counsel for plaintiffs in error would liken this deed to a power of attorney,—a mere authority to convey, which loses its vitality at the death of the grantor of the power. It seems to us more like a deed fully executed and placed in escrow, to be finally delivered on the performance of a condition. While ordinarily in case of an escrow title passes at the date of the second delivery, yet often, for the prevention of injustice, the deed will relate back to the first delivery so as to pass title at that time. "If the grantor being a feme sole should marry, or whether a feme sole or not should die or be attainted after the first and before the second delivery, and so become incapable of making a deed at the time of second delivery, the deed will be considered as taking effect from the first delivery, in order to accomplish the intent of the grantor, which would otherwise be defeated by the intervening incapacity." Prutsmen v. Baker, 30 Wis. 644, 649, 11 Am. Rep. 592, 596; Vorheis v. Kitch, 8 Phila. 554; Harkreader v. Clayton, 56 Miss. 383, 31 Am. Rep. 369; Black v. Hoyt, 33 Ohio St. 203.

The plaintiffs have no equities superior to those of the purchaser. They are the heirs of the Indian grantor, and as such may rightfully claim to inherit and be secured in the possession of all that property to which he had at his death the full equitable title; but when, as is shown by the approval of the Secretary, he had received full payment of a stipulated price, and that [173] price *was ample, and he had been subjected to no imposition or wrong in making the conveyance, then their claims as heirs cannot be compared in equity with those of the one who had thus bought and paid full value. They certainly do not stand in the attitude of bona fide purchasers. "A person who is a mere volunteer, having acquired title by gift, inheritance, or some kindred mode, cannot come within the scope of the term bona fide purchaser. To enable the grantee to claim protection as a bona fide purchaser he must have parted with something possessing an actual value, capable of being estimated in money, or he must on the faith of the purchase have changed, to his detriment, some legal position that he before had occupied." Devlin, Deeds, § 813.

As, therefore, it has been settled by Pickering v. Lomax, 145 U. S. 310, 36 L. ed. 716, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 860, that approval by the Secretary may be retroactive and take effect by way of relation as of the date of the deed, and as it appears from the fact of the approval by the Secretary that the Indian grantor received full payment for his land and was in no manner imposed upon in the conveyance, and as these plaintiffs have no equitable rights superior to those of the grantee in that deed, it follows that the title conveyed by it must be upheld. The judgment of the Circuit Court is affirmed.

LOUIS AUGUSTE MARANDE et al., Plffs.
in Err.,
v.

TEXAS & PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 173-198.)

Trial—negligence—loss of cotton by fire—inadequate watchmen and fire apparatus —deviation of shipment to port for export.

1. The question whether cotton was set on

NOTE.—On functions of court and jury in negligence cases—see notes to Emry v. Raleigh & G. R. Co. (N. C.) 15 L. R. A. 332, and Roux v. Blodgett & D. Lumber Co. (Mich.) 13 L. R. A. 728.

As to liability of railroad company for fires fire by sparks from a locomotive is for the jury, where the cotton was stored in and along the side of open sheds in close proximity to railroad tracks on each side, although the only locomotive near the cotton on the day that the fire was discovered did not go near the shed where the fire started, and is not shown to have been throwing out any sparks, while, if there had been any, the wind would have carried them in the opposite directions, since one possibility is that the fire was set by other locomotives on a preceding day, and smouldered until the day it was discovered.
184 U. S.

2. Whether a lack of sufficient watchmen contributed to the loss of cotton by fire is a question for the jury, notwithstanding the contention that the watchmen actually present discovered the fire as soon as it started, where it is possible for the jury to infer that the fire might have been smouldering for a considerable period before its discovery, and a sufficient force of watchmen, if present, might have materially aided in extinguishing the fire.

3. Whether the negligence of a railroad company in failing to provide proper facilities for extinguishing fire in cotton sheds contributed to a loss of the cotton by fire is a question for the jury, where the cotton was piled up high around the platforms on which hose was kept, and when an attempt was made to use the hose the water would not come, either because the hose had become tangled, or otherwise, and the valve was found already open when one of the men tried to open it, although the railroad company contends, but without any positive proof of the fact, that one of the employees had opened the valve and tangled the hose after the alarm of fire,—especially when there had been no systematic inspection thereof, and no fire drill had, and no instructions given as to the use of the apparatus.

4. No deviation from the route of a shipment of cotton from Texas to the port of New Orleans for export is made by the carrier's delivery of the cotton at its terminal wharf at Westwego, a few miles above, and on the opposite side of the river from, New Orleans, but outside of the limits of the municipality or of the port, as defined by statute.

[No. 86.]

Argued January 8, 9, 1902. Decided February 24, 1902.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit to review a decision affirming a judgment of the Circuit Court in favor of defendant in an action to recover for cotton destroyed by fire. Reversed.

See same case below, 42 C. C. A. 317, 102 Fed. 246.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

*This action was commenced to recover [174] from the Texas & Pacific Railway Company the value of 65 bales of cotton destroyed by fire on the night of the 12th of November, 1894, whilst the cotton was in the cars of set by it along its line—see note to Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Richardson, 23 L. ed. U. S. 357.

As to when a verdict may be directed by the court—see note to Grand Chute v. Winegar, 21 L. ed. U. S. 174.

the railway company standing on its tracks in the rear of or in close proximity to a terminal wharf of the corporation situated opposite the upper portion of the city of New Orleans, on the west bank of the Mississippi river, at a point called Westwego. The cotton formed part of 100 bales shipped from Greenville, Texas, on the 29th of October, 1894. An export bill of lading was given by the Sherman, Shreveport, & Southern Railway Company, that Company purporting to act, not only on its own, but also on behalf of the Texas & Pacific Railway, and of the Elder Dempster & Co. steamship lines. The bill of lading provided for the carriage of the cotton from the point of shipment "to the port of New Orleans," and thence by the steamship line to Havre, France, and contained numerous conditions and exceptions, one of which exempted the carrier from all loss occasioned by fire. Responsibility of the railway company for the value of the cotton destroyed by fire, although at the time of its destruction it was in the possession of the railway under the bill of lading, was based on the assumption, first, that the fire was due to the negligence of the corporation; and, second, that the carriage of the cotton to the terminal wharf at Westwego, for transshipment there to the steamship line, was a deviation, and hence the railway company was not entitled to avail itself of the exception against loss by fire.

[175] Upon issue joined, a trial was had in the circuit court. After the plaintiffs had introduced their testimony and rested their case, the defendant requested the court to take the case from the jury by giving a peremptory instruction in its favor. This was asked on the ground that there was no proof sufficient to go to the jury, either as to the alleged negligence, or the asserted deviation. The court granted the request, and exceptions were "duly saved by the plaintiffs. From the judgment entered on the verdict the plaintiffs prosecuted error to the circuit court of appeals for the second circuit, and in that court the judgment was affirmed.

The case being one depending not solely on diverse citizenship, the defendant corporation being chartered by an act of Congress, the plaintiffs prosecuted error to this court.

Mr. Treadwell Cleveland argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Frederick E. Mygatt and George Richards, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

It is not in every case where a verdict might be set aside that the court will direct a verdict.

McDonald v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 167 N. Y. 66, 60 N. E. 282.

Defendant, by omitting to introduce evidence, and moving for the direction of a verdict in its favor, admits the truth of plaintiff's testimony, and also the conclusions of fact which the jury may fairly draw from the testimony.

Pleasants v. Fant, 22 Wall. 116, 22 L. ed. 780; Pawling v. United States, 4 Cranch, 219, 2 L. ed. 601.

488

A cause should never be withdrawn from the jury unless the testimony be of such conclusive character as to compel the court, in the exercise of a sound judicial discretion, to set aside a verdict in opposition thereto.

Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Doster, 106 U. S. 30, 27 L. ed. 65, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18.

Or unless the conclusion follows, as a matter of law, that no recovery can be had upon any view which can properly be taken of the facts which the evidence tends to establish.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Cox, 145 U. S. 593, 36 L. ed. 829, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905.

Questions of negligence are peculiarly questions of fact for determination by a jury.

Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Ives, 144 U. S. 408, 36 L. ed. 485, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679; Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Powers, 149 U. S. 43, 37 L. ed. 642, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 748; Gardner v. Michigan C. R. Co. 150 U. S. 349, 37 L. ed. 1107, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140.

The determination of a question of negligence is for the jury when a given state of facts is such that reasonable men may fairly differ upon the question.

Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Griffith, 159 U. S. 603, 40 L. ed. 274, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 105; Warner v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 168 U. S. 339, 42 L. ed. 491, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 68; Patton v. Texas & P. R. Co. 179 U. S. 658, 45 L. ed. 361, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275.

Where the premises are in the exclusive possession and control of the defendant, and the facts are peculiarly within its knowledge, very slight evidence of negligence is sufficient to make out a prima facie case.

J. Russell Mfg. Co. v. New Haven S. B. Co. 50 N. Y. 126.

Taking the cotton-laden cars to a dock already overcrowded with cotton and cars loaded with cotton was negligence.

Thomas v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 802, 63 Fed. 203; Thomas v. Lancaster Mills, 19 C. C. A. 88, 34 U. S. App. 404, 71 Fed. 485.

In regard to fires set by locomotives a slight inference of negligence raised by the plaintiff's case is sufficient to throw the burden of disproving negligence on the defendant. There may be no direct proof of negligence, yet the way in which an injury is done may be such that negligence is the most probable hypothesis by which it can be explained; and when this is so the defendant must disprove negligence by showing that he exercised due care.

Wharton, Neg. § 871.

This rule is particularly clear where the defendant brings its locomotive into close proximity with inflammable material. Indeed, it is negligence to do so.

Hoffman v. King, 160 N. Y. 618, 46 L. R. A. 672, 55 N. E. 401. See also Shearn. & Redf. Neg. § 678; Eddy v. Lafayette, 1 C. C. A. 441, 4 U. S. App. 247, 49 Fed. 807.

If a fact is to be inferred from the evidence, it must be drawn by a jury, and not by the court.

Belton v. Baxter, 58 N. Y. 411; Justice v.
184 U. S.

Lang, 52 N. Y. 323. See also Hackford v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 53 N. Y. 654; Bernhard v. Rensselaer & S. R. Co. 1 Abb. App. Dec. 131.

If it is necessary to determine, as in most cases it is, what a man of ordinary care and prudence would be likely to do under the circumstances proved, this, involving, as it generally must, more or less conjecture, can only be settled by a jury.

Bernhard v. Rensselaer & S. R. Co. 1 Abb. App. Dec. 131.

The court cannot properly instruct the jury as to what inference they may draw from the facts, and can only direct a verdict for the defendant when the evidence given at the trial, with all the inferences which the jury can justifiably draw therefrom, is insufficient to support a verdict for the plaintiffs.

Schofield v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 114 U. S. 615, 29 L. ed. 224, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1125.

There is no rule applicable to the trial of issues of fact in civil actions, which requires a party upon whom the burden of proof rests to establish a case free from reasonable doubt.

Great Western R. Co. v. Braid, 1 Moore, P. C. C. N. S. 101; Hart v. Hudson River Bridge Co. 80 N. Y. 622. See also Quaife v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 48 Wis. 513, 33 Am. Rep. 821, 4 N. W. 658; Whitney v. Clifford, 57 Wis. 156, 14 N. W. 927; Seybolt v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 95 N. Y. 562, 47 Am. Rep. 75.

A presumption of negligence from the simple occurrence of an accident arises where it is caused by the mismanagement or misconstruction of a thing over which the defendant has immediate control, and for the management or construction of which he is responsible.

Scott v. London Dock Co. 3 Hurlst. & C. 596; Western Transp. Co. v. Downer, 11 Wall. 129, 20 L. ed. 160. See also Hicks v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 164 Mass. 424, 41 N. E. 721; Kennedy v. McAllaster, 31 App. Div. 453, 52 N. Y. Supp. 714; Griffen v. Manice, 166 N. Y. 188, 52 L. R. A. 922, 59 N. E. 925.

The taking of the cotton in suit to Westwego, and its detention at that point, for the purpose of these making delivery thereof to the steamship line, constituted a deviation from the regular and usual course of transportation.

Hostetter v. Park, 137 U. S. 30, 34 L. ed. 568, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Lawson, Carr. & Co. § 139; Hutchinson, Carr. & Co. §§ 310 et seq.; Crosby v. Fitch, 12 Conn. 410, 31 Am. Dec. 745; United States Exp. Co. v. Kountze, 8 Wall. 342, 19 L. ed. 457; Maghee v. Camden & A. R. Transp. Co. 45 N. Y. 514, 6 Am. Rep. 124; Constable v. National S. S. Co. 154 U. S. 51, 38 L. ed. 903, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1062; Devato v. 823 Barrels of Plumbago, 20 Fed. 510; Reiss v. Texas & P. R. Co. 39 C. C. A. 149, 98 Fed. 533.

The deviation was material, for the cotton was destroyed at Westwego, and would not have been destroyed if it had been taken to New Orleans.
184 U. S.

Vos v. Robinson, 9 Johns. 192; Fernandez v. Great Western Ins. Co. 48 N. Y. 571; Burgess v. Equitable Marine Ins. Co. 126 Mass. 70, 30 Am. Rep. 654.

The plaintiffs were at least entitled to go to the jury on the question whether such treatment of the cotton was so well known, through commercial custom of long standing, or so general or so universal, as to be fairly within the constructive knowledge of the shippers.

Devato v. 823 Barrels of Plumbago, 20 Fed. 510; Walls v. Bailey, 49 N. Y. 464, 10 Am. Rep. 407; The Sultan v. 3,000 Empty Oil Barrels, 15 Fed. 618. See also 27 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 710, 718, 721; Graff v. Bloomer, 9 Pa. 114; Isakson v. Williams, 26 Fed. 642; The Innocenta, 10 Ben. 410, Fed. Cas. No. 7,050; Hostetter v. Park, 137 U. S. 30, 34 L. ed. 568, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Young v. 140,000 Hard Brick, 78 Fed. 149.

Mr. Rush Taggart argued the cause, and, with Mr. Arthur H. Masten, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The words "port of New Orleans," as used in the bill of lading, have no narrow or restricted meaning, but simply describe in general terms the point of transshipment.

Harrower v. Hutchinson, 38 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 185. See also Sailing-Ship Garston Co. v. Hickie, L. R. 15 Q. B. Div. 580.

The fact that the general usage of the port may not have been known to the shipper does not affect the question of the defendant's right to make such a delivery.

Hostetter v. Park, 137 U. S. 30, 34 L. ed. 568, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.

In every case, before the evidence is left to the jury, there is a preliminary question for the judge, not whether there is literally no evidence, but whether there is any upon which a jury can properly proceed to find a verdict for the party producing it, upon whom the onus of proof is imposed.

Schuylkill & D. Improv. & R. Co. v. Munson, 14 Wall. 442, 20 L. ed. 867; Laidlaw v. Sage, 158 N. Y. 76, 44 L. R. A. 216, 52 N. E. 679.

The court may withdraw a case from the jury altogether, and direct a verdict for the plaintiff or the defendant, as the one or the other may be proper, where the evidence is undisputed, or is of such a conclusive character that the court, in the exercise of a sound judicial discretion, would be compelled to set aside a verdict returned in opposition to it.

Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Converse, 139 U. S. 469, 35 L. ed. 213, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 569; Elliott v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 150 U. S. 245, 37 L. ed. 1068, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 85; Anderson County v. Beal, 113 U. S. 227, 28 L. ed. 966, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433.

Railways are not liable for a mistaken exercise of judgment upon the part of their servants, or their failure to act with the utmost possible promptitude, when the circumstances are such as to afford no time for deliberation.

Lewis v. Long Island R. Co. 162 N. Y. 52, 56 N. E. 548; Wynn v. Central Park, N. & E. R. Co. 133 N. Y. 575, 30 N. E. 721; Bitner v. Crosstown Street R. Co. 153 N. Y. 76, 46 N. E. 1044; Stabenau v. Atlantic Ave. R. Co. 155 N. Y. 511, 50 N. E. 277; Union P. R. Co. v. McDonald, 152 U. S. 262, 38 L. ed. 434, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 619. See also Banks v. Highland Street R. Co. 136 Mass. 485; Bell v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 72 Mo. 50.

It is not permissible to send a case to the jury to guess out the result.

Union P. R. Co. v. McDonald, 152 U. S. 262, 38 L. ed. 434, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 619; Laidlaw v. Sage, 158 N. Y. 76, 44 L. R. A. 216, 52 N. E. 679; Baulee v. New York & H. R. Co. 59 N. Y. 356, 17 Am. Rep. 325; Bond v. Smith, 113 N. Y. 378, 21 N. E. 128; Pauley v. Steam Gauge & Lantern Co. 131 N. Y. 90, 15 L. R. A. 194, 29 N. E. 999; Linkauf v. Lombard, 137 N. Y. 417, 20 L. R. A. 48, 33 N. E. 472.

Where the facts are as consistent with care and diligence on the part of the defendant and its servants as they are with the negligence and inattention of the defendant, the case must not be submitted to the jury, because it would be a mere conjecture for the jury whether the loss was the result of negligence, or was the result of accident.

Western Transp. Co. v. Downer, 11 Wall. 129, 20 L. ed. 160; Baulee v. New York & H. R. Co. 59 N. Y. 356, 17 Am. Rep. 325; Ruppert v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co. 154 N. Y. 94, 47 N. E. 971; People v. Harris, 136 N. Y. 429, 33 N. E. 65; Cadwell v. Arnheim, 152 N. Y. 182, 46 N. E. 310; Laidlaw v. Sage, 158 N. Y. 76, 44 L. R. A. 216, 52 N. E. 679.

The word "port," as used in bills of lading, must be understood in its commercial sense, and as such it was used in this bill of lading with reference to the universal usage and custom of the railway companies to deliver all export cotton to the steamship lines at New Orleans, at their terminals.

Devato v. 823 Barrels of Plumbago, 20 Fed. 510; Sailing-Ship Garston Co. v. Hickie, L. R. 15 Q. B. Div. 580; Price v. Livingstone, L. R. 9 Q. B. Div. 679; Loomis v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 17 Mo. App. 340; Harrower v. Hutcheson, 38 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 185; Hostetter v. Park, 137 U. S. 30, 34 L. ed. 568, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.

[175] *Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

Questions involving the liability of the defendant for damage occasioned by the loss of other cotton by the fire which destroyed the cotton, the value of which is now sought to be recovered, have been previously decided by this court. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Clayton, 173 U. S. 348, 43 L. ed. 725, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 421; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Reiss, 183 U. S. 621, ante, 358, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 253; and Texas & P. R. Co. v. Callender, 183 U. S. 632, ante, 362, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257. Whilst in deciding these cases it was essential to refer to, and in some respects consider, the course of business at the terminal wharf at Westwego, the controversy which here arises for decision involves different considerations, and causes it to be necessary to more fully refer to the establishment of the wharf at Westwego and the course of business at that place prior to and at the time the fire occurred.

In the circuit court of appeals there were a number of assignments of error; now, however, only four of such assignments are pressed,—the 1st, the 12th, the 13th and the 14th. As the 1st of these only complains generally that the circuit court of appeals erred in affirming the judgment, and the 14th is a mere reiteration of the 1st, the only assignments which we are called upon to consider are the 12th and the 13th. The one asserts that the case should have been allowed to go to the jury on the issue of deviation, *the other that error was moreover [176] committed in not permitting the plaintiff to go to the jury on the general question of the loss of the cotton by the negligence of the defendant railway.

In order to pass upon the issues arising on these assignments, the evidence must be considered. In taking it into view, however, we shall do so only to the extent necessary to enable us to decide the question of law which arises, that is, Was the evidence sufficient on the subject of negligence and deviation to go to the jury?

Approaching the city of New Orleans, on the opposite or right descending bank of the Mississippi river, the track of the Texas & Pacific Railroad terminated prior to 1873 at a point called Gouldsboro. There the company had a railway yard, roundhouse, and other structures. It there also had a terminal wharf with an incline, by means of which its cars could be transferred directly across the river by boat to a depot and yard belonging to the company situated at the foot of Thalia street, at about the center of the river front of the city of New Orleans. At the Thalia street depot freight for New Orleans was delivered, and that intended for further transit by way of export or otherwise was also delivered in carload lots over connecting tracks, or, where this could not be done, was hauled and delivered at the expense of the railway to the steamship or other carrier. Prior to 1873 the proof tended to show, at a point some 6 or 8 miles above Gouldsboro, a spur track left the main track of the Texas & Pacific road, and extended for about $\frac{1}{2}$ mile in length to Westwego, on the bank of the river. Before 1873, however, the proof showed that none of the inbound traffic was carried on at Westwego, though at that point probably some outbound freight, intended for the purposes of the railroad, may have been received at Westwego. Some time in 1873 the company constructed a grain elevator at Westwego, and built a terminal wharf at the same point. The proof gives no description of the elevator wharf, except that it was below the freight wharf and connected with it, but the freight wharf is fully described, there being no material variation in the testimony on the subject.

[177] *The wharf was built on the bank of the river. It was constructed on piles and stood above the water, the piling having placed on it beams and joists upon which planks were nailed, constituting a flooring which had very narrow spaces between the planks, as they were not tongued and grooved. The wharf was about 800 feet, stretching up and down the river front, and was somewhere between 350 to 400 feet in depth, that is, running back from the river front to where it rested against the bank. On this wharf were constructed two freight sheds, the one designated as No. 1 began some short distance above the lower end of the wharf, and extended up for a length of between 250 to 300 feet. At a short distance, above the upper end of this shed, the flooring on the wharf ceased, and there was an open space about 50 feet, extending up the wharf, and which was near about the width of the shed; in this place the piling had been driven and the joists and beams placed, but no flooring was laid. Beyond this open space there was built shed known as No. 2, of the same dimensions as the lower one. Both of these sheds were wooden structures raised on posts placed in the wharf, entirely open at each end and at each side. The roof commenced at about 20 feet above the flooring of the wharf, and was surmounted by a cupola running the entire length of each shed, which was covered with a lattice or wooden work like a wooden shutter. The number of the rows of posts in each shed is not made clear in the proof, but it tended to show that the posts were somewhere between 20 and 30 feet apart. About 8 to 10 feet in front of both of these sheds along the wharf was a railroad track, which entered the wharf from the lower end, and extended to and beyond the extreme upper end of shed No. 2. Between the outer rail of this track and the river front there was a space on the wharf of about 30 feet. Behind the sheds were two railroad tracks running the entire length, and extending above the upper end of No. 2 shed, somewhere between 50 and 100 feet.

Westwego was not within either the municipal limits of the city of New Orleans, or the limits of the port of New Orleans, as defined by statute. It was shown that the season of active cotton receipts in the city [178] of New Orleans commences about *the 1st of September and ends about May of each year, and that the Westwego wharf was completed in time to enable the railway company to avail of its facilities for, if not the whole, at least a portion, of the business of the cotton season of 1893 and 1894. After the construction of the wharf in the season in question the great bulk of cotton handled by the Texas & Pacific Railroad under export bills of lading was deflected from its main track at the Westwego spur track, carried to the terminal wharf, and there unloaded and transhipped. This the proof showed was the course of business also as to all export cotton in the following season of 1894 and 1895, up to the time of the fire, except, perhaps, as to small lots of cotton intended for export, where the number of bales would not justify the coming of a steamer to the wharf at Westwego, in which case the cotton was carried to Gouldsboro, transferred, and delivered. In arranging to carry export cotton the course of business was this: The Texas Pacific Railway would contract with steamship lines for the carrying of a given quantity of cotton at a stated price, and under these contracts would then, through either itself or through other carriers at various points of original shipment, issue through bills of lading, embracing both railroad and water carriage. The method pursued by the railway to bring about the formal delivery to the steamship lines of the export cotton at the Westwego wharf after its arrival is fully stated in the case of Texas & P. R. Co. v. Clayton, 173 U. S. 348, 43 L. ed. 725, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 421. It was shown that under the contracts made by the railway with the steamship companies there was always an understanding that the ships would not be obliged to suffer the expense of moving from their own docks, usually in the city of New Orleans, to the Westwego wharf, for the purpose of loading cotton, unless a sufficient amount, variously stated at from 1,000 to 2,500 bales, was on hand for delivery.

It appears that other railroads possessed terminal wharfs on the river, some of them being outside of the municipal and port limits, and that they were used as a depot for the shipment of through billed export cotton, under methods of business substantially similar to those at Westwego. The export cotton intended for transshipment at the Westwego wharf was *thus handled: On ar-[179] riving in the vicinity, the cars were usually, in the night-time, switched to the tracks running in the rear of the wharf beside the open sheds, and the cotton would then be unloaded and stored in the sheds, whence, when called for, it was delivered to the steamships. The track running the length of the wharf in front of the sheds was principally used for the bringing in of freight intended for shipment by water other than cotton. The cars containing it would be drawn or pushed by a locomotive along the track, and the freight would then be moved from the cars to the vessels.

During the cotton season of 1894 and 1895 (prior to November the 12th, 1894) labor troubles of a serious character occurred at the docks in the city of New Orleans. The disturbances, the proof tends to show, caused delay in the movement from the port of New Orleans of export cotton. Either because of this fact or because of an unusually large cotton crop, or an unexpectedly rapid movement of cotton to the seaboard by the Texas & Pacific lines, large quantities of export cotton accumulated in the sheds on the wharf at Westwego. The cotton, which was all compressed, was stored in the following manner: The bales were piled between 15 and 20 feet high throughout the whole space of the shed, but probably three, and certainly not more than four, narrow gangways being left in each shed, running from front to rear. There was no possible doubt from the evidence that no gangways were left running lengthwise of the sheds. There was also proof tending to show that these narrow gangways, as the cotton accumulated, were obstructed by bales of cotton standing endwise. The proof also tended to show that the accumulation of cotton became so great that on the river front of the sheds, in the open space towards the railroad track, cotton was also placed, approaching so close to the railroad track, that as an engine moved along carrying or pushing cars containing freight intended for shipment there was not sufficient space between the cotton and the track to enable a person to stand with perfect safety. It appeared that around the open space between the upper end of the No. 1 and the lower end of the No. 2 shed cotton had also been piled. It was shown that most, if not all, of the cotton exposed as [180] stated was *not covered with tarpaulins, and no other means were resorted to to protect it from the danger of fire arising from the operation of the locomotives in the rear and front of the sheds and among the cotton on the wharf.

Westwego was remote from any town or village having a police force or a fire department. The wharf exclusively belonged to the railway company, and was under its control; property on it, therefore, had the benefit of no police protection except that afforded by the company, and in case of fire had nothing to rely upon except the men and appliances which the company furnished. The fire appliances were as follows: There was a tank near the grain elevator standing at such a height as to afford adequate pressure. This tank was supplied by a pump drawing its water from the river. From the tank a pipe ran to the wharf and passed under the floor of each of the sheds. In each shed there were three hydrants or water pipes, in the middle of the shed—about equidistant; they were by the side of the posts, and stood 6 feet above the floor. On each of the six posts by which the hydrants stood and connected to them there was a platform 6 or more feet above the floor, on which was placed 100 feet of coiled hose. A witness testified that some months or more before the fire he had seen hose stretched along the front posts of the shed resting on pieces nailed to such posts, but there was other testimony tending to give rise to the reasonable inference that no such hose was there at the time of the fire. The testimony on this subject, however, had no relation to the hose coiled on the platforms on or around the posts where the hydrants were situated. This is conclusively the case, since the witness who testified as to hose being stretched as above stated spoke only of the front, and said he had not observed the hydrants and their condition, and knew nothing of them. We say this in passing, because in the argument for the defendant in error it is suggested that the testimony of the witness in question related to the hose at the hydrants, and was all the testimony on the subject in the record, overlooking the clear and cumulative testimony that the hose, at the hydrants, was connected with them and coiled on a platform on or around the posts about 6 feet above the floor. The evidence left it *uncertain exactly [181] where the valve was placed which opened the connection with the water. The proof tended to show that the valve was either under the floor with an opening to reach it, or just above it, at the base of the hydrant pipe. As the three hydrant pipes in each shed stood beside the posts, and the gangways running from front to rear, although very narrow, were shown not to be obstructed by the posts, it was therefore inferable from the proof that the posts where the hydrant pipes stood had cotton piled around them. Indeed, this inference was sustained by direct evidence tending to show that the posts near which the hydrants stood had cotton piled around them from 12 to 15 feet high, and there was also proof tending to show that in some instances the cotton so piled had fallen over on the hose on the platform, and the bale which did so had to be removed.

There was testimony tending to show that along the front and rear of the sheds there were barrels containing water with buckets hanging near. It was shown without contradiction that there were no chemical fire engines, although there was testimony tending to show that what were designated as chemical fire buckets had been bought at about the time the wharf was built, and there was conflict in the testimony as to whether these buckets were on hand for use at the time of the fire. The evidence tended to show that no general directions as to handling or the use of the hose in case of fire had been given, that no fire drill had ever taken place, nor had the men in charge of the wharf been ever instructed in any way as to the use of the apparatus which has just been described.

The wharf in the day time was under the direct authority of an employee designated as chief clerk; in the night-time it was in the charge of one regular employee of the company and three watchmen, who were the members of a special private police force in the city of New Orleans, the railway company contracting with the head of the special police organization for the services of the three men at the wharf, and a like number of men were on watch during the day time. In other words, in the night-time the wharf was in charge of but four men, one a regular employee of the company, and three special policemen *employed as just stated, [182] and their duty extended over the whole surface of the wharf and sheds, as well as under the wharf.

A short while prior to November 12, growing out of supposed danger resulting from fear of election disturbances, the force at the wharf was increased by a few men, whose duty it was to patrol the space under the wharf and prevent persons from entering by boats or otherwise. This force, prior to the fire, had been reduced to the number previously stated.

It was shown that at a wharf in the city of New Orleans belonging to a steamship company where cotton had accumulated, the force of watchmen employed was largely in excess of the number at Westwego, and that at a terminal wharf of another railroad, where there was about half the quantity of cotton which was on the wharf at Westwego at the time of the fire, there were twenty-five watchmen employed instead of four, the number at Westwego; that there were Babcock fire extinguishers, hose placed on reels ready for use, and that this hose was used almost daily for the purpose of washing down the wharves, and to enable the men in control to be familiar with its use in case of emergency.

By about the middle of October, 1894, the accumulation of cotton at the wharf of Westwego had been so great that the proof showed that the railroad officials had become solicitous on the subject, and deemed that they were in great risk of fire. It was also shown that about that date a destructive fire had occurred in a wharf where cotton was stored in the city of New Orleans, presumed to be the result of the labor disturbances, and that at Westwego, during the daytime, within a period not remote from the general conflagration which ensued, subsequently, the longshoremen working there had discovered a fire smouldering in a bale of compressed cotton which was in the tiers, and that it had been extinguished by throwing down the cotton and removing the bale; and that this fact had been reported to the officers of the company. Prior to Monday, the 12th of November, 1894, cars loaded with cotton were being brought in in the night-time in the rear of the sheds, and for days prior to that date vessels had been [183] loading in front of *both of the sheds, some with cotton and some with other products. On the 12th of November two steamers were at the wharf; one about abreast of the lower end of No. 1 shed, and the other opposite the upper or No. 2 shed; that for the purpose of bringing in the cargo taken by these ships, a locomotive was operating among the cotton on the wharf in front of the shed, and was passing back and forth on the track, pushing cars containing the freight to be loaded. Although there was some proof indicating that on that particular day the locomotive which entered from the lower end of the wharf proceeded up the track abreast of No. 2 shed, we assume, for the purposes of this opinion only, that it was shown that the locomotive was pushing so many cars ahead of her that she did not get abreast of the No. 2 shed. There was no proof that the locomotive, in operating along the front of the wharf, was emitting sparks from her smokestack or dropping cinders from her fire-box.

There was evidence as to the direction of the wind on the 12th of November. The parties asserting that opposing inferences were to be deduced therefrom, but, without undertaking to consider this controversy, we assume, only for the purpose of this opinion, that the result of this proof as to the direction of the wind tended alone to show that if a spark had been emitted from the locomotive operating on the front of the wharf, as above stated, the wind would have carried it away from the No. 2 shed, where the fire subsequently broke out, as we shall hereafter state.
184 U. S.

On Monday, the 12th of November, 1894, the accumulation of cotton was so great that there were stored in the sheds and on the wharf in the manner which we have indicated, about 20,000 bales of compressed cotton, and there were in cars, standing on tracks in the vicinity of the wharf and sheds, about 8,000 bales more, awaiting storage room. The cotton sued for was among the latter. On the evening of the date above mentioned, shortly after the day force had ceased work and the four night watchmen had come on duty, the cotton was discovered to be on fire. The flames spread rapidly, and a disastrous conflagration followed, with the result that most of the *cotton in [184] the sheds and the sheds themselves, as well as cotton in the cars in the vicinity, among which was that sued for, was destroyed. What took place at the time of the discovery of the fire was testified to by only one witness, one of the night watchmen, Robeau, who was one of the three special officers of the private police agency. His statement of what occurred may be thus summarized: His place of duty was at the upper or No. 2 shed, and his business was to pass around and through the shed, and at designated intervals register his presence upon a watchman's clock. After sending a telephone message to indicate his presence at his post, and whilst he was on the river side of shed No. 2, at the lower end, he heard a cry of fire. Running immediately to a gangway, he crossed to the rear or wood side of the shed. Not seeing the fire, he ran up the rear side and across by a gangway to the river front, thence running along the river front of the shed he turned into another gangway and hastened towards the rear of the shed. In going through there he discovered Valle (the one of the four watchmen who was the regular employee of the railroad company) standing on top of the piled cotton, about 15 feet from the floor. Robeau joined Valle, who had the nozzle of a hose in his hand, from which no water was being thrown. From the place where the two stood on the piled cotton they saw a fire burning near the floor in the direction of the upper end of the shed. As they stood upon the pile of cotton they were above the hydrant pipe running up by the post, and about 6 feet above the platform around or upon the post, upon which was coiled the 100 feet of hose connected with the hydrant. From where they stood both the hydrant pipe and the platform with the coiled hose on it were hidden from their view by the piled cotton. Valle, holding the nozzle of the hose in his hand, from which no water was flowing, called upon Robeau to get down between the piles of cotton and open the water valve. Robeau squeezed himself through the space between the cotton piled around the post to the floor, felt about for the valve, perceived water on the floor, declared the valve to be open, and rejoined Valle. They both dragged at the hose, but no water flowed. The burning cotton flamed up, [185] Valle called upon Robeau *to get down on the platform around the post and uncoil or untangle the hose. He refused on account of the intensity of the fire, and both became alarmed and ran away. The destruction of the property ensued.

As the only witness who testified concerning the outbreak of the fire, the alarm, and the efforts to extinguish it, was Robeau, and as therefore his testimony is of the utmost importance in determining whether the case should have been allowed to go to the jury, we excerpt in the margin† the portions of his testimony which are material.

[186] *Such being the proof, was it sufficient to go to the jury? is the question then for de-

†Q. Now go on and state what occurred. A. After we had done telephoning, and saw everything was all right, we came to the office—I mean to the office of the shed No. 1—to take my lamp, and I went to my beat, and I met the one that was there, and I said “How is it?” He told me “All right.” I took off my coat and put my lamp away. Then I came to make my rounds as usual, to see if everything was right, where my key was. About five or six minutes I was standing there, or seven minutes; I can’t tell exactly. I saw the private watchman pass. In about a minute or two I heard “Fire! Fire!”

By the Court:

Q. You heard the cry of fire? A. The crying of “Fire! Fire!” I run to the woods side to see if I could see anybody, but I could not see anybody, and then I run to the river side, and then I run to the fire and I passed through the shed to go to the woods side and I saw Valle with hose in his hand, and he says, “Go down and open the valve.”

Q. What did you do? A. I went to open the valve. I could only go sideways. I couldn’t hardly stand; and I found the valve wide open. Then I came back and tried to help Mr. Valle with the hose in his hand. Everything was in flames. I couldn’t do anything. I tried all my might to have the water, but we could not have any water. The hose was too heavy; we couldn’t do anything at all; and he says to me, “Robeau, go down and untangle the hose.” I says, “I won’t go down where the flame is.” I kept up; that is the only thing I could do. I went to the other end of my beat, and took my coat and ran away.

Q. Where did you first see the light of the flame that night? A. I was about 70 feet from the light.

Q. When you saw Valle did you first see the light of the flame? A. I saw Valle first.

Q. And when you first saw Valle, where was he? A. On top of the cotton.

Q. Whereabouts? About 12 or 15 feet high on top of the cotton.

By the Court:

Q. Whereabouts on the wharf? A. At the woods side.

By Mr. Cleveland:

Q. You were on the woods side? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was Valle? A. He was on the cotton.

Q. Whereabouts, with relation to the center of the shed? A. The fire?

Q. No; where was Valle? A. He was about cision. In answering this question, as we have said at the outset, we shall be called to pass upon, not *the preponderance of the [187] evidence, but whether it was adequate to go to the jury; and this involves, not a decision as to the facts, but the determination of a proposition of law.

*In Washington Gaslight Co. v. Lansden, [188] 172 U. S. 534, 43 L. ed. 543, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 296, the question of the liability of the gas company for certain acts of its general manager, in respect to procuring the publication *of a libel, was presented for deter- [189] mination. In the course of the opinion, after observing that in the case no specific authority was pretended to have been given to the general manager on the subject, the court said, p. 545, L. ed. p. 548, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 300:

“We are then limited to an inquiry wheth- [190] er the evidence is sufficient upon which a the center of the shed, but the upper end: because the fire was about 70 or 75 feet below the upper end.

Q. When you first saw Valle what was he doing? A. He had the hose in his hand.

Q. What was he doing with it? A. He couldn’t do nothing. When I went down there he told me to go down and open the valve; and so I went, and it was wide open.

Q. When you were down there trying this faucet, and found that it was wide open, did you see any water coming out? A. No, not a drop. We couldn’t have any water.

Q. You did not see any water when you were opening the valve? A. Yes; saw the pouring.

Q. Leaking, you mean? A. Yes.

Q. When you clambered up with Valle, and he had the hose in his hand, what part of the hose did he have in his hand? A. The pipe.

Q. Was there any water coming out? A. No, sir.

Q. What was he doing when you got up on that pile of cotton? A. Tried to have water, but he could not have none.

Q. Was Valle on the hose? A. Yes, and I was too; but everything was in flames, we couldn’t do nothing at all.

Q. You say he said to you, “Go down and untangle that hose?” A. Yes, sir.

Q. How do you mean go down? Where was the hose? A. The hose was pretty near where the fire was, against the post.

Q. Against the post? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it on the platform? A. On the floor.

Q. On the floor of the platform? A. Yes.

Q. On the posts? How high up from the floor of the dock? A. The hose?

Q. Yes. A. The hose was about 6 feet high.

Q. What did you do when you got up with Valle? A. Tried to pull out the hose to have the water to extinguish the fire, but we could not. Everything was in flames.

Q. When did you first see the flames that night? Before you got up to Valle? A. When I got on top I saw the flames.

Q. How many bales of cotton were on fire then, as you recollect it? A. About 3 or 4 bales.

Q. No water came out of the hose? A. No, sir.

Q. How long were you there pulling that hose, trying to untangle it? A. Maybe two or three seconds, because we tried the best we could.

Q. Describe to the jury this fire. Where was it? Was it on the top of the cotton or at jury might be permitted to base an inference that Leetch had the necessary authority to act for the company in this business. If different inferences might fairly be drawn from the evidence by reasonable men, then the jury should be permitted to choose for themselves. But if only one inference could be drawn from the evidence, and that is a want of authority, then the question is a legal one for the court to decide."

The court then reviewed the evidence on this branch of the case, and concluded as follows, p. 548, L. ed. 549, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 301:

[191] "We are of opinion that the court erred in submitting to the jury the question whether Leetch, in respect to the subject of the letters written by him to Brown, had authority to bind the company. The court should have directed a verdict for the corporation on the ground that there was an entire lack of evidence upon which to base a verdict against it."

In Patton v. Texas & P. R. Co. 179 U. S. 658, 45 L. ed. 361, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275, the following facts appeared: The action was brought by Patton to recover damages for injuries sustained while in the employ of the railway company as a fireman. On a second trial a verdict was directed for the defendant, upon which judgment was rendered, and the court of appeals affirmed such judgment.

Answering the contention of the plaintiff in error that the trial court erred in directing a verdict and in failing to leave the question of negligence to the jury, the court said, p. 659, L. ed. p. 363, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 276:

"That there are times when it is proper the bottom? A. At the bottom of the floor.

Q. How near did you come to the flames that night, when you were nearest to them? A. About 15 paces.

Q. In your judgment, if you had had a sufficient stream of water— A. We could easy put it out.

Q. Wait. In your judgment, if the water had come out of the hose that night—a full stream of water—such as the hose was able to carry, could you have extinguished the flames? A. Yes, sir; myself alone.

Cross-examination by Mr. Taggart:

Q. Where were you on the wharf when you first heard this cry of fire? A. I was about 30 feet under the shed, at the lower end.

Q. Towards No. 1 shed? A. Yes.

Q. On the river side? A. On the river side.

Q. That is, out near the tug that was there? A. About 30 or 40 feet. I can't say exactly.

Q. Were you under the shed? A. Under the shed.

Q. Which way did you go when you heard the cry of fire? A. My idea first was to go to the woods side to see if I could see anybody.

Q. Were you at a gangway? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You went through that gangway then to the woods side? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you saw nothing? A. I saw nothing. Then I run to the river side.

Q. Did you come back through the same gangway? A. No, sir.

Q. You went up along the woods then? A. I went to the upper end of my beat after I heard the noise "Fire! Fire!"

Q. Did you go clear up to the upper end? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you did not see any fire up there? A. No.

Q. Then where did you go? A. I went to the woods again. I went through the gangway, and I saw Valle.

Q. This hose he had in his hand, you say, did you? A. He had what?

Q. He had the hose pipe in his hand, did he? A. Yes, he had the pipe in his hand.

Q. How far was the hydrant from where he was? A. About 10 feet; but where he was he could not see the hydrant.

Q. He could not see the hydrant? A. He was on top of the cotton. He could not see me when I went down neither.

Q. What did you do when you went there? A. I went there and I saw the valve was wide open.

Q. The what? A. The valve of the pipe.

184 U. S.

Q. And was there water in the hose? A. Kind of water; yes, in the hose.

Q. It had pushed out in the hose, had it? A. Yes, swelled up.

Q. How far had it pushed out and swelled up in the hose? A. I didn't look. As soon as I saw it open I went to Valle to help him.

Q. What did you do to help him? A. We tried to pull the hose free, and we couldn't do anything.

Q. The pressure of water had kinked the hose? A. Yes, the hose was so tangled that we couldn't do anything. At the same time the blaze was going; and Valle says to me, "Go down and have it untaugled." And I said, "No, I won't go, go yourself if you want to."

Q. And you run away then, did you? A. Yes, I did. I tried to save my skin.

Q. This cotton was blazing? A. Yes, very high.

Q. Blazing right up? A. Yes.

Q. Blazing way up? A. Yes.

Q. How high was it blazing when you got there? A. About 6 feet from the floor—about.

Q. How high was the pile of cotton? A. The cotton was piled about 15 feet high.

Q. Was it blazing along the side of that pile of cotton? A. Yes, spread out.

Q. Spread out along the ends of the bales, was it? A. Yes.

Q. Where was this kink in the hose—down below Valle? A. Where the platform was?

Q. Yes. A. About 6 feet under.

Q. You say the valve, when you tried it, was wide open? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far out in this hose had the water pushed out from the pipe? A. I don't know that.

Q. Did you take hold of the hose to see? A. With all my might, all the strength I had.

Q. And the pressure of water was so heavy that you could not straighten it out? A. We couldn't budge it.

Q. Do you know who opened that valve? A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know how high the fire was when that valve was opened? A. Yes.

Q. How high was it when the valve was opened—when it was first opened?

The Court: He found it open.

The Witness: I found it open when I got there.

Q. You don't know who opened it? A. No, I don't know who opened it.

Q. How long were you there with Valle when you discovered this fire? A. I never took my watch for that. I did the best I could.

Q. About how long were you there? A. Maybe two or three seconds; I don't know.

for a court to direct a verdict is clear. 'It is well settled that the court may withdraw a case from them altogether and direct a verdict for the plaintiff or the defendant, as the one or the other may be proper, where the evidence is undisputed, or is of such conclusive character that the court, in the exercise of a sound judicial discretion, would be compelled to set aside a verdict returned in opposition to it. Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Doster, 106 U. S. 30, 32, 27 L. ed. 65, 66, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Griggs v. Houston, 104 U. S. 553, 26 L. ed. 840; Randall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 109 U. S. 478, 482, 27 L. ed. 1003, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 322; Anderson County v. Beal. 113 U. S. 227, 241, 28 L. ed. 966, 971, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433; Schofield v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 114 U. S. 615, 618, 29 L. ed. 224, 225, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1125; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Converse, 139 U. S. 469, 472, 35 L. ed. 213, 214, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 569. See also Aerkfetz v. Humphreys, 145 U. S. 418, 36 L. ed. 758, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 835; Elliott v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 150 U. S. 245, 37 L. ed. 1068, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 85.'

"It is undoubtedly true that cases are not to be lightly taken from the jury; that jurors are the recognized triers of questions of fact, and that ordinarily negligence is so far a question of fact as to be properly submitted to and determined by them. Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Powers, 149 U. S. 43, 37 L. ed. 642, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 748."

We come, then, to an analysis of the evidence for the purpose of ascertaining whether it was correctly decided that it afforded no reasonable ground upon which a jury, in the exercise of its *functions, could have in-[192]ferred that the destruction of the cotton by fire was occasioned by the negligence of the defendant. In doing so we shall, of course, be mindful, as was said in Patton v. Texas & P. R. Co. 179 U. S. 658, 45 L. ed. 361, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275, that as both courts below have held that the evidence had not the tendency stated, their decision is entitled to great respect—a respect, however, which cannot relieve us from the duty of securing the plaintiffs in the enjoyment of their constitutional right to trial by jury if, in our opinion, the case made by them was one proper to be decided as one of fact by the jury, and not to be concluded as a matter of law by the court.

All the reasonable tendencies of the proof, if any, to show negligence, must arise from

Q. And then where did you go? A. I went up stairs to help him.

Q. You went up on the cotton? A. On the cotton.

Q. How long were you there with him? A. Maybe one or two seconds.

Q. Then where did you go? A. I said I tried to save myself.

Q. In saving yourself, where did you go? A. I went to the lower end of my beat and took my overcoat and ran away. I didn't stay any more.

Q. No, how long was it before the fire was spread all over the No. 2 shed? A. About ten minutes.

Q. And about two seconds after you got there you had to run away on account of the fire, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know where the fire started? A. Right in the center of the shed; I mean up the shed, about 40 or 50 feet this side.

Q. About 40 or 50 feet south of the upper end of No. 2 shed? A. I can't say exactly. About 70 feet, maybe. I don't know.

Q. About that far from the upper end of No. 2 shed? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in the center of the shed, wasn't it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And near the bottom of a pile of cotton, wasn't it? A. What?

Q. Was it near the bottom of the pile that it was burning? A. At the floor, I told you where it started.

Q. Was there a whole pile of cotton on fire? A. When I got there I saw the light of the fire.

Q. Where did you see the light from? Where were you when you saw the light of the fire? A. Didn't I tell you that?

Q. No, you have not. A. Didn't I tell you I was about 70 feet from the light of the fire?

Q. Was it in a gangway that the fire was? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you at the end of the gangway when you saw the light? A. I was on the platform outside.

Q. And did you see the light down the gangway? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much of a fire was there then, when you saw that? A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. You did not see the fire? A. Yes; when I came to climb up on the cotton, Vaile says to me: "Go down and open the valve."

Q. I didn't ask that. I asked how much of a fire there was? A. I don't know.

Q. You did not see the fire? A. I saw the light of the fire.

Q. How much light was there: was it a big light? A. How much light was there?

Q. Yes; how much light did you see? A. I can't say exactly how much light I saw.

Q. Did you see it over the piles of cotton? A. No, sir; we couldn't see it.

Q. You could not see it over the piles of cotton? A. Because I passed there, about 15 paces from the places in the gangway.

Q. When? A. To come to Vaile.

Q. And you did not see it in the other gangway, then, did you? A. No, of course not.

Q. You say this blaze was about 6 feet high when you got there? A. 6 or 7 feet high, yes.

Q. And how many bales of cotton was it covering? A. I don't know. I saw the light of the fire.

Q. I know, but when you got there?

The Court: When you got there to Vaile?

A. Three or four bales.

Q. Had it burned the covering off the bales? A. They were spread out.

Q. How wide was the fire; how wide was the blaze? A. About 15 or 20 feet I should say.

Q. Was it on the end of a solid bale of cotton? Was the pile of cotton solid there that it was burning against? Do you understand that? A. What do you mean?

Q. Was this cotton piled? A. Yes, like that.

Q. And was it burning 15 feet high? A. Yes, spreading.

Q. Spreading rapidly? A. Yes.

Q. How long was it from the time you heard Vaile cry "fire" until you got to Vaile? A. Maybe half a minute. I don't believe it was.

three propositions, which we shall proceed to consider in their order.

First. The manner in which the cotton was stored and the operation of the locomotives in and about the same so as to subject the cotton to danger of fire and to cause the prompt detection of a fire to be so difficult as to render it practically impossible in time to prevent a conflagration.

That the storage of such a great mass of cotton in the open sheds and on the wharf, with only a few narrow gangways from front to rear, with no passageways between the tiers running lengthwise of the sheds, so as to enable the cotton to be inspected and to be accessible upon an alarm of fire, with substantially no tarpaulins or other covering, and the operation of the locomotives in and around the open sheds and in front of the wharf among the cotton so situated, at least afforded sufficient proof to go to the jury, we think is too clear for discussion. This was not controverted by either the trial court or the circuit court of appeals, but the proposition which those courts felt constrained to uphold was that, as the proof did not in their opinion furnish any reasonable ground from which it could be inferred that the acts above enumerated had actually tended to produce the fire, therefore, even although there was negligence in the matters suggested, they furnished no reasonable ground upon which the jury could have given a verdict for the plaintiffs. This reasoning proceeded upon three assumptions, (a) because the proof did not [193] show that the locomotive *operating along the front of the wharf, on the morning of the 12th of November, had traversed the track opposite to or in the immediate vicinity of the place in No. 2 shed where the fire occurred; (b) because there was no proof that the locomotive was emitting sparks or dropping fire from its firebox, and if there had been, because the proof as to the direction of the wind showed that such sparks, if emitted, would have been blown away from the direction of the upper part of No. 2 shed where the fire broke out; and (c) because the fire was immediately discovered on its outbreak.

But each of these propositions either rested on premises of fact where no proof whatever existed, or disregarded what the jury would have had the right to conclude was the reasonable tendency of the proof as made. There was no question that the proof showed, leaving aside the movement of the engine on the wharf on the morning of the 12th of November, that other locomotives had been moving in the rear of the wharf and in its vicinity probably on the night of the 11th, and certainly on the 10th, and previously; and the proof also unquestionably showed that for days prior to the breaking out of the fire, except it may be Sunday, vessels had been loading at the wharf in front of the No. 2 shed, and the tendency of the proof was to show that the cargo which they took was carried on the wharf in front of the shed by locomotives. To hold, then, that there was no proof tending to show that the conflagration was the result of the movement of locomotives about and among the piles of exposed cotton, was simply to say such must have been the case because the proof did not tend to show that the fire could have been caused by the locomotive which was on the wharf on the morning of the 12th. This, however, was only to find, in the absence of all proof as to any other origin of the fire, that it would have been unreasonable for the jury to deduce the conclusion that the fire was the result of other and previous proximity of the locomotives to the cotton. The obvious danger resulting from the use of the locomotives, as described, in and about so easily ignitable a material as cotton, particularly when stored and unprotected as this was, is to our mind so clear that we think the least that can be said is, when *the origin of the fire was otherwise unexplained, that the jury would have been reasonably justified in drawing the inference that the use of the locomotives caused the fire. And the general course of legislation, both in England and this country, demonstrates the soundness of this conclusion. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Mathews, 165 U. S. 1, 41 L. ed. 611, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243. The only possible ground by which this can be met is the assumption that because there was no proof tending to show the operation of a locomotive in the rear of the sheds or on the front of No. 2 shed, for a considerable period of time before the fire, therefore sparks from the locomotives could not have caused the fire, because if they had the conflagration would have broken out sooner. But this assumes that compressed cotton, piled up as this was, if ignited by sparks, would necessarily at once break out into flame, and disregards the right to have the judgment of the jury as to whether the fiber of such cotton, when so situated, on being touched by a spark, might not have smoldered for a considerable time, until such headway had been gained as to cause the fire to break into flame. In other words, there being two inferences to be drawn from the testimony, one of a sudden outbreak of the fire and the other of a long-continued smoldering, it was the province of the jury to pass upon the question. And this disposes of the assumption that the fire was discovered immediately on its breaking out. Such assumption, however, was a mere unreasonable inference from the facts in favor of the defendant and against the plaintiff, and rested on the predicate that there was nothing in the proof which would have justified a jury, although the cotton was compressed and piled up, in inferring that the fire might have smoldered for a considerable time before bursting into flame. It was certainly open to the plaintiff to direct the attention of the jury to the obvious natural law that any fibrous material, like cotton, when tightly compressed and piled, as was the cotton in question, if ignited by a spark, may smoulder for an uncertain period. The only proof on the subject of the discovery of the fire is that to which we have referred, giving an account of the alarm of fire by Valle. The mere fact, however, that he gave an alarm of fire when he discovered it does not support *the inference that the fire had not been burning for a considerable period before he knew of it. Indeed, when the state of the fire, as described by the witness Robeau when he first saw it, is taken into consideration, and the natural tendency of a tightly compressed fiber to smoulder is borne in mind, the jury might have reasonably inferred, we think, from the condition of the fire when first seen by Robeau and the rapid and extensive conflagration which almost immediately resulted, that the discovery marked, not the time when the ignition of the cotton took place, but the breaking out of the cotton into a flame as a consequence of its prior burning. This also disposes of the view that, although the cotton was negligently stored by leaving no gangways through the length of it, by which it could be inspected and the presence of fire be promptly detected, the proof did not tend to justify a recovery because the fire was discovered in the mass of cotton just as soon as it would have been if proper precautions had been taken in its storage. The description of the state of the fire, we think, afforded ground for a jury to otherwise find, for the only proof on the subject was that, in order to discover the fire, the watchmen had to climb up on the pile of cotton, and that it was not possible, from the gangway, to have seen the fire, as it would have been if suitable openings lengthwise had been left.

[194]

Second. That the proof showed negligence in the care of the property inasmuch as the number of watchmen who were engaged were greatly inadequate for the service, and therefore the jury would have been reasonably justified in finding that the destruction of the cotton was occasioned thereby.

Here, also, we think it was evident that the presence of only four watchmen to care for so vast an accumulation of cotton stored and exposed to the risks it was subjected to was sufficient to go to the jury on the question of negligence. Both the courts below with reference to this ground substantially concluded, as they did as to the former one, that even although the number of watchmen was insufficient, nevertheless as the inadequate number of watchmen discovered the fire as soon as it broke out, a greater number of watchmen could have done no more, [196]*therefore the inference of negligence contributing to the loss was, as a matter of law, unwarranted. This, however, but rested on the assumption that the fire was immediately discovered. On the contrary, as we have said, not only the reasonable inference that cotton stored and piled like that here in question, when ignited, would smoulder, but the actual facts as to the conflagration in hand, we think, were sufficient to go to the jury so as to enable the jury to conclude whether, if an adequate force of watchmen had been on hand, the fire might have been sooner detected and the property saved from destruction. But the larger number of watchmen would have been efficient, not only in detecting the fire, but for the purpose, in such an emergency, of handling the cotton in order that the fire might be gotten at and extinguished. That an adequate force might have so done was reasonable to infer, especially in view of the proof that in the daylight, when a larger body of men were at work, smouldering cotton was discovered in one of the lower bales, and by removing the others and getting at the ignited bale in a tier, a conflagration was prevented.

Third. That the jury would have had reasonable ground to infer negligence from the inadequacy of the fire apparatus and from the want of instructions as to its use or competent men to handle it.

This proposition, we think, is also well founded. The argument to the contrary is that, as it was shown that if the apparatus which was there had been properly worked, the fire would have been extinguished, therefore there was no negligence in respect to such appliances. The proof was construed to be that when Robeau heard the alarm of fire and rushed to the point where Valle stood, upon the cotton, and was ordered by Valle to go down and open the valve, he found the valve open, because Valle had previously opened it. But we have searched the record in vain for any direct proof that Valle had opened the valve before Robeau's arrival. Non constat, therefore, that the valve had not been left open negligently some time previously, as it was hid from view by the cotton, and if the open valve therefore caused the tangling of the hose or *rendered it so that it could not be moved. [197] the negligence in respect to the care of the hose would be that of the company. If it be that one inference from the testimony would have justified the conclusion that Valle had opened the valve, as such inference was not necessarily to be drawn, then it was the function of the jury, and not of the court, to draw the proper inference.

But this, it is argued, is of no consequence since, it is asserted, the proof showed that the cause of the destruction of the cotton was not the imperfect nature of the appliances, but an error of judgment in the use of them by the employees in the emergency of the moment. The proof, it is insisted, left no room for any other inference than that Valle on the discovery of the fire had rushed to the spot, thrown the hose down from the platform, got down among the cotton and opened the valve, or had left the hose on the platform without unwinding it, and that the pressure of water had either so kinked or tangled the hose when thrown down, or rendered it so difficult to move it, if left coiled on the platform, that the water would not flow, and the failure to extinguish the fire resulted. But all the elements contained in these propositions involve mere inferences from the evidence which it was the province of the jury to make. The only testimony in the case showing the actual condition of the hose at the time of the discovery of the fire was that of Robeau. That testimony showed that the cotton was piled up around the post where the hydrant was situated, above the platform on which the hose was coiled, to such an extent that neither the hydrant nor the hose could be seen from the gangway or from the top of the pile of cotton; that to get at the hose, if it was on the platform, required either reaching to or getting on the platform about 6 feet below, between the cotton, and to reach the valve necessitated squeezing down between the cotton to the floor. Under these circumstances and the difficulties which they necessarily created, we think the proof was such as would have reasonably justified the jury in concluding that the negligent acts of stowing the cotton high up around the hose and the hydrant and the valve connected with it created a condition so conducing to error of judgment and misdirected efforts as to [198] render the railway company responsible therefor. And this conclusion is greatly fortified when the uncontradicted proof is considered that no general rules for the use of the fire apparatus had ever been promulgated, that no systematic inspection thereof had been made, that no fire drill or instructions as to the use of the apparatus was had or given, and that the too few watchmen were left in case of an emergency to use an apparatus which, even if it were intrinsically adequate, was surrounded by the act of the company with such conditions that its favorable and efficient use was rendered practically impossible.

This leaves for consideration only the question whether the case should have been allowed to go to the jury on the question of deviation. As the result of the conclusions to which we have come on the question of negligence is that a new trial must be granted, it follows that on the new trial the whole case will be open. Being so open, we cannot say that testimony may not be introduced at the new trial which may modify the aspect of this question as exhibited in the record now before us. Conducive, however, to the result that there may be an end to this litigation, we content ourselves on this branch of the case at this time with saying that we think the proof in this record fully justified the action of the trial court in respect to the question of deviation.

The judgments must be reversed and the cause remanded to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York with directions to set aside the verdict and grant a new trial, and it is so ordered.

[199]*STATE OF MINNESOTA, Complainant,
v.
NORTHERN SECURITIES COMPANY, Defendant.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 199-247.)

Original jurisdiction of Supreme Court—suit between state and corporation of other state—domestic corporations as necessary parties.

1. Original jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States cannot be exercised in a suit between a state and a citizen of another state, when, with the latter, citizens of the complainant state must necessarily be joined as parties.
184 U. S.

2. A bill by a state against a corporation of another state to enjoin that corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, servants, or stockholders from interfering in any way with the management or control, and from holding any of the stock, of either of two railroad corporations of the complainant state, is one to which the domestic corporations are necessary parties for the representation of the interests of all other stockholders and of the general public.

[No. — Original.]

Argued January 27, 1902. Decided February 24, 1902.

ORIGINAL suit by the State of Minnesota against a corporation of another state to restrain interference with domestic corporations. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

Statement by Mr. Justice Shiras:

On the 7th day of January, 1902, came the state of Minnesota, by Wallace B. Douglas, its attorney general, and moved the court for leave to file a bill of complaint against the Northern Securities Company, a corporation of the state of New Jersey. [200] Thereupon the court directed that notice of such application should be given to the defendant, and set the motion for argument on January 27, 1902, when it was duly heard.

The bill proposed to be filed was in the following terms:

To the Judges of the Supreme Court of the United States of America:

Your oratrix, the State of Minnesota, complainant, by Wallace B. Douglas, attorney general thereof, brings this its bill of complaint against the Northern Securities Company, a corporation organized under and by virtue of the laws of the state of New Jersey, and alleges:

I.

That by an act of Congress, entitled "An Act for the Admission of Minnesota into the Union," approved May 11, A. D. 1858 (11 Stat. at L. 285, chap. 31), the said state of Minnesota was admitted into the Union upon an equal footing with the original states.

II.

That said Northern Securities Company is a corporation organized as hereinafter alleged, under and by virtue of the laws of the state of New Jersey, and is a citizen of the state of New Jersey.

III.

A.

That by an act of the Congress of the United States, of March 12, 1860 (12 Stat. at L. 3, chap. 5), extending to the state of Minnesota the swamp-lands grant theretofore made to the state of Arkansas, and by various subsequent acts, the Congress of the United States donated to the state of Minnesota from the public domain large quantities of lands situated within the state of Minnesota, and of the value of several millions of dollars. That the state of Minnesota now has left and undisposed of more than 3,000,000 acres of said lands, of the value of more than $15,000,000, much of which said land is located in the territory traversed by the railroads of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies, as hereinafter alleged. That the value of said land, and the salability [201] thereof, depends*in very large measure upon having free, uninterrupted, and open competition in passenger and freight rates over the lines of railway owned and operated by said Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies.

That many of said lands are vacant and unsettled and located in regions not at present reached by railway lines, and depend for settlement upon the construction of lines in the future; that it has heretofore been the practice of said Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies, respectively, to extend spur lines into territory adjacent to each of said roads as well as into new territory for the purpose of developing such territory, as well as to obtain traffic therefrom: that such new lines have been built in the past very largely by reason of the rivalry heretofore existing between said companies, for existing, as well as new, business; that under the consolidation and unity of control hereinafter set forth such rivalry will cease, and many of the lands now owned by the state of Minnesota will not be reached by railroads for years to come, if at all, owing to such combination and consolidation removing all rivalry and competition between said companies; that the settlement and occupation of said lands will add very much to their value, and such occupation will depend entirely upon the accessibility of railway lines and transportation facilities for marketing the products raised thereon; that if said lands are sold and become occupied they will add very largely to the taxable value of the property of the state, and that said lands cannot be sold or the income of the state increased thereby without the construction of railroad lines to, or adjacent to, the same.

B.

That the state of Minnesota is now and for many years past has been the owner of and continuously maintained, an educational institution for the benefit of its citizens, known as the University of Minnesota; also a large number of hospitals for the insane, within its territorial limits; also five normal schools for the education of teachers within the state; also a state training school for boys and girls; also several state schools for the education, care, and maintenance of the deaf, dumb, *blind, and feeble-[202] minded; also a state school for indigent and homeless children; also a state penitentiary and reformatory.

That for many years past the state of Minnesota has continuously maintained and supported each of said institutions, and in the care, maintenance, and management thereof has been compelled to and in the future, of necessity, will annually purchase large quantities of supplies for said institutions, including provisions, clothing, and fuel, a great portion of which the state of Minnesota is compelled to ship over the different lines of railway owned and operated by the Northern Pacific Railway Company and the Great Northern Railway Company.

That the state of Minnesota is compelled to expend annually more than $700,000 in the operation and maintenance of said public institutions, most of which sum is raised by general taxation upon the lands and other property of the citizens of the state of Minnesota, and situated therein. That the amount of taxes which said state of Minnesota can collect, and the successful maintenance of its said public institutions, as well as the performance of its governmental functions and affairs, depends largely upon the value of the real and personal property situated within its territorial limits, and the general prosperity and business success of its citizens. That the value of said real and personal property of the citizens of the state of Minnesota, as well as their business success and general prosperity, depend very largely upon maintaining in said state free, open, and unrestricted competition between the railway lines of said Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies, respectively, within said state.

C.

That it has been the settled policy and practice of the state of Minnesota, since its organization as a territory, to develop the resources of the state by encouraging railroad building therein; and in furtherance of this policy the territory of Minnesota, by an act thereof under the date of May 22, 1857, granted to the Minnesota & Pacific Railroad Company a charter, and in consideration of the construction and maintenance of a line of railway in Minnesota by said company said territory donated *to it [203] out of its public domain about 700,000 acres of land. That said Minnesota & Pacific Railroad Company thereafter became insolvent, and all its property was placed in the hands of a receiver; that such proceedings were thereafter had that all the property of the last-named company, including said land, was duly sold and conveyed to the St. Paul, Minneapolis, & Manitoba Railway Company, hereinafter mentioned.

That the state of Minnesota, by an act of its legislature, and in consideration of the construction and maintenance of a line of railway by the Great Northern Railway Company, hereinafter referred to, between St. Cloud and Hinckley, a distance of 84 miles, donated and conveyed to said last-named company upwards of 400,000 acres of land then owned by and situated in the state of Minnesota, which said land was then worth more than $1,000,000. That in carrying out said policy, and in aid of the building of railways within the state of Minnesota, there has been granted out of the public domain within the limits of the state of Minnesota upwards of 10,500,000 acres of land, nearly all of which has been granted to said Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies, and the subsidiary companies owned and controlled by them.

D.

That by an act of the legislature of the state of Minnesota, approved March 3, 1881, entitled "An Act Granting Swamp Lands to Aid in the Construction of the Main Line of the Road of the Little Falls & Dakota Railway Company," and which now is a part of the Northern Pacific Railway Company system, hereinafter referred to, the state of Minnesota donated to said Little Falls & Dakota Railway Company two hundred forty-three thousand five hundred and ninety-one (243,591) acres of land situated in and then belonging to said state, in consideration of the construction and maintenance by said last-named railway company of a line of railway extending from Little Falls to Morris, in the state of Minnesota.

IV.

Your oratrix further alleges that immense [204] quantities of wheat and other products are shipped annually from East Grand Forks, Crookston, Moorhead, Fergus Falls, and other competitive points within the state of Minnesota, and all on the lines of railway of the said Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies, hereinafter referred to, to the cities of Duluth, St. Paul, and Minneapolis, within the state of Minnesota. That nearly all of the shipment of such products made from the above-named initial points are consigned to various citizens at either the city of Duluth, St. Paul, or Minneapolis over one or the other of said lines of railroad last-above named. That enormous quantities of merchandise have been and will continue to be shipped annually over said lines of railway, between the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis and various other cities and villages along said lines of railway situated within the state of Minnesota, and which are purchased and used entirely by the people of said state. That the competition in both freight and passenger traffic to and from said places has always been sharp and active between said railway companies, and has secured to the residents of said cities, as well as the state of Minnesota, and to the state of Minnesota itself, much lower rates for both freight and passengers than would otherwise have been obtained, or than will or can be obtained in case the consolidation or unity of control and management of said Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies, hereinafter alleged, is not enjoined as herein prayed.

V.

That the Great Northern Railway Company is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the state of Minnesota, to wit, under an act duly passed by the territory of Minnesota, entitled "An Act to Incorporate the Minneapolis & St. Cloud Railroad Company," approved March 1st, A. D. 1856, and various subsequent acts of the state of Minnesota, amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, respectively entitled as follows:

"An Act to Amend an Act Entitled 'An Act to Incorporate the Minneapolis & St. Cloud Railroad Company,' Passed March 1, 1856." Approved February 23, 1864.

"An Act of the Legislature of the State [205] of Minnesota Entitled 'An Act Granting Swamp Lands to Aid the Minneapolis & St. Cloud Railroad Company in Building Branches to Connect with the Lake Superior & Mississippi Railroad and the Winona & St. Peter, or Any Other Railroad in Southern Minnesota.'" Approved February 11, 1865.

"An Act to Amend an Act Entitled 'An Act to Incorporate the Minneapolis & St. Cloud Railroad Company,' Approved March 1, 1856, and to Repeal Certain Portions of an Act Amending the Charter of Said Company, Passed February 23, 1864.'" Approved February 28, 1865.

"An Act to Amend an Act Entitled 'An Act Granting Swamp Lands to Aid the Minneapolis & St. Cloud Railroad Company in Building Branches to Connect with the Lake Superior & Mississippi Railroad and Winona & St. Peter Railroad, or Any Other Railroad in Southern Minnesota.'" Approved March 5, 1869.

"An Act to Amend the Charter of the Minneapolis & St. Cloud Railroad Company." Approved March 6, 1869.

"An Act to Amend the Charter of the Minneapolis & St. Cloud Railroad Company." Approved March 2, 1870.

"An Act to Extend the Time for the Construction and Completion of the Branch of the Minneapolis & St. Cloud Railroad Company." Approved March 11, 1879.

"An Act to Amend an Act Entitled 'An Act Granting Swamp Lands to Aid the Minneapolis & St. Cloud Railroad Company in Building Branches to Connect with the Lake Superior & Mississippi Railroad and the Winona & St. Peter Railroad, or Any Other Railroad in Southern Minnesota,' Approved February 11, in the Year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Five, as Amended." Approved March 1, 1885.

That on the 16th day of September, 1889, the corporate name of said company was duly changed to the Great Northern Railway Company. That during the year 1889 said railway company caused to be constructed a line of railway extending from [206] St. Cloud, Minnesota, to Hinckley, Minnesota, which line was immediately conveyed to the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway Company, a corporation duly organized and existing *under and by virtue of the laws of the state of Minnesota, hereinafter referred to as the Manitoba Company. That said Manitoba Company, prior to the 1st day of February, 1890, had built, purchased, and put in operation various lines of railway within the state of Minnesota, as well as in the states of North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, and Washington, connecting by rail the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis, within the state of Minnesota, and various other cities and villages within said state, with each other, and with Puget Sound, on the Pacific ocean; which said railways are hereinafter more particularly described.

That on the 1st day of February, 1890, said Manitoba Railway Company leased to the said Great Northern Railway Company, for a period of 999 years, all of the lines of railway, including the rolling stock then owned and controlled by said Manitoba Company; that ever since said last-named date said Great Northern Railway Company has continued to and now does control, operate, and maintain each and all of said lines as one complete railroad system. That said lines of railway so constructed by said Manitoba Company and now so controlled, operated, and maintained by said Great Northern Railway Company under said lease, are described as follows:

A line of railway extending from St. Paul, Minnesota, via Minneapolis, Elk River, St. Cloud, Sauk Center, Fergus Falls, Glyndon, Crookston to the northern boundary line of the state of Minnesota at St. Vincent.

Another line of railway extending from Minneapolis, Minnesota, along the western bank of the Mississippi river to St. Cloud, Minnesota.

Another line of railway extending from St. Cloud easterly to Hinckley, Minnesota.

Another line of railway extending from Elk River, Minnesota, northward to Malaco, Minnesota, on the line of the St. Cloud and Hinckley Branch, last above referred to.

Another line of railway extending from Minneapolis, Minnesota, to Breckenridge, Minnesota.

Another line extending from Sauk Center, Minnesota, to Park Rapids, Minnesota.

[207] *Another line of railway extending from Hutchinson Junction to Hutchinson, Minnesota.

Another line of railway extending from Benson, Minnesota, thence in a westerly direction to the western boundary line of the state; thence to Watertown, South Dakota.

Another line of railway extending from Evansville, Minnesota, westerly to the state boundary line, thence to Ellendale, North Dakota.

Another line of railway extending from Moorhead, Minnesota, westerly to the state boundary line; thence to Wahpeton, North Dakota.

Another line of railway extending from Moorhead, Minnesota, to Crookston, Minnesota.

Another line of railway extending from Barnesville, Minnesota, to Moorhead, Minnesota.

Another line of railway extending from Carman, Minnesota, to Foster, Minnesota.

Another line of railway extending from Crookston, Minnesota, to Red Lake Falls and Thief River Falls, Minnesota.

All of the foregoing lines being situated in the state of Minnesota, except as herein-after otherwise expressly stated.

That said Great Northern Railway Company now either owns or controls, and operates and maintains, by virtue of said lease, a line or system of railways connecting with said lines above referred to, and extending from the western boundary line of the state of Minnesota through the states of North Dakota, Montana, Idaho and Washington, to Puget Sound on the Pacific coast. The said railway lines covered by said lease, or owned by said Great Northern Railway Company, aggregate a total of about 4,500 miles.

That many of said railroads above described, being located within the state of Minnesota, were built by subsidiary companies or corporations, and said Great Northern Railway Company now owns all of the capital stock of such corporations in addition and as supplemental to said lease; and in addition thereto said Great Northern Railway Company owns all of the capital stock of the Eastern Railway Company of Minnesota, a corporation organized under the laws of the state of Minnesota, *and [208] which owns and operates a railway line extending from the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis to Duluth, Minnesota; and from Duluth, Minnesota, to Bemidji, Minnesota; and by virtue of such ownership of stock said Great Northern Railway Company dictates the policy of said railway company and controls the lines of railway and properties of said Eastern Railway Company, and operates the same as a part of the Great Northern system of railway.

That said Great Northern Railway Company also owns all of the capital stock of the Willmar & Sioux Falls Railroad Company, a corporation owning a railroad extending from Willmar, Minnesota, to Yankton, South Dakota, and by virtue of such ownership of stock dictates the policy of and owns and controls the railway line and property of said Willmar & Sioux Falls Railroad Company.

That all of the railways and railway lines hereinbefore described are operated and controlled by and form a complete system under the name of said Great Northern Railway Company.

That the charter of said Great Northern Railway Company provides as follows: "That all of the affairs and business of said company shall be conducted by or under the direction of a board of directors, and they are authorized, for the purposes specified in this act, to make and establish regulations and by-laws, and to do all things necessary to be done, and not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States, or the laws of this territory, or this act."

Your oratrix further alleges that the board of directors of said Great Northern Railway Company, at the time of the organization of the Northern Securities Company, hereinafter referred to, to wit, on or about the 13th day of November, 1901, was and now is composed of the following named persons, to wit: James J. Hill, James N. Hill, Samuel Hill, William P. Clough, Edward Sawyer, M. D. Grover, Jacob H. Schiff, and Henry W. Cannon; and at said date the managing or executive officers of said corporation were and now are as follows: president, James J. Hill; vice president, William P. Clough; secretary and assistant [209] treasurer, E. T. Nichols. That on *said last-named date said Great Northern Railway Company had issued, and there was then outstanding, a total of $125,000,000, par value, of the capital stock of said corporation, and your oratrix is informed and believes, and upon information and belief alleges, that said James J. Hill was on said last-named date the owner of, or in possession and control of, or had subject to his direction and disposition, more than a majority of said capital stock so outstanding.

VI.

That the Northern Pacific Railway Company was formerly a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of an act of the Congress of the United States, entitled, "An Act Granting Land to Aid in the Construction of a Railroad and Telegraph Line from Lake Superior to Puget Sound on the Pacific Coast, by the Northern Route," approved July 2, 1864; and a joint resolution of Congress extending the time for the completion of said railroad until July 1, 1868; and a joint resolution granting the consent of Congress provided for in § 10 of said act, incorporating the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, approved March 1, 1869; the joint resolution of Congress granting the right of way for the construction of a railroad from Portland, Oregon, to a point west of the Cascade Mountains in Washington territory, approved April 1, 1869; the joint resolution of Congress authorizing the Northern Pacific Railroad Company to issue its bonds for the construction of its road, and to secure the same by mortgage, and for other purposes, approved May 31, 1870. And complainant asks leave to refer to and have each of said acts and resolutions considered as though fully herein set forth.

That under and in pursuance of the said several acts and joint resolutions of Congress, the Northern Pacific Railroad Company constructed and put into operation, prior to January 1, 1890, all of its main line of road, extending from Ashland, in the state of Wisconsin, westward across the states of Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, and Idaho, and in the state of Washington to Walla Walla Junction; also all that other part of its main line of railroad extending from Portland, *Oregon, to Taco- [210] ma, Washington; also the whole of its Cascade branch, extending from Pasco Junction, in the state of Washington, to Tacoma, in the state of Washington.

That said Northern Pacific Railroad Company had also, prior to said 1st day of January, 1880, acquired and then owned all of the capital stock of the following named railroad companies and corporations, to wit, the St. Paul & Northern Pacific Railroad Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the state of Minnesota, and which then owned a railroad extending from St. Paul, Minnesota, to Brainerd, Minnesota; and from Little Falls, Minnesota, to Staples, Minnesota; also of the Duluth & Manitoba Railroad Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the state of Minnesota, and which then owned a line of railroad extending from Winnipeg Junction, Minnesota, via Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, to the western boundary line of said state, and thence to Grand Forks, North Dakota; and thence to the international boundary line between the state of North Dakota and Canada; also of the Duluth, Crookston, & Northern Railroad Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the state of Minnesota, and which then owned a railroad extending from Fertile Junction, Minnesota, through Crookston to Carthage Junction, Minnesota; also of the Little Falls & Dakota Railroad Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the state of Minnesota, and which then owned a railroad extending from Little Falls, Minnesota, to Morris, Minnesota; also of the Northern Pacific, Fergus Falls, & Black Hills Railroad Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the state of Minnesota, and which owned a line of railroad extending from Wadena, Minnesota, thence westerly to the western boundary line of the state; and thence to North Dakota points; also all of the capital stock of various railroad corporations or companies organized in the states of North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, and Washington, which owned and operated various railway lines in said states respectively. The said railway lines built by said companies within the state of Minnesota, as well as those built outside of the state of Minnesota, and the capital stock of the corporations so building said lines, and owned *by said Northern Pacific Railroad [211] Company, as hereinbefore alleged, were operated, managed, and controlled by said Northern Pacific Railroad Company as a system of railway or railways extending from and between various points in the state of Minnesota, more specifically hereinafter referred to, through said state and thence to the Pacific coast; and aggregate about 4,500 miles of railway.

VII.

That the Northern Pacific Railway Company is now and for upwards of five years last past has been a corporation organized under and by virtue of the laws of the state of Wisconsin; said corporation being organized during the year 1895. That thereafter and prior to the time said Northern Pacific Railway Company became possessed of and the owner of the railway lines and property formerly owned and operated by said Northern Pacific Railroad Company, said Northern Pacific Railway Company filed with the secretary of state of the state of Minnesota, in accordance with the terms and provisions of the laws of said state of Minnesota, a duly authenticated and certified copy of its articles of incorporation, and thereupon said Northern Pacific Railway Company became a corporation of and within the state of Minnesota, and subject to all of the laws, regulations, and provisions of said state of Minnesota relating to railway or railroad corporations, including those acts or parts of acts hereinafter specifically pleaded or referred to.

That under the charter or articles of incorporation of said Northern Pacific Railway Company the powers of said company are delegated to and exercised by a board of fifteen directors; that during the month of April, 1901, the following-named persons constituted and now are the members of the board of directors of said last-named company: James J. Hill, Robert Bacon, George F. Baker, E. H. Harriman, H. McK. Twombly, Brayton Ives, D. Willis James, John S. Kennedy, Daniel S. Lamont, Charles S. Melan, Samuel Rea, William Rockefeller, Charles Steele, James Stillman, and Eben B. Thomas. That on the 13th day of November, 1901, J. Pierpont Morgan, with certain other persons to your oratrix unknown, but [212] who were acting with said Morgan, owned and had in their possession, or held under and subject to their control and disposition, upwards of 85 per cent of the total capital stock of said Northern Pacific Railway Company then outstanding. That the total amount of capital stock of said Northern Pacific Railway Company then issued and outstanding amounts to 155,000,000 of dollars, par value, 75,000,000 of dollars of which was preferred stock, subject to retirement as provided by the articles of incorporation and agreement under which the same was issued.

That during the year 1893 the said Northern Pacific Railroad Company became insolvent, and all of the property of said last-named company, of whatever kind or character, was duly placed in the hands of receivers appointed for that purpose by the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Wisconsin; and thereafter, in proceedings ancillary thereto, by the various circuit courts of the United States in whose jurisdictions said property was located. That after said Northern Pacific Railway Company had filed its said articles of incorporation in the state of Minnesota and had become subject to its laws, and during the year 1896, said Northern Pacific Railway Company duly purchased and became the owner of the entire railroad properties and railway lines, including the right of way, rolling stock, and capital stock, formerly owned by said Northern Pacific Railroad Company; and immediately thereafter entered into the possession thereof; and at all times since has continuously owned and operated each and all of the said lines of railway so situated within the state of Minnesota, and which connect the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis and Duluth, and various other villages and cities within the state of Minnesota, and connect with the lines of railway outside of said state of Minnesota.

That during the year 1899 said Northern Pacific Railway Company purchased, and ever since has owned and operated, a line of railway extending from the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis to Duluth, Minnesota; that said last-named line parallels and is a competing line of railway for both freight and passenger traffic with the line of railway between said *Minneapolis and St. Paul and [213] Duluth, hereinbefore described, and which is owned by said Eastern Railway Company of Minnesota, but operated, controlled, and managed by said Great Northern Railway Company as a part of the system of said last-named company, as hereinbefore alleged.

That the lines of railway now owned and operated by said Great Northern Railway Company within the state of Minnesota are parallel and competing lines for freight and passenger traffic with the lines of railway now owned, operated, and controlled by said Northern Pacific Railway Company within the state of Minnesota, between the following points in said state, to wit: The cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis and the city of Duluth, Minnesota, and the various cities and villages between said points; also between the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis and Crookston, Minnesota, by way of Fergus Falls and the various cities and villages between said points; also between the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis and Crookston by way of Breckenridge, and the towns and cities between said points; and also between the cities of Duluth and Crookston, and the cities and villages between said points, as well as the country adjacent to the lines of railway between each and all of said cities; and the said lines of railway owned, operated, and controlled by said Great Northern Railway Company, and also the lines of railway owned, operated, and controlled by said Northern Pacific Railway Company which connect with the said lines of railway owned, operated, and controlled by each of said companies respectively within the state of Minnesota, are parallel and competing lines through the states of North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, and Washington to Puget Sound on the Pacific coast for passenger and freight traffic. That during all of the time aforesaid each and all of said lines of railway were maintained and operated by said respective companies as common carriers of freight and passengers within the state of Minnesota; and that said companies are now, and for upwards of eleven years last past have been, the only railway companies [214]owning or operating lines of railway crossing the state of Minnesota and connecting the Pacific ocean by rail with points in Minnesota; also the only lines of railway traversing east and west *the northern tier of states of the United States lying west of the Mississippi river, and connecting such territory and territory tributary thereto by rail with the Pacific ocean; and, with one exception, the only lines of railway crossing the north half of the state of Minnesota in any direction.

VIII.

That the Chicago, Burlington, & Quincy Railway Company is, and for many years last past has been, a corporation duly organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the state of Illinois; and, as such, until the disposition of its capital stock as hereinafter alleged, owned, operated, and controlled an extensive system of railway lines extending from the city of Chicago, in the state of Illinois, in a westerly direction to the city of Denver, in the state of Colorado; and also in a westerly and northwesterly direction from said city of Chicago, to the city of Billings, in the state of Montana; which last-named point is a junction and competitive point for freight and passenger traffic with the said Northern Pacific Railway Company; and also from said city of Chicago to the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis, in the state of Minnesota; and in addition to said main lines, owned, operated, and controlled a large number of connecting and tributary lines, extending to various cities and towns in the states of Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Nebraska, Kansas, Wyoming, and Montana. That the total mileage of said railway company is approximately 7,400 miles. That during the year 1901 the said Great Northern Railway Company and said Northern Pacific Railway Company jointly purchased 98 per cent of the total capital stock of said Chicago, Burlington, & Quincy Railway Company, aggregating approximately 107,000,000 of dollars, par value, and now own the same; and issued in payment therefor the joint bonds of said Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies, payable in twenty years from the date thereof, and bearing interest at the rate of 4 per cent per annum, payable semi-annually. That said Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies issued and [215]delivered in exchange for each $100 in amount of said Chicago, Burlington, & Quincy Railway Company stock $200 in amount of the said bonds.

That under and by virtue of the purchase of said stock the joint ownership and control of the said Chicago, Burlington, & Quincy Railway Company is vested in and ever since has been exercised by the said Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies.

IX.

That the defendant Northern Securities Company is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the state of New Jersey. That said corporation was organized on the 13th day of November, A. D. 1901, with its principal office for the transaction of its business located at the city of Hoboken, county of Hudson and state of New Jersey, and is a citizen of the state of New Jersey.
184 U. S.

That the articles of incorporation of said Northern Securities Company are as follows:

CERTIFICATE OF INCORPORATION OF NORTHERN SECURITIES COMPANY.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY, ss:

We, the undersigned, in order to form a corporation for the purposes hereinafter stated, under and pursuant to the provisions of the act of the legislature of the state of New Jersey, entitled "An Act Concerning Corporations (Revision of 1896), and the Acts Amendatory Thereof and Supplementary Thereto," do hereby certify as follows:

First. The name of the corporation is Northern Securities Company.

Second. The location of its principal office in the state of New Jersey is at No. 51 Newark street, in the city of Hoboken, county of Hudson. The name of the agent therein, and in charge thereof, upon whom process against the corporation may be served, is Hudson Trust Company. Such office is to be the registered office of the corporation.

Third. The objects for which the corporation is formed are:

* (1) To acquire by purchase, subscription, [216] or otherwise, and to hold as investment, any bonds or other securities or evidences of indebtedness, or any shares of capital stock created or issued by any other corporation or corporations, association or associations, of the state of New Jersey, or of any other state, territory, or country.

(2) To purchase, hold, sell, assign, transfer, mortgage, pledge, or otherwise dispose of, any bonds or other securities or evidences of indebtedness created or issued by any other corporation or corporations, association or associations, of the state of New Jersey, or of any other state, territory or country, and, while owner thereof, to exercise all the rights, powers, and privileges of ownership.

(3) To purchase, hold, sell, assign, transfer, mortgage, pledge, or otherwise dispose of, shares of the capital stock of any other corporation or corporations, association or associations of the state of New Jersey, or of any other state, territory or country; and, while owners of such stock, to exercise all the rights, powers, and privileges of ownership, including the right to vote thereon.

(4) To aid in any manner any corporation or association of which any bonds, or other securities or evidences of indebtedness or stock are held by the corporation; and to do any acts or things designed to protect, preserve, improve, or enhance the value of any such bonds or other securities or evidences of indebtedness or stock.

(5) To acquire, own, and hold such real and personal property as may be necessary or convenient for the transaction of its business.

The business or purpose of the corporation is from time to time to do any one or more of the acts and things herein set forth.

The corporation shall have power to conduct its business in other states and in foreign countries, and to have one or more offices out of this state, and to hold, purchase, mortgage, and convey real and personal property out of this state.

[217] Fourth. The total authorized capital stock of the corporation is four hundred million dollars ($400,000,000), divided into four *million (4,000,000) shares of the par value of one hundred dollars ($100) each. The amount of the capital stock with which the corporation will commence business is $30,000.

Fifth. The names and postoffice addresses of the incorporators, and the number of shares of stock subscribed for by each (the aggregate of such subscriptions being the amount of capital stock with which this company will commence business) are as follows:

Name and postoffice address.	Number of shares.
George F. Baker, Jr., 258 Madison Avenue	100
New York, New York.
Abram M. Hyatt, 214 Allen avenue	100
Allenhurst, New Jersey.
Richard Trimble, 53 East Twenty-fifth street	100
New York, New York.

Sixth. The duration of the corporation shall be perpetual.

Seventh. The number of directors of the corporation shall be fixed from time to time by the by-laws; but the number, if fixed at more than three, shall be some multiple of three. The directors shall be classified with respect to the time for which they shall severally hold office by dividing them into three classes, each consisting of one third of the whole number of the board of directors. The directors of the first class shall be elected for a term of one year; the directors of the second class for a term of two years; and the directors of the third class for a term of three years; and at each annual election the successors to the class of directors whose terms shall expire in that year shall be elected to hold office for the term of three years, so that the term of office of one class of directors shall expire in each year.

In case of any increase of the number of directors the additional directors shall be elected as may be provided in the by-laws, by the directors or by the stockholders at an annual or special meeting, and one third of their number shall be elected for the then unexpired portion of the term of the directors of the first class, one third of their [218] number for the unexpired portion *of the term of the directors of the second class, and one third of their number for the unexpired portion of the term of the directors of the third class, so that each class of directors shall be increased equally.

In case of any vacancy in any class of directors through death, resignation, disqualification, or other cause, the remaining directors, by affirmative vote of a majority of the board of directors, may elect a successor to hold office for the unexpired portion of the term of the director whose place shall be vacant, and until the election of a successor.

The board of directors shall have power to hold their meetings outside the state of New Jersey at such places as from time to time may be designated by the by-laws, or by resolution of the board. The by-laws may prescribe the number of directors necessary to constitute a quorum of the board of directors, which number may be less than a majority of the whole number of the directors.

As authorized by the act of the legislature of the state of New Jersey passed March 22, 1901, amending the 17th section of the act concerning corporations (Revision of 1896), any action which theretofore required the consent of the holders of two thirds of the stock at any meeting after notice to them given, or required their consent in writing to be filed, may be taken upon the consent of, and the consent given and filed by, the holders of two thirds of the stock of each class represented at such meeting in person or by proxy.

Any officer elected or appointed by the board of directors may be removed at any time by the affirmative vote of a majority of the whole board of directors. Any other officer or employee of the corporation may be removed at any time by vote of the board of directors, or by any committee or superior officer upon whom such power of removal may be conferred by the by-laws, or by vote of the board of directors.

The board of directors, by the affirmative vote of a majority of the whole board, may appoint from the directors an executive committee, of which a majority shall constitute a quorum; and to such extent as shall be provided in the by-laws, such committee shall have and may exercise all or any of the powers of *board of directors, including pow- [219] er to cause the seal of the corporation to be affixed to all papers that may require it.

The board of directors may appoint one or more vice presidents, one or more assistant treasurers, and one or more assistant secretaries; and, to the extent provided in the by-laws, the persons so appointed respectively shall have and may exercise all the powers of the president, of the treasurer, and of the secretary respectively.

The board of directors shall have power from time to time to fix and to determine and to vary the amount of the working capital of the corporation; to determine whether any, and if any, what part of any accumulated profits shall be declared in dividends and paid to the stockholders; to determine the time or times for the declaration and the payment of dividends; and to direct and to determine the use and disposition of any surplus or net profits over and above the capital stock paid in; and in its discretion the board of directors may use and apply any such surplus or accumulated profits in purchasing or acquiring its bonds or other obligations, or shares of the capital stock of the corporation, to such extent and in such manner and upon such terms as the board of directors shall deem expedient; but shares of such capital stock so purchased or acquired may be resold, unless such shares shall have been retired for the purpose of decreasing the capital stock of the corporation to the extent authorized by law.

The board of directors from time to time shall determine whether and to what extent, and at what times and places, and under what conditions and regulations, the accounts and books of the corporation, or any of them, shall be open to the inspection of the stockholders, and no stockholder shall have any right to inspect any account or book or document of the corporation, except as conferred by statute of the state of New Jersey, or authorized by the board of directors or by a resolution of the stockholders.

[220] The board of directors may make by-laws and, from time to time, may alter, amend, or repeal any by-laws: but any by-laws made by the board of directors may be altered or repealed by the stockholders at any annual meeting, or at any special *meeting, provided notice of such proposed alteration or repeal be included in the notice of the meeting.

In witness whereof, we have hereunto set our hands and seals, the 12th day of November, 1901.

George F. Baker, Jr. (L. S.)

Abram M. Hyatt. (L. S.)

Richard Trimble. (L. S.)

Signed, sealed and delivered in presence of— George Holmes.

State of New York, } County of New York, } ss:
Manhattan,

Be it remembered, that on this 12th day of November, 1901, before the undersigned, personally appeared George F. Barker, Junior, Abram M. Hyatt, Richard Trimble, who, I am satisfied, are the persons named in and who executed the foregoing certificate, and I, having first made known to them, and to each of them, the contents thereof, they did each acknowledge that they signed, sealed, and delivered the same as their voluntary act and deed. George Holmes, Master in Chancery of New Jersey.

Indorsed: "Received in the Hudson Co., N. J., Clerk's Office, Nov. 13, A. D. 1901, and recorded in Clerk's Record No. —, on page —. Maurice J. Stack, Clerk. Filed Nov. 13, 1901, George Wurts, Secretary of State."

That said Northern Securities Company was incorporated at the instigation and request and under the direction of James J. 184 U. S.

Hill and William P. Clough, and certain other stockholders of said Great Northern Railway Company to your oratrix unknown, who were co-operating with said James J. Hill and William P. Clough, and who, with said Hill and Clough, owned and controlled, or have the disposition and management, as hereinafter alleged, of a very large majority of the capital stock of said Great Northern Railway Company; and J. Pierpont Morgan and certain other stockholders of said Northern Pacific Railway Company, to your oratrix unknown, who were co-operating with said Morgan, and who, with said Morgan, *owned and controlled, or have the dis-[221] position and management of, a very large majority of the capital stock of said Northern Pacific Railway Company. That said Northern Securities Company was formed by George F. Baker, Jr., and Richard Trimble, of the city of New York and state of New York, and Abram Hyatt, of Allenhurst, in the state of New Jersey, who adopted the said articles of incorporation. That said three last-named parties had no interest in said corporation other than the formation of the same for and at the request of said James J. Hill, William P. Clough, J. Pierpont Morgan, and their several associate stockholders of said Great Northern Railway Company and said Northern Pacific Railway Company, as above alleged, acting in concert with said parties.

That said James J. Hill, William P. Clough, and J. Pierpont Morgan, who, with their associates, did on said 13th day of November, 1901, and prior thereto, own and control a large majority of the capital stock of both said Great Northern Railway Company and said Northern Pacific Railway Company, were prior to, and at the time of, the organization of said Northern Securities Company, almost continually in conference with each other and with a large number of other stockholders of said Great Northern Railway Company and said Northern Pacific Railway Company, but whose names are to your oratrix unknown, considering such organization and the scheme and agreement herein referred to, and the means and manner by which the laws of Minnesota, hereinafter referred to, could be most successfully evaded or avoided, all of which facts were well known to the organizers of said Northern Securities Company, including the parties executing the said articles of incorporation. That said Northern Securities Company was organized solely for the purpose of carrying out and accomplishing the designs, agreement, and plans of said James J. Hill and J. Pierpont Morgan and their said associate stockholders, as herein set forth, and to effect a consolidation of the property, railway lines, corporate powers and franchises of said Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies, respectively through said defendant the Northern Securities Company.

*That prior to the organization of said [222] Northern Securities Company the said owners and holders of a large majority of the capital stock of said Great Northern Railway Company, as well as the owners and holders of a large majority of the capital stock of said Northern Pacific Railway Company, as a part of the scheme or plan herein alleged, as well as a part of the plan and purpose of the organization of said Northern Securities Company, entered into a mutual agreement or arrangement, the exact terms of which are unknown to your oratrix, but which is in substance as follows:

The said owners of a large majority of the capital stock of said Great Northern Railway Company and said Northern Pacific Railway Company mutually agreed with each other and certain persons who thereafter became the officers and directors of said Northern Securities Company, to transfer or cause to be transferred to said Northern Securities Company in exchange for the capital stock of said last-named company substantially all of the capital stock of said Great Northern Railway Company and said Northern Pacific Railway Company, respectively; the said capital stock of the Great Northern Railway Company to be transferred to and exchanged for the capital stock of the said Northern Securities Company on the basis of one share of the capital stock of the Great Northern Railway Company for 1 and 80-100 shares of the capital stock of said Northern Securities Company, and one share of the common stock of said Northern Pacific Railway Company for 1 and 15-100 shares of the capital stock of said Northern Securities Company. The $75,000,000 of the preferred stock of said Northern Pacific Railway Company to be retired in accordance with the provisions of the articles of incorporation of said Northern Pacific Railway Company, and the conditions and agreements under which the same was issued; said retirement to take place on the 1st day of January, 1902. The funds for retiring said preferred stock to be raised by the issuance by said Northern Pacific Railway Company of its negotiable bonds, bearing date November 15, 1901, of the aggregate amount of $75,000,000, payable January 1, 1907, in gold coin of the United States, with interest thereon at the [223] rate of 4 *per cent per annum, payable semi-annually in like gold coin, from and after January 1, 1902. The said bonds, however, to be convertible at the option of either the holders thereof, or said railway company, into shares of the common stock of said Northern Pacific Railway Company at the rate of one share of stock for each $100 of the principal sum of such bonds, and the said common stock, when so taken in exchange for such bonds, to be converted into stock of said Northern Securities Company upon the basis of one share for each 1 and 15-100 shares of stock of said Northern Securities Company.

That said preferred stock could only be retired by resolution of the board of directors of said Northern Pacific Railway Company; that a very large majority of said preferred stock was owned by certain individuals who were opposed to the agreement and plan herein referred to relative to turning over the management and control of said Northern Pacific Railway Company to said Northern Securities Company, and the holding of its stock by said Northern Securities Company; that the owners of said preferred stock so opposed to said agreement and plan were also owners of sufficient of the common stock of said Northern Pacific Railway Company to give them a small majority of the total capital stock of said Northern Pacific Railway Company; thus making it necessary, in order to carry out the plan and agreement herein set forth and to vest the management and control of said Northern Pacific Railway Company in said Northern Securities Company in the manner and for the purposes herein alleged, to retire said preferred stock; all of which was well known to the board of directors of said Northern Pacific Railway Company and to said J. Pierpont Morgan and his associate stockholders of said Northern Pacific Railway Company, as well as said Northern Securities Company.

That on or about the 13th day of November, 1901, the board of directors of said Northern Pacific Railway Company took such official action as was necessary to retire said preferred stock upon the basis and in accordance with the plan and agreement herein set forth; and thereafter said preferred stock was retired by the issuance of convertible bonds to the amount and *in the [224] manner herein alleged. That immediately after the retirement of said preferred stock, said Northern Pacific Railway Company, acting through its board of directors and executive officers, exercised its right and option of declaring said bonds to be convertible into the shares of the common stock of said Northern Pacific Railway Company, and thereupon the same were so converted and the common stock of said Northern Pacific Railway Company issued in exchange therefor, upon the basis and for the purposes herein alleged. That in order to prevent the persons who owned said preferred stock, and who were opposed to the carrying out of the plan and agreement herein referred to, from acquiring a like control of the common stock, it was provided that the $75,000,000 of common stock into which the said bonds were convertible could only be subscribed for and taken by holders of the then outstanding $80,000,000 of the common capital stock of said Northern Pacific Railway Company; each share of said common stock then outstanding entitling the owner and holder thereof to take an additional 75-80 of a share of said $75,000,000 additional common stock. That the retirement of said preferred stock and the conversion of the said bonds into common stock of said Northern Pacific Railway Company, and the exchange of said common stock for stock of said Northern Securities Company, as herein alleged, were each and all a part of the agreement, plan, and scheme of said J. Pierpont Morgan and his said associate stockholders of said Northern Pacific Railway Company, who then and there owned and controlled a large majority of the then outstanding common stock of said Northern Pacific Railway Company, under and by which the complete management and control of said Northern Pacific Railway Company was to be, and was thereafter, turned over to and vested in said Northern Securities Company in order that said Northern Pacific Railway Company, its property and franchises, might be in effect consolidated with the property and franchises of said Great Northern Railway Company, as herein alleged. That said James J. Hill and his associate stockholders of said Great Northern Railway Company had full knowledge of and assisted in retiring said [225] preferred stock for the purposes and objects herein alleged. That, as a part of said agreement and plan entered into between said James J. Hill and his associate stockholders and said J. Pierpont Morgan and his associate stockholders, each and all of whom were then, and are now, acting in concert for the purpose of evading and violating the laws of the state of Minnesota, in the manner, for the purposes, and with the object and design herein set forth, and in furtherance of said purposes and design, and to avoid the effect of any litigation which might be instituted to defeat the consummation of the agreement, plan, and scheme herein referred to of vesting the complete management and control of the railway lines, properties, and franchises of said Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway Companies in said defendant Northern Securities Company, said parties further undertook and agreed with each other and the persons who thereafter became the officers and directors of the defendant Northern Securities Company, that pending the delivery and transfer of a majority of the capital stock of said Great Northern Railway Company to said Northern Securities Company, the same should be held by or under the control of some person or corporation to your oratrix unknown; and that pending such delivery it was mutually agreed between said Hill and his associate stockholders and said Morgan and his associate stockholders and the persons who thereafter became the directors and officers of the defendant, as well as the person or corporation so temporarily holding said stock, that the same should be held during said period for the purposes above set forth in trust for the use and benefit of the defendant, the Northern Securities Company; and that during such time the parties holding said stock should attend and vote the same at all meetings of the stockholders of said Great Northern Railway Company, in the interests of the defendant, and as directed by the board of directors of said Northern Securities Company or the executive committee thereof, or in unison with the stock of said railway companies, actually assigned to and held by the defendant. That said Northern Securities Company has not purchased, and does not intend to purchase, the stock of either of said railway companies, except by issuing its stock in exchange for and in lieu [226] of the stock of said railway companies *on the basis and in the manner and for the purposes herein alleged.

That for the unlawful purposes aforesaid the said Northern Securities Company, by circular letter heretofore issued to the public, has offered and is still offering to issue and exchange for the capital stock of the said Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies, capital stock of said Northern Securities Company to the amount of $180 par value thereof for each share of capital stock of said Great Northern Railway Company, and to the amount of $115 par value thereof for each share of stock of said Northern Pacific Railway Company. And that the said Northern Securities Company is about to receive, on the basis aforesaid, and will, unless enjoined therefrom, receive, hold, and hereafter control all the capital stock of said Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies.

X.

That the organization of said Northern Securities Company in the manner hereinbefore alleged, and the making of said agreement or arrangement hereinbefore referred to, are each and all a part of a scheme or plan on the part of said James J. Hill and his said associate stockholders of the Great Northern Railway Company, and J. Pierpont Morgan and his said associate holders of the stock of said Northern Pacific Railway Company, under and by which the said two last-named railway companies are to be in effect consolidated, and the complete management and control of the business affairs of said corporations respectively placed in one body and under the direction and control of one man or one board of directors, through and by means of said defendant. That pursuant to said plan, agreement, and arrangement, and in consummation thereof, and for the purpose of placing the complete management and control of said Great Northern Railway Company and said Northern Pacific Railway Company under one management, and for the purpose of establishing, in effect, a consolidation of said railway companies, together with said railway lines and properties, in and through said defendant, the said J. Pierpont Morgan *and [227] his associate stockholders have actually assigned and delivered to said Northern Securities Company upwards of 85 per cent of the total capital stock of said Northern Pacific Railway Company; and your oratrix alleges on information and belief, that said James J. Hill, and his associate stockholders of said Great Northern Railway Company have also actually assigned and delivered to said Northern Securities Company upwards of 95 per cent of the said capital stock of said Great Northern Railway Company. That the sole purpose, object, and effect of the transfer of said stock by said James J. Hill and his said associates, and the said J. Pierpont Morgan and his said associates, to said Northern Securities Company, was, and is, to transfer to and vest in said defendant Northern Securities Company the complete management and control of the respective lines of railway and railway properties of each of said railway companies within and without the state of Minnesota, and to place the complete management and control of the same, and the power to dictate the policy of each of said corporations, as well as the power and authority to fix rates and charges for the transportation of both freight and passengers within the state of Minnesota, as well as without said state, in the hands of and under the control of one party or board of directors, and thereby create, foster, and perpetuate a monopoly in railway traffic in the state of Minnesota.

That the purpose, object, and effect of the incorporation of the defendant and the receipt by it of a controlling amount of the capital stock of the said Northern Pacific and Great Northern Railway companies as well as each act of the officers and board of directors thereof, in entering into, adopting, or executing the agreement or plan herein set forth, including the issuance and exchange of the capital stock of the Northern Securities Company for the stock of the said Northern Pacific and Great Northern Railway companies on the basis hereinbefore set forth, was, and is, to place the said railway companies and the property and franchises thereof under a single management, and enable a single party or body of men acting as the board of directors of the said Northern Securities Company, or such executive committee as they may designate, [228] to fix all rates and *charges for the transportation of passengers and freight over any and all the lines of railway of each of said companies within the state of Minnesota; to determine what trains shall be operated over each or any of the lines of railway of each of said railway companies, and to remove all competition in freight or passenger traffic over said parallel and competing lines, and prevent the building of lines into new territory as well as into the territory now reached by only one of said lines of railway; that the purpose of said agreement and of the parties thereto was the creation of a trust or the formation of a combination by which a monopoly of railway traffic in northern Minnesota and elsewhere will be perfected; that the defendant company was organized for, and is to be used as a medium through and by which this unlawful agreement, purpose, and object can, and, if not enjoined, will, be accomplished; that this agreement and the consummation thereof is in restraint of trade, tends to create a monopoly in railway traffic, and is against public policy, and void.

That holders of a large majority of the capital stock of both said Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies had knowledge of, consented to, and assisted in carrying out, the agreement, arrangement, and scheme herein set forth by which a large majority of the capital stock of each of said railway companies was to be exchanged for the capital stock of said Northern Securities Company upon the basis and for the purposes herein set forth; and the said stockholders of said Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies so consenting to, taking part, and assisting in the formation of said Northern Securities Company, and the perfecting of the agreement and scheme herein set forth, constitute all of the stockholders of said Northern Securities Company; and the board of directors and executive officers of said Northern Securities Company hereinafter named have been selected from and elected by such stockholders of said Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies.

That under the articles of association of said Northern Securities Company, its corporate powers and entire business management is vested in a board of directors consisting of *such number as shall be fixed [229] from time to time, by the by-laws of said corporation, and the board of directors itself is authorized to make such by-laws as it deems best, and from time to time to alter, amend, or repeal any by-laws. That the board of directors of said company thereby has power to determine its own number, and to adopt rules and regulations for its own conduct and the conduct of the affairs of said corporation. The articles of association further provide that said board of directors may appoint an executive committee in the manner provided by the by-laws of the company, which committee shall exercise all the powers and duties of said board of directors.

That on or about the 14th day of November, A. D. 1901, the following-named persons were elected as and now constitute the board of directors of said Northern Securities Company, to wit: For the term of one year, James J. Hill, George F. Baker, Daniel S. Lamont, James Stillman, and N. Terhune; for the term of two years, Samuel Thorne, Charles E. Perkins, Jacob H. Schiff, and William P. Clough; for the term of three years, John S. Kennedy, D. Willis James, E. T. Nichols, Robert Bacon, and E. H. Harriman. That on the 15th day of November, A. D. 1901, said board of directors met and elected the following executive officers of said company, to wit: president, James J. Hill; first vice president, John S. Kennedy; second vice president, George F. Baker; third vice president, D. Willis James; fourth vice president, William P. Clough; secretary and treasurer, E. T. Nichols.

Complainant further alleges that said James J. Hill and said William P. Clough were, on said last-named date, the president and vice president respectively of said Great Northern Railway Company; and both were members of the board of directors of said last-named company. That said E. T. Nichols was, on said date and now is, the secretary and assistant treasurer of said Great Northern Railway Company. That said James J. Hill and his associates either own, or have in their possession or under their control, a large majority of the capital stock of said Great Northern Railway Company. That said James J. Hill, Robert [230] Bacon, George F. Baker, E. H. Harriman, D. Willis James, John S. Kennedy, D. S. Lamont, and James Stillman were, on *said 14th day of November, 1901, and now are, members of the board of directors of said Northern Pacific Railway Company, and constitute a majority of the board of directors of said-named company.

That said James J. Hill and his associate directors and officers of said Northern Securities Company own and control a majority of the capital stock of said last-named company; that during the month of December, 1901, said Northern Securities Company, through its directors and executive officers, began dictating the policy and management of said Northern Pacific as well as said Great Northern Railway Company, and ever since has been and now is directing and managing the business and property of both said Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies, and determining and enforcing freight and passenger rates on many of the lines of railway of said companies in the state of Minnesota, together with the manner and means of handling the freight and passenger business of said companies on such lines of railway, and will continue so to do unless enjoined as herein prayed.

That said Northern Securities Company has no authorized agent or representative within the state of Minnesota on whom a summons or other process in any legal proceeding may be served.

That the massing and concentration of said railway properties, and the control and management thereof in the defendant company in the manner hereinbefore outlined, tends to, and does, create a monopoly in railway traffic in the state of Minnesota, and tends to, and does, deprive the state of Minnesota and the citizens thereof of the privilege of competition in fixing charges and rates of transportation for a large amount of freight transported annually over the lines of railway of each of said railway companies, between stations upon the lines of railway of both said companies within the state of Minnesota.

[231] That it has ever been a part of the settled and public policy of the state of Minnesota to prohibit therein, in any way, the consolidation in any manner of competing and parallel lines of railway; and to this end the legislature of the state of Minnesota did, in the year 1874, pass the following enactment, which *ever since has remained and now is a part of the statute law of the state of Minnesota, known as chapter 29 of the General Laws of 1874, to wit:

"Sec. 1. No railroad corporation, or the lessees, purchaser, or managers of any railroad corporation, shall consolidate the stock, property, or franchise of such corporation with, or lease or purchase the works or franchise of, or in any way control, any other railroad corporation owning or having under its control a parallel or competing line; nor shall any officer of such railroad corporation act as an officer of any other railroad corporation owning or having the control of a parallel or competing line, and the question whether railroads are parallel or competing lines shall, when demanded by the party complainant, be decided by a jury as in other civil issues.

"Sec. 2. This act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage. Approved March 9, 1874."

That in the year 1881 the legislature of the state of Minnesota passed the following enactment, which ever since has remained, and now is, a part of the statute law of the said state and known as chapter 94 of the General Laws of 1881, to wit:

"Sec. 3. No railroad corporation shall consolidate with, lease or purchase, or in any way become the owner of or control any other railroad corporation or stock, franchises, rights, or property thereof, which owns or controls a parallel or competing line."

"Sec. 4. This act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage. Approved March 3, 1881."

That said Northern Securities Company is a railroad corporation within the meaning of the laws of the state of Minnesota; and the purpose, object, and design of the said organizers and promoters of said Northern Securities Company, both in the organization thereof and in the making and carrying out of the said plans, agreement, and designs hereinbefore referred to, was and is to violate the said legislative enactments of the state of Minnesota, and to evade and escape the provisions thereof; and it is the purpose, intent, and design of said corporation, its stockholders, directors, executive committee, officers, agents, and representatives, to violate the said legislative enactments, *and to evade and escape [232] the terms and provisions thereof, and to effect a consolidation of said railway corporations and properties as herein alleged. That each and all the said acts are violations and evasions of the said laws and the settled public policy of the state of Minnesota, and unless said parties are enjoined will cause the state of Minnesota irreparable injury.

That for many years last past it has been a part of the settled policy of the state of New Jersey to permit the consolidation of only such lines of railroad as are or can be connected so as to form continuous lines of railroad, and not to permit the consolidation of parallel or competing lines; and to that end, in the year 1885, the legislature of the state of New Jersey enacted a law which permits the consolidation of such lines as shall or may form connecting or continuous lines of railroads.

Your oratrix is informed and believes, and upon information and belief alleges, that defendant is not the owner of any property or stock or securities of any corporation, except as above set forth, and is not engaged in any business whatever except such as is incidental to the ownership of such stock and the general management and control of said Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies and the railway lines and properties thereof.

Your oratrix further alleges that if the defendant is permitted to control and manage the affairs of said Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies, in a manner hereinbefore alleged or otherwise, all competition between them will forever cease, and a monopoly in railway traffic in Minnesota be created, to the great and permanent and irreparable damage and injury to the state of Minnesota and to the people thereof, and in violation of its laws.

That your oratrix has and can have no other adequate remedy or relief by action at law except as herein prayed for in equity.

To the end, therefore, that the defendant, the Northern Securities Company, may, if it can, show cause why your oratrix should not have the relief herein prayed for, and that it may be compelled to answer all and singular the premises, and all matters and things herein stated, as fully and particularly as if they were here again repeated, and said company thereunto interrogated, [233] *and that the defendant may be required to answer without oath, its answer under oath being hereby expressly waived; and that the defendants may, by the decree of this court, be perpetually enjoined and restrained:

First. From voting at any meeting of the stockholders of either said Great Northern or Northern Pacific Railway Company any of the capital stock of either of said companies by any means or in any manner whatsoever, and from attending, by reason of such ownership, possession, or control of stock, either through its officers or by proxy, or in any other manner, any meeting of the stockholders of either of said companies.

Second. That the defendant, its stockholders, officers, directors, or the executive committee thereof, its attorneys, representatives, agents, or servants, and each of them, be enjoined and restrained from, in any way, aiding, advising, directing, interfering with or in any way taking part, directly or indirectly, in any manner whatsoever, in the management, control or operation of any of the lines of railway of either of said companies, or in the management or control of the affairs of either of said companies.

Third. That the said defendant, its officers, attorneys, representatives, agents or servants, including its board of directors, or any of its members as such, be enjoined and restrained from exercising any of the powers or performing any of the duties, or in any manner acting as a representative, officer, member of the board of directors or employee, of either said Great Northern or Northern Pacific Railway Company, or in any way exercising any management, direction, or control over the same.

Fourth. That said defendant, its stockholders, directors, and other officers, representatives, and agents, be enjoined and restrained from doing any and all acts and making any arrangements or combinations by contract or otherwise having for their object, effect, or result the consolidation or establishment of a joint management or control in any manner whatsoever of the said Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies, their lines of railway or properties.

Fifth. That the said defendant be enjoined from either directly or indirectly holding, owning, or controlling any of the stock of *either of said companies at one and [234] the same time for any of the purposes or objects alleged in said bill, or otherwise.

Sixth. That in case it shall appear upon the hearing that the defendant owns or controls, or is acting in concert with the owners of, a majority of the capital stock of either of said railway companies, and owns or controls a minority of the stock of the other of said companies, then that the defendant, its officers, directors, agents, or representatives, be enjoined and restrained from receiving, acquiring, or controlling any additional capital stock of such other railway company.

Seventh. And your oratrix further prays the leave of this court to amend this its bill of complaint, if amendment thereto shall become necessary, including the right to bring in other parties defendant for the purpose of giving force and effect to any decree that may be made by the court herein.

And that complainant be granted such other and further or different relief as the nature of this case may require, and as shall be agreeable to equity and good conscience.

Messrs. Wallace B. Douglas and M. D. Munn argued the cause, and, with Mr. George P. Wilson, filed a brief for complainant:

The state of Minnesota is so far interested, in its individual capacity, in the subject-matter of this action as to entitle it to maintain the same.

Pennsylvania v. Wheeling & B. Bridge Co. 13 How. 519, 14 L. ed. 249.

This court will assume that the citizens of the state generally will suffer material injury by the removal of competition in freight and passenger rates within the state.

Pearsall v. Great Northern R. Co. 161 U. S. 646, 40 L. ed. 838, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 40 L. ed. 849, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Assn. 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. ed. 1007, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; United States v. Joint Traffic Assn. 171 U. S. 505, 43 L. ed. 259, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25.

The state in its sovereign capacity can appeal to the courts for relief by injunction whenever its property is involved or the public interests are threatened and jeopardized by any corporation—especially one of a public nature like a railroad company—seeking to transcend its powers and to violate the public policy of the state.

Trust Co. v. State, 109 Ga. 736, 48 L. R. A. 520, 35 S. E. 323. See also Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. State, 72 Tex. 404, 1 L. R. A. 849, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 335, 10 S. W. 81; Com. ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Pittsburg & C. R. Co. 58 Pa. 45; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Com. (Pa.) 4 Cent. Rep. 501, 7 Atl. 374.

It is as much a part of the duty of a state, in its sovereign or governmental capacity, to secure to its citizens their common rights as it is of the United States to use its sovereign powers in behalf of its citizens for a similar purpose.

Missouri v. Illinois, 180 U. S. 208, 45 L. ed. 497, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 331.

Whenever the wrongs complained of are such as affect the public at large, and are in respect of matters which by the Constitution are intrusted to the care of the nation, and concerning which the nation owes the duty to all the citizens of securing to them their common rights, then the mere fact that the government has no pecuniary interest in the controversy is not sufficient to exclude it from the courts, or to prevent it from taking measures therein to fully discharge those constitutional duties.

Re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 39 L. ed. 1092, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900.

The sole ground upon which the state of Kentucky claimed the right to maintain the action brought by it against the Louisville & Nashville Railway Company, as well as one of the principal grounds upon which the state of Indiana claimed the right to maintain the action brought by it against the Ohio Oil Company, was that it was the representative of the interests of the citizens of those respective states.

See Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com. 97 Ky. 675, 31 S. W. 476; State v. Ohio Oil Co. 150 Ind. 21, 47 L. R. A. 627, 49 N. E. 809.

Both of the above cases subsequently came before this court, and the decision of the state supreme court in each case was affirmed.

See Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 40 L. ed. 849, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714; Ohio Oil Co. v. Indiana, 177 U. S. 190, 44 L. ed. 729, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576.

When the managing body is doing, or is about to do, an ultra vires act of such a nature as to produce a public mischief, the attorney general, as the representative of the public and of the government, may maintain an equitable suit for preventive relief.

Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & B. B. R. Co. 27 N. J. Eq. 631; Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1093; Atty. Gen. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 35 Wis. 524; Stockton v. Central R. Co. 50 N. J. Eq. 52, 17 L. R. A. 97, 24 Atl. 964.

The statutes of the state of Minnesota, referred to in the bill now under consideration, the enforcement of which form a partial basis for the relief sought, are in no sense penal statutes; they provide no punishment for their violation, but their violation creates a cause of action in favor of three different classes of individuals or persons: (1) The stockholder of any railroad corporation seeking to consolidate with another in violation of the act would have a cause of action against such corporation; (2) any individual or class of citizens in the state, suffering special injury by reason of such violation, would have a cause of action to enjoin the same (this includes the state in its individual capacity); and (3) the state of Minnesota, acting as the representative of all the people of the state, has the right to maintain such an action to enjoin the violation of these statutes.

See Pearsall v. Great Northern R. Co. 161 U. S. 646, 40 L. ed. 838, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705.

The question whether a statute of one state, which in some respects may be called penal, is a penal law in the international sense, so that it cannot be enforced in the courts of another state, depends upon the question whether its purpose is to punish an offense against the public justice of the state, or to afford a private remedy to a person injured by the wrongful act.

Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.

A part of the consideration which the state receives for granting the right to be a corporation and exercise the powers and privileges as such in the state is an agreement on the part of such corporation and its stockholders that it and they will observe the laws of the state relating to such corporation.

Supreme Lodge, K. of P. v. Weller, 93 Va. 605, 25 S. E. 891; People ex rel. Peabody v. Chicago Gas Trust Co. 130 Ill. 268, 8 L. R. A. 497, 22 N. E. 798.

A part of the consideration which the state received for the lands granted was the implied agreement on the part of such railroad corporations and their stockholders, that these lines of railway should be maintained and operated by such corporations as parallel and competing lines.

A railroad company, having constructed and put in operation its road, in part at least, by public aid in the way of taxation, has no right to abandon its road or turn it over to another company to the injury of the state or any portion of the citizens.

State v. Central Iowa R. Co. 71 Iowa, 410, 60 Am. Rep. 806, 32 N. W. 409.

A private action may be maintained in one state, if not contrary to its policy, for such a wrong done in another and actionable there, although a like wrong would not be actionable in the state where the suit is brought.

Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.

The declared public policy of New Jersey and the United States is against the consolidation and unification of competing lines of railway, and the removal of competition in freight and passenger rates.

United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Assn. 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. ed. 1007, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; United States v. Joint Traffic Assn. 171 U. S. 505, 43 L. ed. 259, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25.

The right to maintain a cause of action created by statute, or which arises by reason of the violation of a statute other than a strictly penal law, has been recognized by this court.

Dennick v. Central R. Co. 103 U. S. 11, 26 L. ed. 439; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Cox, 145 U. S. 593, 36 L. ed. 829, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep.

905; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.

The franchise of being a corporation belongs to the stockholders.

Memphis & L. R. R. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 112 U. S. 609, sub nom. Memphis & L. R. R. Co. v. Berry, 28 L. ed. 837, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 299.

It logically follows that the obligation to obey the law is imposed in the first instance, and forever after remains, upon the stockholders of the corporation. This contract is a binding one, and cannot be escaped.

Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co. 101 U. S. 71, 25 L. ed. 950. See also Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co. 130 U. S. 396, 32 L. ed. 979, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553.

The stock of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway Companies, in the manner and for the purposes set forth in the bill, must be deemed to be held by the Northern Securities Company as though located in and subject to all the laws of the state of Minnesota; and every power sought to be exercised by it by virtue of such stockholding must be in harmony with, and not in violation of, the laws of the state of Minnesota. The Northern Securities Company can exercise no power by reason of this stockholding, nor any management or control over the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway Companies, which is in violation of, or which tends to contravene, the laws of the state of Minnesota.

Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet. 519, 10 L. ed. 274.

The Northern Securities Company, as declared by its articles of incorporation, was organized to purchase the stock of railway companies in the state of New Jersey or any other state in the Union, and to vote the same. From this it follows that any stock of a railway company acquired by it outside the state of New Jersey is subject to all obligations or limitations imposed upon such stock, as well as the corporations issuing it.

See Pinney v. Nelson, 183 U. S. 144, 46 L. ed. 52, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 52.

The state of Minnesota, in entering the Union, has surrendered its right to enter into any agreement or compact with another state, or to enforce its claims or protect its rights against a citizen of another state, by any means other than through the peaceful halls of judicial tribunals.

Missouri v. Illinois, 180 U. S. 208, 45 L. ed. 497, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 331; Louisiana v. Texas, 176 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 347, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251.

It now finds itself confronted with a flagrant and defiant attempt to violate its laws and invade its rights as well as the rights of its citizens; and it comes before this court, the constitutionally authorized tribunal to hear its claims and adjust its controversies with the citizens of another state, and asks the privilege of that jurisdiction. It would ill suit the dignity of the state to be denied this jurisdiction.

No. 81 Federalist.

In this connection we have no doubt this language of Chief Justice Marshall will recur to the minds of the court: "As this court has never grasped an ungranted jurisdiction, so will it never, we trust, shrink from the exercise of that which is conferred upon it."

See Fisher v. Cockerell, 5 Pet. 259, 8 L. ed. 118.

Also this language of Chief Justice Waite: "The evident purpose was to open, and keep open, the highest court of the nation for the determination, in the first instance, of suits involving a state, or a diplomatic or commercial representative of a foreign government."

See Ames v. Kansas ex rel. Johnston, 111 U. S. 469, 28 L. ed. 490, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437.

The creation and maintenance, by a citizen or citizens of another state, of a nuisance which operates upon and affects the property of the citizens of the state making the complaint, entitles such state to enjoin the same.

Missouri v. Illinois, 180 U. S. 208, 45 L. ed. 497, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 331.

Messrs. William D. Guthrie and John W. Griggs argued the cause, and, with Mr. John G. Johnson, filed a brief for defendant:

This court will not entertain a suit brought by a state in this court against a citizen of another state, to enforce a penalty or a penal statute.

Wisconsin v. Pelican Ins. Co. 127 U. S. 265, 32 L. ed. 239, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1370. See also Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. 419, 1 L. ed. 440; Cohen v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264, 5 L. ed. 257; Rhode Island v. Massachusetts, 12 Pet. 657, 9 L. ed. 1233; Hans v. Louisiana, 134 U. S. 1, 33 L. ed. 842, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 504; Capital Traction Co. v. Hof, 174 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 873, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 580.

It will, indeed, be a surprising revelation if this court shall now declare that it has original jurisdiction to enforce the anti-trust laws of the various states against citizens of other states domiciled in such other states.

United States v. Lathrop, 17 Johns. 4; State ex rel. Star Pub. Co. v. Associated Press, 159 Mo. 410, 51 L. R. A. 151, 60 S. W. 91.

No state or nation can, by its laws, directly affect or bind property out of its own territory, or persons not resident therein.

Story, Conf. L. §§ 7, 8, 20; Houston v. Moore, 5 Wheat. 1, 5 L. ed. 19; Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 393, 15 L. ed. 691; The Blue Book, 1887, p. 125.

Jurisdiction of the offense or subject-matter, and judicial power to try the offender, are very different things. The first exists whenever the offense is committed within the state; the other, when the offender is brought into court, and not before.

Adams v. People, 1 N. Y. 173; State v. Hall, 115 N. C. 814, 28 L. R. A. 289, 20 S. E. 729.

The nature of laws prohibiting the consolidation of railroad companies is substantially similar to that of the anti-trust acts. Such laws have always been recognized as enacted under the police power of the state.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 40 L. ed. 849, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714.

Both classes of legislation seek the same end, and are exercises of the police power. So, also, as to the regulation of railroad rates. A suit to enforce such regulations, to enjoin their breach, or to collect penalties, would not be a "suit of a civil nature."

Iowa v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 3 L. R. A. 554, 37 Fed. 497; Dey v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 45 Fed. 82; Moloney v. American Tobacco Co. 72 Fed. 801; Indiana use of Delaware County v. Alleghany Oil Co. 85 Fed. 870. See also Arkansas v. Kansas & T. Coal Co. 183 U. S. 185, 46 L. ed. 47, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47.

If, as here, a foreign state "claims the right to maintain [an] action . . . by virtue of its sovereign powers for and in behalf of the citizens of the state," to enforce its penal and police laws, the controversy is not of a civil nature, or one of which courts of other sovereignties take cognizance.

Hardcastle, Statutory Law, 3d ed. 1901, pp. 450, 451; Huntington v. Attrill [1893] A. C. 150; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Dicey, Conf. L. pp. 220, 221.

The real nature of legislation cannot be affected or determined by the mere form of procedure, any more than the absence of a penalty or other punishment can change the real nature of a police law.

Moloney v. American Tobacco Co. 72 Fed. 801.

If the public or police laws of one state are ever recognized and enforced in the courts of a sister state, it is only from considerations of utility and the mutual convenience of states, ex comitate, ob reciprocam enim utilitatem; and whatever force and obligation they are permitted to have in such sister state depend solely upon the comity exercised by the latter.

Story, Conf. Laws, §§ 18-23; Hoyt v. Sprague, 103 U. S. 613, 26 L. ed. 585; Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, 28 L. ed. 751, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221.

Proceedings or prosecutions to enforce police or penal laws were, at the time the Constitution was adopted, and ever since have been, considered to be such as would not be entertained by the judiciary of the foreign state at all.

Wisconsin v. Pelican Ins. Co. 127 U. S. 287, 32 L. ed. 242, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1370.

This court has recognized that it cannot enforce those governmental regulations and police laws which are essentially within the comity of states, to be conceded or withheld at their will.

Mahon v. Justice, 127 U. S. 700, 32 L. ed. 283, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1204; Kentucky v. Dennison, 24 How. 66, 107, 16 L. ed. 717, 729.

Cases in which extraterritorial force has been allowed to rights based upon the statute 184 U. S.

ute law of other states have been those in which rights of a purely private nature were concerned,—none the less private and individual because conferred by statute.

Courts, for example, have enforced the so-called statutory liability of stockholders or officers of foreign corporations, although such liability is frequently termed a penalty. But relief has been extended, not upon the theory that the statutes in question conferred ubiquitous rights, but upon the distinct ground that the rights were in fact contractual and personal, and the penalty or redress was for violated private rights.

Flash v. Conn. 109 U. S. 371, 27 L. ed. 966, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263; Whitman v. National Bank, 176 U. S. 559, 44 L. ed. 587, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 477; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.

So, likewise of statutes conferring a right of action for wrongful death. Such statutes are given in other states an apparent force and obligation. The right of action, however, is not based on comity, but, after all, upon a personal trespass or tort, in its essence a civil injury the world over, and upon the theory that the cause of action has accrued within the jurisdiction of the state which enacted the remedy, and that such statutes are not penal. Such enactments are purely remedial.

Stewart v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 168 U. S. 445, 42 L. ed. 537, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 105.

*Mr. Justice Shiras delivered the opinion [234] of the court:

Whether a bill in equity filed in this court, in the name of a state, which seeks to prevent by injunction a corporation organized under the laws of another state, with power to acquire and hold shares of the capital stock of any other corporation, from obtaining and exercising ownership and control of two or more competing railroad companies of the complainant state, so as to evade and defeat its laws and policy forbidding the consolidation of such railroads when parallel and competing, presents the case of a controversy of a civil nature whereof this court has jurisdiction under the Constitution and laws of the *United [235] States, and whether the bill in the present case is of that description, or whether it is the case of a suit brought by a state to enforce its penal statutes, and hence within the principle of the decision in Wisconsin v. Pelican Ins. Co. 127 U. S. 265, 32 L. ed. 239, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1370, are questions which have been ably discussed by counsel.

But it is not necessary for us to consider and answer those questions, for, in view of the nature of the facts presented and the remedies prayed for in the bill proposed to be filed, we think that the suit is defective for want of essential parties whose rights would be vitally affected by the relief sought therein.

The general rule in equity is that all persons materially interested, either legally or beneficially, in the subject-matter of a suit, are to be made parties to it, so that there may be a complete decree, which shall bind them all. By this means the court is enabled to make a complete decree between the parties, to prevent future litigation, by taking away the necessity of a multiplicity of suits, and to make it perfectly certain that no injustice is done, either to the parties before it, or to others who are interested in the subject-matter, by a decree which might otherwise be granted upon a partial view only of the real merits. When all the parties are before the court, the whole case may be seen; but it may not, where all the conflicting interests are not brought out upon the pleadings by the original parties thereto. Story, Eq. Pl. § 72.

The established practice of courts of equity to dismiss the plaintiff's bill if it appears that to grant the relief prayed for would injuriously affect persons materially interested in the subject-matter who are not made parties to the suit is founded upon clear reasons, and may be enforced by the court, sua sponte, though not raised by the pleadings or suggested by the counsel. Shields v. Barrow, 17 How. 130, 15 L. ed. 158; Hipp v. Rabin, 19 How. 271, 278, 15 L. ed. 633, 635; Parker v. Winnipiseogee Lake Cotton & Woolen Co. 2 Black, 545, 17 L. ed. 333.

[236] In the case of Shields v. Barrow, 17 How. 130, 15 L. ed. 158, the question was fully discussed, and it was shown, upon a review of the previous cases, that there are three classes of parties to a bill in equity. *They are: 1. Formal parties. 2. Persons having an interest in the controversy, and who ought to be made parties, in order that the court may act on that rule which requires it to decide on and finally determine the entire controversy, and do complete justice, by adjusting all the rights involved in it. These persons are commonly termed necessary parties; but if their interests are separable from those of the parties before the court, so that the court can proceed to a decree, and do complete and final justice, without affecting other persons not before the court, the latter are not indispensable parties. 3. Persons who not only have an interest in the controversy, but an interest of such a nature that a final decree cannot be made without either affecting that interest, or leaving the controversy in such a condition that its final determination may be wholly inconsistent with equity and good conscience. The court in respect to the act of Congress of February 28, 1839, 5 Stat. at L. 321, chap 36, and to the 47th rule in equity practice, said:

"The 1st section of that statute enacts 'that when in any suit, at law or in equity, commenced in any court of the United States, there shall be several defendants, any one or more of whom shall not be inhabitants of or found within the district where the suit is brought, or shall not voluntarily appear thereto, it shall be lawful for the court to entertain jurisdiction, and proceed to the trial and adjudication of such suit between the parties who may be properly before it; but the judgment or decree rendered therein shall not conclude or prejudice other parties not regularly served with process, or not voluntarily appearing to answer; and the nonjoinder of parties, who are not so inhabitants, or found within the district, shall constitute no matter of abatement or other objection to said suit.'

"This act relates solely to the nonjoinder of persons who are not within the reach of the process of the court. It does not affect any case where persons, having an interest, are not joined because their citizenship is such that their joinder would defeat the jurisdiction; and, so far as it touches suits in equity, we understand it to be no more than a legislative affirmation of the rule previously established by the cases of Cameron v. M'Roberts, 3 Wheat. 591, 4 L. ed. 467; Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 *Wheat. 738, 6 L. [237] ed. 204, and Harding v. Handy, 11 Wheat. 132, 6 L. ed. 437. For this court had already there decided that the nonjoinder of a party who could not be served with process would not defeat the jurisdiction. The act says it shall be lawful for the court to entertain jurisdiction; but as is observed by this court, in Mallow v. Hinde, 12 Wheat. 198, 6 L. ed. 600, when speaking of a case where an indispensable party was not before the court, 'we do not put this case upon the ground of jurisdiction, but upon a much broader ground, which must equally apply to all courts of equity; whatever may be their structure as to jurisdiction; we put it on the ground that no court can adjudicate directly upon a person's right, without the party being either actually or constructively before the court.' So that, while this act removed any difficulty as to jurisdiction, between competent parties regularly served with process, it does not attempt to displace that principle of jurisprudence on which the court rested the case last mentioned. And the 47th rule is only a declaration, for the government of practitioners and courts, of the effect of this act of Congress, and of the previous decisions of the court, on the subject of that rule. Hogan v. Walker, 14 How. 36, 14 L. ed. 315.

"It remains true, notwithstanding the act of Congress and the 47th rule, that a circuit court can make no decree affecting the rights of an absent person, and can make no decree between the parties before it, which so far involves or depends upon the rights of an absent person that complete and final justice cannot be done between the parties to the suit without affecting those rights."

California v. Southern P. Co. 157 U. S. 229, 39 L. ed. 683, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 591, was a case in several particulars like the present one. There a bill was filed in this court by the state of California against the Southern Pacific Company, a corporation of the state of Kentucky, claiming title and jurisdiction by the state over certain large tracts of land lying upon the shores of the bay of San Francisco and over the harbor waters of said bay, including San Antonio creek, and averring that the Southern Pacific Company claimed adversely to the state, and was engaged in placing structures [238] in and upon said tracts of land, thereby obstructing navigation in the bay and adjoining waters. The bill prayed *for a decree quieting the title of the state and enjoining the defendant company from maintaining the structures that it had placed upon said tracts and the adjacent waters. The defendant company answered the bill, denying the ownership of the complainant in the premises in dispute, and setting forth its own title derived from the town of Oakland, as to the whole of the water front of that town, through one Carpentier, as grantee of said town by ordinance and deed of conveyance, and claiming that by subsequent mesne conveyances the said title and property had become vested, as to a part thereof, in the Central Pacific Railroad Company, and, as to another part, in the South Pacific Coast Railway Company, and in the defendant company as lessee. It further was claimed that certain ordinances and deeds of the town of Oakland operated as a grant by the city of Oakland and the state of California of the land to the Oakland Water Front Company, as grantee or alienee of Carpentier. The case was duly put at issue, and a commissioner was appointed to take testimony therein and to return the same to the court.

When the case came on for hearing it was held by this court that the city of Oakland and the Oakland Water Front Company were so situated in respect to the litigation that the court ought not to proceed in their absence. In reaching this conclusion the court reviewed the cases, including the cases above cited and others.

Upon the contention that the city of Oakland and the Oakland Water Front Company might be made parties defendant, and the court thus enabled to proceed with the case, the court held that this could not be done, because this court could not exercise original jurisdiction in a suit between a state on the one hand and a citizen of another state and citizens of the complainant state on the other. Accordingly, the bill was dismissed for want of parties who should be joined, but could not be without ousting our jurisdiction.

We shall therefore proceed to examine the substance of the bill proposed to be filed, in order to see whether it discloses a case in which a decree could be granted which would do final and complete justice between [239] the nominal parties without *vitally affecting other persons not before the court. As already stated, a conclusion reached that the suit cannot be entertained for want of necessary and essential parties will not imply any expression of opinion beyond that question.

As the bill is set forth in full in the preceding statement, it will not be necessary to here repeat its allegations. They may be summarized as follows:

The complainant is the state of Minnesota; the defendant is the Northern Securities Company, a corporation of the state of New Jersey.

It is part of the policy of the state of 134 U. S. U. S., Book 46.

Minnesota, as declared in its public statutes, to prohibit therein the consolidation in any manner of competing and parallel lines of railway. The statutes specially recited in the bill are the act of March 9, 1874, the 1st section whereof is in the following terms: "No railroad corporation, or the lessees, purchaser, or managers of any railroad company, shall consolidate the stock, property, or franchise of such corporation with, or lease or purchase the works or franchise of, or in any way control, any other railroad corporation owning or having under its control a parallel or competing line; nor shall any officer of such railroad corporation act as an officer of any other railroad corporation owning or having the control of a parallel or competing line, and the question whether railroads are parallel or competing lines shall, when demanded by the party complainant, be decided by a jury as in other civil issues;" and the act of March 3, 1881, of which the 3d section is as follows: "No railroad company shall consolidate with, lease, or purchase, or in any way become the owner of or control, any other railroad corporation or stock, franchises, rights or property thereof, which owns or controls a parallel or competing line."

The Great Northern Railway Company is a corporation organized and existing under an act duly passed by the territory of Minnesota and under various subsequent acts of the state of Minnesota, and owns and controls, as lessee, several important lines of railroad, some only within and others extending beyond the state of Minnesota, and which are maintained by the Great Northern Railway Company as one complete system. The *board of directors of the Great [240] Northern Railway Company, at the time of the organization of the Northern Securities Company, to wit, on or about November 13, 1901, was and now is composed of the following-named persons, to wit: James J. Hill, James N. Hill, Samuel Hill, William P. Clough, Edward Sawyer, Jacob H. Schiff, and Henry W. Cannon. That on said last-mentioned date the Great Northern Railway Company had issued and there was then outstanding a total of $125,000,000 par value of the capital stock of said corporation, of which, it is alleged, that said James J. Hill was on said last-mentioned date the owner of, or had subject to his direction and disposition, more than a majority of said capital stock so outstanding.

The Northern Pacific Railway Company was organized under the laws of the state of Wisconsin of the year 1895, and afterwards, by filing a certified copy of its articles of incorporation, became a corporation of the state of Minnesota and subject to the laws of that state relating to railroad corporations. In the year 1896 the Northern Pacific Railway Company duly purchased and became the owner of the entire railroad properties and lines formerly owned by the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, and at all times since has continuously owned and operated each and all of said lines of railway situated within the state of Minnesota, and which connect the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis and Duluth, and connect with the lines of railways outside the state of Minnesota. During the year 1899 the said Northern Pacific Railway Company purchased, and ever since has owned and operated a line of railway extending from the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis to Duluth, Minnesota. Said last-mentioned line parallels and is a competing line of railway for both freight and passenger traffic with the line of railway between said Minneapolis and St. Paul and Duluth, owned by the Eastern Railway Company of Minnesota, but which is operated, controlled, and managed by said Great Northern Railway Company, as a part of the system of that company. The lines of railway now owned and operated by said Great Northern Railway Company within the state of Minnesota are parallel and competing lines for freight and passenger traffic *with the lines of railway now owned, operated, and controlled by said Northern Pacific Railway Company within the state of Minnesota; and also said lines of railway owned, operated, and controlled by said Great Northern Railway Company, and also the lines of railway owned, operated, and controlled by said Northern Pacific Railway Company, which connect with the lines of railway owned, operated, and controlled by each of said companies respectively within the state of Minnesota, are parallel and competing lines through the states of North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, and Washington to Puget Sound on the Pacific Coast, for passenger and freight traffic. That said companies are the only railway companies owning or operating lines of railway crossing the state of Minnesota and connecting the Pacific ocean by rail with points in Minnesota.

That the Chicago, Burlington, & Quincy Railway Company, a corporation of the state of Illinois, has, for many years last past, owned, operated, and controlled an extensive system of railway lines connecting the city of Chicago with the city of Denver, in the state of Colorado, and with the city of Billings, in the state of Montana, which last-named point is a junction and competitive point for freight and passenger traffic with said Northern Pacific Railway Company, etc. That during the year 1901 the said Great Northern Railway Company and said Northern Pacific Railway Company jointly purchased 98 per cent of the total capital stock of said Chicago, Burlington, & Quincy Railway Company, aggregating approximately 107,000,000 of dollars, par value, and now own the same, and issued in payment therefor the joint bonds of said Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies, payable in twenty years from the date thereof, and bearing interest at the rate of 4 per cent per annum, payable semi-annually. That the said Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies issued and delivered in exchange for each $100 in amount of said Chicago, Burlington, & Quincy Railway Company stock $200 in amount of the said bonds; and that under and by virtue of the purchase of the said stock the joint ownership and control of the said Chicago, Burlington, & Quincy Railway Company are vested in, *and ever since [242] have been exercised by, the said Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies. During April, 1901, and ever since, the following-named persons constituted and now are the members of the board of directors of the Northern Pacific Railway Company: James J. Hill, Robert Bacon, George F. Baker, E. H. Harriman, H. McK. Twombly, Brayton Ives, D. Willis James, John S. Kennedy, Daniel S. Lamont, Charles S. Mellen, Samuel Rea, William Rockefeller, Charles Steele, James Stillman, and Eben B. Thomas. On November 13, 1901, J. Pierpont Morgan, with certain other unknown persons, but who were acting with said Morgan, owned and had in their possession, or held and had subject to their control and disposition, upwards of 85 per cent of the total capital stock of said Northern Pacific Railway Company. The Northern Securities Company was organized on November 13, 1901, with its principal office at Hoboken, in the state of New Jersey, and the objects for which the corporation was formed, as stated in the articles of incorporation, are to acquire and hold, as investments, the bonds, securities, and capital stock of any other corporation or corporations of the state of New Jersey, or of any other state, territory, or country, and while owner of said stock to exercise all the rights, powers, and privileges of ownership, including the right to vote thereon; and it is declared that the corporation shall have power to conduct its business in other states and in foreign countries, to have one or more offices out of the state, and to purchase, hold, and convey real and personal property out of the state.

It is alleged that the Northern Securities Company was incorporated at the instigation and request of James J. Hill, William P. Clough, and certain unknown stockholders of said Great Northern Railway Company, who, with said Hill and Clough, owned or controlled, or have the disposition and management of, a large majority of the capital stock of said Great Northern Railway Company, and with the co-operation of J. Pierpont Morgan and certain other unknown stockholders of said Northern Pacific Railway Company, who, with said Morgan, owned and controlled, or have the disposition and management *of, a large majority [243] of the capital stock of said Northern Pacific Railway Company.

On November 14, 1901. James J. Hill, George F. Baker, Daniel S. Lamont, James Stillman, N. Terhune, Samuel Thorne, Charles L. Perkins, Jacob H. Schiff, William P. Clough, John S. Kennedy, Willis James, E. T. Nichols, Robert Bacon, and E. H. Harriman were elected directors of the Northern Securities Company, and said directors on November 15, 1901, elected James J. Hill to be president, and John S. Kennedy, George F. Baker, Willis James, and William P. Clough to be vice presidents, and E. T. Nichols to be secretary and treasurer, of said company. It is alleged that the holders of a large majority of the capital stock of both said Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies had knowledge of and assisted in the formation of the said Northern Securities Company, and that such stockholders, so consenting and assisting, constitute all of the stockholders of said Northern Securities Company.

The bill charges that the purpose of the formation of the Northern Securities Company was to place the management and control of the Great Northern Railway Company and of the Northern Pacific Railway Company under one management, and to thus, in effect, establish a consolidation of said railway companies, and defeat and evade the statutes and policy of the state of Minnesota forbidding consolidation of parallel and competing lines of railway.

[244] The relief prayed by the bill is that the defendant company be perpetually enjoined and restrained from voting, at any meeting of either said Great Northern or Northern Pacific Railway Company, any of the capital stock of either of said companies by any means or in any manner whatsoever, and from attending, by reason of such ownership, possession, or control of stock, either through its officers or by proxy, or in any other manner, any meeting of the stockholders of either of said companies, and from, in any way, aiding, advising, directing, interfering with or in any way taking part, directly or indirectly, in any manner whatsoever, in the management, control, or operation of any of the lines of railway of either of said companies; and that said defendant, its officers, attorneys, representatives, *agents, or servants, including its board of directors, or any of its members as such, be enjoined and restrained from exercising any of the powers or performing any of the duties, or in any manner acting as a representative, officer, member of the board of directors or employee, of either said Great Northern or Northern Pacific Railway Company, or in any way exercising any management, direction, or control over the same; and that said defendant, its stockholders, directors, and other officers, representatives, and agents, be enjoined and restrained from doing any and all acts and making any arrangements or combinations, by contract or otherwise, having for their object, effect, or result the consolidation or establishment of a joint management or control in any manner whatsoever of the said Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies, their lines of railway or properties; and that said defendant be enjoined from either directly or indirectly holding, owning or controlling any of the stock of either of said companies at one and the same time for any of the purposes or objects alleged in the bill, or otherwise, and that in case it shall appear upon the hearing that the defendant owns or controls, or is acting in concert with the owners of, a majority of the capital stock of either of said railway companies, and owns or controls a minority of the stock of the other of said companies, then that the defendant, its officers, directors, agents, or representatives, be enjoined and restrained from receiving, acquiring, or controlling any additional capital stock of such other railway company; and further for leave to amend the bill of complaint, if amendment thereto shall become necessary, including the right to bring in other parties defendant for the purpose of giving force and effect to any decree that may be made by the court herein.

More briefly stated, the case presented by the charges and prayers of the bill is that the state of Minnesota is apprehensive that a majority of the stockholders respectively of the Great Northern Railway Company and of the Northern Pacific Railway Company have combined and made an arrangement, through the organization of a corporation of the state of New Jersey, whereby such a consolidation, or, what is alleged to amount to the same thing, a joint control and management *of the Great Northern and [245] Northern Pacific Railway companies, shall be effected as will operate to defeat and overrule the policy of the state in prohibiting the consolidation of parallel and competing lines of railway, and therefore appeals to a court of equity to prevent by injunction the operation and effect of such a combination and arrangement.

But at once, as we have seen, the court is put upon inquiry whether the parties and persons to be affected by such an injunction are before it.

The narrative of the bill unquestionably discloses that the parties to be affected by a decision of the controversy are, directly, the state of Minnesota, the Great Northern Railway Company, the Northern Pacific Railway Company, corporations of that state, and the Northern Securities Company, a corporation of the state of New Jersey, and, indirectly, the stockholders and bondholders of those corporations and of the numerous railway companies whose lines are alleged to be owned, managed, or controlled by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies.

Can such a controversy be determined, with due regard to the interests of all concerned, by a suit solely between the state of Minnesota and the Northern Securities Company? It is, indeed, alleged that all of the stockholders of the Northern Securities Company are stockholders in the two railroad companies, and therefore it may be said that the latter stockholders are sufficiently represented in the litigation by the Northern Securities Company; but it is not alleged that the stockholders of the Northern Securities Company constitute or are composed of all the stockholders of the two railroad companies, and, in fact, the contrary is conceded in the allegations of the bill that a majority only of the stock of one, or perhaps both, of the two railroad companies is owned, or at least controlled and managed, by the Northern Securities Company. It is obvious, therefore, that the rights of the minority stockholders of the two railroad companies are not represented by the Northern Securities Company. They have a right to be represented in the controversy by the companies whose stock they hold, and their rights ought not to be affected without a hearing, even if*it were conceded that a majority of the stock in such companies, held by a few persons, had assisted in forming some sort of an illegal arrangement. Moreover, it must not be overlooked that it is not the private interests of stockholders that are to be alone considered. The directors of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies are appointed to represent and protect, not merely the private and pecuniary interests of the stockholders, but the rights of the public at large, which is deeply concerned in the proper and advantageous management of these public highways. It is not sufficient to say that the attorney general, or the governor, or even the legislature of the state, can be conclusively deemed to represent the public interests in such a controversy as that presented by the bill. Even a state, when she voluntarily becomes a complainant in a court of equity, cannot claim to represent both sides of the controversy. Not only have the stockholders, be they few or many, a right to be heard, through the officers and directors whom they have legally selected to represent them, but the general interests of the public, which might be deeply affected by the decree of the court, are entitled to be heard; and that, when the state is the complainant and in a case like the present, can only be effected by the presence of the railroad companies as parties defendant.

Upon investigation it might turn out that the allegations of the bill are well founded, and that the state is entitled to relief; or it might turn out that there is no intention or design on the part of the railroad companies to form any combination in disregard of the policy of the state, but that what is proposed is consistent with that policy and advantageous to the communities affected. But, in making such investigation, a court of equity must insist that both sides of the controversy shall be adequately represented and fully heard.

When it appears to a court of equity that a case, otherwise presenting ground for its action, cannot be dealt with because of the absence of essential parties, it is usual for the court, while sustaining the objection, to grant leave to the complainant to amend by bringing in such parties. But when it likewise appears that necessary and indispensable parties are beyond*the reach of the jurisdiction of the court, or that, when made parties, the jurisdiction of the court will thereby be defeated, for the court to grant leave to amend would be useless. Sec. 2 of Article 3 of the Constitution of the United States.

As, then, the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific Railway companies are indispensable parties, without whose presence the court, acting as a court of equity, cannot proceed, and as our constitutional jurisdiction would not extend to the case if those companies were made parties defendant, the motion for leave to file the proposed bill must be and is denied.

UNITED STATES, Appt.,

v.

ST. LOUIS & MISSISSIPPI VALLEY
TRANSPORTATION COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 247-257.)

Appeal—from court of claims—finality of judgment—effect of amendment of findings—collision—improper anchorage of war vessel—contributory negligence of vessel with barges.

1. The finality of a judgment of the court of claims cannot be contested by the defendant on account of the filing of amended findings of fact, where this was done at his own request in connection with a motion for a new trial, and he also subsequently took an appeal from the judgment after his motion for new trial was overruled.
2. An amendment of its findings of fact may properly be made by the court of claims in order to make its findings conform to the truth, though final judgment has already been entered, but while its record has not yet passed out of its control by the allowance of an appeal.
3. Anchoring vessels of the United States in an unusual and improper position in a harbor, in total disregard of the usages and regulations of the port requiring notice to the harbor master of the intention to anchor, constitutes negligence on the part of the officers of the vessel, which will render the United States liable in the court of claims for damages thereby caused to other vessels navigating the harbor.
4. A vessel with barges in tow is not chargeable with contributory negligence in case of a collision between war vessels of the United States and some of the barges in tow, when the war vessels were anchored in an improper place in a harbor, where vessels had never anchored before, and were concealed from view by a projecting point of land until the vessel with the tow had come so near that it was impossible to prevent some of the barges from being carried by their headway and by the current into collision with the vessels at anchor.

[No. 89.]

Argued January 10, 13, 1902. Decided February 24, 1902.

NOTE.—As to what judgments or decrees are final for purposes of review—see notes to Brush Electric Co. v. Electric Improv. Co. 2 C. C. A. 379; Central Trust Co. v. Madden, 17 C. C. A. 238; Prescott & A. C. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 C. C. A. 842, and Gibbons v. Ogden, 5 L. ed. U. S. 302.

As to rules for avoiding collisions—see notes to St. John v. Paine, 13 L. ed. U. S. 537; Williamson v. Barrett, 14 L. ed. U. S. 68; The Abbotsford v. Johnson, 25 L. ed. U. S. 168; The E. A. Packer v. New Jersey Lighterage Co. 35 L. ed. U. S. 453; The Niagara, 28 C. C. A. 532; The Mount Hope, 29 C. C. A. 368, and The Imperial (D. C. D. Or.) 3 L. R. A. 234.

As to liability of tug and tow in a collision between vessels—see note to The Imperial (D. C. D. Or.) 3 L. R. A. 234.

A PPEAL from a judgment of the Court of Claims sustaining a claim for damages to barges by collision with war vessels improperly anchored in a harbor. Affirmed. See same case below, 33 Ct. Cl. 251.

Statement by Mr. Justice Shiras:

[248] On October 17, 1894, the St. Louis & Mississippi Valley Transportation Company filed in the court of claims a suit by way of petition against the United States, in pursuance of the provisions of the act of August 3, 1894, alleging that said company was a corporation of the state of Missouri, and the owner* of the towboat Future City, her barges in tow and freight earning; that owing to a collision on May 5, 1888, in the Mississippi river between said steam towboat and barges and war vessels of the United States, several of the barges, with their cargoes and contents, were sunk and wholly lost, and the freight earnings of such barges for the voyage in progress were lost, or not earned and paid to the claimant; and that said collision and the loss and injury resulting therefrom were solely and directly the result of negligence on the part of those in charge of the said vessels of war; and claimed damages in the sum of $24,308.

The United States appeared in said court of claims by its Attorney General, and filed an answer traversing and denying the allegations of the claimant's petition. The case was so proceeded in that on March 21, 1898, the court found for the claimant, and adjudged and decreed that the St. Louis & Mississippi Valley Transportation Company should have and recover of and from the United States the sum of $19,808.85.

On March 21, 1898, the court filed findings of fact and conclusion of law. Subsequently, to wit, on May 14, 1900, the court filed an order withdrawing its former findings of fact, and filed new and amended findings in lieu thereof.

On May 21, 1900, an appeal was prayed for and allowed to this court.

Mr. George Hines Gorman argued the cause, and, with Assistant Attorney General Pradt, filed a brief for appellant:

The orders of an executive head of a department, when formulated as regulations and published under express congressional authority, are in effect a statutory enactment, and have all the force and effect of a law of Congress.

Ex parte Reed, 100 U. S. 13, 25 L. ed. 338; Gratiot v. United States, 4 How. 80, 11 L. ed. 884; Maddux v. United States, 20 Ct. Cl. 193; Stotesbury v. United States, 23 Ct. Cl. 292.

A fortiori is this true of a rule of the Supreme Court of the United States made under and pursuant to law. Therefore every judgment of the court of claims must conform to rule 4 of the Supreme Court of the United States for the government of appeals from the court of claims, made in pursuance of the authority conferred by act of March 3, 1863, requiring the court of claims to make and file the findings of fact and conclusions of law in open court before or at the time they enter judgment in the case.

Findings of the court amount to nothing more than an order for judgment, and are not of themselves the judgment of the court.

Andrews v. Welch, 47 Wis. 134, 2 N. W. 98.

There must be either findings by the court or the verdict of the jury; and a judgment entered without either verdict or findings is fatally erroneous, if not absolutely void.

Stansell v. Corning, 21 Mich. 242; Mace v. O'Reilly, 70 Cal. 231, 11 Pac. 721; Whittlesey v. Hartford, P. & F. R. Co. 23 Conn. 436; Haxton v. McClaren, 132 Ind. 235, 31 N. E. 48; Ferguson v. Seawell, 1 Mo. 256; Watson v. Manhattan R. Co. 17 Abb. N. C. 289; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Pope, 19 Or. 35, 26 Pac. 622; Stahl v. Gotzenberger, 45 Wis. 121; Pierpont v. Pierpont, 19 Tex. 227; Maryott v. Gardner, 50 Neb. 320, 69 N. W. 837; Garner v. State ex rel. Moon, 28 Kan. 790.

In states in which the court is required by law to state separately the facts found and the conclusion of law, as is required of the court of claims, it is universally held that the failure on the part of the court to make such separate statements in the findings renders its judgment reversible upon appeal.

Harris v. Hay, 111 Pa. 564, 4 Atl. 715; Sweigard v. Wilson, 106 Pa. 213; Russell v. Armador, 2 Cal. 305; Drainage Dist. No. 4 v. Crow, 20 Or. 535, 26 Pac. 845; Stansell v. Corning, 21 Mich. 244.

After the special finding of the court is filed and judgment rendered, the power of the court over it is at an end, except that the court may, at any time before the close of the term at which the judgment is rendered, grant a new trial.

Prince v. Lynch, 38 Cal. 528, 99 Am. Dec. 427; Smith v. Taylor, 82 Cal. 533, 23 Pac. 217; Levy v. Chittenden, 120 Ind. 37, 22 N. E. 92; Hartlepp v. Whiteley, 129 Ind. 576, 28 N. E. 535, 31 N. E. 203; Wray v. Hill, 85 Ind. 546; Turkington v. Purvis, 128 Ind. 189, 9 L. R. A. 607, 25 N. E. 879; Lang v. Baxter, 69 Fed. 905; Baptist v. Farwell Transp. Co. 29 Fed. 180; Marye v. Strouse, 6 Sawy. 204, 5 Fed. 494; Klever v. Seawell, 12 C. C. A. 653, 22 U. S. App. 458, 65 Fed. 373.

A court may make such modification or correction of its findings as shall make them conform to the truth and cover the issues in the case, but this must be done before the entry of judgment.

Smith v. Taylor, 82 Cal. 533, 23 Pac. 217; Calhoun v. Gilliland, 2 Wash. Terr. 174, 2 Pac. 355; Dowell v. Talbot Paving Co. 138 Ind. 691, 38 N. E. 389.

It is the duty of the harbor masters to notify a shipmaster of the regulations of a port concerning a certain anchorage ground, and not the business of the shipmaster to inquire concerning it of the harbor master.

Cushing v. The John Fraser, 21 How. 184, sub nom. The Jas. Gray v. The John Fraser, 16 L. ed. 106; The Russia, 3 Ben. 471, Fed. Cas. No. 12,168.

If a vessel anchors at an improper or unlawful place it is the duty of the harbor master to notify her of that fact, and to require her to move to some place which he considers to be proper and lawful; and if he fails to do so no blame can be attached to the shipmaster for remaining there.

Ibid.

If a harbor master, or others in authority, are lax or careless in their enforcement of harbor regulations, the courts will not enforce such regulations with any more strictness.

Ibid.

A vessel anchored about the middle of a stream 1,600 feet wide is properly anchored.

The Ogemaw, 32 Fed. 920. To the same effect, see Culbertson v. The Southern Belle, 18 How. 585, 15 L. ed. 493; The Culberg v. The Continental, 3 Woods, 32, Fed. Cas. No. 3,460; The Masters, Brown, Adm. 342, Fed. Cas. No. 9,267; Maltby v. Steam Derrick-boat, 3 Hughes, 480, Fed. Cas. No. 9,000; Mereer v. The Florida, 3 Hughes, 488, Fed. Cas. No. 9,433; The E. A. Paeker, 10 Ben. 520, Fed. Cas. No. 4,241; Speneer, Marine Collisions, § 110; The Mary Powell, 31 Fed. 622; Brush v. The Plainfield, 2 N. J. L. J. 331, Fed. Cas. No. 2,058; The D. S. Gregory, 2 Ben. 166, Fed. Cas. No. 4,099.

It is the custom in navigating western rivers, including the Mississippi, for descending vessels to navigate in midstream as nearly as possible, and for ascending vessels to navigate inshore.

Bates v. The Natehez, Newberry, Adm. 489, Fed. Cas. No. 1,102; The Relief, Olcott, 104 Fed. Cas. No. 11,693; Shaw v. The Bridgeport, 1 Ben. 65, Fed. Cas. No. 12,217; Shirley v. The Richmond, 2 Woods, 58, Fed. Cas. No. 12,795; The Seranton, 5 Blatchf. 400, Fed. Cas. No. 12,558; The Belle, 34 Fed. 669; Barrett v. Williamson, 4 McLean, 589, Fed. Cas. No. 1,051.

The custom of navigation on western rivers, including the Mississippi, requires a descending boat to run down the channel where it finds the strongest current and the deepest water, and the ascending boat to keep as close as possible to shore, where the current is less resistful.

Keys v. The Ambassador, 1 Bond, 237, Fed. Cas. No. 7,747.

Neglect of this custom of navigation will render the one neglecting it, if such neglect produces injury, liable in damages.

Sinnott v. The Dresden, Newberry, Adm. 474, Fed. Cas. No. 12,908; Shirley v. The Richmond, 2 Woods, 58, Fed. Cas. No. 12,795.

Although the usual rule requires a descending boat to keep in the middle of the river, it may hug the shore so long as it does not interfere with the rights of others; and if an ascending boat is met, and indicates its disposition to hold the shore, the descending boat must give way.

Thorp v. The Defender, 1 Bond, 397, Fed. Cas. No. 14,003.

The rule is applicable to tows.

Snow v. Hill, 20 How. 543, 15 L. ed. 1017.

The burden of proof is always on the moving craft to prove by clear and affirmative evidence that the collision was not due to the persons navigating it, the presumption being always against them.

The Lady Franklin, 2 Low. Dec. 220, Fed. Cas. No. 7,984; New York & V. SS. Co. v. Calderwood, 19 How. 241, 15 L. ed. 612; The Ogemaw, 32 Fed. 920. See, in accord, The D. S. Gregory, 6 Blatchf. 528, Fed. Cas. No. 4,102; The Virginia Ehrman, 97 U. S. 309, sub nom. The Virginia Ehrman v. Curtis, 24 L. ed. 890; The Batavier, 40 Eng. L. & Eq. 25; The Louisiana, 3 Wall. 164, sub nom. Baltimore Steam Packet Co. v. Flushing, C. P. & N. Y. Steam Ferry Co. 18 L. ed. 85; The Girolamo, 3 Hagg. Adm. 169; The Granite State, 3 Wall. 310, sub nom. Wetmore v. The Granite State, 18 L. ed. 179; The Wanata, 4 Ben. 314, Fed. Cas. No. 17,138; The Bridgeport, 14 Wall. 119, sub nom. The Bridgeport v. Shaw, 20 L. ed. 788.

These general doctrines of maritime law are emphasized by the provisions of the special act referring this case to the court of claims, wherein it is provided "that no judgment shall be rendered against the government unless it shall affirmatively appear from the evidence adduced that such collision was the result of negligence on the part of the officers in command of said vessels of war."

A tug having the power of directing her movements is bound to pursue a safe and consistent course, and is not permitted to place itself and its tow in an unnecessarily exposed or hazardous situation; and it is no defense that it used all reasonable means to avoid danger after having placed itself in a dangerous situation.

The Osecola, 33 Fed. 719; The Syracuse, 12 Wall. 166, sub nom. The Syracuse v. Langley, 20 L. ed. 382; The Gioranni v. Philadelphia, 59 Fed. 303; The David Morris, Brown, Adm. 273, Fed. Cas. No. 3,596.

On approaching a narrow channel or dangerous situation it is the duty of the tug to ascertain that the channel is not obstructed, and that there is sufficient room for its tow to pass in safety.

The Osecola, 50 Fed. 326; The Senator D. C. Chase, 46 Fed. 874; The T. W. Snook, 49 Fed. 686; Miller v. The Argonaut, 37 Fed. 910; Scott v. The Drew, 38 Fed. 858.

Extraordinary precautions are required of a tug navigating a narrow channel with a tow so large as to occupy the larger portion of the channel.

The Lucy D., 21 Fed. 142; The Iron Chief, 11 C. C. A. 196, 22 U. S. App. 473, 546, 63 Fed. 289.

Where in a high and uncertain state of the wind a vessel is approaching a part of the river in which there may be obstructions to navigation, it is her duty to lay by until the wind has gone down and she can pass in safety.

The Mohler, 21 Wall. 230, sub nom. The Mollie Mohler v. Home Ins. Co. 22 L. ed. 485.

A steamer having a very large tow, approaching a place where, from the number of vessels in the water and the force of counter currents, navigation with a smaller tow would be less dangerous, is bound to approach with great care, and if, within 2 or 3 miles of the place, she can divide her tow, she is bound to divide it.

The Syracuse, 12 Wall. 167, sub nom. The Syracuse v. Langley, 20 L. ed. 382.

A steam tug with a tow in going around a dangerous point where the tide sets strongly across the river is not entitled to occupy half of the river on the right-hand side.

The B. K. Washburn, 19 Fed. 788.

If a vessel chooses to avail herself of a particular mode of going down a river at a particular time and place, which renders it difficult to escape collisions, and a collision does take place, she must bear the consequences of the contingency to which she has exposed herself.

1 Parsons. Shipping & Admiralty, ed. 1869, p. 575: The Hope, 2 W. Rob. 8; The Nettie, 35 Fed. 615; The Uncle Abe, 18 Fed. 270.

A tug has been frequently held in fault for assuming to tow under circumstances rendered dangerous by its own lack of power to handle the tow.

The Osecola, 50 Fed. 326; The Senator D. C. Chase, 46 Fed. 874; The T. W. Snook, 49 Fed. 686; Miller v. The Argonaut, 37 Fed. 910; Scott v. The Drew, 38 Fed. 858.

Precautions not seasonably taken afford no defense against the charge of negligence in cases of collision, where it appears that the disaster might have been prevented by earlier action.

The Vanderbilt, 6 Wall. 225, sub nom. The Vanderbilt v. McKibbin, 18 L. ed. 823; The Teutonia, 23 Wall. 77, sub nom. Seward v. The Teutonia, 23 L. ed. 44; The Connecticut, 103 U. S. 710, sub nom. Schuyler's Steam Tow-Boat Line v. Caleb, 26 L. ed. 467. See also The Syracuse, 12 Wall. 167, sub nom. The Syracuse v. Langley, 20 L. ed. 382.

In navigating in foggy weather near piers, or where the presence of boats may reasonably be expected, or in the navigation of a narrow channel, prudence demands the greatest care, and the speed should be reduced to a point where the forward direction of the boat may be changed on approach of danger.

The St. John, 29 Fed. 221; Gray v. The Jessie Russell, 5 Fed. 639; The Minnie, 20 Fed. 543.

Seven or eight miles an hour is too great a rate of speed for a steamboat having barges in tow at a dangerous point on the Mississippi river.

Security Ins. Co. v. The Milwaukee, 4 Am. L. T. 147; Spencer, Marine Collisions, § 148.

Proof that excessive speed did not contribute to the injury must be clear and positive, and the burden is always upon the party asserting the fact.

The City of Macon, 47 Fed. 919; The Florida, 4 Blatchf. 470, Fed. Cas. No. 4,889. 184 U. S.

Mr. James H. Hayden argued the cause, and, with Mr. Joseph K. McCammon, filed a brief for appellee:

The amendment of the findings was made prior to the allowance of the application for this appeal, and therefore while the court of claims had control of the case.

Ex parte Roberts, 15 Wall. 384, 21 L. ed. 131; Ex parte Russell, 13 Wall. 664, 20 L. ed. 632; Ex parte United States, 16 Wall. 699, 21 L. ed. 507.

So long as it retained control of the case and the record, it was competent for the court of claims to correct mistakes in the findings, when brought to its notice, so that the findings sent up on appeal should state the truth.

Ex parte Roberts, 15 Wall. 384, 21 L. ed. 131, 8 Ct. Cl. 118; Kirk v. United States, 28 Ct. Cl. 276.

Other courts in this country possess and exercise the same power over their records until these pass from their control by appeal, by the termination of a term of court, or by some other limitation prescribed by local statute.

North v. Peters, 138 U. S. 271, 34 L. ed. 936, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346; Goddard v. Ordway, 101 U. S. 745, sub nom. Phillips v. Ordway, 25 L. ed. 1040; Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. ed. 872.

The appeal which the United States has taken, of necessity admits the existence and the finality of the judgment.

Ex parte Roberts, 15 Wall. 384, 21 L. ed. 131; Ex parte Russell, 13 Wall. 664, 20 L. ed. 632; Ex parte United States, 16 Wall. 699, 21 L. ed. 507.

For the purposes of this appeal, the facts set out in the findings "must be taken as undisputed."

United States v. Adams, 6 Wall. 101, 18 L. ed. 792; McClure v. United States, 116 U. S. 145, 29 L. ed. 572, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321.

The presumption that where a collision occurred between two vessels, one of which was at anchor and the other in motion, the latter was at fault, may be rebutted by proof that the moving vessel exercised ordinary care, and that the collision was caused by the fault of the anchored vessel.

Spencer, Marine Collisions, § 120; The Scioto, 2 Ware, 365, Fed. Cas. No. 12,508.

Every vessel, from whatever part of the world she may come, is bound to take notice of, and conform to, local usages of navigation.

Cushing v. The John Fraser, 21 How. 184, sub nom. The Jas. Gray v. The John Fraser, 16 L. ed. 106.

In courts of admiralty such usages and local rules sanctioned by authority of a state are taken as evidence of what is a vessel's duty under the circumstances provided for.

The Raithwaite Hall, 30 L. T. N. S. 233; The Vanderbilt, 6 Wall. 225, sub nom. The Vanderbilt v. McKibbin, 18 L. ed. 823; Spencer, Marine Collisions, § 21.

Even where a particular custom involves a departure from the general rules of navigation, if it has received general sanction in the locality where it prevails, and has been found necessary or reasonable, it will be respected in determining the propriety of a vessel's course.

Spencer, Marine Collisions, § 22; The Favorita, 18 Wall. 598, sub nom. The Favorita v. Union Ferry Co. 21 L. ed. 856.

Sailing vessels, especially when descending the river, usually keep well over to the western side of the channel, leaving the eastern side of the same for the uninterrupted passage of vessels propelled by steam. Vessels of all kinds, whether propelled by steam or sails, are allowed and expected to vary their respective courses to correspond with well-known sinuosities of the navigable portion of the river, and to avoid the dangers of navigation arising from rocks, shoals, and sand bars, as well as from curves and bends in the banks of the river or channel of navigation.

The John L. Hasbrouck, 93 U. S. 405, sub nom. Lyman v. The John L. Hasbrouck, 23 L. ed. 962.

A vessel cannot be held in fault for proceeding in the manner sanctioned by local custom, and is under no obligation to take the precautions required by a custom prevailing in another port of the same river.

The Victoria, 37 C. C. A. 40, 95 Fed. 184.

In several cases where the facts were similar to those under consideration, it was held that the moving vessels were blameless, while the vessels with which they collided, having anchored in improper, exposed, or unusual positions, were guilty of fault and liable for the losses which ensued.

Fawcett v. The L. W. Morgan, 6 Fed. 200; The Scioto, 2 Ware, 360, Fed. Cas. No. 12,508; Cusning v. The John Fraser, 21 How. 184, sub nom. The Jas. Gray v. The John Fraser, 16 L. ed. 106.

The United States vessels, without necessity or excuse, came to anchor and remained in unusual and improper positions, where their presence rendered the navigation of the river by certain vessels extremely dangerous. In so doing they were guilty of negligence.

Cushing v. The John Fraser, 21 How. 184, sub nom. The Jas. Gray v. The John Fraser, 16 L. ed. 106; The Vanderbilt, 6 Wall. 225, sub nom. The Vanderbilt v. McKibbin, 18 L. ed. 823; The Raithwaite Hall, 30 L. T. N. S. 233; Spencer, Marine Collisions, §§ 21-23, 99, 106; The Scioto, 2 Ware, 360, Fed. Cas. No. 12,508; Fretz v. Bull, 12 How. 466, 13 L. ed. 1068; The Jeremiah Godfrey, 17 Fed. 738; Morten v. Five Canal-Boats, 24 Fed. 500; The Margaret J. Sanford, 30 Fed. 714; The Fort Lee, 31 Fed. 570.

The United States ships were under obligation to signify their presence to approaching vessels, and to endeavor to avoid collisions by veering chain.

The Richmond, 12 C. C. A. 1, 26 U. S. App. 183, 63 Fed. 1020.

The defense that a collision was the result of inevitable accident cannot be maintained where a vessel voluntarily put itself in a situation where it received the effect of natural forces, the results of which could have been foreseen and might reasonably have been anticipated.

Spencer, Marine Collisions, § 195; Union SS. Co. v. New York & V. SS. Co. 24 How. 301, 16 L. ed. 699; Sampson v. United States, 12 Ct. Cl. 480; The Clarita, 23 Wall. 1, sub nom. The Clara Clarita v. Cox, 23 L. ed. 146.

It appearing that the future city was without fault, and that the United States ships anchored and remained in exposed and unlawful positions, the burden of proof is upon the latter to show a valid excuse for their conduct.

Spencer, Marine Collisions, § 125; The Scioto, 2 Ware, 360, Fed. Cas. No. 12,508; The Great Republic, 23 Wall. 20, sub nom. Thompson v. The Great Republic, 23 L. ed. 55; The Grace Girdler, 7 Wall. 196, sub nom. Lockwood v. The Grace Girdler, 19 L. ed. 113.

The officers of the United States ships were in absolute command of them, and were responsible for their management.

Ayers v. Knox, 7 Mass. 310.

*Mr. Justice Shiras delivered the opinion of the court: [248]

After the findings of fact, conclusions of law, and judgment were filed by the court of claims on March 21, 1898, two successive motions for a new trial were made on behalf of the defendant. The result of these motions was that on May 14, *1900, the court [249] filed an order withdrawing its former findings of fact, and filed new and amended findings and opinion; and it is now contended that by such action in amending its findings of fact and modifying its opinion the court must be deemed to have set aside its judgment. But as the amendments of the findings were made at the request of the defendant in connection with the motions for a new trial, we think that the existing conclusions of law and judgment were not thereby disturbed. Obviously the changes or modifications in the findings, at the instance of the defendant, were intended by the court to enable the case of the defendant to be most advantageously presented for review by the court below on the motions for a new trial, and by this court on appeal. The motions for a new trial having been overruled, the judgment rendered on March 21, 1898, remained as the judgment of the court of claims, and that is the judgment from which the defendant appealed, and which is now before us for review. By taking such appeal, the defendant must be deemed to have admitted the existence and finality of the judgment. Nor is it perceived that the defendant has any reason to complain that the findings, on which the conclusions of law and the judgment were based, were amended at its instance. So far as the amendments were at all material, they were, in some instances, favorable to the case of the defendant, and, at all events, must be regarded as a proper exercise of authority by the trial court in making its findings conform to the truth, while its record had not passed out of its control by the allowance of an appeal.

The material facts found by the court of claims were as follows: The Future City and the barges comprising her tow were all staunch, sound, and seaworthy, and were fully and adequately manned, officered, and equipped, and the Future City was ample, powerful, and able to handle her tow under any and all circumstances arising in the navigation of the Mississippi river. On May 7, 1888, the Future City with her tow was descending the river and approaching the port of New Orleans, with the intention of making a landing, and while so descending the river the Future City followed the proper and customary course of navigation for descending towboats with tows. A towboat [250] with *a tow bound for the port of New Orleans, and pursuing the proper and customary course for such vessels, cannot make out and see vessels and other objects lying in that portion of the river below a point of land at Celeste street and between the western shore and the middle of the stream, because that point and the buildings standing upon it, and the shipping moored along its banks, intervene and completely shut off the view in that direction.

Upon rounding the point of land at Celeste street the Future City for the first time sighted five United States vessels, to wit, the Atlanta, Galena, Ossipee, Yantic, and Richmond, lying at anchor below the said point of land and between the western bank of the river and the middle of the stream. The Future City could not have made out and discovered the United States vessels before, because the said point of land intervened and, with the buildings upon it and the shipping moored along its banks, completely shut off the view in the direction of the portion of the river where those vessels lay at anchor. As soon as she sighted and discovered the United States vessels lying at anchor in her usual and proper course, the Future City backed under a full head, working full stroke, with all the power she had, thus adopting the only course feasible and proper in the circumstances, or in anywise calculated to prevent her from colliding with the United States vessels. On account of the insufficiency of time and space after she discovered the United States vessels, and notwithstanding that she made every possible effort to keep clear of the United States vessels, and, in order that her tow might extend out into the river as short a distance as its length would permit, backed her stern as close to the New Orleans shore as it was in anywise possible without coming into collision with the shipping moored therealong, and notwithstanding that she was skilfully and properly handled and managed by her officers and crew, the Future City was unable, on account of the short distance intervening, either to check her headway or to straighten up, and still being in a flanking position, she and her tow were carried by her headway and the current of the river, and barge 73, the leading barge of her tow on the port side, came into collision with the Atlanta,*striking against[251] the ram of that vessel broadside on with great force. As a result of this collision barge 73 was cut down, and sank, with all her cargo.

Thereafter, notwithstanding that the Future City continued to pursue the only course feasible and proper in the circumstances and in anywise calculated to avoid further collisions with other of the United States vessels, and continued to back with all her power, and notwithstanding that she was skilfully managed and handled by her officers and crew, yet her stern having been swung slightly down stream by the collision of barge 73 with the Atlanta, she was unable to check her headway or straighten up, and was carried by her headway and the currents of the river, and barge 68, the leading barge on the starboard side, collided with the Galena, and was sunk with all her cargo. Notwithstanding that the Future City was skilfully and properly handled, and that she and her officers and crew did their utmost to control her remaining barges and to prevent further collisions between them and the United States vessels, barge 50 broke loose and was carried by the current, and came into collision with the Richmond, and thereby sustained great damage and the loss of part of its cargo.

The United States vessels, as they lay at anchor on May 7, 1888, were ranged in an irregular line along the western bank of the river, which is the city side, their distances from said bank varying from 500 to 700 feet. The Atlanta was anchored highest up stream, and was about 150 feet below the Richard street ferry, and the entire fleet extended down the river for the distance of about 1 mile—the Richmond lying off and about opposite the barge landing. At Celeste street the shore extends into the river to a sharp point, and the river bends from that point to the north. Just below, the width of the stream is about 1,800 feet. The location of the Atlanta, 600 feet, or a little less, from the New Orleans shore, put that vessel in the track of tows entering the harbor from above. It was in the pathway of a tow of even less length than the plaintiff's, at that particular place engaged in flanking down to the landing. The upper vessel was at the entrance to the harbor, and the fleet was located in the way of all vessels descending and seeking *to land in [252] the neighborhood of the barge landing. When the United States vessels were first sighted or discovered by the Future City the Atlanta was distant from her about 150 yards.

The positions occupied by the United States vessels were directly in the track of towboats with tows descending the Mississippi river bound for the port of New Orleans, and pursuing their proper and customary course of navigation, and were thus directly in the track of course of which the Future City and her tow were pursuing when she first sighted and discovered them. The positions thus occupied by the United States vessels were improper and unusual, by reason of their being higher up stream, too short a distance below the point of land at Celeste street, not at the bank, but nearer to the New Orleans or western shore in the river, than the proper, usual, and customary anchorage grounds for such or other vessels, or than vessels had ever before been known to occupy while at anchor. By reason of their being anchored so high up the river such short distances below the point of land at Celeste street and so close to the New Orleans shore, and by reason of their swinging at anchor, they rendered the navigation of the river by towboats with tows, pursuing their usual and customary course, hazardous and extremely dangerous. On May 7, 1888, and prior thereto, there was an abundance of good and suitable anchorage ground lower down the river and nearer its eastern or Algiers shore, where it was usual, customary, and proper for vessels to lie at anchor while at the port of New Orleans, and where the United States vessels could have lain at anchor in perfect safety and without rendering the navigation of the river at the port of New Orleans either hazardous or dangerous for any vessels pursuing their usual, proper, and customary courses. Good holding ground for vessels like the men-of-war to safely anchor at all times existed within 20 feet of the Algiers shore. The United States vessels came to anchor in their said positions on or about May 5, 1888, while the Future City, with her tow, was descending the Mississippi river on her voyage from St. Louis, and none of her officers or crew had notice or knowledge of their presence at New Orleans, or of their whereabouts, or of the manner in which they were [253] anchored, until they were sighted and discovered after the Future City had rounded the point of land at Celeste street. There is a clear and well-defined custom at New Orleans respecting the course and practice of tows to land. Descending tows come close to the shore on the city side of the river. If they did not pursue this course descending tows would come down in the current so far out that the motive power could not back the tow to land. One of the reasons for coming in close to the shore is to catch the slack near vessels moored to the shore.

Under the laws of the state of Louisiana there existed, at the time of this occurrence, a board of five harbor masters, who were charged with the duty of "regulating and stationing all vessels in the stream of the river Mississippi, within the limits of the port of New Orleans, and at the levees thereof." Among the rules and regulations adopted by the board, and at that time in force, was one prescribing that "the harbor masters have authority by law to regulate, moor, and station all seagoing or coasting vessels at the levee, and to remove them from time to time to make room for others, and of the degree of accommodation which one vessel shall afford another the harbor master is constituted sole judge;" and another which provides that "all vessels arriving at this port shall notify the harbor master of the district or leave word at the central office, where the place of landing will be designated; otherwise they will be removed at the expense of the vessel;" and another which declares that "masters of vessels failing to comply with the rules will be held responsible for all damages in consequence, besides laying themselves liable under the law."

526

Upon the arrival of these United States vessels in May it does not appear that the harbor master was notified of the fact, nor was word left at the central office that the vessels had arrived. The harbor master exercised no personal supervision over the matter of the anchorage of the fleet, and was without knowledge of the places taken in the river by the said war vessels.

The court of claims further found, in its twenty-fourth finding, that "the said collisions were the result of negligence on the part of the officers in command of the United States vessels *in bringing them to anchor [254] in improper and unusual positions, and in causing them to be anchored on swinging chains, as aforesaid."

A lengthy discussion is made in the briefs of the respective counsel as to the nature of this finding. Is it a finding of the ultimate fact in the case, or is it merely a conclusion of law based on the facts previously found?

It is said, on the one hand, that, by the express terms of the act of Congress authorizing this suit to be brought, no judgment shall be rendered against the government unless it shall affirmatively appear, from the evidence adduced, that such collision was the result of negligence on the part of the officers in command of said vessels of war, and that the court of claims, having affirmatively found that the collisions were the result of negligence on the part of the officers in command of the United States vessels, such finding is a conclusion of fact, which conclusively disposes of the case, and which, so far as the right to recover is concerned, leaves no question of law to be passed upon by this court. On the other hand, it is claimed that negligence is not a fact which is the subject of direct proof, but an inference from facts put in evidence, and that, hence, this court can determine, from the facts otherwise found, whether the collision was the result of negligence on the part of the officers in command of the vessels.

We do not think it necessary to weigh this question in a very delicate balance, as we are of opinion that, even if the government's contention in that particular is sound, yet the evidence adduced, as it appears in the facts found, was sufficient to warrant the court below in holding that it affirmatively appeared that the collision was the result of the negligence of the officers in command of the vessels.

Undoubtedly, by entering the port of New Orleans, intending to anchor and remain there, in total disregard of the usages and regulations of the port, the officers in command of the vessels were negligent. Ports like those of New Orleans and New York, which are frequented, not merely by seagoing vessels, but by numerous vessels and barges engaged in commerce, or *rivers which [255] enter and form part of the harbors, require regulations suited to the local exigencies.

184 U. S.

"An ordinance of the city authorities of Charleston, prescribing where a vessel may lie in the harbor, how long she may remain there, what light she must show at night, and making other similar regulations, is not in conflict with any law of Congress regulating commerce, or with the general admiralty jurisdiction conferred on the courts of the United States. It is therefore valid. A vessel at anchor is bound to show such a light as is required by the local regulations." Cushing v. The John Fraser, 21 How. 184, sub nom. The Jas. Gray v. The John Fraser, 16 L. ed. 106; The Vanderbilt, 6 Wall. 225, sub nom. The Vanderbilt v. McKibbin, 18 L. ed. 823.

There was also culpable negligence in anchoring in an unusual and improper position.

"It is negligence for a vessel to moor so near the entrance to a harbor that shipping, entering in stress of weather, is liable to become embarrassed by its presence; and where the usual difficulties of navigation make the entrance to a harbor a dangerous undertaking, it is especially reprehensible for a vessel to moor in a situation tending to increase these difficulties."

"Where a vessel is at anchor in a proper place, and is observant of the precaution required by law, it is not liable for damages sustained by a vessel in motion colliding with it, but where it anchors in an unlawful position, or fails to observe the statutory requirements and such other precautions as good seamanship would suggest, it must suffer the consequences attending a violation of the law." Spencer, Marine Collisions, §§ 99, 106.

"A vessel ought not to be moored, and lie in the channel or entrance to a port except in cases of necessity; or, if anchored there from necessity, she ought not to remain there longer than the necessity continues. If she does and a collision takes place with a vessel entering the harbor, she will be considered in default." The Scioto, 2 Ware, 360, Fed. Cas. No. 12, 508.

The treatment of the question of negligence on the part of those in command of the government's vessels was so full and satisfactory by the court below that we think it sufficient to refer to its opinion, reported in 33 Ct. Cl. 251.

[256] The dissent on the part of Peelle, J., did not arise out of any *view that the United States officers had not been negligent, but was based on the opinion of the dissenting justice that negligence on the part of the plaintiff had contributed to the accident.

Adverting to that aspect of the case, we think that, upon the findings made, which of course control us, the plaintiff was not chargeable with contributory negligence. The findings show that the Future City entered the harbor and maneuvered for landing, in the manner customary for vessels of her class; that she had no reason to expect to find vessels at anchor, where none had ever been known to anchor before, on the city side of the river and close under the point at Celeste street, and that her management, when she encountered the exigency, was skilful and proper.

The court of claims further found that the damages caused to the plaintiff, as a result of the collisions, amounted to the sum of $19,808.85.

It is contended on behalf of the government that, even if the collision was the result of negligence on the part of the officers in command of said vessels of war, and even if, on the facts found, the plaintiff was properly exonerated from the charge of contributory negligence, yet that the judgment of the court below was erroneous in including the loss and damages caused to barge 68.

This contention is based on an alleged difference between the findings of fact filed on March 21, 1898, and those filed on May 14, 1900, whereby, it is claimed that the facts that were found in the first finding, and upon which the liability of the government for barge 68 was based, were eliminated, and hence there was no foundation left for the judgment in that respect. This record does not disclose to us the first finding, and, of course, we can only consider the findings as amended and filed on May 14, 1900. But, even conceding that the discrepancies pointed out exist, yet we think that the findings actually and finally made furnish sufficient support for the judgment in the particular complained of. Finding sixteen is explicit, that, "notwithstanding the Future City, after the collision with the Atlanta, continued to pursue the only course feasible and proper *in [257] the circumstances, and in anywise calculated to avoid further collisions with other of the United States vessels, and continued to back with all her power, and notwithstanding that she was skilfully and properly handled and managed by her officers and crew, yet her stern having been swung slightly down stream by the collision of barge 73 with the Atlanta, she was unable to check her headway or straighten up, and was carried by her headway and the currents of the river, and went down toward the Galena, which was lying about 400 feet astern of the Atlanta and closer to the New Orleans shore than the latter. In the collision between barge 68 and the Galena the lines and fastenings of the said tow and the rigging of the Future City were parted or greatly damaged, and her tow was broken up and the lead barge (68), the barge on the starboard side, struck the Galena and was sunk, with all cargo aboard, and the barge and her freight earnings became a total loss."

Inasmuch as the court found that everything that was possible to avert further collisions after the collision with the Atlanta was done by the Future City, it, in effect and indeed in terms, found that the loss of the three barges occasioned by collision with the Atlanta, the Galena, and the Richmond, was occasioned by negligence of the officers in command of the said United States vessels, in bringing them to anchor in improper and unusual positions, and in causing them to be anchored on swinging chains.

The judgment of the Court of Claims is affirmed.

[258]*CLEMENT STUDEBAKER, Plff. in Err.,
v.

JOHN PERRY, as Receiver of the National Bank of Kansas City.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 258-269.)

National banks—individual liability of shareholders—second assessment—statutes—contemporaneous construction.

1. The Comptroller of the Currency is authorized to make a second assessment upon the shareholders of an insolvent national banking association, where the first assessment proves insufficient to pay the debts and liabilities of the bank, by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5234, empowering him, if necessary to pay the debts of such association, to enforce the individual liability of its shareholders, which, by § 5151, is measured by the par value of their stock in addition to the amount invested therein, so long as both assessments do not exceed that amount.
2. Contemporaneous and practical construction put upon a statute by executive officers will not be resorted to in aid of the interpretation of such statute, unless the construction involved is one of doubt, and those to be affected have relied on the practical construction, and rights have accrued by reason of such reliance.

[No. 122.]

Argued January 17, 20, 1902. Decided February 24, 1902.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Northern District of Illinois in favor of plaintiff in an action to enforce an assessment on a shareholder in an insolvent national bank. Affirmed.

See same case below, 43 C. C. A. 69, 102 Fed. 947.

Statement by Mr. Justice Shiras:

On November 9, 1899, in the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of Illinois, John Perry, as receiver of the National Bank of Kansas City, brought an action against Clement Studebaker, to recover an assessment made by the Comptroller of the Currency on stock held by the defendant in said bank.

The declaration set forth the incorporation of the National Bank of Kansas City; the ownership by the defendant of 189 shares of its capital stock of the par value of $100 each; the insolvency of the bank; an assessment by the Comptroller of the Currency on February 11, 1896, of 16 per cent on the stock; the payment by the defendant of said assessment; a finding by the Comptroller of the Currency on February 25, 1899, that the first assessment was insufficient, and the necessity of an additional assessment of 7 per cent; the levy of said second assessment; the direction by the Comptroller to the receiver to collect it, and the refusal of the defendant to pay.

A demurrer was filed raising the question of the sufficiency in law of the declaration. The demurrer was overruled, and the defendant electing to stand by his demurrer, judgment was rendered for the amount of second assessment upon the stock owned by the defendant. A writ of error was allowed, and the cause was taken to the circuit court of appeals of the seventh circuit, where the judgment of the circuit court was affirmed. *43 C. C. A. 69, 102 Fed. 947. [259] The case was then brought to this court by a writ of error duly allowed.

Mr. Hugh C. Ward argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The individual liability of national bank shareholders is contractual.

United States v. Knox, 102 U. S. 424, 26 L. ed. 216; Richmond v. Irons, 121 U. S. 55, 30 L. ed. 873, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 788; First Nat. Bank v. Hawkins, 174 U. S. 372, 43 L. ed. 1011, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Whitman v. National Bank, 176 U. S. 559, 44 L. ed. 587, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 477.

The individual liability of stockholders in corporations generally is a contract liability.

Cook, Corp. § 223.

The statute making national bank shareholders individually liable for the debts of such bank to the extent of the amount of their stock therein, at the par value thereof, in addition to the amount invested in such shares, being in derogation of the common law, must be strictly construed.

1 Cook, Corp. § 241; United States v. Knox, 102 U. S. 422, 26 L. ed. 216; Carrol v. Green, 92 U. S. 509, 23 L. ed. 738; Lowry v. Inman, 46 N. Y. 119.

If such liability is sought to be enforced to its full extent, it must be by an action at law, and by a proceeding in equity or at law if only a part is sought to be enforced.

Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. 498, 19 L. ed. 476; Cascy v. Galli, 94 U. S. 676, 24 L. ed. 168.

The determination of the Comptroller of the Currency is conclusive as to the extent to which liability of stockholders of insolvent banks may be enforced in suits against them.

Germania Nat. Bank v. Case, 99 U. S. 628, 25 L. ed. 448.

As soon as the Comptroller decides that the assets are insufficient to pay such bank's debts, he has a right of action for the full amount of such liability, or so much thereof as he may elect to collect.

O'Connor v. Witherby, 111 Cal. 523. 44 184 U. S.

NOTE.—On construction of statutes—see notes to Riggs v. Palmer (N. Y.) 5 L. R. A. 340; United States v. Saunders, 22 L. ed. U. S. 736; Maillard v. Lawrence, 14 L. ed. U. S. 925; and Blake v. National City Bank, 23 L. ed. U. S. 119.

Pac. 227; Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. 498, 19 L. ed. 476.

Stockholders of a corporation are individually liable according to the plain meaning of the terms employed by the legislature, and not otherwise; and the operation and effect of the statute, or the liability of the stockholder, which is measured by it, cannot be extended by implication.

Carroll v. Green, 92 U. S. 509, 23 L. ed. 738; Lowry v. Inman, 46 N. Y. 119.

The Comptroller is authorized to make but one order fixing the individual liability of a national bank shareholder.

2 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. 2d ed. § 882; Cook, Corp. § 218.

A single contract liability cannot be divided so as to support two actions.

Baird v. United States, 96 U. S. 430, 24 L. ed. 703; Hennequin v. Barney, 24 Fed. 582; Bartels v. Schell, 16 Fed. 341; United States v. Throckmorton, 98 U. S. 65, 25 L. ed. 95; Secor v. Sturgis, 16 N. Y. 558; Mascarel v. Raffour, 51 Cal. 242; Day v. Prescott, 40 Ala. 624; Codwise v. Taylor, 4 Sneed, 346.

The rule against splitting demands is a legal right of defendant.

Lawrence v. United States, 8 Ct. Cl. 252; Grain v. Aldrich, 38 Cal. 514, 99 Am. Dec. 423.

There is always a presumption against an intent to change the existing law.

Black, Interpretation of Laws, § 52; Robinson's Case, 131 Mass. 376, 41 Am. Rep. 239. See also Manuel v. Manuel, 13 Ohio St. 458; Pollard v. Bailey, 20 Wall. 520, 22 L. ed. 376.

The engagement of the shareholder is to pay an amount equal to the entire par value of the stock if demanded. This liability constitutes a single and indivisible cause of action.

Harper v. Carroll, 66 Minn. 487, 69 N. W. 610, 1069; Re Hollister Bank, 27 N. Y. 393, 84 Am. Dec. 292; Smith v. Huckabee, 53 Ala. 191.

A court of equity in a proceeding to enforce the individual liability of national bank shareholders has power to make successive assessments, and will do so at the request of a receiver under direction of the Comptroller.

Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. 498, 19 L. ed. 476; Godfrey v. Terry, 97 U. S. 177, 24 L. ed. 946; 2 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. 2d ed. § 902; De Weese v. Smith, 97 Fed. 309.

Corporations have no implied power to make such levies beyond the par value of stock; and even when the power is expressly conferred it will receive a strict construction.

23 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 803, 817; Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 131; 2 Beah, Priv. Corp. § 590; Price's Appeal, 106 Pa. 421; Upton v. Tribilecock, 91 U. S. 45, 23 L. ed. 203; Sagory v. Dubois, 3 Sandf. Ch. 466.

The contemporaneous construction of a statute by those charged with its execution—especially when it has long prevailed—is entitled to great weight, and should not be disregarded or overturned except for cogent reasons and unless it is clear that such construction is erroneous.
184 U. S.

John v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 418, 5 L. ed. 294; United States v. Moore, 95 U. S. 760, 24 L. ed. 588; United States v. Johnston, 124 U. S. 253, 31 L. ed. 396, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446; United States v. Philbrick, 120 U. S. 59, 30 L. ed. 561, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 413; Robertson v. Downing, 127 U. S. 613, 32 L. ed. 271, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1328.

Messrs. George W. Wall and Francis F. Oldham argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Walter W. Ross and M. J. Kirkman, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The Comptroller has the exclusive power to determine what amount it is necessary for the stockholders to pay, and suit can be maintained by the receiver only after such levy of an assessment by the Comptroller.

Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. 498, 19 L. ed. 476.

The obvious purpose of the statutes is that the stockholders shall be liable for the full 100 per cent of the par value of their stock, in addition to the amount invested therein, if it be necessary to pay the debts of the association, and that such full liability shall be enforced by the Comptroller, who is charged with the execution of the law. The amount to be paid by them is the deficiency of the assets, and it is apportioned among the stockholders in the proportion which the stock of each shareholder bears to the whole capital stock of the bank.

United States v. Knox, 102 U. S. 422, 26 L. ed. 216.

Under the United States statutes relating to national banks the whole power of ascertaining and fixing the liability is delegated to the Comptroller. The judicial power of the courts is limited to enforcing payment of the sum required by the Comptroller.

Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. 498, 19 L. ed. 476.

When the full amount is assessed there can be but one suit against each stockholder. He is sued for his full liability at once, and there is no reason for equitable jurisdiction. If a partial assessment, however, is made, there may be other assessments. Hence, while the receiver is at liberty to sue at law for even a partial assessment, equity has concurrent jurisdiction to prevent a multiplicity of suits.

Bailey v. Tillinghast, 40 C. C. A. 93, 99 Fed. 801.

This court has recognized the power of the Comptroller to levy second assessments.

United States v. Knox, 102 U. S. 422, 26 L. ed. 216; Germanica Nat. Bank v. Case, 131 U. S. app. cxliv, and 23 L. ed. 961.

Cases where the question has been considered sustain the power of the Comptroller to levy successive assessments.

Aldrich v. Yates, 95 Fed. 78; Aldrich v. Campbell, 38 C. C. A. 347, 97 Fed. 663; Studebaker v. Perry, 43 C. C. A. 69, 102 Fed. 947; De Weese v. Smith, 45 C. C. A. 408, 106 Fed. 438.

Contemporary or practical construction will be resorted to merely as an aid when the statute is doubtful or obscure, and then only for the purpose of saving important rights built up or acquired on the faith of such construction.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 5th ed. §§ 67, 69; Story, Const. 407; Sedgw. Stat. & Const. Law, 251; 23 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 342; United States v. Graham, 110 U. S. 219, 28 L. ed. 126, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 582; People ex rel. Badger v. Loewenthal, 93 Ill. 191; Rogers v. Goodwin, 2 Mass. 475.

[259] *Mr. Justice Shiras delivered the opinion of the court:

The single question for our determination is whether the Comptroller of the Currency, acting under the national banking laws, can validly make more than one assessment upon the shareholders of an insolvent national banking association.

It is not denied by the plaintiff in error that the first assessment, which he voluntarily paid, was insufficient to pay the debts and liabilities of the bank, but his contention is that the Comptroller of the Currency exhausted his power to levy assessments upon the shareholders of stock in an insolvent national bank by a single exercise of that power. He advances two arguments in support of his contention: First, that the individual liability of national bank shareholders is contractual, and that hence only one assessment and suit to enforce the same is authorized by law; and, second, that by a course of practice for many years the Comptrollers of the Currency, charged with the execution of the laws, construed them to authorize but one assessment, and that such construction is now conclusive upon the courts.

Those portions of the statutes which are involved in this controversy are found in § 5151 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, in the following terms:

"The shareholders of every national banking association shall be held individually responsible, equally and ratably, and not one for another, for all contracts, debts, and engagements of such association to the extent of the amount of their stock therein, at the par value thereof, in addition to the amount invested *in such shares, except that shareholders of any banking association now existing under state laws, having not less than five millions of dollars of capital actually paid in and a surplus of twenty per centum on hand, both to be determined by the Comptroller of the Currency, shall be liable only to the amount invested in their shares. . . ."

And in § 5234 in the following terms:

"On becoming satisfied, as specified in sections 5226 and 5227, that any association has refused to pay its circulating notes as therein mentioned, and is in default, the Comptroller of the Currency may forthwith appoint a receiver and require of him such bond and security as he deems proper. Such receiver, under the direction of the Comptroller, shall take possession of the books, records, and assets of every description of such association, collect all debts, dues, and claims belonging to it, and upon the order of a court of record of competent jurisdiction may sell or compound all bad or doubtful debts, and, on a like order, may sell all the real and personal property of such association, on such terms as the court shall direct: and may, if necessary to pay the debts of such association, enforce the individual liability of the stockholders. Such receiver shall pay over all money so made to the Treasurer of the United States, subject to the order of the Comptroller, and also make report to the Comptroller of all his acts and proceedings."

And § 5236, as follows:

"From time to time, after full provision has first been made for refunding to the United States any deficiency in redeeming the notes of such association, the Comptroller shall make a ratable dividend of the money so paid over to him by such receiver on all such claims as may have been proved to his satisfaction or adjudicated in a court of competent jurisdiction, and, as the proceeds of the assets of such association are paid over to him, shall make further dividends on all claims previously proved or adjudicated; and the remainder of the proceeds, if any, shall be paid over to the shareholders of such association, or their legal representatives, in proportion to the stock by them respectively held."

The proposition of the plaintiff in error, as expressed in the *brief of his counsel, is [261] "that § 5234 simply authorizes the Comptroller to enforce the individual liability of shareholders in a national bank, if necessary to pay the debts of such bank: that the Comptroller is therefore plainly authorized to decide as to the necessity of enforcing such liability and as to the time when the same is to be enforced, and fix the amount to be collected; that there is to be a decision by the Comptroller as to these matters, and then a demand or requisition by him, followed by one suit, at law or in equity, as circumstances require; that it is this decision, which is termed an assessment; that the Comptroller is nowhere expressly authorized to enforce such liability by several decisions and suits; that he is simply authorized to enforce the individual liability of national bank stockholders according to law; and that there can be but one decision by the Comptroller as to the time, necessity, and extent of enforcing this liability, and, therefore, but one assessment, as the statute certainly does not authorize an assessment which could not be enforced by suit."

It is further urged, in behalf of the plaintiff in error, that as the liability of a shareholder of an insolvent national bank for all contracts, debts, and engagements of such association to the extent of the amount of his stock therein, at the par value thereof, in addition to the amount invested in such shares, is contractual in its nature, it therefore follows that the general rule that the plaintiff cannot split up a single and entire cause of action and make it the subject of different suits applies.

We do not deem it necessary in the case before us to enter at length into the discussion suggested. It is sufficient that, by entering into the relation of a shareholder in a national banking association, the plaintiff in error subjected himself to the obligation created by the statute, and the only question is whether the Comptroller of the Currency has power to make and to enforce by a suit at law more than one assessment upon the shareholders of an insolvent national bank, if necessary to pay the debts thereof. The general purpose of the statute undoubtedly was to confer upon the creditors of the bank a right to resort to the individual liability of the shareholders to the extent, if necessary, of the amount of their stock therein, and it *would be a singular construction of law that would empower the Comptroller, by making an inadequate assessment, to relieve the shareholders, upon paying such assessment, from their entire liability.

[262]

The logic of the plaintiff in error requires him to convince us that his voluntary payment of one assessment, made when the Comptroller was imperfectly acquainted with the amount of the bank's indebtedness, amounts to a satisfaction in toto of his obligation. Such may be the true construction of the statute; but, defeating, as it would in the case supposed, the main and obvious purpose of the enactment, such a construction will only be made by a court when compelled by the necessary meaning of the language. The inconveniences that would be occasioned by the meaning proposed are so great and obvious as to lead us to expect to find that a reasonable construction of the law does not require us to adopt it.

If it be the duty of the Comptroller to give the creditors of an insolvent national bank the remedy providing for the individual liability of the shareholders, and if the law be that he can do so by one assessment only, then he must, no matter what the condition of the bank may appear to be, make an assessment upon the shareholders up to the entire amount of their liability. In many instances, the value of the bank's assets might make it altogether probable that but a small portion of the shareholders' contribution would be needed. To require payment in full of money which might be held for years while the bank's affairs were being wound up, and then be returned without interest, would certainly be a hardship upon the shareholders. If, to avoid that hardship, the Comptroller should postpone the assessment until he could fully inform himself of the condition of the bank's affairs, in the time that might thus elapse, some of the stockholders might become insolvent or remove their property from the reach of legal proceedings, and thus a loss be thereon upon the creditors.

There is nothing in the language of the sections involved to compel us to adopt a view of the law which would result in such manifest inconveniences.

[263] *In Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. 498, 19 L. ed. 476, some aspects of the question were considered. Mr. Justice Swayne said:
184 U. S.

"The receiver is the instrument of the Comptroller. He is appointed by the Comptroller, and the power of appointment carries with it the power of removal. It is for the Comptroller to decide when it is necessary to institute proceedings against the stockholders to enforce their personal liability, and whether the whole or a part, and, if only a part, how much, shall be collected. These questions are referred to his judgment and discretion, and his determination is conclusive. The stockholders cannot controvert it. It is not to be questioned in the litigation that may ensue. He may make it at such time as he may deem proper and upon such data as shall be satisfactory to him. This action on his part is indispensable whenever the personal liability of the stockholders is sought to be enforced, and must precede the institution of suit by the receiver. The fact must be distinctly averred in all such cases, and if put in issue must be proved.

"The liability of the stockholders is several, and not joint. The limit of their liability is the par of the stock held by each one. Where the whole amount is sought to be recovered, the proceeding must be at law. Where less is required, the proceeding may be in equity, and in such case an interlocutory decree may be taken for contribution and the case may stand over for the further action of the court—if such action should subsequently prove to be necessary—until the full amount of the liability is exhausted. It would be attended with injurious consequences to forbid action against the stockholders until the precise amount necessary to be collected shall be formally ascertained. This would greatly protract the final settlement, and might be attended with large losses by insolvency and otherwise in the intervening time. The amount must depend in part upon the solvency of the debtors and the validity of the claims. Time will be consumed in the application of these tests, and the result in many cases cannot be foreseen. The same remarks apply to the enforced collections from the stockholders. A speedy adjustment is necessary to the efficiency and utility of the law; the interests of the creditors require it, and it was the obvious *policy and purpose of Congress to give it. [264] If too much be collected, it is provided by the statute that any surplus which may remain after satisfying all demands against the association shall be paid over to the stockholders. It is better they should pay more than may prove to be needed than that the evils of delay should be encountered."

These observations clearly imply that the Comptroller, in the exercise of his discretion, may levy successive assessments as they may appear to be necessary. If the power can be exercised only once no reason is apparent why equity should have jurisdiction for the collection of an assessment less than 100 per cent. If the stockholders' liability is fixed once for all by the first assessment of the Comptroller, the legal remedy for the collection of a 10 per cent assessment is as full, adequate, and complete as it is for the collection of the 100 per cent assessment. The reason why, when the assessment is for the 100 per cent, the proceeding must be at law, and when for a less amount it may be in equity, is obvious. When the full amount is assessed there can be but one suit against each stockholder. He is suable for his full liability at once, and there is no reason for equitable jurisdiction. If a partial assessment is made, there may be other assessments, when the receiver has liberty to sue at law for even a partial assessment, though equity has concurrent jurisdiction to prevent a multiplicity of suits.

Casey v. Galli, 94 U. S. 673, 24 L. ed. 168, was the case of a suit at law by the receiver of a national banking association to enforce the individual liability of a shareholder. It was there contended that the defendant was bound to contribute ratably, and that the proper amount could be ascertained only in equity; that the defendant was bound to contribute ratably a large sum; that this sum was not stated in the declaration, and hence what would be ratable and proper did not appear; that the obligation of the defendant was to pay into the hands of the Comptroller of the Currency a ratable portion of the debts of the association proved before him, and that the declaration did not show that any debts had been so proved; and that the declaration demanded a larger sum than the defendant is required by *the statute to pay, and also an additional sum by way of interest. But it was held by this court that "in regard to the first three of these objections it is sufficient to say that Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. 498, 19 L. ed. 476, is conclusive against them. It is there said that the amount to be paid rests in the judgment and discretion of the Comptroller; that his determination cannot be controverted by the stockholders in suits against them, and that, when the order is to collect the full amount of the par of the stock, the suit must be at law. It is unnecessary to reproduce the reasoning of the court in support of these propositions. The sum to be paid being liquidated, and due and payable when the Comptroller's order was made, it follows that the amount bears interest from the date of the order."

In United States v. Knox, 102 U. S. 422, 26 L. ed. 216, an attempt was made to enforce a deficiency, caused by the insolvency of some of the shareholders of an insolvent national bank, against solvent shareholders, but it was held that the liability of the shareholders was several, and was not affected by the failure of any other shareholder to pay the amount assessed against him, and it was said by this court that, "although assessments made by the Comptroller under the circumstances of the first assessment in this case, and all other assessments, successive or otherwise, not exceeding the par value of all the stock of the bank, are conclusive upon the stockholders."

Germania Nat. Bank v. Case, 131 U. S. app. cxliv, and 23 L. ed. 961, was a case where the Comptroller had levied an assessment for an amount on each shareholder, not sufficient to justify an appeal from the circuit court of the United States, and where a motion to dismiss the appeal was made in this court, but the motion was denied, Chief Justice Waite saying: "If the decree asked and obtained in this cause had been confined to an order for the payment of the 70 per cent upon the amount of the stock held by the appellants respectively, which the Comptroller of the Currency has already instructed the receiver to collect, the objection taken by the appellee to our jurisdiction might have been good; but the decree as given goes further, and after providing for the 70 per cent, adjudges that each of the appellants shall be liable to further contribution as stockholders *until a sufficient sum is realized to pay the debts of the bank, and that the bill be retained until it shall be certain that no further contribution will be required. This fixes the liability of each of these appellants to contribute in this suit to the extent of the nominal amount of his stock if necessary, and as the bill alleges that at least 25 per cent more will be required, it is apparent that the 'matter in dispute' is not alone the amount already decreed, but a sum in addition that may amount to 30 per cent of the stock, and is now expected to reach 25 per cent. Their liability generally as stockholders to make contributions has been fully established. That can never again be contested in this suit except under this appeal. For the purposes of jurisdiction, we may consider that as in dispute which would be settled by the decree if it had not been appealed from." The right of the Comptroller to levy a further assessment was thereby plainly implied.

Bushnell v. Leland, 164 U. S. 684, 41 L. ed. 598, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209, was a late case, in which the power of the Comptroller to determine the necessity and amount of an assessment upon the shareholders was challenged on constitutional grounds, but it was held, in the language of Mr. Justice White: "All these alleged errors may be reduced to the single contention that under the national banking law the Comptroller of the Currency is without power to appoint a receiver to a defaulting or insolvent national bank, or to call for a ratable assessment upon the stockholders of such bank without a previous judicial ascertainment of the necessity for the appointment of the receiver and of the existence of the liabilities of the bank; and that the lodgment of authority in the Comptroller, empowering him either to appoint a receiver or to make a ratable call upon the stockholders, is tantamount to vesting that officer with judicial power, in violation of the Constitution. All of these contentions have been long since settled, and are not open to further discussion. Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. 498, 19 L. ed. 476; Casey v. Galli, 94 U. S. 674, 24 L. ed. 168; United States v. Knox, 102 U. S. 423, 26 L. ed. 216."

The precise question raised in the present case has several times been argued and de-terminated in the lower Federal courts. In Aldrich v. Yates, 95 Fed. 78, the question [267] was thus *stated and answered by District Judge Evans in the circuit court for the district of Kentucky: "The question, then, remains, Has the Comptroller of the Currency the power to make a second assessment in any event? The ultimate liability of the shareholder in such cases is for the full amount of the par value of the stock, . . . under the statutory conditions, if they are found by the Comptroller to exist. A mistake of that officer in making an estimate of the amount of a needed assessment cannot be held to release the shareholder from the full statutory liability. A mistake of such a character would be natural, if not inevitable, in many instances, in view of the uncertain value of assets; and the indisposition, in the first instance, to make an assessment unnecessarily large may well excuse its not being done, when there is certainly no statutory provision prohibiting, in terms or by necessary implication, further assessments, if the necessity exists. In practice, second assessments have frequently been made. The court is of opinion that such a course is within the power of the Comptroller, in the exercise of his duty to see that the liability of the stockholder is sufficiently enforced to pay the debts of the bank, and that practice has been recognized as proper by the Supreme Court. United States v. Knox, 102 U. S. 422, 26 L. ed. 216."

In Aldrich v. Campbell, 38 C. C. A. 347, 97 Fed. 663, it was held by the circuit court of appeals for the ninth circuit that the action of the Comptroller of the Currency in ordering an assessment against the stockholders of an insolvent national bank, whether a first assessment or one subsequently made, is a determination of the necessity for such assessment, which is conclusive on the stockholders, and cannot be questioned by them in any litigation which may ensue, either at law or in equity.

In De Weese v. Smith, 97 Fed. 309, it was held by the circuit court that a judgment against a shareholder of an insolvent national bank on a first assessment was a bar to a second suit brought to recover a later assessment, but this judgment was reversed by the circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit, in De Weese v. Smith, 45 C. C. A. 408, 106 Fed. 438. And, as already stated, the circuit court of appeals for the seventh circuit held in the case now [268] before us that it was discretionary *with the Comptroller to make one or more assessments (Studebaker v. Perry, 43 C. C. A. 69, 102 Fed. 947), Woods, Circuit Judge, saying:

"The dominant purpose of the parts of the statute touching this question is that the shareholders of an insolvent national bank shall be liable for its debts 'to the extent of the amount of their stock therein,' and rules of construction are not to be invoked in a way to defeat that purpose. Under the direction of the Comptroller the receiver is authorized to enforce the share-holder's liability; but the power to enforce does not include a power to cut off or limit, and by no proper application of general rules of construction can the statute be so read as to permit the failure of its main design."

The cases cited by the plaintiff in error wherein courts of high authority have held that, where some particular act involving judicial discretion is to be performed by an executive officer, the power is exhausted by its single exercise, are not applicable to cases like the present, where the law merely provides that the shareholder shall pay what may be necessary to meet the debts and obligations of the bank. How much that is may not be ascertained at once, but as it is important that the settlement shall progress without delay, it is a reasonable construction of the statute that, while it is just and for his benefit that the stockholder be called on for no more than seems to be necessary, so it is just to the creditor that further calls may be made when necessary. This is a case where the power to assess belongs exclusively to the Comptroller, and the power to enforce the assessment belongs to the courts, and the construction contended for on behalf of the plaintiff in error refuses the remedy provided for by this statute of the United States with the ordinary remedy for the enforcement of statutory liability of stockholders by the courts.

It is finally argued on behalf of the plaintiff in error that the doctrine of contemporaneous and practical construction put upon a statute by executive officers is applicable. It is said that former comptrollers of the currency held, in several instances, that the power to assess under the national banking law was exhausted by a single exercise; that subsequent *comptrollers ought not to [269] have departed from that construction; and it is urged that this court should, by its decision in this case, set aside the construction at present prevailing and restore the former one.

The doctrine invoked is a useful one, but its application should be restricted to cases in which the construction involved is really one of doubt and where those to be affected have relied on the practical construction, and rights have accrued by reason of such reliance. The rule is well expressed in Cooley on Constitutional Limitations, 5th ed. p. 69:

"If the question involved is really one of doubt the force of their [officers'] judgment, especially in view of the injurious consequences that may result from disregarding it, is fairly entitled to turn the scale in the judicial mind. Where, however, no ambiguity or doubt appears in the law, we think the same rule obtains here as in other cases, that the court should confine its attention to the law, and not allow intrinsic circumstances to introduce a difficulty where the language is plain. To allow force to a practical construction in such a case would be to suffer manifest perversions to defeat the evident purpose of the lawmakers."

That the language of the statute under consideration is plain and its construction free from doubt are sufficiently shown by the decisions of the courts heretofore cited; and it would be absurd to claim that the plaintiff in error bought his stock in a national banking association with a right to rely on the contingency that the Comptroller might inadvertently or mistakenly make an insufficient assessment should the bank become insolvent.

The judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals is affirmed.

[270] *GERHARD TERLINDEN, Appt.,

v.

JOHN C. AMES, United States Marshal for the Northern District of Illinois.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 270-290.)

Habeas corpus—extradition—change in status of foreign government—continued existence of treaty—political question.

1. Evidence to show that no extraditable offense has been committed is not admissible on an application for a writ of habeas corpus in behalf of a person arrested under extradition proceedings, since that is a matter to be determined by the commissioner, if competent legal evidence of the commission of such crime shall be presented to him.
2. A violation of a law of the German Empire against crime, such as forgery, is an offense extraditable under the treaty of the United States with Prussia, when such offense is committed in Prussia, and such law is recognized and enforced in that Kingdom as its law on that subject.
3. The existence of the treaty of June 16, 1852, between the United States and Prussia, which has been repeatedly recognized by both governments as still in force, notwithstanding the incorporation of Prussia into the German Empire, cannot be questioned by the judicial department in proceedings for a writ of habeas corpus to prevent the extradition of a fugitive from Prussia who is held under extradition proceedings under that treaty, as the question is a political one, and the courts must accept the determination thereof by the political department of the government.
4. Pending proceedings for extradition regularly and constitutionally taken under the acts of Congress cannot be put an end to by writ of habeas corpus.

[No. 475.]

Argued January 6, 7, 1902. Decided February 24, 1902.

NOTE.—On extradition—see notes to Tennessee v. Jackson (D. C. E. D. Tenn.) 1 L. R. A. 370; and Ex parte Kentucky v. Dennison, 16 L. ed. U. S. 717.

On the jurisdiction of the United States courts on habeas corpus—see Re Reinitz (C. C. S. D. N. Y.) 4 L. R. A. 236, and note. See also notes to State ex rel. Cochran v. Winters (Kan.) 10 L. R. A. 616; Re Huse, 25 C. C. A. 4; and Tinsley v. Anderson, 43 L. ed. U. S. 91.

As to review on habeas corpus of extradition proceedings—see note to Tennessee v. Jackson (D. C. E. D. Tenn.) 1 L. R. A. 370.

534

APPEAL from a decision of the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois dismissing a petition for writ of habeas corpus. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

August 15, A. D. 1901, Dr. Walther Weyer, Imperial German Consul at Chicago, filed his complaint before Mark A. Foote, Esq., a commissioner of the United States in and for the northern district of Illinois, and specially authorized to issue warrants for the apprehension of fugitives from justice of foreign governments, stating that he was "the duly accredited official agent and representative of the German Empire at Chicago *and also the Kingdom of Prussia, [271] forming a part of said German Empire," and charging that one Gerhard Terlinden, alias Theodor Graefe, a subject of the Kingdom of Prussia, did, within the first six months of the year 1901, "commit within the jurisdiction of the said Kingdom of Prussia various crimes of forgery and counterfeiting and the utterance of forged papers," in that as a director of the Gerhard Terlinden Stock Company, organized and doing business in said Kingdom, said Terlinden forged and counterfeited certain certificates of the stock of said company amounting to about a million and a half of marks, and put out, uttered, and disposed of the same to Robert Suermont of the city of Aachen, Prussia; the Amsterdamsche Bank, Netherlands; the Disconto Gesellschaft, a corporation doing business in Berlin, Prussia; and other persons and corporations, with felonious intent to cheat and defraud them respectively. The complaint further charged that Terlinden was at the time of committing said crimes a resident of the city of Duisburg and a citizen of said Kingdom of Prussia; that he was a fugitive from said Kingdom; that on or about the 1st day of July, 1901, he fled into the jurisdiction of the United States of America for the purpose of seeking an asylum therein; that he was now said to be concealed within the northern district of Illinois or in the eastern district of Wisconsin; and that the crimes with which he was charged were crimes embraced within the treaty of extradition between the United States and the Kingdom of Prussia, concluded on the 16th day of June, 1852, and ratified May 30, 1853.

It was therefore prayed that a warrant be issued for the apprehension and commitment of Terlinden "in order that the evidence of his criminality may be inquired into, and the said Gerhard Terlinden, alias Theodor Graefe, may be extradited and delivered up to the justice of the said Kingdom of Prussia, in accordance with the stipulations of said treaty and the acts of Congress passed in pursuance thereof."

The complaint was duly verified and the commissioner issued his warrant, which was placed in the hands of John C. Ames, United States marshal in and for the northern district of Illinois, and Terlinden was apprehended and held to be dealt with according to law.

184 U. S.

[272] *Subsequently and on September 25, 1901, Dr. Wever, in his capacity aforesaid, made another complaint before the commissioner, charging (1) the forging of a large number of stock certificates of the Gerhard Terlinden Stock Company; (2) uttering said stock certificates, well knowing them to be forged; (3) forging and counterfeiting the steel stamp of the Royal Prussian revenue office at Duisburg, Prussia; (4) imprinting said forged steel stamp upon the forged certificates of stock so as to make it appear that the tax required by the Prussian revenue law had been paid on said certificates issued by the company in said Kingdom, and thus to give said forged certificates the appearance of genuineness; (5) uttering forged certificates of stock with said forged stamp thereon; (6) forging the acceptance of one Heinrich Schulte to a certain draft for 9,582 marks and 35 pfennings, and uttering the same; (7) forging the acceptance of one Wilhelm Seven to two certain drafts for the sums of 26,250 marks and of 25,912 marks and 45 pfennings, respectively, and uttering the same; or causing all these things to be done; "contrary to the laws of the Kingdom of Prussia."

It was stated that these several crimes were fully shown by the testimony of a number of witnesses heard before the examining judge of the Landgericht at Duisburg in the Kingdom of Prussia, "a court of competent jurisdiction in which the matter of the penal investigation instituted against the said Gerhard Terlinden, alias Theodor Graefe, is now pending, in order that he may answer for said several crimes;" and with the complaint were submitted copies of the depositions of the witnesses together with a copy of the warrant of arrest issued by that court against Terlinden, "and of the provisions of the Penal Code of the German Empire applicable to said several crimes and providing punishment therefor," all of which were duly authenticated; and also a verified English translation thereof. This second complaint also showed that the crimes charged were committed within the jurisdiction of the Kingdom of Prussia; and that Terlinden was, at the time of committing the same, a subject of that Kingdom; and the commissioner in accordance with the prayer of the complaint issued another warrant, which was served on Terlinden the following day, he being discharged from arrest on the first warrant. On the 17th of October, before any evidence was taken before the commissioner, Terlinden presented to the district court of the United States for the northern district of Illinois his petition praying for a writ of habeas corpus on the following grounds:

"1. No treaty or convention for the extradition of fugitives from justice exists between the United States and the German Empire.

"2. That the treaty or convention for the extradition of fugitives from justice concluded between the United States and the
184 U. S.

Kingdom of Prussia on the 16th day of June, 1852, and ratified May 30, A. D. 1853, was terminated by the creation of the German Empire and the adoption of the Constitution of said Empire in A. D. 1871, and that no treaty or convention for the extradition of fugitives from justice has been concluded between the United States, on the one part, and the Kingdom of Prussia or the German Empire, on the other, since said time.

"3. Said complaint does not charge an extraditable offense under the provisions of the treaty of 1852, concluded between the United States and Prussia and other German states, were said treaty still in force and of binding effect.

"4. Your petitioner is not guilty of any extraditable offense under the provisions of said treaty of 1852, were said treaty still in force and of binding effect.

"5. All proceedings had or attempted to be had before said commissioner under said complaint and warrant are illegal, void, and without authority in law because said commissioner did not have jurisdiction over the person of this petitioner."

The writ of habeas corpus was issued and the marshal for the northern district of Illinois filed his return October 21, setting forth that he "arrested said petitioner within said district on the 26th day of September, 1901, upon a warrant duly issued by Mark A. Foote, a United States commissioner specially appointed and authorized by the district court of the United States for the northern district of Illinois to hear applications for extradition and to issue warrants therefor, which *said warrant was duly [274] issued by said commissioner upon a complaint duly made by Walther Wever, Imperial German Consul at Chicago as representative of the Kingdom of Prussia, charging said Gerhard Terlinden, who, it appears, falsely assumed in this country the name of Theodor Graefe, with having, as a subject of the Kingdom of Prussia and within the jurisdiction of the said Kingdom, committed the crimes of forgery, counterfeiting, and the utterance of forged instruments, and with being a fugitive from justice of said Kingdom of Prussia. . . ."

The matter was brought on for hearing October 21, and after arguments of counsel the court gave leave to present briefs and adjourned the hearing to October 28. On that day the relator filed with the clerk of the court a traverse, reciting that with the complaint of September 26 there were filed "copies of the original testimony and translations of the same contained in the depositions taken before certain court officials in the Empire of Germany, relative to the alleged offenses with which said complaint charges your petitioner; that said complaint refers to said depositions so filed in words following, to wit:" [Then setting forth the passages of the complaint to the effect that Dr. Wever therewith submitted "to the commissioner and files with this complaint a copy of all depositions of witnesses taken in said matter, together with a copy of the warrant of arrest issued by said court against the said Gerhard Terlingen, alias Theodor Graefe, and of the provisions of the Penal Code of the German Empire applicable to said several crimes and providing punishment therefor.”]

The traverse then continued:

“That the provisions of the Criminal Code of the German Empire applicable to the facts and circumstances of this case as shown by the evidence hereto annexed are §§ 240, 47, 49 1st paragraph; § 360 4th and 5th paragraphs; § 275 and § 56 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, also § 234 of the Civil Code, a correct translation of which sections are hereto annexed and marked Exhibit ‘B’ and made a part hereof.

[275] “That said depositions so filed do not show or tend to show that your petitioner is guilty of any extraditable offense; that a copy of said deposition so referred to in said complaint and heretofore filed with said commissioner is hereto attached marked Exhibit ‘A’ and made a part of this traverse.

“Wherefore your petitioner prays that the return of the United States marshal herein be dismissed and your petitioner discharged.”

Copies of depositions were attached to the alleged traverse; but no copy of the warrant of arrest issued by the court at Duisburg, or of the provisions of the Penal Code attached to the complaint.

An affidavit accompanied the traverse to the effect that affiant as an expert had made the annexed translations of certain sections and parts of sections of the German Criminal and Civil Codes.

October 29, to which day the hearing of the cause had been continued, Terlingen presented a petition for a writ of certiorari to bring before the court “for its consideration the depositions, provisions of the German Criminal Code, and copy of the original warrant issued by said German court heretofore referred to.”

This application was denied by the district court October 31, and the court ordered “that the question of whether since the formation of the German Empire the extradition treaty concluded between the government of the United States and the Kingdom of Prussia in 1852 is still in force or abrogated by the Constitution of the German Empire, be submitted to the court on briefs to be filed,” and continued the hearing. It was also ordered “that said relator be remanded to the custody of the marshal, and that the motion to stay all further proceedings before the United States commissioner be and the same hereby is denied.”

Thereafter, on November 5, the district court entered an order finding that the petitioner was lawfully restrained of his liberty, directing the petition to be dismissed, and remanding petitioner, from which an appeal was taken to this court. Errors were assigned, in substance, that the court erred in declining to hold that no treaty exists between the United States and the Kingdom of Prussia or the German Empire; in assuming “the existence of such treaty; [276] in denying the right to introduce evidence for the purpose of showing that no extraditable offense had been committed; in denying the application for a certiorari; in holding that the record showed the commission of an extraditable offense.

Messrs. Albert W. May and A. C. Umbreit argued the cause, and, with Mr. Joseph B. Doe, filed a brief for appellant:

It is true that political questions are preeminently the function of the political department of the government, and such questions, when so determined, are not otherwise decided by the courts.

Doe ex dem. Clark v. Braden, 16 How. 635, 14 L. ed. 1090; Foster v. Neilson, 2 Pet. 314, 7 L. ed. 435.

But the construction of treaties, including questions as to their validity and existence, is a question for the courts to determine.

The Federalist, No. 22; Jones v. Walker, 2 Paine, 688, Fed. Cas. No. 7,507; Wharton, International Law, § 133; Wilson v. Wall, 6 Wall. 83, 18 L. ed. 727; United States v. Rauscher, 119 U. S. 407, 30 L. ed. 425, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 234; Benson v. McMahon, 127 U. S. 457, 32 L. ed. 234, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1240; Re Metzger, 1 Park. Crim. Rep. 108.

This court has time and again construed, interpreted, and determined the validity of treaties.

The Amiable Isabella, 6 Wheat. 1, 5 L. ed. 191; The Nereide, 9 Cranch, 388, 3 L. ed. 769; Harcourt v. Gaillard, 12 Wheat. 523, 6 L. ed. 716; United States v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. 691, 8 L. ed. 547; New Orleans v. De Armas, 9 Pet. 224, 9 L. ed. 109; United States v. The Amistad, 15 Pet. 518, 10 L. ed. 826; Strother v. Lucas, 12 Pet. 410, 9 L. ed. 1137; United States v. D’Auterive, 10 How. 609, 13 L. ed. 560; Hauenstein v. Lynham, 100 U. S. 483, 25 L. ed. 628; United States v. Rauscher, 119 U. S. 407, 30 L. ed. 425, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 234.

Under the Constitution, treaties, as well as the Constitution and laws of the United States, are the supreme law of the land. Consequently, treaties are on the same plane with provisions of the Constitution and acts of Congress.

Whitney v. Robertson, 124 U. S. 190, 31 L. ed. 386, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456; Botiller v. Dominguez, 130 U. S. 239, 32 L. ed. 927, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525.

The question of the existence of the treaty under discussion must be decided in accordance with the principles of international law. International law is a part of the law of the land, and must be ascertained and administered by the courts whenever such questions are duly submitted to their determination.

Hilton v. Guyot, 159 U. S. 113, 40 L. ed. 95, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 139; The Paquete Habana, 175 U. S. 677, 44 L. ed. 320, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 290.

It has been held that acts of Congress ought to be construed with reference to the law of nations.

Murray v. The Charming Betsy, 2 Cranch, 64, 2 L. ed. 208.

In the absence of a treaty there is no law which authorizes the President to deliver up anyone found in the United States, who is charged with having committed an offense against the laws of a foreign country.

Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540, 10 L. ed. 579; Re Metzger, 5 How. 176, 12 L. ed. 104; United States v. Rauscher, 119 U. S. 407, 30 L. ed. 425, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 234; Wharton, Private International Law, § 835; Wheaton, International Law, Boyd's ed. § 115; Wharton, International Law Digest, § 268; Hawley, International Extradition, 2; Respublica v. De Longchamps, 1 Dall. 110, 1 L. ed. 59.

The doctrine that without a treaty there can be no extradition has been steadily and uniformly maintained, and the political department of our government has adopted the same policy.

Jefferson to Ghent, 1 Am. St. Pap. 177; J. C. B. Davis to Delfosse, For. Rel. 1873; Bayard to Davis, 1886, Mss. Dom. Let.; Cushing, Op. 85, 1853.

Extradition of a fugitive from justice is essentially a national act. . . . Nations in their intercourse with one another do not recognize any local territorial divisions, or deal with any authority except the supreme or sovereign government.

Hawley, International Extradition, 1.

Extradition is a proceeding by which one sovereign government whose laws have been violated by a person who thereafter flees from justice demands, and the government to which he flees, surrenders, the fugitive to be tried for the offense.

Anderson, Law Diet. 438; Bouvier, Law Diet. 637; Rapalje & Lawrence, Law Diet. 491; 1 Moore, Extradition, § 1.

It has been held that "the rights and duties of nations towards each other relative to fugitives from justice are a part of the law of nations, and have always been treated as such by the writers upon public law."

Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 569, 10 L. ed. 593.

That extradition is a matter of foreign intercourse between nations has also been held by state courts.

United States v. Rauscher, 119 U. S. 407, 30 L. ed. 425, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 234; People ex rel. Barlow v. Curtis, 50 N. Y. 326, 10 Am. Rep. 483; People ex rel. Gardenier v. Columbia County, 134 N. Y. 9, 31 N. E. 322.

A treaty is nothing more than a contract between sovereign and independent states.

1 Kent, Com. 175; Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 8 L. ed. 25; Foster v. Neilson, 2 Pet. 253, 7 L. ed. 415; Davis v. Police Jury, 9 How. 287, 13 L. ed. 141; Head Money Cases, 112 U. S. 580; sub nom. Eddy v. Robertson, 28 L. ed. 798, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247.

Extradition treaties are executory contracts calling for the personal service of the contracting nations in regard to certain specified matters that may occur in the future.
184 U. S.

Wheaton, International Law, Boyd's ed. § 275; Taylor, International Pub. Law, 1901, p. 367.

A contract to render personal service is subject to the implied condition that the party shall be alive and able to perform it. Death or disability which renders the performance impossible discharges the contract.

1 Beach, Modern Law of Contracts, 946; 1 Parsons, Contr. 131; 1 Addison, Contr. § 396; Marvel v. Phillips, 162 Mass. 399, 26 L. R. A. 416, 38 N. E. 1117; Lorillard v. Clyde, 142 N. Y. 457, 24 L. R. A. 113, 37 N. E. 489.

Treaty obligations are founded, not merely on the contract itself, but upon those mutual relations between the contracting nations which may have induced them to enter into certain engagements.

Wheaton, International Law, Boyd's ed. § 29.

A transfer of these obligations, thus contracted, to a new nation, without the consent of the other contracting party, is impossible.

The internal sovereignty of a nation is determined by its municipal constitution. Its external sovereignty is to a large extent determined by the same instrument.

Id. § 20.

By the adoption of the Constitution, Prussia surrendered to the Empire her right of legislation on national affairs, to declare war, make peace, conclude treaties, receive and accredit ambassadors, and every other incident of sovereignty and independence as a nation.

4 Convention Manual of the 6th New York Constitutional Convention, 1894, p. 265; Klueber, §§ 103a, 176, 248, 260, 261, 462; Heffter, das Europaische Voelkerrecht, § 21; German Const. arts. 2, 11 (Wheaton, § 51b); German Const. arts. 3, 11 (Hart, Intro. Fed. Gov. pp. 99, 138-141, 165).

The sovereignty of a state consists in the right of independent action without reference to the will of any other state.

Wheaton, International Law, Boyd's ed. § 33a; Levi, International Law, p. 81, No. 9, p. 82, No. 10.

Germany has now become a compositive state, and the independence of its various members is merged in the sovereignty of the Empire though the respective heads of the several states retain their personal positions as sovereigns.

Wheaton, International Law, Boyd's ed. § 51b; Freeman's Historical Essays, 4th series, p. 389. See also Taylor, International Pub. Law, p. 123.

General alliances under the principles of international law are limited to contracts between nations having in view co-operation in cases of defensive or offensive wars waged against or by the parties to the alliance.

Wheaton, International Law, Boyd's ed. §§ 278, 280; Taylor, International Pub. Law, p. 370.

German public jurists likewise hold that all sovereignty and independence of the individual German states were merged in the empire.

Annals American Academy of Political Science, July–Nov. 14, p. 78.

Courts take judicial notice of the existence of a sovereign power.

Jones v. United States, 137 U. S. 202, 34 L. ed. 691, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80.

The United States, having recognized the internal and external sovereignty of the German Empire as distinct from its states, is bound thereby.

United States v. Wagner, L. R. 2 Ch. 582.

That the political department of our government—that is, the executive and legislative branches—has recognized the German Empire as the sovereignty now existing over the territory formerly composing the Germanic states, is conceded. Such recognition is binding upon the courts.

Gelston v. Hoyt, 3 Wheat. 246, 4 L. ed. 381; United States v. Yorba, 1 Wall. 412, 17 L. ed. 635; United States v. Lynde, 11 Wall. 632, 20 L. ed. 230.

Over the same territory, however, only one sovereignty can exist. When such sovereignty is once recognized and established, it excludes every other.

Wharton, International Law Digest, § 1; Church v. Hubbard, 2 Cranch, 187, 2 L. ed. 249; The Exchange v. M'Faddon, 7 Cranch, 137, 3 L. ed. 294.

The territory now included within the Kingdom of Prussia is represented in international affairs by the German Empire. Consequently, in such affairs said Kingdom can exercise none of the incidents, functions, or duties of sovereignty. If it could, there would then exist two co-ordinate sovereignties over the same territory, a condition not only not recognized by the law of nations, but specifically denied.

Taylor, International Pub. Law, pp. 170, 173, 174.

Prussia has been merged in the German Empire, and has therefore disappeared as a nation.

Id. p. 201.

The obligations of treaties, even where some of their stipulations are in their terms perpetual, expire in case either of the contracting parties loses its existence as an independent state, or in case its internal constitution is so changed as to render the treaty inapplicable to the new condition of things.

Halleek, International Law, ed. 1866, § 8, p. 370; Vattel, Law of Nations, Chitty's ed. 1872, § 203, p. 312; 1 Wildman, International Law, chap. 4, § 174; Wheaton, International Law, § 29; Wheaton, International Law, Boyd's ed. § 275.

Even the political department of our government has considered a large number of other treaties as terminated when the sovereignty of the nation with which treaties had been concluded was destroyed by its absorption into another sovereignty.

U. S. Treaties & Conventions (1889); Treaties of the United States, 1146 (1889); Treaty of 1868 with Wuerttemberg, art. 3; Treaty of 1868 with North German Union, art. 3; Wharton, International Law Digest, § 137a.

A contract executory in its nature and calling for the personal service of one of the contracting parties cannot be assigned without the express consent of the other contracting party.

Arkansas Valley Smelting Co. v. Belden Min. Co. 127 U. S. 379, 32 L. ed. 246, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1308; Delaware County v. Diebold Safe Lock Co. 133 U. S. 473, 33 L. ed. 674, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399.

For the same reason the doctrine of novation of the compact cannot be successfully invoked.

Boston Ice Co. v. Potter, 123 Mass. 28, 25 Am. Rep. 9; Spycher v. Werner, 74 Wis. 456, 5 L. R. A. 414, 43 N. W. 161.

There can be no tacit ratification of the renewal or extension of a treaty under our Constitution. No treaty, under our system of government, becomes effectual because of failure to repudiate. Nor will mere affirmative action by the executive department alone create treaty obligations.

Taylor, International Pub. Law, p. 389, note.

By the law of nations no duty is imposed upon a nation to deliver up persons accused of crimes who have escaped into its territories, on the demand of another nation against whose laws the alleged crime was committed. There is no such obligation under the principles of international law.

Wharton, International Law Digest, § 268; Wheaton, International Law, Boyd's ed. § 115; United States v. Watts, 8 Sawy. 370, 14 Fed. 130.

The surmised confusion that might arise in case our contention is sustained could not possibly affect persons surrendered by either nation under what we contend is a terminated treaty, because it has been uniformly held that it makes no difference how a person is brought within the jurisdiction of the court; the fact that the accused is in court is sufficient to require him to answer to the charge brought against him.

State v. Brewster, 7 Vt. 118; Dow's Case, 18 Pa. 37; The Richmond v. United States, 9 Cranch, 107, 3 L. ed. 672; Ker v. People, 110 Ill. 627, 51 Am. Rep. 607, 119 U. S. 436, 30 L. ed. 421, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 225.

As extradition proceedings are purely statutory, compliance with the statutes is requisite to jurisdiction at every step.

State ex rel. Durner v. Huegin, 110 Wis. 189, 85 N. W. 1046; Church, Habeas Corpus, §§ 237–247; Re Snell, 31 Minn. 110, 16 N. W. 692; Re Hardigan, 57 Vt. 100; People ex rel. Van Riper v. New York Catholic Protectory, 106 N. Y. 604, 13 N. E. 435; Ex parte Becker, 86 Cal. 402, 25 Pac. 9.

A crime is an act committed or omitted in violation of a public law either forbidding or commanding it.

4 Bl. Com. 15; United States v. Jacobi, 1 Flipp. 111, Fed. Cas. No. 15,460; Re Bergin, 184 U. S.

31 Wis. 386; United States v. Eaton, 144 U. S. 677, 36 L. ed. 591, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 764.

A crime is an offense against the sovereignty, and can only be taken notice of and punished by the sovereignty offended. Others have no concern in it, and must treat it as a matter of indifference.

People v. Williams, 24 Mich. 163, 9 Am. Rep. 119; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.

With the enforcement of the criminal laws of one independent state within its territory, another state has no concern.

Wheaton, International Law, Boyd's ed. § 113.

Previous to the formation of the German Empire the North German Union had adopted a criminal code. The German Constitution provides that imperial legislation shall supersede all legislation as to civil and criminal matters and judicial procedure theretofore enacted by the several states.

Dr. H. Wagner, University of Koenigsberg, in Ency. Britannica, article, Germany.

It provides that the enactment of the general criminal law be exclusively confined to the imperial legislature.

German Const. art. 4, § 13 (Hart. Intro. Fed. Gov. p. 135).

The criminal code of the North German Union, above referred to, was adopted as the code of the German Empire, and took effect as such imperial code January 1, 1872.

German Const. art. 80, subd. 2; Proclamation of Emperor, April 16, 1871.

If Prussia is still an independent nation, she then has no concern whatever in the violation of the imperial laws. "The courts of no country execute the penal laws of another."

The Antelope, 10 Wheat. 123, 6 L. ed. 282.

The conditions existing at the time the treaty of 1852 was concluded have so materially and radically changed that, even if such treaty was not ipso facto terminated by the formation of the German Empire, its obligations cannot now be performed, and therefore the whole compact has absolutely expired.

Wheaton, International Law, Boyd's ed. § 275; Wharton, International Law Digest, § 137a.

Forgery is not a crime within the jurisdiction of Prussia, although it is a crime within the jurisdiction of the German Empire, which jurisdiction extends over Prussian territory and is exclusive.

Taylor, International Pub. Law, p. 206.

The United States will not grant extradition for crimes not committed within the jurisdiction of the demanding state.

Hawley, International Extradition, 22; Wharton, International Law Digest, § 271.

Habeas corpus proceedings are original civil suits.

Ex parte Tom Tong, 108 U. S. 556, 27 L. ed. 826, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 871; Cross v. Burke, 146 U. S. 82, 36 L. ed. 896, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22; Kurtz v. Moffit, 115 U. S. 487, 29 L. ed. 458, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Re Frederick, 149 U. S. 73, 37 L. ed. 656, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 793.

184 U. S.

In a proper case the court can hear testimony outside of the record of the inferior tribunal.

Re Cuddy, 131 U. S. 280, 33 L. ed. 154, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 703; Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 19 L. ed. 332; Re Mayfield, 141 U. S. 107, 35 L. ed. 635, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 939.

Before final judgment by a court of competent jurisdiction, the whole case will be examined under a habeas corpus proceeding.

United States v. Hamilton, 3 Dall. 17, 1 L. ed. 490; Ex parte Burford, 3 Cranch, 448, 2 L. ed. 495; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 7 L. ed. 650; Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch, 75, 2 L. ed. 554.

The court ought to have granted appellant's prayer for a writ of certiorari in aid of the writ of habeas corpus. It may be true that the granting of the writ of certiorari is within the discretion of the court to which the application is made, yet this discretion is not an arbitrary one, but is a sound judicial discretion, dependent upon certain legal principles applicable to the case.

Trustees of Schools v. School Directors, 88 Ill. 100; Flournoy v. Payne, 28 Ark. 87.

At common law the writ of certiorari was frequently used in aid of the writ of habeas corpus, to bring up the record of the proceeding resulting in the commitment, when such record was necessary to a complete understanding of the case.

Rex v. Marks, 3 East, 157; Fazacharly v. Baldo, 1 Salk. 352.

In the Federal courts the writ of certiorari has been considered, in appropriate cases, as ancillary to that of habeas corpus, and has been frequently used as a means of rendering their jurisdiction under the latter writ effective; and even this court has granted writs of certiorari in aid of its original jurisdiction, in cases of habeas corpus.

Re Martin, 5 Blatchf. 303, Fed. Cas. No. 9,151; Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85, 19 L. ed. 332; Ex parte Jackson, 96 U. S. 727, 24 L. ed. 877; Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. ed. 872.

At common law the writ was more properly used to remove proceedings before judgment than after judgment.

Hinchman v. Cook, 20 N. J. L. 271.

Unless the common-law writ has been modified by statute, it will be allowed at any stage of the criminal proceedings.

Rex v. Hube, 5 T. R. 542; Rex v. Wadley, 4 Maule & S. 508; Mowery v. Camden, 49 N. J. L. 106, 6 Atl. 438.

Mr. William Vocke argued the cause, and, with Mr. William Mannhardt and Messrs. Vocke & Healey, filed a brief for appellee:

The alliance which Prussia has formed with the other German states in establishing the German Empire has not had the slightest effect upon her international treaty obligations. The question of the existence of a treaty is not within the province of the courts to decide, but should be determined by the political department of the government.

State Department's Compilation of Treaties and Conventions between the United States of America and Other Powers since July 4, 1776, published in 1889, p. 1234; Doe ex dem. Clark v. Braden, 16 How. 635, 14 L. ed. 1090; Foster v. Neilson, 2 Pet. 314, 7 L. ed. 435; Taylor v. Morton, 2 Curt. C. C. 455, Fed. Cas. No. 13,799; Maiden v. Ingersoll, 6 Mich. 376.

The extradition treaty with Bavaria was not abrogated because that Kingdom became part of the German Empire.

Re Thomas, 12 Blatchf. 379, Fed. Cas. No. 13,887.

If it is properly set forth in the complaint that the crimes were committed "within the territory" or "within the jurisdiction" of the Kingdom of Prussia, then the complaint is sufficient under the treaty and the law to form the basis of extradition proceedings, and, upon proper showing before the commissioner, to warrant a fugitive's extradition, no matter whence the demanding government derived its laws.

The question of a prisoner's guilt or innocence must, after indictment, be submitted to a jury. It cannot be tried on habeas corpus.

People v. McLeod, 1 Hill, 377, 37 Am. Dec. 328; Cancemi v. People, 18 N. Y. 129; People v. Rulloff, 5 Park. Crim. Rep. 77; People v. Richardson, 18 How. Pr. 93; Ex parte Crouch, 112 U. S. 178, 28 L. ed. 690, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Re Reynolds, Fed. Cas. No. 11,721; Re Mayfield, 141 U. S. 107, 35 L. ed. 635, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 939; Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 7 L. ed. 650; Horner v. United States, 143 U. S. 207, 36 L. ed. 126, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; Luis Oteiza v. Cortes, 136 U. S. 330, sub nom. Luis Oteiza v. Jacobus, 34 L. ed. 464, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1031; Stevens v. Fuller, 136 U. S. 468, 34 L. ed. 461, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 911; Ornelas v. Ruiz, 161 U. S. 502, 40 L. ed. 787, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689; Bryant v. United States, 167 U. S. 104, sub nom. Ex parte Bryant, 42 L. ed. 94, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 744; Benson v. McMahon, 127 U. S. 457, 32 L. ed. 234, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1240.

The writ of certiorari is never granted before the final determination of the case pending in the lower court whose record is called for.

People ex rel. San Francisco v. County Judge, 40 Cal. 479; People ex rel. Huston v. Lindsay, 1 Idaho, 394; State, Stokes, Prosecutor, v. Early, 45 N. J. L. 478; Re Hamilton, 58 How. Pr. 290; People ex rel. Noble v. Pilot Comrs. 37 Barb. 120; Re Road, 2 Serg. & R. 419.

International treaties of this character have been invariably construed by this honorable court in a spirit of fairness toward the foreign government; and in extradition treaties in particular this court has always held that technicalities should be excluded as far as possible, in order that full justice may be done.

Re Herres, 33 Fed. 165.

[276] *Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

The treaty of June 16, 1852, between the United States and the Kingdom of Prussia, and other states of the Germanic Confederation included in or which might accede to that convention, provided that the parties thereto should, upon requisition, "deliver up to justice all persons who, being charged with the crime of murder, or assault with intent to commit murder, or piracy, or arson, or robbery, or forgery, or the utterance of forged papers, or the fabrication or circulation of counterfeit money, whether coin or paper money, or the embezzlement of public moneys, committed within the jurisdiction of either party, shall seek an asylum, or shall be found within the territories of each other." 10 Stat. at L. 964, 966.

Pursuant to § 5270† of the Revised Statutes (and the acts *from which that section [277] was brought forward), complaint was duly made before a commissioner appointed and authorized by the district court of the United States for the northern district of Illinois to hear applications for extradition and to issue warrants therefor, charging Terlinden with having as a subject of the Kingdom of Prussia, and within the jurisdiction of that Kingdom, committed the crimes of forgery, counterfeiting, and the utterance of forged instruments, and with being a fugitive from the justice of said Kingdom.

The complaint charged with much particularity, among other things, the forging and uttering of forged stock certificates of the Gerhard Terlinden Stock Company; the forging of the revenue stamp of the German government employed by the Royal Prussian Revenue Office; and the forging and uttering of several enumerated acceptances.

Attached to the complaint and referred to therein were duly authenticated‡ copies †Sec. 5270. Whenever there is a treaty or convention for extradition between the government of the United States and any foreign government, any justice of the Supreme Court, circuit judge, district judge, commissioner, authorized so to do by any of the courts of the United States, or judge of a court of record of general jurisdiction of any state, may, upon complaint made under oath, charging any person found within the limits of any state, district, or territory, with having committed within the jurisdiction of any such foreign government any of the crimes provided for by such treaty or convention, issue his warrant for the apprehension of the person so charged, that he may be brought before such justice, judge, or commissioner, to the end that the evidence of criminality may be heard and considered. If, on such hearing, he deems the evidence sufficient to sustain the charge under the provisions of the proper treaty or convention, he shall certify the same, together with a copy of all the testimony taken before him, to the Secretary of State, that a warrant may issue upon the requisition of the proper authorities of such foreign government, for the surrender of such person, according to the stipulations of the treaty or convention; and he shall issue his warrant for the commitment of the person so charged to the proper jail, there to remain until such surrender shall be made.

‡Sec. 5271. In every case of complaint and of a hearing upon the return of the warrant of arrest, any depositions, warrants, or other [278] of certain depositions taken before the examining judge of the court at Duisburg, Prussia, in which an investigation against Terlinden, that he might answer for said several crimes, was pending, together with a copy of the warrant *for the arrest of Terlinden issued by that court, and of the provisions of the Penal Code of the German Empire applicable to the crimes in question and providing punishment therefor.

The commissioner issued his warrant and Terlinden was apprehended, whereupon and before the commissioner had entered upon the hearing, Terlinden petitioned and obtained from the district court the writ of habeas corpus under consideration.

The settled rule is that the writ of habeas corpus cannot perform the office of a writ of error, and that, in extradition proceedings, if the committing magistrate has jurisdiction of the subject-matter and of the accused, and the offense charged is within the terms of the treaty of extradition, and the magistrate, in arriving at a decision to hold the accused, has before him competent legal evidence on which to exercise his judgment as to whether the facts are sufficient to establish the criminality of the accused for the purposes of extradition, such decision cannot be reviewed on habeas corpus. Ornelas v. Ruiz, 161 U. S. 502, 508, 40 L. ed. 787, 789, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, and cases cited; Bryant v. United States, 167 U. S. 104, sub nom. Ex parte Bryant, 42 L. ed. 94, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 744.

The statute in respect of extradition gives no right of review to be exercised by any court or judicial officer, and what cannot be done directly cannot be done indirectly through the writ of habeas corpus. The court issuing the writ may, however, "inquire and adjudge whether the commissioner acquired jurisdiction of the matter, by conforming to the requirements of the treaty and the statute; whether he exceeded his jurisdiction; and whether he had any legal or competent evidence of facts before him, on which to exercise a judgment as to the criminality of the accused. But such court is not to inquire whether the legal evidence of facts before the commissioner was sufficient or insufficient to warrant his conclusion." Blatchford, J., Re Stupp, 12 Blatchf. 501, Fed. Cas. No. 13,563; Ornelas v. Ruiz, 161 U. S. 508, 40 L. ed. 787, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689.

By § 754 of the Revised Statutes it is provided that the complaint in habeas corpus shall set forth "the facts concerning the detention of the party restrained, in whose custody he is detained, and by virtue of what claim or authority, if known;" and by § 755 that the writ shall be awarded "unless it appears from the petition itself that the party is not entitled thereto."

*On the face of the complaint extraditable [279] offenses were charged to have been committed, and if petitioner desired to assert, as he now does in argument, that it appeared from the depositions taken before and the warrant of arrest issued by the court at Duisburg and the provisions of the Criminal Code that such was not the fact, they should have been set out. Cramer v. Washington, 168 U. S. 128, 42 L. ed. 407, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.

And this clearly must be so where, as in this case, the writ is issued and petitioner undertakes to traverse the return. The return was that Terlinden was arrested and held by virtue of warrants of arrest and of commitment issued by the commissioner, under the extradition acts, against Terlinden as a fugitive from the justice of Prussia, and charged with the commission of crimes embraced by the treaty of extradition with that Kingdom; and copies of the warrants were attached as part thereof. The alleged traverse referred to the complaint and annexed copies of the depositions filed with it, but did not annex a copy of the warrant of arrest issued by the court at Duisburg, or of the provisions of the Penal Code made part of the complaint; and also annexed certain sections and paragraphs of the Criminal Code of the German Empire, and of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and of the Civil Code, as applicable to "the facts and circumstances of the case," and then alleged that the depositions did not show or tend to show guilt of an extraditable offense.

This was manifestly insufficient. Petitioner could not select a portion of the documents accompanying the complaint and ask the court to sustain his conclusion of law thereon. Nor could he subsequently supply the inadequacy of the traverse by a certiorari, which could do no more, if it could be, in any view, properly issued at that stage of the proceedings, than bring up what he should have furnished in the first instance.

Generally speaking, "whether an extraditable crime has been committed is a question of mixed law and fact, but chiefly of fact, and the judgment of the magistrate rendered in good faith on legal evidence that the accused is guilty of the act charged, and that it constitutes an extraditable crime, cannot be reviewed on the weight of evidence, and is final for the purposes of the *preliminary examination un-[280] less palpably erroneous in law." 161 U. S. 509, 40 L. ed. 789, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691.

Necessarily this is so, for where juris-papers offered in evidence, shall be admitted and received for the purpose of such hearing if they shall be properly and legally authenticated so as to entitle them to be received as evidence of the criminality of the person so apprehended, by the tribunals of the foreign country from which the accused party shall have escaped, and copies of any such depositions, warrants, or other papers, shall, if authenticated 184 U. S.

according to the law of such foreign country, be in like manner received as evidence; and the certificate of the principal diplomatic or consular officer of the United States resident in such foreign country shall be proof that any such deposition, warrant, or other paper, or copy thereof, is authenticated in the manner required by this section.

diction depends on the merits, the decision is not open to collateral attack involving a retrial, although if on the whole record the findings are contradicted, the inquiry as to lack of jurisdiction may be entertained.

In this case the writ of habeas corpus was issued before the examination by the commissioner had been entered upon, and his jurisdiction was the only question raised. If he had jurisdiction, the district court could not interfere, and he had jurisdiction if there was a treaty and the commission of extraditable offenses was charged.

But it is said that the offenses complained of were not extraditable because their commission was averred to be "contrary to the laws of Prussia," whereas the criminal laws asserted to have been violated were those of the German Empire, and Prussia had no criminal laws dealing with such offenses. Hence it is argued that the commissioner had no jurisdiction, because if an extradition treaty existed it was with Prussia, and not with the German Empire; and if any crime was committed, it was against the German Empire and not Prussia.

It is true that by article 2 of the Constitution of the German Empire it was provided that, "within this territory the Empire shall have the right of legislation according to the provisions of this Constitution, and the laws of the Empire shall take precedence of those of each individual state."

And by article 4: "The following matters shall be under the supervision of the Empire and its legislation: . . . 13. General legislation regarding the law of obligations, criminal law, commercial law, and the law of exchange; likewise judicial proceedings."

Counsel for petitioner states in his brief that on January 1, 1872, the German Imperial Code went into effect, embracing provisions as to the crime of forgery "contained in §§ 267, 268, 146, and 149, the very sections quoted in the depositions filed with the amended complaint." Counsel for respondent agrees with this except that he includes §§ or ¶¶ 147 *and 270. All these are given below as furnished by counsel for respondent.† And see Drage's Criminal Code

[281] of *the German Empire, 227, 266. The traverse set up that there were filed with the complaint "a copy of all depositions taken

†267. Whoever with unlawful intent forges or counterfeits a domestic or foreign public instrument or such a private instrument as may be of importance for the purpose of proving rights or legal relations, and makes use of the same for the purpose of deception, is punishable with imprisonment for forgery of instruments.

268. Forgery of an instrument made by anyone with the intent of obtaining for himself or another a pecuniary gain, or to inflict injury upon another, is punishable as follows:

1. When the instrument is a private instrument, with imprisonment in the penitentiary up to five years, besides which a fine not exceeding 3,000 marks may be imposed.

2. When the instrument is a public instru-in said matter, together with a copy of the warrant of arrest issued by said court against the said Gerhard Terlinden, alias Theodor Graefe, and of the provisions of the Penal Code of the German Empire applicable to said several crimes, and providing punishment therefor." The traverse did not set forth the warrant of arrest or the provisions of the Code referred to, and merely attached certain other provisions which it was averred were applicable. The presumptions were against petitioner, apart from which, accepting the admissions of counsel, extraditable offenses were charged, if the laws quoted applied, as we think cannot be denied. We are unable to perceive that these laws were not the laws of Prussia, although prescribed by imperial authority, and the record discloses that they were being administered as such, in Prussia, by the Royal Prussian Circuit Court at Duisburg. The inquiry into the source of the laws of the demanding government is not material, and the objection is untenable.

542

It is obvious that the district court could not remove the case from the commissioner by virtue of the writ of habeas corpus, and that the court rightly declined to hear evidence, to grant the certiorari, or to interfere with the progress of the case.

This brings us to the real question, namely, the denial of the existence of a treaty of extradition between the United States and the Kingdom of Prussia, or the German Empire. In these proceedings the application was made by the official representative of both the Empire and the Kingdom of Prussia, but was based on the extradition treaty of 1852. The contention is that, as the result of the formation of the German Empire, this treaty had been terminated by operation of law.

Treaties are of different kinds and terminable in different ways. The 5th article of this treaty provided, in substance, that it should continue in force until 1858, and thereafter until the end of a twelve months' notice by one of the parties of the intention to terminate it. No such notice has ever been given, and extradition has been frequently awarded under it during the entire intervening time.

*Undoubtedly treaties may be terminated [283] by the absorption of powers into other nationalities and the loss of separate existence, as in the case of Hanover and Nassau, ment, with imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term not exceeding ten years, besides which a fine of from 150 to 6,000 marks may be imposed.

In case of mitigating circumstances imprisonment in the common jail will take place, which, in the case of forgery of a private instrument, shall be not less than one week, and in case of forgery of a public instrument, not less than three months.

In addition to the imprisonment, a fine not exceeding 3,000 marks may be imposed.

146. Whoever counterfeits inland or foreign coin or paper money for the purpose of using such counterfeited money as genuine or otherwise to put it in circulation; or who, with like intent, gives to genuine money, by alteration which became by consent incorporated into the Kingdom of Prussia in 1866. Cessation of independent existence rendered the execution of treaties impossible. But where sovereignty in that respect is not extinguished, and the power to execute remains unimpaired, outstanding treaties cannot be regarded as avoided because of impossibility of performance.

184 U. S.

This treaty was entered into by His Majesty the King of Prussia in his own name and in the names of eighteen other states of the Germanic Confederation, including the Kingdom of Saxony and the free city of Frankfort, and was acceded to by six other states, including the Kingdom of Wurtemberg and the free Hanseatic city of Bremen, but not including the Hanseatic free cities of Hamburg and Lubeck. The war between Prussia and Austria in 1866 resulted in the extinction of the Germanic Confederation and the absorption of Hanover, Hesse Cassel, Nassau, and the free city of Frankfort, by Prussia.

The North German Union was then created under the presidium of the Crown of Prussia, and our minister to Berlin, George Bancroft, thereupon recognized officially, not only the Prussian Parliament, but also the Parliament of the North German United States, and the collective German Customs and Commerce Union, upon the ground that by the paramount Constitution of the North German United States, the King of Prussia, to whom he was accredited, was at the head of those several organizations or institutions: and his action was entirely approved by this government. Messages and Documents, Dep. of State, 1867-8, Part I, p. 601; Dip. Correspondence, Secretary Seward to Mr. Bancroft, Dec. 9, 1867.

February 22, 1868, a treaty relative to naturalization was concluded between the United States and His Majesty, the King of Prussia, on behalf of the North German Confederation, the 3d article of which read as follows: "The convention for the mutual delivery of criminals, fugitives from justice, in certain cases, concluded between the United States on the one part and Prussia and other states of Germany on the other [284] *part, the sixteenth day of June, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two, is hereby extended to all the states of the North German Confederation." 15 Stat. at L. 615. This recognized the treaty as still in force, and brought the Republics of Lubeck and Hamburg within its scope. Treaties were also made in that year between the United States and the Kingdoms of Bavaria and Wurtemberg, concerning naturalization, which contained the provision that the previous conventions between them and the United States in respect of fugitives from justice should remain in force without change.

Then came the adoption of the Constitution of the German Empire. It found the King of Prussia, the chief executive of the North German Union, endowed with power to carry into effect its international obligations, and those of his Kingdom, and it perpetuated and confirmed that situation. The official promulgation of that Constitution recited that it was adopted instead of the Constitution of the North German Union, and its preamble declared that "His Majesty the King of Prussia, in the name of the North German Union, His Majesty the King of Bavaria, His Majesty the King of Wurtemberg, His Highness the Grand Duke of Baden, and His Royal Highness the Grand Duke of Hesse, and by Rhine for those parts of the Grand Duchy of Hesse which are situated south of the Main, conclude an eternal alliance for the protection of the territory of the Confederation, and of the laws of the same, as well as for the promotion of the welfare of the German people." As we have heretofore seen, the laws of the Empire were to take precedence of those of the individual states, and it was vested with the power of general legislation in respect of crimes.

Article 11 read: "The King of Prussia shall be the president of the Confederation, and shall have the title of German Emperor. The Emperor shall represent the Empire among nations, declare war, and conclude peace in the name of the same; enter into alliances and other conventions with foreign countries, accredit ambassadors, and receive them. . . . So far as treaties with foreign countries refer to matters which, according to article IV., are to be regulated by the legislature of the Empire, the consent of the Federal Council shall be required *for their ratification, and the ap-[285] proval of the Diet shall be necessary to render them valid."

It is contended that the words in the preamble translated "an eternal alliance" should read "an eternal union," but this is not material, for admitting that the Constimade upon the same, the appearance of higher value, or gives to invalidated money the appearance of money still current, shall be punished with imprisonment in the penitentiary for not less than two years. Police surveillance is also admissible. In the case of mitigating circumstances imprisonment in the common jail may be provided.

147. The same penalty extends to all persons who circulate the money counterfeited or altered by them with the above-mentioned intent, and also to such persons who obtain counterfeited or altered money and either utter the same or bring the same from abroad with the intent of circulating the same.

149. Certificates of indebtedness made payable able to the holder, bank notes, stock certificates, or preliminary certificates or receipts taking their place, as well as coupons and dividends or renewal certificates thereto belonging, which may be issued by the Empire, the North German Confederation, a state of the Confederation, or a foreign state, or by any other community, corporation, company, or private person authorized to issue such papers, are deemed equivalent to paper money.
184 U. S.

270. It is treated as equivalent to forgery of an instrument in case anybody makes use of any forged or altered document, knowing the same to be forged or altered, with intent to deceive.

tution created a composite state instead of a system of confederated states, and even that it was called a confederated Empire rather to save the amour propre of some of its component parts than otherwise, it does not necessarily follow that the Kingdom of Prussia lost its identity as such, or that treaties theretofore entered into by it could not be performed either in the name of its King or that of the Emperor. We do not find in this Constitution any provision which in itself operated to abrogate existing treaties or to affect the status of the Kingdom of Prussia in that regard. Nor is there anything in the record to indicate that outstanding treaty obligations have been disregarded since its adoption. So far from that being so, those obligations have been faithfully observed.

And without considering whether extinguished treaties can be renewed by tacit consent under our Constitution, we think that on the question whether this treaty has ever been terminated, governmental action in respect to it must be regarded as of controlling importance. During the period from 1871 to the present day, extradition from this country to Germany, and from Germany to this country, has been frequently granted under the treaty, which has thus been repeatedly recognized by both governments as in force. Moore's Report on Extradition with Returns of all Cases, 1890.

In 1889, in response to a request for information on international extradition as practised by the German government, the Imperial Foreign Office transmitted to our charge at Berlin a memorial on the subject in the note accompanying which it was said: "The questions referred to, in so far as they could not be uniformly answered for all the confederated German states, have been answered in that document as relating to the case of applications for extradition addressed to the Empire or Prussia." It was stated in the memorial, among other things:

[286] "In so far as by-laws and treaties of the Empire relating to the extradition of criminals, provisions which bind all the states of the union have not been made, those states are not hindered from independently regulating extradition by agreements with foreign states, or by laws enacted for their own territory.

"Of conventions, some of an earlier, some of a later, period, for the extradition of criminals, entered into by individual states of the union with various foreign states, there exist a number, and in particular such with France, the Netherlands, Austria-Hungary, and Russia. With the United States of America, also, extradition is regulated by various treaties, as, besides, the treaty of June 16, 1852, which applies to all of the states of the former North German Union, and also to Hesse, south of the Main, and to Württemberg, there exist separate treaties with Bavaria and Baden, of September 12, 1853, and January 30, 1857, respectively." Moore's Report, 93, 94.

Thus it appears that the German government has officially recognized, and continues to recognize, the treaty of June 16, 1852, as still in force, as well as similar treaties with other members of the Empire, so far as the latter has not taken specific action to the contrary or in lieu thereof. And see Laband, Das Staatsrecht des Deutschen Reiches (1894), 122, 123, 124, 142.

It is out of the question that a citizen of one of the German states, charged with being a fugitive from its justice, should be permitted to call on the courts of this country to adjudicate the correctness of the conclusions of the Empire as to its powers and the powers of its members, and especially as the executive department of our government has accepted these conclusions and proceeded accordingly.

The same is true as respects many other treaties of serious moment, with Prussia, and with particular states of the Empire, and it would be singular, indeed, if after the lapse of years of performance of their stipulations, these treaties must be held to have terminated because of the inability to perform during all that time of one of the parties.

In the notes accompanying the State Department's compilation of Treaties and Conventions between the United States and Other Powers, published in 1889, Mr. J. C. Bancroft Davis treats of the subject thus:

"The establishment of the German Em-[287]pire in 1871, and the complex relations of its component parts to each other and to the Empire, necessarily give rise to questions as to the treaties entered into with the North German Confederation and with many of the states composing the Empire. It cannot be said that any fixed rules have been established.

"Where a state has lost its separate existence, as in the case of Hanover and Nassau, no questions can arise.

"Where no new treaty has been negotiated with the Empire, the treaties with the various states which have preserved a separate existence have been resorted to.

"The question of the existence of the extradition treaty with Bavaria was presented to the United States district court, on the application of a person accused of forgery committed in Bavaria, to be discharged on habeas corpus, who was in custody after the issue of a mandate, at the request of the minister of Germany. The court held that the treaty was admitted by both governments to be in existence.

"Such a question is, after all, purely a political one."

The case there referred to is that of Re Thomas, 12 Blatchf. 370, Fed. Cas. No. 13,887, in which the continuance of the extradition treaty with Bavaria was called in question, and Mr. Justice Blatchford, then District Judge, said:

"It is further contended, on the part of Thomas, that the convention with Bavaria was abrogated by the absorption of Bavaria into the German Empire. An examination of the provisions of the Constitution of the German Empire does not disclose anything which indicates that then existing treaties between the several states composing the confederation called the German Empire, and foreign countries, were annulled, or to be considered as abrogated.

[288] "Indeed, it is difficult to see how such a treaty as that between Bavaria and the United States can be abrogated by the action of Bavaria alone, without the consent of the United States. Where a treaty is violated by one of the contracting parties, it rests alone with the injured party to pronounce it broken, the treaty being, in such case, not absolutely void, but voidable, at the election of the injured party, who may waive *or remit the infraction committed, or may demand a just satisfaction, the treaty remaining obligatory if he chooses not to come to a rupture. 1 Kent, Com. 174. In the present case the mandate issued by the government of the United States shows that the convention in question is regarded as in force both by the United States and by the German Empire, represented by its envoy, and by Bavaria, represented by the same envoy. The application of the foreign government was made through the proper diplomatic representative of the German Empire and of Bavaria, and the complaint before the commissioner was made by the proper consular authority representing the German Empire and also representing Bavaria."

We concur in the view that the question whether power remains in a foreign state to carry out its treaty obligations is in its nature political and not judicial, and that the courts ought not to interfere with the conclusions of the political department in that regard.

Treaties of extradition are executory in their character, and fall within the rule laid down by Chief Justice Marshall in Poser v. Neilson, 2 Pet. 314, 7 L. ed. 435, thus: "Our Constitution declares a treaty to be the law of the land. It is, consequently, to be regarded in courts of justice as equivalent to an act of the legislature, whenever it operates of itself without the aid of any legislative provision. But when the terms of the stipulation import a contract, when either of the parties engages to perform a particular act, the treaty addresses itself to the political, not the judicial, department."

In Doe ex dem. Clark v. Braden, 16 How. 635, 14 L. ed. 1090, where it was contended that so much of the treaty of February 22, 1819, ceding Florida to the United States, as annulled a certain land grant, was void for want of power in the King of Spain to ratify such a provision, it was held that whether or not the King of Spain had power, according to the Constitution of Spain, to annul the grant, was a political, and not a judicial, question, and was decided when the treaty was made and ratified.

Mr. Chief Justice Taney said: "The treaty is therefore a law made by the proper authority, and the courts of justice have no right to annul or disregard any of its [289] provisions, unless *they violate the Consti- 184 U. S.

tution of the United States. It is their duty to interpret it and administer it according to its terms. And it would be impossible for the executive department of the government to conduct our foreign relations with any advantage to the country, and fulfil the duties which the Constitution has imposed upon it, if every court in the country was authorized to inquire and decide whether the person who ratified the treaty on behalf of a foreign nation had the power, by its Constitution and laws, to make the engagements into which he entered."

Extradition may be sufficiently defined to be the surrender by one nation to another of an individual accused or convicted of an offense outside of its own territory, and within the territorial jurisdiction of the other, which, being competent to try and to punish him, demands the surrender.

In the United States, the general opinion and practice have been that extradition should be declined in the absence of a conventional or legislative provision. 1 Moore, Extradition, 21; United States v. Rauscher, 119 U. S. 407, 30 L. ed. 425, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 234.

The power to surrender is clearly included within the treaty-making power and the corresponding power of appointing and receiving ambassadors and other public ministers. Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 569, 10 L. ed. 593. Its exercise pertains to public policy and governmental administration, is devolved on the executive authority, and the warrant of surrender is issued by the Secretary of State as the representative of the President in foreign affairs.

If it be assumed in the case before us—and the papers presented on the motion for a stay advise us that such is the fact—that the commissioner, on hearing, deemed the evidence sufficient to sustain the charges, and certified his findings and the testimony to the Secretary of State, and a warrant for the surrender of Terlinden on the proper requisition was duly issued, it cannot be successfully contended that the courts could properly intervene on the ground that the treaty under which both governments had proceeded had terminated by reason of the adoption of the Constitution of the German Empire, notwithstanding *the judgment of [290] both governments to the contrary.

The decisions of the executive department in matters of extradition, within its own sphere, and in accordance with the Constitution, are not open to judicial revision, and it results that where proceedings for extradition, regularly and constitutionally taken under the acts of Congress, are pending, they cannot be put an end to by writs of habeas corpus.

The District Court was right, and its final order is affirmed.

Mr. Justice Harlan did not hear the argument, and took no part in the decision of the case.

HUGULEY MANUFACTURING COMPANY et al., Appts.,
v.

GALETON COTTON MILLS et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 290-296.)

Appeal from circuit court of appeals—final decree.

1. No right of appeal from a decree of the circuit court of appeals, which is made final by the act of Congress of March 3, 1891, chap. 517, § 6 (26 Stat. at L. 826), is given by the provision of that section that such case may be brought to the United States Supreme Court "by certiorari or otherwise," as, if some other order or writ may be resorted to, it must be ejusdem generis with certiorari.
2. A writ of certiorari to perfect the record on an appeal from the circuit court of appeals by supplying alleged omissions does not operate to bring the case before the United States Supreme Court, nor in itself to add any support to the appeal, which must stand or fall according as the act of Congress of March 3, 1891, chap. 517, § 6 (26 Stat. at L. 826), did or did not allow such appeal to be taken.

[No. 94.]

Argued January 15, 1902. Decided February 24, 1902.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Northern District of Georgia directing a conveyance of property sold under foreclosure. Dismissed.

See same case below, 36 C. C. A. 236, 94 Fed. 269.

[291] Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller: "This was a bill filed in the United States circuit court for the northern district of Georgia, January 21, 1891, by J. J. Robinson as trustee, who averred that he was "a citizen of and resided in the state of Alabama," "against the Alabama & Georgia Manufacturing Company, a corporation created under and by virtue of the laws of the state of Georgia, and a resident and citizen of said northern district of Georgia; and against the Huguley Manufacturing Company, a corporation created under the laws of said state of Georgia, and a resident and citizen of said state of Georgia and of the northern district of said state; and against W. T. Huguley, whom your orator avers to be a citizen of said state of Georgia and residing within the said northern district of Georgia."

The bill averred that on January 2, 1884, "the said Alabama & Georgia Manufacturing Company executed and delivered to said W. T. Huguley, W. C. Yancey, and your orator, as trustees, a certain deed of trust, conveying to said persons named, and to orator, all the property of the said Alabama & Georgia Manufacturing Company upon the terms and upon the trusts therein stated for the purpose of securing certain negotiable bonds of said company in the principal sum of $65,000, and interest thereon, which deed of trust was accepted by said trustees and duly recorded." A copy of the trust deed was attached and conveyed certain real estate in the state of Georgia and certain real estate in the state of Alabama as therein described.

It was further averred that the bonds were duly issued by *the Alabama & Georgia Manufacturing Company and sold or otherwise disposed of; that the company was insolvent and had ceased to do business; that under and by virtue of a decree in chancery of the superior court of Troup county, Georgia, all the property of the manufacturing company covered by the deed of trust had been sold and purchased by certain persons who afterwards conveyed the same to the Huguley Manufacturing Company, and that the last-named corporation was now in the possession of the same; that the sale was made subject in all respects to the rights and lien of the trust deed for the holders of the first-mortgage bonds; that W. T. Huguley, defendant herein, and named as one of the trustees for said bondholders, was interested in the purchase of said property, and in the property and assets of the Huguley Manufacturing Company, and adversely to complainant as trustee for said bondholders, and that the other trustee, W. C. Yancey, had departed this life since the execution and delivery of the deed of trust.

The bill then set up default on the part of the Alabama & Georgia Manufacturing Company in the payment of interest; the election of a majority of the bondholders to treat the whole of the principal sum named in the bonds as due; request of complainant to begin proceedings to secure the property pledged for the payment of the indebtedness, and which he deemed to "the best interest of the bondholders;" and prayed for an accounting, foreclosure, and sale of the property.

Defendants acknowledged service, and the two defendant companies filed a demurrer to the bill, which was subsequently overruled on hearing, Mr. Justice Lamar presiding. 48 Fed. 12. Answer was filed by these defendants and the bill taken as confessed as to W. P. Huguley. The cause subsequently went to final decree adjudging recovery on all the bonds and of foreclosure and sale, which decree was afterwards reversed by the circuit court of appeals for the fifth circuit, 6 C. C. A. 79, 13 U. S. App. 359, 56 Fed. 690, because all the bonds were not due, acceptance of interest on some of them having waived default, and the cause remanded. Pending the appeal the property was purchased for the bondholders under the decree and $10,000 paid *into court [293] by the purchasers as required by the decree, who organized a company under the name of the Galeton Cotton Mills, which corporation was placed in possession of the property and remained in such possession for a period of three years and six months. The decree of foreclosure having been vacated, the circuit court granted a petition on behalf of the Huguley Manufacturing Company to restore it to the possession of the property, on condition, however, that it pay into court the $10,000 which had been paid in by the purchasers. The Huguley Manufacturing Company did not comply with this condition, and a second decree of foreclosure was entered adjudging that, out of a total of one hundred and thirty bonds, ninety were due when the bill was filed, and forty were not then due because of waiver of default, though now due; that the property was indivisible and could not be sold to satisfy part of the bonds only; and that the proceeds of sale should be proportionately distributed on all the bonds. Thereupon an appeal was taken to the circuit court of appeals, and the decree of the circuit court was affirmed. 19 C. C. A. 152, 30 U. S. App. 683, 72 Fed. 708.

184 U. S.

NOTE.—As to what judgments or decrees are final for purposes of review—see notes to Brush Electric Co. v. Electric Improv. Co. 2 C. C. A. 379; Central Trust Co. v. Madden, 17 C. C. A. 238; Prescott & A. C. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 C. C. A. 481, and Gibbons v. Ogden, 5 L. ed. U. S. 302.

A second foreclosure sale took place, and the property was again purchased for the bondholders, and this sale was confirmed June 25, 1896. Defendants filed a petition for an accounting of the rents and profits from the time of the first sale, and an amendment thereto, and a reference was made to a special master, who on November 2, 1897, filed his report in which he found the Galeton Cotton Mills liable for rents and profits in the sum of $39,715.31. Exceptions were filed to the master's report by both parties. February 23, 1898, the exceptions of appellants were overruled and the exceptions of appellees sustained to the extent of reducing the master's finding to $35,857.54, and a decree to that effect was entered February 28, 1898. Thereafter the circuit court entered a decree that the rents and profits should be used in reduction of the mortgage debt, and later a decree fixing the amount of the mortgage debt and costs and directing the manner of applying thereto the rents and profits and the amount of cash already received and reserving all questions of costs and expenses not therein disposed of. 89 Fed. 218. At the last foreclosure sale a balance was left due on [294] the *trust deed of $33,414.21. September 22, 1898, the purchaser at the second sale petitioned for a final conveyance, and on October 15, 1898, a decree was entered directing the completion of the sale by a cash payment and conveyance. A motion was made to set aside this decree, which was overruled, whereupon an appeal was taken to the circuit court of appeals. The appeal was heard, and the decree of the circuit court was on May 16, 1899, affirmed. 36 C. C. A. 236, 94 Fed. 269. Application was made to this court for a certiorari, which was denied October 30, 1899. 175 U. S. 726, 44 L. ed. 339, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1022. May 12, 1900, an appeal to this court was allowed by Pardee, J., in order to preserve any possible rights of the applicants, although he expressly stated that he seriously doubted the right of appeal. Appellees moved to dismiss the appeal, the consideration of which motion was postponed to the hearing on the merits.

184 U. S.

Mr. John T. Morgan argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

The jurisdiction of the Supreme Court to hear and determine this cause by appeal, or on certiorari, or otherwise, and to reach all the decrees in the case in the circuit court, or in the circuit court of appeals, is complete, plenary, and supreme, without reference to any stage or condition that the case may be in because of the final or the interlocutory nature of those decrees.

Forsyth v. Hammond, 166 U. S. 506, 41 L. ed. 1095, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 665.

The allowance of an appeal removes the case into the appellate court in virtue of a right that cannot be denied arbitrarily. Mandamus will lie to enforce it.

Ex parte Jordan, 94 U. S. 248, 24 L. ed. 123.

The allowance of an appeal from the judgment of the circuit court of appeals places the record of that court and the record that supports it in the Supreme Court; and all mandates in cases appealed to the Supreme Court from the circuit court of appeals are sent directly to the circuit courts in which the case originated under the statute.

Texas P. R. Co. v. Anderson, 149 U. S. 239, 37 L. ed. 718, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 843.

If a decree of the circuit court that is not final in the cause is taken by appeal to the circuit court of appeals, that court should dismiss it; but if the appellate court proceeds to hear and determine the case on its merits, and affirms the decree of the circuit court, and issues its mandate to proceed in the cause according to its opinion therein rendered, there is a record in the court of appeals, and a decree that is erroneous on the face of the proceedings, from which the right of appeal to the Supreme Court is granted by the statute, unless that right is cut off by the finality of the decree of the circuit court of appeals.

McLish v. Roff, 141 U. S. 661, 35 L. ed. 893, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 118; United States v. Jahn, 155 U. S. 109, 39 L. ed. 87, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39.

The appeal in this case from the decree of the circuit court of appeals, and the appeal on which that decree is based, were allowed without restriction, and present the whole case on both records for review by the Supreme Court.

Chappell v. United States, 160 U. S. 499, 40 L. ed. 510, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397.

Messrs. J. L. McLaurin, F. L. Welles, Alexander C. King, John M. Chilton, and King & Spalding filed a brief for appellants on the merits.

Messrs. Edgar H. Farrar, Benjamin F. Jonas, Ernest B. Kruttschnitt, and John M. Chilton also filed a brief for appellants on the merits.

Mr. Louis D. Brandeis argued the cause, and, with Mr. William H. Dunbar, filed a brief for appellees:

It is the settled law of this court that jurisdiction must be made affirmatively to appear, and if the record fails to show jurisdiction the appeal will be dismissed.

Hunt v. Blackburn, 127 U. S. 774, 32 L. ed. 323, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1395; Ansbro v. United States, 159 U. S. 695, 40 L. ed. 310, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187.

The ground of original jurisdiction in the circuit court, for the purpose of determining the finality of a decision by the circuit court of appeals, depends upon the ground of jurisdiction shown by the plaintiff when he first brings his suit.

Colorado Cent. Consol. Min. Co. v. Turek, 150 U. S. 138, 37 L. ed. 1030, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35; Press Pub. Co. v. Monroe, 164 U. S. 105, 41 L. ed. 367, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Ex parte Jones, 164 U. S. 691, 41 L. ed. 601, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. New Orleans, 181 U. S. 277, 45 L. ed. 859, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 646.

If, in the course of proceedings in a case in which original jurisdiction is taken by the circuit court on the ground wholly of diversity of citizenship, any question arises which brings the case within the provision of the act for a direct appeal to this court, the party aggrieved by the final judgment or decree of the circuit court may appeal direct to this court.

Loeb v. Columbia Twp. 179 U. S. 472, 45 L. ed. 280, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174.

He may also, none the less, as an alternative, appeal to the circuit court of appeals, and, if he does so, that court has jurisdiction to dispose of the appeal.

American Sugar Ref. Co. v. New Orleans, 181 U. S. 277, 45 L. ed. 859, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 646.

And its decision thereon is final, except as to questions certified by it, and on certiorari from this court.

Colorado Cent. Consol. Min. Co. v. Turek, 150 U. S. 138, 37 L. ed. 1030, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35; Press Pub. Co. v. Monroe, 164 U. S. 105, 41 L. ed. 367, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Ex parte Jones, 164 U. S. 691, 41 L. ed. 601, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. New Orleans, 181 U. S. 277, 45 L. ed. 859, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 646.

This is in accordance with the general intention of the act, to distribute the appellate jurisdiction, and to permit an appeal to only one court in any case.

Robinson v. Caldwell, 165 U. S. 359, 41 L. ed. 745, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 343.

If the appellant desired, after his unsuccessful appeal to the circuit court of appeals, to take an appeal to this court on the ground that the case was one in which jurisdiction did not depend entirely on diversity of citizenship, it was his duty to make the existence of the ground of his appeal apparent, and if the record fails to show that there was such a ground of appeal the decision of the circuit court of appeals is final, and the appeal should be dismissed.

Borgmeyer v. Idler, 159 U. S. 408, 40 L. ed. 199, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34; Muse v. Arlington Hotel Co. 168 U. S. 430, 42 L. ed. 531, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 109.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the [294] opinion of the court:

The act of March 3, 1891, chap. 517 (26 Stat. at L. 826), provides in § 6 that the circuit courts of appeals shall have appellate jurisdiction to review judgments and decrees of the circuit courts in all cases in which a direct appeal is not allowed by § 5 to this court, and that the judgments and decrees of the circuit courts of appeals shall be final in all cases in which the jurisdiction is dependent entirely on diversity of citizenship.

The jurisdiction referred to is the jurisdiction of the circuit court as originally invoked. Colorado Cent. Consol. Min. Co. v. Turek, 150 U. S. 138, 37 L. ed. 1030, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35; Press Pub. Co. v. Monroe, 164 U. S. 105, 41 L. ed. 367, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Ex parte Jones, 164 U. S. 691, 41 L. ed. 601, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. New Orleans, 181 U. S. 277, 45 L. ed. 859, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 646; Arkansas v. Kansas & T. Coal Co. 183 U. S. 185, ante, 47, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47.

*If, after the jurisdiction of the circuit [295] court attaches on the ground of diversity of citizenship, issues are raised, the decision of which brings the case within either of the classes set forth in § 5, then the case may be brought directly to this court, although it may be carried to the circuit court of appeals, in which event the final judgment of that court could not be brought here as of right. Loeb v. Columbia Twp. 179 U. S. 472, 45 L. ed. 280, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174. If the jurisdiction of the circuit court rests solely on the ground that the suit arises under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States, then the jurisdiction of this court is exclusive, but if it is placed on diverse citizenship, and also on grounds independent of that, then, if carried to the court of appeals, the decision of that court would not be made final, and appeal or writ of error would lie. American Sugar Ref. Co. v. New Orleans, 181 U. S. 277, 45 L. ed. 859, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 646.

The general intention of the act was to distribute the appellate jurisdiction and to permit an appeal to only one court. Robinson v. Caldwell, 165 U. S. 359, 41 L. ed. 745, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 343.

In this case appellants did not attempt to take an appeal directly to this court from the circuit court, nor could they have done so, since no question was so raised as to bring the case within either of the classes named in § 5. Cornell v. Green, 163 U. S. 75, 41 L. ed. 76, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 969. The ground on which the jurisdiction of the circuit court was invoked was solely diversity of citizenship, and the record does not show anything to the contrary, so that the decree of the circuit court of appeals cannot be regarded otherwise than as made final by the statute.

The question before us is whether this appeal was properly granted and can be maintained. In all cases where the decree or judgment of the circuit court of appeals is made final by the statute, an appeal does not lie, but any such case may be brought here "by certiorari or otherwise." The latter words add nothing to our power, for if some other order or writ might be resorted to it would be ejusdem generis with certiorari. The writ is the equivalent of an appeal or writ of error as declared by the statute, and it is issued in the discretion of the court.

[296] The record filed in this case June 25, 1900, was entirely insufficient, *and appellants applied for certiorari to perfect it by bringing up the alleged lacking portions. We granted that application, and the omissions were supplied. This auxiliary writ did not operate to bring the case before us or in itself to add any support to the appeal, which must stand or fall according as the statute did or did not allow it to be taken. Many matters are urged, such as alleged lack of indispensable parties below and so on, as reasons why an appeal ought to lie, but our jurisdiction depends on the statute, and cannot be enlarged by the supposed hardship of particular cases. Finally, it is argued that a large part of the property dealt with by the decree is situated in the state of Alabama, and it is said that therefore the decrees of both courts are void for want of jurisdiction over the subject-matter.

As the circuit court had jurisdiction over the mortgagor company, the company claiming under it, and the surviving co-trustee of complainant, and the trust deed was made and executed in Georgia, where part of the property was situated, the courts below may have assumed that the case came within Muller v. Dows, 94 U. S. 444, 24 L. ed. 207; International Bridge & Tramway Co. v. Holland, 26 C. C. A. 469, 52 U. S. App. 240, 81 Fed. 422, and kindred cases.

But we need not discuss the validity of the decrees in this regard. If the point had been raised in the circuit court, and its decision would have justified an appeal directly to this court, no such appeal was taken. If its existence in the record justified a review of the decree of the circuit court of appeals, the proper course was to apply for a certiorari. That course was taken in this case, and the application was denied. In view of repeated and well-considered decisions of this court, some of which we have cited, we are unable to find any ground on which this appeal can be sustained.

Appeal dismissed.

In re HUGULEY MANUFACTURING* [297] COMPANY and Alabama & Georgia Manufacturing Company, Petitioners.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 297-302.)

Prohibition—mandamus — other adequate remedies.

1. A writ of prohibition against proceedings in a circuit court of the United States will not be granted by the Supreme Court where the case is one in which a decision in the circuit court could be taken by appeal to the circuit court of appeals, and, after final decree, an appeal would lie to the Supreme Court in respect to the question of jurisdiction, if properly raised and certified.
2. A writ of mandamus will not be granted to compel the dismissal of a suit by the circuit court of the United States for want of jurisdiction, where the writ of prohibition is denied on the ground that there is an adequate remedy by appeal.

[—]

Submitted November 20, 1901. Decided February 24, 1902.

MOTION for leave to file a petition for a writ of prohibition and for a mandamus requiring the dismissal of a bill. Denied.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

The Riverdale Cotton Mills, by leave of court, filed June 10, 1901, in the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of Georgia, a bill against the Alabama & Georgia Manufacturing Company and the Huguley Manufacturing Company, as also certain solicitors of said companies, as ancillary to the bill of foreclosure in that court, brought by Robinson, trustee, against said companies, the appeal in which has just been disposed of.

The bill averred that the defendant companies were corporations of Georgia, and if they had also been authorized under the laws of Alabama they had no place of business in that state, but only in Georgia; and that the only officers, directors, and stockholders they ever had were the officers, directors, and stockholders of the corporations

NOTE.—That a writ of prohibition cannot be made to serve the purpose of a writ of error or of review—see note to Walcott v. Wells (Nev.) 9 L. R. A. 59.

As to when mandamus is the proper remedy—see notes to McCluny v. Silliman, 4 L. ed. U. S. 263, and United States ex rel. International Contracting Co. v. Lamont, 39 L. ed. U. S. 160.

On superintending control and supervisory jurisdiction of the superior over the inferior or subordinate tribunal—see note to State ex rel. Fourth Nat. Bank v. Johnson (Wis.) 51 L. R. A. 33.

organized in Georgia; that as long as they had any property it was situated partly in Georgia and partly in Alabama, and was operated as one business from each of the offices of the corporations in Georgia; and that the property of the Alabama & Georgia Company was fully described in the trust deed, a copy of which was attached, being the trust deed foreclosed at the suit of Robinson, and the property of the Huguley Manufacturing Company was an equity *of redemption therein acquired after the execution and delivery of that trust deed. The bill then set forth the acquisition by the Huguley Company of the property, subject to the trust deed, by proceedings in the superior court of Troup county, Georgia; the filing by Robinson of the bill to foreclose the trust deed; the decree of foreclosure; the sale to representatives of the bondholders, and the transfer to the Galeton Cotton Mills; the reversal of that decree by the circuit court of appeals; the second decree and second sale; the confirmation of sale and deed to complainant, who paid all the purchase money; and the appeal thereupon to the circuit court of appeals, and the affirmance of the decree and proceedings. 36 C. C. A. 236, 94 Fed. 269. It was further averred that from this decree of affirmance an appeal was prosecuted May 16, 1899, to the Supreme Court of the United States, where it was still pending.

The bill further showed that thereafter the Huguley Manufacturing Company and the Alabama & Georgia Manufacturing Company filed in the chancery court of Chambers county, Alabama, their bill of complaint against the Riverdale Cotton Mills, the Galeton Cotton Mills, Robinson, trustee, Huguley, trustee, and the West Point Manufacturing Company, alleging that the Alabama & Georgia Manufacturing Company was an Alabama corporation; that all the property described in the trust deed was situated in Alabama, and that no sale of the property was ever made in Alabama, and that all judicial proceedings in the circuit court for the northern district of Georgia were null and void, so far as affected the title of the two companies to the part of the lands lying in Alabama; and it was sought to hold the Riverdale Cotton Mills, the Galeton Cotton Mills, and the West Point Manufacturing Company for the rents and profits of the property since May, 1892.

Complainant further averred that each and all of the claims to relief set up by these two companies in the Chambers chancery court were set up, or could have been set up, and were adjudicated in the proceedings had in the circuit court in the suit of Robinson, trustee, as aforesaid, as appeared from the record and proceedings in that case; and that all the substantial issues raised in the suit in Chambers' county had [299] been adjudged *and determined by the circuit court. Complainant alleged that a large part of the property described in the trust deed was situated in the state of Georgia, and another part in the state of Alabama, and that the circuit court acquired and had full jurisdiction to order the sale of all the property described in the trust deed, and that neither the Huguley Manufacturing Company, the Alabama & Georgia Manufacturing Company, nor W. T. Huguley, who were defendants to the bill filed by Robinson, ever during the progress of the cause in the circuit court raised any issue as to the jurisdiction of that court to render a decree for the sale of all the lands; and complainant alleged that the property was in fact indivisible. Complainant reiterated that the same companies were seeking by the bill of complaint filed in Chambers county to again raise and have investigated by a court of equity the same identical matters and issues which had theretofore been passed upon and adjudicated by the circuit court in the suit of Robinson. Complainant invoked the jurisdiction of the circuit court as ancillary to the main suit instituted by Robinson to protect it against the violation of its rights by the prosecution of the bill of complaint in the chancery court of Chambers county, and prayed for an injunction and general relief.

The circuit court, on consideration of the bill, ordered defendants to show cause why an injunction should not issue as prayed for, and in the meantime granted a restraining order. The two defendant companies appeared and showed cause, setting up that they were corporations chartered under the laws of Alabama; that the Alabama & Georgia Manufacturing Company was a distinct and separate legal entity from the Alabama & Georgia Manufacturing Company incorporated under the laws of Georgia, and that it was the Georgia corporation, and not the Alabama corporation, that was made party defendant to the suit of Robinson; and they alleged, on information and belief, that the Huguley Manufacturing Company never was incorporated under the laws of Georgia. They insisted that in the proceedings in Alabama the decree of the circuit court in the foreclosure suit was not conclusive upon them, as the circuit court was without jurisdiction, and that *the circuit court had no [300] jurisdiction of this bill because it was an original, and not an ancillary, bill, and complainants and defendants were citizens of Georgia; and, further, that the foreclosure suit was pending in the Supreme Court of the United States. It was also averred that the circuit court was without jurisdiction to issue the injunction prayed, in view of § 720 of the Revised Statutes; and, further, because after filing the bill in Alabama all the defendants thereto, without pleading in abatement, had filed demurrers, pleas, and answers.

The response further set up that the circuit court was without jurisdiction of the original foreclosure suit, because the complainant therein and the Huguley Manufacturing Company were citizens of Alabama, and that the charter of the Alabama & Georgia Manufacturing Company in Georgia had expired by legal limitation before any sale of the property under the foreclosure proceedings. And it was further alleged that the circuit court was without jurisdiction to sell the mortgaged property because it was all situated in the state of Alabama, or, if not, to sell that portion lying in the state of Alabama, and it was denied that the property in Alabama and Georgia were parts of an indivisible whole. Respondents asked that the rule might be discharged, and the bill dismissed.

Upon a hearing the circuit court granted an injunction as prayed until the further order of the court. 111 Fed. 431.

On November 20, 1901, the Huguley Manufacturing Company and the Alabama & Georgia Manufacturing Company submitted a motion for leave to file their petition for a writ of prohibition to restrain the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of Georgia from taking any further steps in the suit of the Riverdale Cotton Mills or in respect of the suit in Alabama, and for a mandamus requiring the circuit court to dismiss the bill of the Riverdale Cotton Mills. The petition which they asked leave to file averred that they were complainants in the chancery suit in Alabama filed for the purpose of redeeming the property in question, and stated that they were not parties to any litigation in the circuit court for the northern district of Georgia, but that they had been served with what purported to be process from that [301] court to "appear in the alleged ancillary proceedings. Petitioners charged that the circuit court had no jurisdiction over the original suit in Georgia, because the property was located in the state of Alabama; that the Alabama & Georgia Manufacturing Company of Alabama was not made a party to the suit in Georgia; that one of the trustees was not joined as complainant; that bondholders protesting against the foreclosure were not made parties; that the other bondholders were not made parties; that the Huguley Manufacturing Company was not given its day in court for redemption; and, in brief, reiterated the grounds presented in their response to the rule to show cause.

Mr. J. C. Welles submitted the cause for petitioners. Mr. John M. Chilton was with him on the brief:

The power to issue a writ of prohibition to a court which has no jurisdiction of the cause exists at common law, and is not merely statutory.

London v. Cox, L. R. 2 H. L. 239.

The power is an essential, inherent right of sovereignty, which, therefore, cannot be abandoned or destroyed.

Ibid.: Worthington v. Jefferies, 32 L. T. N. S. 607.

Therefore, on due reason shown, a superior court is judicially bound as a debt of justice,—ex debito justitiæ,—and not merely by virtue of, and in obedience to, a mandatory statute, to grant a writ of prohibition.

Ibid.: Jacobs v. Brett, 32 L. T. N. S. 523; Reg. v. Twiss, 20 L. T. N. S. 525.

Even in a court of admiralty the right 184 U. S.

and duty to issue a writ of prohibition does not depend on the merits of the case.

James v. London & S. W. R. Co. 26 L. T. N. S. 191.

And accordingly the merits are not considered in any case.

Hudson v. Tooth, 37 L. T. N. S. 465; Mayar v. Cannon, 24 L. T. N. S. 583.

It is manifest that in England the issuance of the writ is not confined to admiralty, nor is any reason there recognized why it should be so restricted.

Reg. v. Liverpool Recorder, 23 L. T. N. S. 813; Robinson v. Emanuel, 30 L. T. N. S. 500; Cooke v. Gill, 28 L. T. N. S. 33; Bridge v. Branch, 34 L. T. N. S. 905; Reg. v. Local Government Board, 48 L. T. N. S. 181.

Section 688; Rev. Stat., does not confine the prohibitory power of the Supreme Court to the admiralty jurisdiction of the district courts.

Ex parte Warmouth, 17 Wall. 64, 21 L. ed. 543; Re Baiz, 135 U. S. 404, 34 L. ed. 222, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 854; Smith v. Whitney, 116 U. S. 172, 29 L. ed. 602, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Re Rice, 155 U. S. 396, 39 L. ed. 198, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 149.

Mr. John M. Chilton filed a separate brief for petitioners:

While it was originally doubted whether this court possessed power to grant writs of prohibition except in admiralty proceedings, it is now settled that it has that power.

Ex parte City Bank, 3 How. 298, 11 L. ed. 603; Smith v. Whitney, 116 U. S. 167, 29 L. ed. 601, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Re Rice, 155 U. S. 396, 39 L. ed. 198, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 149.

This court not only possesses the power, but the right to the writ cannot now be said to rest entirely in discretion, where it clearly appears that there has been an unlawful exercise of authority by the lower court, and the party applying has duly objected.

Smith v. Whitney, 116 U. S. 167, 29 L. ed. 601, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Re Rice, 155 U. S. 396, 39 L. ed. 198, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 149; Re Cooper, 143 U. S. 473, 36 L. ed. 232, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 453; Re Fassett, 142 U. S. 479, 35 L. ed. 1087, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 295; Re Morrison, 147 U. S. 14, sub nom. Morrison v. United States Dist. Ct. 37 L. ed. 60, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246; Ex parte Bradley, 7 Wall. 377, 19 L. ed. 219; High, Extr. Legal Rem. § 560, p. 616; Bacon, Abr. title Mandamus; Ex parte Burr, 9 Wheat. 530, 6 L. ed. 152; Re Alix, 166 U. S. 136, 41 L. ed. 948, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522.

The writ will not be denied merely because it may appear that the lower court "acted upon the conviction that it possessed power or authority in the matter," for jurisdiction cannot be conferred by good intentions. This court may, however, in such cases, cause its opinion to be made known, with leave to the parties to apply further, should the lower court not conform to it.

Bronson v. La Crosse & M. R. Co. 1 Wall. 405, 17 L. ed. 616.

The wrongful assumption of power need not have relation to the entire cause. The court having jurisdiction of the cause may still exceed its power in making some order or decree in its progress.

Ex parte Smith, 23 Ala. 94; Ex parte Roundtree, 51 Ala. 51.

The circuit court had no power to postpone the case to abide the decision of this court on the appeal cause. If this is true, it would follow that prohibition would be the proper remedy to compel the judge of the circuit court to vacate the order postponing the cause.

Ex parte Smith, 23 Ala. 94.

If it is not a question of power, but merely one of legal propriety, in this aspect of the case, mandamus, as distinguished from prohibition, would afford the proper remedy.

Ex parte Campbell (Ala.) 30 So. 521.

Mr. Alexander C. King also filed a brief for petitioners.

[301] *Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

It is firmly established that where it appears that a court whose action is sought to be prohibited has clearly no jurisdiction of the cause originally, a party who has objected to the jurisdiction at the outset and has no other remedy is entitled to a writ of prohibition as a matter of right. But where there is another legal remedy, by appeal or otherwise, or where the question of the jurisdiction of the court is doubtful, or depends on facts which are not made matter of record, the granting or refusal of the writ is discretionary. Re Rice, 155 U. S. 396, 39 L. ed. 198, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 149. And the writ of mandamus cannot be used to perform the office of an appeal or writ of error, and is only granted, as a general rule, where there is no other adequate remedy. Re Atlantic City R. Co. 164 U. S. 633, 41 L. ed. 579, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208.

And it may be added that it is also the general rule as to the writ of certiorari when sought as between private parties and on the ground that the proceedings below are void, that it will be granted or denied in the sound discretion of the court, and will be refused where there is a plain and adequate remedy by appeal or otherwise. Re Tampa Suburban R. Co. 168 U. S. 583, 42 L. ed. 589, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177.

[302] In this case there was, under the act of Congress of June 6, *1900 (31 Stat. at L. 660, chap. 803), a plain and adequate remedy by appeal to the circuit court of appeals for the fifth circuit from the interlocutory order granting an injunction. After a final decree an appeal to this court would lie in respect of the jurisdiction, if the question were properly raised and certified, or if issues were raised and decided bringing the case within § 5 of the act of March 3, 1891 [26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517], or to the circuit court of appeals. The case as presented is far from being one in which we should regard it as a proper exercise of our jurisdiction to interfere with the orderly progress of the suit below by the issue of either of the writs applied for. Re New York & P. R. S. S. Co. 155 U. S. 523, 531, 39 L. ed. 246, 249, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 183.

The contention of counsel seems to go to the extent of insisting that the proceedings in the foreclosure suit were wholly void, and without force and effect as to all persons and for all purposes, and incapable of being made otherwise; and in declining to go into the subject at large we are not to be understood as concurring in that proposition.

Leave denied.

ALBERT H. WAITE, Petitioner,
v.
CITY OF SANTA CRUZ.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 302-329.)

Bonds—of city—estoppel by recitals—special legislation—classification of cities—jurisdiction of Federal court—action by transferee of bonds—uniting claims to make jurisdiction.

1. Recitals in refunding bonds which a city has authority to issue for its "outstanding indebtedness evidenced by bonds and warrants thereof," stating that these bonds are issued for that purpose, in conformity to the Constitution and statutes of the state, and that all which the law requires has been done to authorize their issue, estop the city, as against bona fide purchasers of such bonds, from contending that the original bonds for which the refunding bonds are issued did not constitute a part of the bonded indebtedness of the city, and that notice of that fact was given by the ordinance under which the elec-

NOTE.—On estoppel by recitals in negotiable bonds—see note to Mercer County v. Hackett, 17 L. ed. U. S. 548.

On the rights of bona fide purchasers of municipal bonds—see note to Pickens Twp. v. Post, 41 C. C. A. 6.

On municipal bonds generally—see notes to Sutliff v. Lake County, 37 L. ed. U. S. 145; Harper County v. Rose, 35 L. ed. U. S. 344; Rich v. Meutz, 33 L. ed. U. S. 1075, and Citizens' Sav. & L. Asso. v. Perry County, 39 L. ed. U. S. 585.

On special legislation—see notes to Ayars's Appeal (Pa.) 2 L. R. A. 577; Re Washington Street (Pa.) 7 L. R. A. 193; Lankford v. Somerset County (Md.) 11 L. R. A. 492, and State ex rel. Terre Haute v. Kolsem (Ind.) 14 L. R. A. 566.

As to officers de facto—see notes to State v. Lewis (N. C.) 11 L. R. A. 105; State ex rel. Worrell v. Carr (Ind.) 13 L. R. A. 177; Hussey v. Smith, 25 L. ed. U. S. 314; Ball v. United States, 35 L. ed. U. S. 377.

As to jurisdiction of United States circuit court as dependent upon amount—see Auer v. Lombard, 19 C. C. A. 72, and note; Myers v. Murray, N. & Co. (C. C. S. D. Iowa) 11 L. R. A. 216, and note. And see notes to Roberts v. Lewis, 36 L. ed. U. S. 579, and Tennent-Stribling Shoe Co. v. Roper, 36 C. C. A. 455.

As to diverse citizenship as ground of Federal jurisdiction—see Shipp v. Williams, 10 C. C. A. 247, and note; Mason v. Dullaghan, 27 C. C. A. 296, and note; Seddon v. Virginia, T. & C. Steel & I. Co. (C. C. W. D. Va.) 1 L. R. A. 108, and note; Myers v. Murray, N. & Co. (C. C. S. D. Iowa) 11 L. R. A. 216, and note. And see note to Roberts v. Lewis, 36 L. ed. U. S. 579.

- tion authorizing this issue was held, since it specified that the indebtedness to be refunded included certain bonds issued by a water company which constituted a lien on the city waterworks, and had thereby become a part of the bonded indebtedness of the city.
2. Legislation for all cities of the state except those of the first class, such as that made by Cal. act March 15, 1883, as amended March 1, 1893, authorizing outstanding bonded indebtedness to be refunded on certain conditions, is not repugnant to constitutional restrictions upon special legislation.
 3. Bonds signed by one claiming to act as the mayor of a city, after his successor had qualified, but before he had entered upon the duties of his office, and during a period in which the outgoing mayor and the common council were continuing to hold meetings as city officials without any protest or question being made in respect to their right to do so, cannot be held invalid on the ground that they were not signed by the legal mayor, since it is sufficient in that respect if they are signed by the mayor de facto.
 4. A suit by a transferee of bonds and coupons "does not really and substantially involve a dispute or controversy within the jurisdiction" of a circuit court of the United States, within the meaning of the act of Congress of March 3, 1875, chap. 137, if the transfers to him are made for the purpose of collection only, and if the amount necessary to give jurisdiction to the court is made up by uniting in his hands the bonds or coupons of owners who separately held less than the jurisdictional amount.

[No. 39.]

Argued April 24, 25, 1901. Decided February 24, 1902.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a decision reversing a judgment of the Circuit Court against a city upon negotiable bonds and coupons. Reversed.

See same case below, 39 C. C. A. 106, 98 Fed. 387.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John F. Dillon argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Harry Hubbard and John M. Dillon, filed a brief for petitioner:

The recital in the bonds in question, that they are "issued by the said city of Santa Cruz for the purpose of refunding the bonded indebtedness of said city," estops the city from showing, or attempting to show, that the bonds, or any part of them, were issued for any other purpose than that "of refunding the bonded indebtedness of said city;" and such recital is conclusive on this fact in favor of the bona fide holders of said bonds.

Evansville v. Dennett, 161 U. S. 434, 40 L. ed. 760, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613; Independent School Dist. v. Stone, 106 U. S. 183, 27 L. ed. 90, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84; Hackett v. Ottawa, 99 U. S. 86, 25 L. ed. 363; Graves v. Saline County, 161 U. S. 359, 40 L. ed. 732, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526; Gunnison County v. E. H. Rollins & Sons, 173 U. S. 255, 43 L. ed. 689, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; State 184 U. S.

v. Wells, F. & Co. 15 Cal. 336; Wesson v. Saline County, 20 C. C. A. 227, 34 U. S. App. 680, 73 Fed. 917; Marey v. Oswego Twp. 92 U. S. 637, 23 L. ed. 748.

A bona fide holder is a purchaser for value without notice, or the successor of one who was such purchaser.

McClure v. Oxford Twp. 94 U. S. 429, 24 L. ed. 129.

As the previous holders of the bonds in suit were bona fide holders for value, the plaintiff can avail himself of such previous holders' position without showing that he himself has paid value.

Montclair Twp. v. Ramsdell, 107 U. S. 147, 27 L. ed. 431, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391.

Officers of municipalities charged with the duty of issuing bonds have power to make recitals therein, and it is not necessary that the statute give express power to make recitals.

Gunnison County v. E. H. Rollins & Sons, 173 U. S. 255, 43 L. ed. 689, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Bernards Twp. v. Morrison, 133 U. S. 523, 33 L. ed. 726, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 333.

No ordinance, notice of election, or any "record," is constructive notice as to any negotiable paper, unless a statute expressly so provides.

Burek v. Taylor, 152 U. S. 634, 38 L. ed. 578, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 696; 20 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 600; Oleott v. Bynum, 17 Wall. 44, 21 L. ed. 570; Buell v. Irwin, 24 Mich. 145; Ely v. Wilcox, 20 Wis. 523, 91 Am. Dec. 436; Wade, Notice, 2d ed. § 124; St. John v. Conger, 40 Ill. 535.

The purchaser of negotiable paper is not bound to take notice of any litigation pending, or any judgments which may have been previously rendered regarding such negotiable paper.

Warren County v. Marey, 97 U. S. 96, 24 L. ed. 977; Carroll County v. Smith, 111 U. S. 556, 28 L. ed. 517, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539. See also, to the same effect, Orleans v. Platt, 99 U. S. 676, 25 L. ed. 404; Cass County v. Gillett, 100 U. S. 585, 25 L. ed. 585; Thompson v. Perrine, 103 U. S. 806, 26 L. ed. 612; 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 514.

Actual bad faith on the bondholder's part must exist in order to affect him with constructive notice.

Murray v. Lardner, 2 Wall. 110, 17 L. ed. 857; Goodman v. Simonds, 20 How. 343, 15 L. ed. 934; Swift v. Smith, 102 U. S. 442, 26 L. ed. 193. See also, to the same effect, Goetz v. Bank of Kansas City, 119 U. S. 551, 30 L. ed. 515, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318; Wilson v. Wall, 6 Wall. 83, 18 L. ed. 727.

The doctrine of constructive notice can never be invoked for the purpose of perpetrating a fraud.

Converse v. Blumrich, 14 Mich. 109, 90 Am. Dec. 230; Groton Sav. Bank v. Batty, 30 N. J. Eq. 126; Wilde v. Gibson, 1 H. L. Cas. 605. See also Gill v. Hardin, 48 Ark. 412, 3 S. W. 519; Stone v. Covell, 29 Mich. 359; Spencer v. Spencer, 56 N. C. (3 Jones, Eq.) 404.

The mere negotiability of the bonds would cut off the defense that they were issued in part to refund the bonds of the water company.

State v. Wells, F. & Co. 15 Cal. 336.

A purchaser of negotiable bonds in the market is not bound to inquire whether the maker received payment or other consideration therefor when they were issued.

Fearing v. Clark, 16 Gray, 74, 77 Am. Dec. 394.

The mere fact that the bonds are negotiable is enough to prevent any such defense as that they were not sold in accordance with the provisions contained in the statute authorizing them.

Provident Life & T. Co. v. Mereer County, 170 U. S. 593, 42 L. ed. 1156, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 788; Mercer County v. Hackett, 1 Wall. 83, 17 L. ed. 548.

The city as purchaser of the waterworks plant, having assumed and agreed to pay, as part of the purchase price, the water company mortgage and bonds, became primarily liable to pay such bonds, and they became part of the bonded indebtedness of the city.

Williams v. Naftzger, 103 Cal. 438, 37 Pac. 411; Roberts v. Fitzallen, 120 Cal. 482, 52 Pac. 818; Tuohy v. Woods, 122 Cal. 665, 55 Pac. 683; Alvord v. Spring Valley Gold Co. 106 Cal. 547, 40 Pac. 27; Weaver v. McKay, 108 Cal. 546, 41 Pac. 450; Hopkins v. Warner, 109 Cal. 133, 41 Pac. 868; Tulare County Bank v. Madden, 109 Cal. 312, 41 Pac. 1092; Keller v. Ashford, 133 U. S. 610, 33 L. ed. 667, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 494; Jones, Mortg. 5th ed. §§ 749 et seq.

In order that a grantee may be personally liable to pay the mortgage debt, it is not necessary that he should sign the deed or any obligation.

Roberts v. Fitzallen, 120 Cal. 482, 52 Pac. 818; Tuohy v. Woods, 122 Cal. 665, 55 Pac. 683; Alvord v. Spring Valley Gold Co. 106 Cal. 547, 40 Pac. 27; Weaver v. McKay, 108 Cal. 546, 41 Pac. 450; Hopkins v. Warner, 109 Cal. 133, 41 Pac. 868; Tulare County Bank v. Madden, 109 Cal. 312, 41 Pac. 1092; Jones, Mortg. § 752.

Where it is sought to affect a bona fide purchaser for value of commercial paper with constructive notice, the question is not whether there were grounds of suspicion, or even gross negligence on his part, but whether he has acted in bad faith.

Murray v. Lardner, 2 Wall. 110, 17 L. ed. 857; Swift v. Smith, 102 U. S. 442, 26 L. ed. 193. See also, to the same effect, Goetz v. Bank of Kansas City, 119 U. S. 551, 30 L. ed. 515, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318.

This is true even as respects non-negotiable property, like real estate.

Wilson v. Wall, 6 Wall. 83, 18 L. ed. 727.

The city is bound by its construction of the enabling act, concurred in by its city council and its qualified voters.

Van Hostrup v. Madison, 1 Wall. 291, 17 L. ed. 538.

The diverse citizenship of the parties sufficiently appears on the record in this action.

New Orleans v. Quinlan, 173 U. S. 191, 43 L. ed. 664, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 329; Loeb v. Columbia Twp. 179 U. S. 472, 45 L. ed. 280, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174.

As the bonds and coupons are payable to bearer, it is no objection to the jurisdiction that they were assigned to plaintiff for collection only.

Montclair Twp. v. Ramsdell, 107 U. S. 147, 27 L. ed. 431, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; Bernards Twp. v. Stebbins, 109 U. S. 341, 27 L. ed. 956, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252.

The acts of de facto officers are valid.

Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 276; Ralls County v. Douglass, 105 U. S. 728, 26 L. ed. 1220.

Jeter was at least de facto mayor of the city of Santa Cruz at all the times in question.

State ex rel. Knewlton v. Williams, 5 Wis. 308, 68 Am. Dec. 65; Carli v. Rhener, 27 Minn. 292, 7 N. W. 139; Magneau v. Fremont, 30 Neb. 843, 9 L. R. A. 786, 47 N. W. 280; Hamlin v. Kassafer, 15 Or. 456, 15 Pac. 778; Brown v. Lunt, 37 Me. 423; Petersilca v. Stone, 119 Mass. 465, 20 Am. Rep. 335. See also Atty. Gen. v. Crocker, 138 Mass. 214; Galbraith v. McFarland, 3 Coldw. 267, 91 Am. Dec. 281; 5 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 105; Jhons v. People, 25 Mich. 499; State ex rel. Day v. Buckland, 23 Kan. 259; Morton v. Lee, 28 Kan. 286; Wapello County v. Bigham, 10 Iowa, 39, 74 Am. Dec. 370; Re Manning, 139 U. S. 504, 35 L. ed. 264, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 624; Ball v. United States, 140 U. S. 118, 35 L. ed. 377, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 761.

California holds the same doctrine held elsewhere as to the validity of acts of de facto officers.

People ex rel. Hoffman v. Hecht, 105 Cal. 621, 27 L. R. A. 203, 38 Pac. 941; People v. Sehorn, 116 Cal. 503, 48 Pac. 495; Buck v. Eureka, 109 Cal. 504, 30 L. R. A. 409, 42 Pac. 243.

Mr. James G. Maguire argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John Garber and Carl E. Lindsay, filed a brief for respondent.

A municipality has no power to issue negotiable bonds, except upon statutory authority and subject to the restrictions and directions of the enabling act.

Aetna L. Ins. Co. v. Lyon County, 44 Fed. 329; Young v. Clarendon Twp. 132 U. S. 340, 33 L. ed. 356, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 107; Merrill v. Monticello, 138 U. S. 673, 34 L. ed. 1069, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441; Hedges v. Dixon County, 150 U. S. 182, 37 L. ed. 1044, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71; Concord v. Robinson, 121 U. S. 165, 30 L. ed. 885, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 937; Daviess County v. Dickinson, 117 U. S. 657, 29 L. ed. 1026, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 897.

It is well settled that, in the absence of express authority, given either by the Constitution or the statute, a municipality has no power to issue bonds, and that bonds issued by a municipality without such statutory or constitutional authority are absolutely void.

Wells v. Pontotoc County, 102 U. S. 625, 26 L. ed. 263; Claiborne County v. Brooks, 184 U. S.

111 U. S. 400, 28 L. ed. 470, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 489; Concord v. Robinson, 121 U. S. 165, 30 L. ed. 885, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 937; Kelley v. Milan, 127 U. S. 139, 32 L. ed. 77, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1101; Brenham v. German-American Bank, 144 U. S. 173, 36 L. ed. 390, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559; Lehman v. San Diego, 27 C. C. A. 668, 48 U. S. App. 681, 83 Fed. 669; McCoy v. Briant, 53 Cal. 247.

Any fair, reasonable doubt concerning the existence of the power is resolved by the court against the corporation, and the power is denied.

Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 89; Von Schmidt v. Widber, 105 Cal. 157, 38 Pac. 682; Ottawa v. Carey, 108 U. S. 110, 27 L. ed. 669, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 361.

The rule of strict construction of corporate powers is applicable to grants of powers to municipal and public bodies, which are out of the usual range, or which may result in public burdens, or which, in their exercise, touch the right to liberty or property, or, as it may be compendiously expressed, any common-law right of the citizen or inhabitant.

Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 91; Von Schmidt v. Widber, 105 Cal. 157, 38 Pac. 682.

Bonds issued in excess of the limit fixed by law are void.

Doon Dist. Twp. v. Cummins, 142 U. S. 366, 35 L. ed. 1044, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220; East Oakland Twp. v. Skinner, 94 U. S. 255, 24 L. ed. 125; Lewis v. Shreveport, 108 U. S. 282, 27 L. ed. 728, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634; Marsh v. Fulton County, 10 Wall. 676, 19 L. ed. 1040; McPherson v. Foster Bros. 43 Iowa, 48, 22 Am. Rep. 215; North v. Platte County, 29 Neb. 447, 45 N. W. 692; Buchanan v. Litchfield, 102 U. S. 278, 26 L. ed. 138; Litchfield v. Ballou, 114 U. S. 190, 29 L. ed. 132, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820; Dixon County v. Field, 111 U. S. 83, 28 L. ed. 360, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 315; Lake County v. Rollins, 130 U. S. 662, 32 L. ed. 1060, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; Lake County v. Graham, 130 U. S. 674, 32 L. ed. 1065, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; Nesbit v. Independent Dist. 144 U. S. 610, 36 L. ed. 562, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 746; Lehman v. San Diego, 27 C. C. A. 668, 48 U. S. App. 681, 83 Fed. 670; Shaw v. Independent School Dist. 23 C. C. A. 169, 40 U. S. App. 475, 77 Fed. 277.

Recitals in bonds do not cure this defect.

Buchanan v. Litchfield, 102 U. S. 278, 26 L. ed. 138; Independent School Dist. v. Stone, 106 U. S. 183, 27 L. ed. 90, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84.

When the law confers no authority to issue bonds, the mere fact of their issue cannot bind the town to pay them, even to a purchaser before maturity and for value.

Hopper v. Covington, 118 U. S. 148, 30 L. ed. 190, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1025; Marsh v. Fulton County, 10 Wall. 676, 19 L. ed. 1040; East Oakland Twp. v. Skinner, 94 U. S. 255, 24 L. ed. 125; Buchanan v. Litchfield, 102 U. S. 278, 26 L. ed. 138; Dixon County v. Field, 111 U. S. 83, 28 L. ed. 360, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 315; Hayes v. Holly Springs, 114 U. S. 120, 29 L. ed. 81, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 785; 184 U. S.

Daviess County v. Dickinson, 117 U. S. 657, 29 L. ed. 1026, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 897; Merrill v. Monticello, 138 U. S. 673, 34 L. ed. 1069, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441; Dill. Mun. Corp. § 89.

Municipalities will not be estopped by recitals in bonds, unless the recitals relate to matters of fact which it may be fairly presumed that the officers of the municipality were left to determine.

Coloma v. Eaves, 92 U. S. 484, 23 L. ed. 579; Dixon County v. Field, 111 U. S. 83, 28 L. ed. 360, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 315; Lake County v. Graham, 130 U. S. 674, 32 L. ed. 1065, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; National Bank of Commerce v. Granada, 4 C. C. A. 212, 10 U. S. App. 692, 54 Fed. 100.

Recitals cannot be relied upon as an estoppel where the facts recited are matters of public record, and are open to the inspection of everyone who is disposed to make inquiries.

Sutliff v. Lake County, 147 U. S. 230, 37 L. ed. 145, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318; Dixon County v. Field, 111 U. S. 83, 28 L. ed. 360, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 315; Nesbit v. Independent Dist. 144 U. S. 610, 36 L. ed. 562, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 746; Northern Nat. Bank v. Porter Twp. 110 U. S. 608, 28 L. ed. 258, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 254; Valley County v. McLean, 49 U. S. App. 131, 79 Fed. 728; Dudley v. Lake County, 26 C. C. A. 82, 49 U. S. App. 336, 80 Fed. 672; United States Trust Co. v. Mineral Ridge, 44 C. C. A. 218, 104 Fed. 851.

Where the statutes of a state (as in California) provide that municipal corporations shall have power to make and publish from time to time ordinances providing for the method of binding them regarding the issue of bonds, the holder of negotiable bonds purporting to have been issued by such a corporation under the provisions of such statutes is bound to know, independently of the recitals in the bond, that there is such an ordinance in existence.

Hinkley v. Arkansas City, 16 C. C. A. 395, 32 U. S. App. 640, 69 Fed. 768. See also Dudley v. Lake County, 26 C. C. A. 82, 49 U. S. App. 336, 80 Fed. 672; Valley County v. McLean, 25 C. C. A. 174, 49 U. S. App. 131, 79 Fed. 728.

The bonds having been issued in part for an illegal purpose, and it being impossible to segregate or distinguish the valid from the invalid bonds, the whole issue is void.

Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. Lyon County, 44 Fed. 329; Hedges v. Dixon County, 150 U. S. 182, 37 L. ed. 1044, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71; Coffin v. Indianapolis, 59 Fed. 221; United States Trust Co. v. Mineral Ridge, 44 C. C. A. 218, 104 Fed. 851.

The mayor and council must give and provide for the notice of election specified in the statute, and they must do it officially and by ordinance, as provided by the charter, for in no other way can they act or proceed.

Jersey City v. Central R. Co. 40 N. J. Eq. 419, 2 Atl. 262; People v. Bailhache, 52 Cal. 310; Dey v. Jersey City, 19 N. J. Eq. 416; Schumm v. Scymour, 24 N. J. Eq. 153; 15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 1028, 1029.

Stevenson v. Bay City, 26 Mich. 46; Talcott Bros. v. Noel, 107 Iowa, 470, 78 N. W. 39; Lehman v. San Diego, 27 C. C. A. 668, 48 U. S. App. 681, 83 Fed. 670; Wesson v. Saline County, 20 C. C. A. 227, 34 U. S. App. 680, 73 Fed. 919.

A statutory requirement that a certain fact shall be embodied in a resolution or ordinance is an express requirement that it be made a matter of public record open to the inspection of everyone.

Lehman v. San Diego, 27 C. C. A. 668, 48 U. S. App. 681, 83 Fed. 669; Wesson v. Saline County, 20 C. C. A. 227, 34 U. S. App. 680, 73 Fed. 919.

A statement made or fact appearing on the face of the bonds, whether required to be made by statute or not, prevents a purchaser from relying on recitals to the contrary of that fact, if true.

Chaffee County v. Potter, 142 U. S. 363, 35 L. ed. 1043, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216; McClure v. Oxford Twp. 94 U. S. 429, 24 L. ed. 129.

Every person dealing in bonds is bound, at his peril, to inquire whether they were issued in the mode prescribed; and as the mode is the measure of the power, the bonds would be void in the hands of a holder for value without actual notice, if issued in any other mode.

Sutro v. Pettit, 74 Cal. 335, 16 Pac. 7; McCoy v. Briant, 53 Cal. 247.

Notwithstanding the recitals the municipality is not concluded as to any facts expressly required by statute to be made a matter of public record open to the inspection of everyone.

National L. Ins. Co. v. Mead, 13 S. D. 37, 48 L. R. A. 785, 82 N. W. 80, 13 S. D. 342, 83 N. W. 335.

Recitals or no recitals, and without regard to their character, the purchaser is by law, and without regard to the fact of ignorance or knowledge, held to know the official character of the signers and issuers of the bond.

See Bissell v. Spring Valley Twp. 110 U. S. 162, 28 L. ed. 105, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 555; Brown v. Bon Homme County, 1 S. D. 216, 46 N. W. 173.

Before these bonds were signed Jeter had ceased to be mayor, and Effe, from the moment he qualified, was mayor and in office, and Jeter, until he acquired some new and subsequent right or title, was a mere intruder and usurper, and had no right to sign these bonds.

State ex rel. Butler v. Callahan, 4 N. D. 481, 61 N. W. 1025; La Pointe v. O'Malley, 46 Wis. 64, 50 N. W. 521; People ex rel. Evans v. Callaghan, 83 Ill. 135; Olson v. Treco County, 8 Kan. App. 414, 54 Pac. 805; State ex rel. Hugg v. Ivins, 59 N. J. L. 139, 36 Atl. 685; Williams v. Boynton, 147 N. Y. 426, 42 N. E. 184; State ex rel. School Dist. v. Dorton, 145 Mo. 304, 46 S. W. 950; Hand v. Deady, 79 Hun, 75, 29 N. Y. Supp. 633; Woods v. Bristol, 84 Me. 358, 24 Atl. 865; McLean v. Valley County, 74 Fed. 395.

To hold that the performance of an act furnishes any evidence of authority to act would be begging the whole question.

State ex rel. Corey v. Curtis, 9 Nev. 341.

In the absence of statutory authority, a municipality has no power to assume the obligations of others, or to issue bonds; and bonds issued by a municipality without such statutory or constitutional authority are absolutely void.

Wells v. Pontotoc County, 102 U. S. 625, 26 L. ed. 122; Claiborne County v. Brooks, 111 U. S. 400, 28 L. ed. 470, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 489; Concord v. Robinson, 121 U. S. 165, 30 L. ed. 885, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 937; Kelley v. Milan, 127 U. S. 139, 32 L. ed. 77, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1101; Brenham v. German-American Bank, 144 U. S. 173, 36 L. ed. 390, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559; McCoy v. Briant, 53 Cal. 241; Sutro v. Pettit, 74 Cal. 336, 16 Pac. 7.

The so-called refunding act is local and special because it excludes from its operation cities of the first class, while extending its privileges to all other classes of cities in the state of California.

Cal. Const. art. 4, § 25, subdiv. 33, p. 28; Pasadena v. Stimson, 91 Cal. 249, 27 Pac. 604; Bruch v. Colombet, 104 Cal. 351, 38 Pac. 45; Darcy v. San José, 104 Cal. 642, 38 Pac. 500; Welsh v. Bramlet, 98 Cal. 224, 33 Pac. 66; Dougherty v. Austin, 94 Cal. 604, 16 L. R. A. 161, 28 Pac. 834, 29 Pac. 1092; Ex parte Westerfield, 55 Cal. 550, 36 Am. Rep. 47; Farrell v. Sacramento, 85 Cal. 408, 24 Pac. 868; People ex rel. Graves v. McFadden, 81 Cal. 499, 22 Pac. 851; Earle v. San Francisco Bd. of Edu. 55 Cal. 491; Desmond v. Dunn, 55 Cal. 242; Miller v. Kister, 68 Cal. 145, 8 Pac. 813; People ex rel. Hassell v. Hoffman, 60 How. Pr. 324; Sun Mut. Ins. Co. v. New York, 8 N. Y. 241; Ayars's Appeal, 122 Pa. 266, 2 L. R. A. 577, 16 Atl. 356; State ex rel. Richards v. Hammer, 42 N. J. L. 439; Lodi Twp. v. State, 51 N. J. L. 402, 6 L. R. A. 56, 18 Atl. 749; People ex rel. McConville v. Hills, 35 N. Y. 449; People ex rel. Lee v. Chautauqua County, 43 N. Y. 13; Topeka v. Gillett, 32 Kan. 431, 4 Pac. 800.

Purchasers of bonds issued by municipalities under the authority of a law which limits the amount of bonds to be issued, to a certain percentage of the assessment rolls, or to a given rate of taxation based on such rolls, are charged with notice of the assessment rolls and of the amount of bonds which can be validly issued, based on such assessment rolls.

Dixon County v. Field, 111 U. S. 183, 28 L. ed. 360, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 315; Sutliff v. Lake County, 147 U. S. 230, 37 L. ed. 145, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318; Francis v. Howard County, 4 C. C. A. 460, 13 U. S. App. 126, 54 Fed. 487.

Mr. Jeter's signature to certain of the bonds after the expiration of his term was the act of a private citizen, and not of a public officer authorized by law to execute negotiable instruments of the municipality, and the bonds, under a familiar rule, are void even in the hands of purchasers for value.

Coler v. Cleburne, 131 U. S. 162, 33 L. ed. 146, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720.

Official terms should not be extended beyond time clearly defined, but rather shortened by implication, if necessary.

People ex rel. Harris v. Brenham, 3 Cal. 477.

Mr. Jeter, at the time of the signing of the bond, on the afternoon of April 16, 1894, was not mayor de facto of the city of Santa Cruz.

State v. Carroll, 38 Conn. 449, 9 Am. Rep. 409; 5 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 96; Brown v. Lunt, 37 Me. 423; Connolly v. Ashworth, 98 Cal. 205, 33 Pac. 60; Broder v. Conklin, 98 Cal. 360, 33 Pac. 211.

Upon the expiration of the term of office of any officer his power as such officer ceases, and any act performed by him thereafter as such officer is a nullity and has no force or effect, unless, indeed, he holds over under some color of right.

Trinity County v. McCammon, 25 Cal. 117; Mechem, Pub. Off. § 396; Badger v. United States ex rel. Bolles, 93 U. S. 599, 23 L. ed. 991; People ex rel. Morton v. Tie-man, 8 Abb. Pr. 359; Vogel v. State ex rel. Land, 107 Ind. 374, 8 N. E. 164; Edison v. Almy, 66 Mich. 329, 33 N. W. 509.

One who holds over after his term of office expires is an intruder, and he does not become an officer de facto until he has held for such a length of time that reputation and general acquiescence have established color of right.

Williams v. Boynton, 147 N. Y. 432, 42 N. E. 184; State ex rel. Corey v. Curtis, 9 Nev. 325; Becker v. People ex rel. Wilson, 156 Ill. 301, 40 N. E. 944; Hughes v. Long, 119 N. C. 52, 25 S. E. 743; Den ex dem. Gil- liam v. Reddick, 26 N. C. (4 Ired. L.) 368; Doe ex dem. Burke v. Elliott, 26 N. C. (4 Ired. L.) 355; State v. Lewis, 107 N. C. 967, 11 L. R. A. 105, 12 S. E. 457, 13 S. E. 247.

There can be no officer de facto where there is an officer de jure in possession of the office.

5 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 105; Board- man v. Halliday, 10 Paige, 223; School Dist. No. 13 v. Smith, 67 Vt. 568, 32 Atl. 484; People ex rel. Evans v. Callaghan, 83 Ill. 135; State ex rel. Butler v. Callahan, 4 N. D. 481, 61 N. W. 1025.

Mr. Frederic R. Coudert, Jr., also argued the cause for respondent.

Mr. Frank J. Sullivan filed a brief as amicus curiæ:

All legislation is special which applies to a selected or designated class, even though it embraces the whole of the class, unless there appears some reason why its operation should be restricted.

Darcy v. San José, 104 Cal. 642, 38 Pac. 500; Pasadena v. Stimson, 91 Cal. 238, 27 Pac. 604; Earle v. San Francisco Bd. of Edu. 55 Cal. 489; Bruch v. Colombet, 104 Cal. 347, 38 Pac. 45; Ex parte Clancy, 90 Cal. 553, 27 Pac. 411; San Luis Obispo County v. Graves, 84 Cal. 71, 23 Pac. 1032; People v. Central P. R. Co. 83 Cal. 394, 23 Pac. 303; Miller v. Kister, 68 Cal. 142, 8 184 U. S.

Pac. 813; Omnibus R. Co. v. Baldwin, 57 Cal. 160; Desmond v. Dunn, 55 Cal. 242; Ex parte Westerfield, 55 Cal. 550, 36 Am. Rep. 47; Ex parte Jentsch, 112 Cal. 468, 32 L. R. A. 664, 44 Pac. 803; Welsh v. Bramlet, 98 Cal. 219, 33 Pac. 66; Walser v. Austin, 104 Cal. 128, 37 Pac. 869; Turner v. Siskiyou County, 109 Cal. 332, 42 Pac. 434; Denman v. Broderick, 111 Cal. 96, 43 Pac. 516; Marsh v. Hanly, 111 Cal. 368, 43 Pac. 975; Eaton v. Brown, 96 Cal. 371, 17 L. R. A. 697, 31 Pac. 250; Bloss v. Lewis, 109 Cal. 493, 41 Pac. 1081; Rauer v. Williams, 118 Cal. 401, 50 Pac. 691.

A statute purporting to confer upon all cities having a population of not less than 25,000 inhabitants the power of issuing bonds to fund their floating debt is a special law, and in violation of the constitutional amendment which forbids the passing of special laws to regulate the internal affairs of towns.

State, Anderson, Prosecutor, v. Trenton, 42 N. J. L. 486. To the same effect, see State, Clark, Prosecutor, v. Cape May, 50 N. J. L. 558, 14 Atl. 581; Atchison v. Bartholow, 4 Kan. 124; State, Highstown, Pros- ecutor, v. Glenn, 47 N. J. L. 105; People ex rel. Miller v. Cooper, 83 Ill. 585; State, Alsbath, Prosecutor, v. Philbrick, 50 N. J. L. 581, 15 Atl. 579; Topcka v. Gillett, 32 Kan. 431, 4 Pac. 800; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Anderson, 44 Ohio St. 247, 6 N. E. 571; State v. Pugh, 43 Ohio St. 98, 1 N. E. 439; State ex rel. Harris v. Herrmann, 75 Mo. 340; Scowden's Appeal, 96 Pa. 422; Ayars's Appeal, 122 Pa. 266, 2 L. R. A. 577, 16 Atl. 356.

An act to establish a license and excise department in certain cities containing more than 15,000 inhabitants, and in which the granting of licenses is not already vested in a board of excise, as in the court of com- mon pleas, is local and special, and there- fore unconstitutional.

State, Clossen, Prosecutor, v. Trenton License & Excise Board, 48 N. J. L. 438, 5 Atl. 323.

An act regulating the internal affairs of two cities has been declared unconstitution- al because it applied only to them, and could not apply to any others.

State ex rel. Richards v. Hammer, 42 N. J. L. 439.

Taking the statute and the face of the bond together, as he must, the purchaser is charged with knowledge that it was only bonds, and not warrants, that were attempt- ed to be refunded; that the election was called by ordinance, and that the ordinance recited and specified the particular bonds, and was made a public record accessible to all; and that there were like public records by reference to which he could ascertain whether the bonds recited were outstanding.

Sutliff v. Lake County, 147 U. S. 230, 37 L. ed. 145, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318; Chaffee County v. Potter, 142 U. S. 364, 35 L. ed. 1043, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216; McClure v. Ox- ford Twp. 94 U. S. 429, 24 L. ed. 129.

It is the rule of the Federal courts to construe the statutes of a state according to the rule of settled construction in that state, provided the Constitution or laws of the United States are not in any manner contravened.

Claiborne County v. Brooks, 111 U. S. 400, 28 L. ed. 470, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 489.

Under the statutes and laws of California, and by intendment and construction of law, a statutory requirement that a certain fact shall be embodied in a resolution or ordinance is an express requirement that it be made a matter of public record open to the inspection of everyone.

Wesson v. Saline County, 20 C. C. A. 227, 34 U. S. App. 680, 73 Fed. 919; Lehman v. San Diego, 27 C. C. A. 668, 48 U. S. App. 681, 83 Fed. 673.

A person dealing with a municipal corporation must determine for himself whether or not the proposed debt will cause the municipality to exceed the constitutional or statutory limitation.

Scott v. Davenport, 34 Iowa, 208; Dixon County v. Field, 111 U. S. 95, 28 L. ed. 364, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 315; Lake County v. Graham, 130 U. S. 674, 32 L. ed. 1065, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; Buchanan v. Litchfield, 102 U. S. 278, 26 L. ed. 138; Sutliff v. Lake County, 147 U. S. 230, 235, 37 L. ed. 145, 149, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318; Marcy v. Oswego Twp. 92 U. S. 637, 23 L. ed. 748; Humboldt Twp. v. Long, 92 U. S. 642, 23 L. ed. 752; Doon Dist. County v. Cummins, 142 U. S. 368, 35 L. ed. 1044, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220; 15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 1124.

The prohibition of indebtedness applies to all forms of debt over which the municipality has control, and includes both express and implied, as well as floating and bonded, indebtedness.

Litchfield v. Ballou, 114 U. S. 190, 29 L. ed. 132, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820; Simonton, Municipal Bonds, § 54.

It was obviously the intention of the legislature in submitting, and the people in adopting, the Constitution, to arbitrarily restrict the power of municipal corporations to contract debts to a limited per cent of their taxable property, and to require, when that limitation has been reached, that such corporations shall be prepared to pay for whatever value they may obtain, without the inconvenience of any further indebtedness for any purpose whatever.

Sackett v. New Albany, 88 Ind. 473, 45 Am. Rep. 467; Simonton, Municipal Bonds, § 55.

In construing these constitutional and statutory provisions, attention must be paid to their terms. Limitations imposed by the Constitution on the power of municipal corporations to contract debts should be construed with reference to existing facts, and with a view to the practical working of that instrument, and such a literal construction as would defeat the object to be attained should not be adopted.

Law v. People ex rel. Huck, 87 Ill. 383.

Statutory limitations are binding where the statute, the assessed valuation, and the public record of the debt referred to in them, disclose the entire absence of power to issue bonds, of which facts all intending purchasers are bound to take notice.

Broadway Sav. Inst. v. Pelham, 83 Hun, 102; Thompson v. Mamakating, 37 Hun, 400, 106 N. Y. 674, 13 N. E. 937.

If it can be ascertained that the issue was in excess of the constitutional or statutory limitation, the bonds will be declared invalid, notwithstanding any recitals, unless the recitals, in express terms, state that the issue is not in excess of the constitutional or statutory limitation, and the amount of the issue is not ascertainable from the bonds themselves.

Buchanan v. Litchfield, 102 U. S. 278, 26 L. ed. 138; Dixon County v. Field, 111 U. S. 83, 28 L. ed. 360, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 315; Quaker City Nat. Bank v. Nolan County, 59 Fed. 660; Sutliff v. Lake County, 147 U. S. 230, 37 L. ed. 145, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318; Francis v. Howard County, 43 C. C. A. 460, 13 U. S. App. 126, 54 Fed. 487; Lake County v. Rollins, 130 U. S. 662, 32 L. ed. 1060, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; Lake County v. Graham, 130 U. S. 674, 32 L. ed. 1065, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; Nesbit v. Independent Dist. 144 U. S. 610, 36 L. ed. 562, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 746; Hedges v. Dixon County, 150 U. S. 182, 37 L. ed. 1044, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71.

To create an estoppel as to overissue there must be in the bond a recital to the effect that the total amount of the issue does not exceed the limit prescribed by the laws or Constitution of the state.

Quaker City Nat. Bank v. Nolan County, 59 Fed. 660; Millsaps v. Terrell, 8 C. C. A. 557, 23 U. S. App. 208, 60 Fed. 193; Francis v. Howard County, 4 C. C. A. 460, 13 U. S. App. 126, 54 Fed. 487; Dixon County v. Field, 111 U. S. 83, 28 L. ed. 360, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 315; Sutliff v. Lake County, 147 U. S. 230, 37 L. ed. 145, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318; Chaffee County v. Potter, 142 U. S. 355, 35 L. ed. 1040, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216; National L. Ins. Co. v. Huron Bd. of Edu. 10 C. C. A. 637, 27 U. S. App. 244, 62 Fed. 778.

All overissued bonds are void.

Sutro v. Pettit, 74 Cal. 332, 16 Pac. 7; Sutro v. Rhodes, 92 Cal. 117, 28 Pac. 98; Simonton, Municipal Bonds, § 238.

Equity will not grant relief to the holder of such bonds.

Litchfield v. Ballou, 114 U. S. 190, 29 L. ed. 132, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820; Hedges v. Dixon County, 150 U. S. 182, 37 L. ed. 1044, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71.

If the municipal corporation did not have the authority to do the work and make the public improvement, or if the money was not obtained for a public object which the municipality had authority to do, but was used for some purpose about which the municipality had no authority to act, then the holder cannot recover at all. The whole issue will be held invalid if the transaction is one and indivisible.

Simonton, Municipal Bonds, § 237; 15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 1137; Millerstown v. Frederick, 114 Pa. 435, 7 Atl. 156; Hedges v. Dixon County, 150 U. S. 182, 37 L. ed. 1044, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71.

Not even ratification will make good bonds issued beyond the lawful limit.

Dariess County v. Dickinson, 117 U. S. 657, 29 L. ed. 1026, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 897; McPherson v. Foster Bros. 43 Iowa, 48, 22 Am. Rep. 215.

If a purchaser received any information of a defect in the bonds, that is sufficient of itself to put him on inquiry as a prudent man. No matter how this information is acquired, by agents or otherwise, it is fatal to the claim of being an innocent purchaser.

Burroughs, Public Securities, pp. 331, 360. See Hopple v. Hipple, 33 Ohio St. 116; Harshman v. Bates County, 92 U. S. 569, 23 L. ed. 747; Bates County v. Winters, 97 U. S. 85, 24 L. ed. 933; McClure v. Oxford Twp. 94 U. S. 429, 24 L. ed. 129.

[303] *Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This action was brought in the name of Waite, a citizen of Massachusetts, against the city of Santa Cruz, a municipal corporation of California of the fifth class, to recover the principal and interest of certain negotiable bonds, nine in number, and *certain negotiable coupons thereof, 282 in number, issued April 16th, 1894, in the name of the defendant city.

[304] Each bond, signed by "Wm. T. Jeter, Mayor of the city of Santa Cruz," and attested by "O. J. Lincoln, City Clerk," contained these recitals:

"And for the payment of the principal sum [$1,000] herein named, and the interest accruing thereon, the said city of Santa Cruz is held and firmly bound, and its faith and credit and all the real and personal property of said city are hereby pledged, for the prompt payment of this bond and interest at maturity.

"This bond is one of a series of bonds of like date, tenor, and effect, issued by the said city of Santa Cruz for the purpose of refunding the bonded indebtedness of said city and issuing bonds therefor, and providing for the payment of the same under and in pursuance of and in conformity with the provisions of an act of the legislature of the state of California, entitled 'An Act to Amend an Act Entitled "An Act Authorizing the Common Council, Board of Trustees, or Other Governing Body of any Incorporated City and Town, Other than Cities of the First Class, to Refund its Indebtedness, Issue Bonds Therefor, and Provide for the Payment of the Same" (approved March 15, 1883),' approved March 1, 1893.

"And in pursuance of and in conformity with the Constitution of the state of California, and the ordinances of the city of Santa Cruz, and in pursuance of and in conformity with a vote of more than two thirds of all the qualified electors of said city of Santa Cruz, voting at a special election duly and legally called and held and conducted in said city as provided under said act, on Tuesday, the 13th day of March, 1894, notice thereof having been duly and legally given and published in the manner as required by law, and after the result of said election had been canvassed, found, and declared in the manner and as required by law.

184 U. S.

"And it is hereby certified and declared that all acts, conditions, and things required by law to be done precedent to and in the issue of said bonds, have been properly done, happened and performed, in legal and due form, as required by law. This *bond ceases[305] to bear interest when due, unless presented for payment."

The parties having by written stipulation waived a jury, the case was determined in the circuit court upon a special finding of facts. The result was a judgment against the city for the full amount of the bonds and coupons held by the plaintiff, except as to three coupons transferred to him by the Northern Counties Investment Trust Company. 89 Fed. 619. That judgment was reversed in the circuit court of appeals with directions to enter judgment for the city. 39 C. C. A. 106, 98 Fed. 387. The case is here upon writ of certiorari granted upon the application of the plaintiff Waite.

The propositions advanced on behalf of the city are numerous, but most of them are involved in the general contention that there was a want of power in the city to issue the bonds in question, and that nothing occurred that could estop it from disputing its liability even to those who may have purchased them in good faith and for value.

The circumstances under which the bonds were executed should be first set forth. That being done, we will take up such of the questions raised by the assignments of error as are necessary to be determined.

On the 16th day of September, 1889, the city of Santa Cruz entered into a contract with certain persons doing business under the name of Coffin & Stanton, which recited that the former desired to acquire, and the latter desired to furnish, a waterworks system for the city,—the city agreeing to grant to Coffin & Stanton a franchise for the construction of waterworks in Santa Cruz, and that firm agreeing to construct or cause to be constructed a waterworks system in conformity with specifications theretofore made by the city engineer. The city agreed to purchase the waterworks after they were constructed, and pay for them the sum of $320,000. It was also stipulated that Coffin & Stanton should cause to be organized a corporation to be known as the City Water Company of Santa Cruz, to which the above franchise should be assigned. It was further provided that the water company should execute a first mortgage upon all its properties, rights, titles, and franchises then owned or thereafter *acquired, for the[306] payment of bonds (not exceeding $400,000 in amount, except as provided in the contract) to be issued to Coffin & Stanton as the work of construction progressed, they to make all necessary cash advances. The contract provided: "And when said water company shall have fully completed said waterworks, then said water company shall convey absolutely to said city of Santa Cruz all its property, rights, titles, and franchises to have and to hold forever, subject only to the mortgage and to the deed of trust or escrow hereinbefore mentioned. . . . And said water company shall commence operation on the construction of said waterworks as soon as practicable, and shall have the whole completed within one year of such commencement."

Pursuant to the above agreement the city, by ordinance, granted to Coffin & Stanton a franchise and right of way to construct the waterworks, and such franchise and rights were assigned by them to the City Water Company, incorporated September 27th, 1889.

Under date of May 1st, 1890, the water company, pursuant to that agreement, executed a mortgage or deed of trust to secure the payment of 400 bonds of $1,000 each. That was done in order to obtain money for the construction of the proposed waterworks.

Subsequently, March 29th, 1892, the water company executed a deed to the city, which recited that the waterworks has been fully completed to the satisfaction of the city and had been accepted by it. By that deed the water company conveyed its entire property, rights, power, privileges, and franchises to the city, to have and to hold the same, "subject, however, to said mortgage or deed of trust, and all the obligations thereby imposed, which bonds, mortgage, or deed of trust, and obligations, the party of the second part [the city] agrees to pay and perform."

When the act of March 1st, 1893, referred to in the bonds, was passed, as well as at the time the bonds were issued, the Constitution of California provided that "no county, city, town, township, board of education, or school district shall incur any indebtedness or liability in any manner, or for any [307] purpose, exceeding *in any year the income and revenue provided for it for such year, without the assent of two thirds of the qualified electors thereof, voting at an election to be held for that purpose, nor unless, before or at the time of incurring such indebtedness, provision shall be made for the collection of an annual tax sufficient to pay the interest on such indebtedness as it falls due, and also provision to constitute a sinking fund for the payment of the principal thereof on or before maturity, which shall not exceed forty years from the time of contracting the same. Any indebtedness or liability incurred contrary to this provision shall be void." Art. 11, § 18.

The ordinance referred to in the bonds—the one of the 26th day of February, 1894 (No. 314), calling a special election of the qualified electors of the city to determine the question of refunding "the bonded indebtedness of said city and issuing bonds therefor, and providing for the payment of the same"—stated that "the outstanding indebtedness evidenced by bonds of said city," which "it is proposed to refund," consisted of (1) 450 bonds, of $500 each, issued in 1889, the proceeds of which had been used "in the purchase and construction of the city waterworks;" (2) 89 first-mortgage bonds of the water company, of date May 1st, 1890, "which said bonds outstanding were, at the time of the conveyance by the City Water Company to the city of Santa Cruz of the property known as the city waterworks, and now are, a valid lien and charge upon the property known as the city waterworks, and become thereby a part of the bonded indebtedness of the city;" and (3) 65 municipal improvement bonds of $500 each, dated September 23d, 1897, and 26 municipal improvement bonds of $250 each of like date.

The ordinance provided for an issue of 360 bonds of $1,000 each, payable to bearer, and carrying 4 per cent interest, payable annually, and which should be of the character known as "serials."

The same ordinance provided for a special election on the question of refunding the above bonds, and prescribed the form of the refunding bonds. That form contained the same recitals, word for word, that appear in the extract from the bonds found *at the [308] beginning of this opinion. The ordinance thus concluded: "§ 12. If, upon the canvass of the returns of said election, it shall be found that two thirds of the voters thereat have voted in favor of refunding said indebtedness, issuing bonds therefor, and providing for the payment of the same, then and thereafter said indebtedness shall be refunded, bonds issued therefor, and provision made for the payment of the same in the manner herein and as by law provided."

On the same day the city council passed an ordinance, No. 315, which provided for notice of the special election so ordered, such notice to describe fully the indebtedness to be refunded. The required notice was given and contained the same description of the city indebtedness proposed to be refunded as was given in ordinance No. 314. The election was held on the day fixed by the ordinance and notice. The result was that 538 votes were cast in favor of, and 57 votes against, the proposed refunding of the city's indebtedness. So that more than two thirds of the qualified electors voting were in favor of refunding the then "bonded indebtedness of the said city," including the above 89 first-mortgage bonds issued by the water company and which the city had assumed to pay when it purchased and took the deed for the waterworks.

On the 26th day of March, 1894, the city passed ordinance No. 320, which provided for refunding the indebtedness and issuing bonds therefor in accordance with the will of the voters at the special election.

That ordinance provided that each bond should contain the same recitals as those set forth in ordinance No. 314 and in the above notice of the special election, as well as this further recital: "And it is hereby certified and declared that all acts, conditions, and things required by law to be done precedent to and in the issue of said bonds, have been properly done, happened, and performed in legal and due form and as required by law."

By the same ordinance provision was made for giving notice by publication of the purpose of the mayor and common council to sell the bonds to the highest bidder, and inviting sealed bids from purchasers, and for levying and collecting an annual tax for forty years to pay such bonds and coupons, [309]—the moneys ^{so} collected to constitute a sinking fund for the payment of the principal.

In the finding of facts it was also stated that on April 11th, 1892, William T. Jeter was duly elected mayor of Santa Cruz, and J. Howard Bailey, J. F. Hoffman, E. G. Green, and F. W. Lucas, on the same day, members of the common council of the city. The persons so elected as mayor and members of the common council qualified for their respective offices within ten days after election, and entered upon the duties of their respective offices. Section 3 of the act of the legislature of California, entitled "An Act to Reincorporate the City of Santa Cruz," approved March 11th, 1876, provides that the mayor and common council of said city shall hold their offices for a term of two years, and until their successors are duly elected and qualified. On the 9th day of April, 1894, Robert Effey was duly elected mayor of defendant city to succeed William T. Jeter, and duly qualified as such between 11 o'clock A. M. and 2 o'clock P. M. of April 16th, 1894; and Henry G. Ensell, John Howard Bailey, J. D. Maher, and Frank K. Roberts were, on April 9th, 1894, elected members of the common council of the city all of them duly qualifying as such before the meeting of the council of the city held April 16, 1894. The persons so elected mayor and members of the common council on April 9th, 1894, with the exception of Bailey, who was re-elected councilman, did not actually enter upon their duties as officers until May 7th, 1894, and Jeter, Bailey, Hoffmann, Green, and Lucas continued to act publicly as mayor and members of the common council of the city until May 7th, 1894, without protest from any person, and held seven meetings of the council between and including the date of April 16th, 1894, and May 7th, 1894.

All of the bonds and coupons sued on were in the form and bore date and were signed and attested as alleged in the complaint, but some of them were signed by William T. Jeter on April 16th, 1894, after the qualification of his successor. Whether those sued on were among those signed by Jeter after the qualification of his successor does not appear.

On April 16th, 1894, to which date the common council of the city had regularly adjourned, Jeter, acting as mayor, and [310] Bailey, ^{Hoffmann}, Green, and Lucas being present and acting as the common council of the city, and no bids having been received for the purchase of the refunding bonds issued by the city under ordinance 320, the proposition of Coffin & Stanton to take all the bonds, dated February 27th, 1894, was accepted, upon the condition that they should furnish satisfactory security for the faithful performance of the agreement contained in that proposition.

Jeter as mayor, and Lucas, Bailey, Hoffmann, and Green, as members of the common council, publicly met on April 23d, 1894, pursuant to adjournment of the common council, and, assuming to act as mayor and members of the common council of said defendant city, without protest or opposition from anyone, accepted and approved a bond presented by Coffin & Stanton for the faithful performance of their proposed agreement, and directed the clerk of the defendant city to deliver to them the above refunding bonds, and all of them were in accordance with such direction delivered to Coffin & Stanton on April 24th, 1894.

All of the nine bonds and coupons sued on matured April 15th, 1895, and no part of them has been paid.

Coffin & Stanton never complied with the agreement upon which the bonds and coupons were delivered to them, and the defendant city never received any consideration on account of the issuing of the bonds, other than the promise of Coffin & Stanton to assume the payment of the bonds mentioned in their agreement.

It thus appears that the construction of the waterworks was brought about by the agreement between the city and Coffin & Stanton, under which the city was to purchase such works when they were completed;

That the waterworks were completed and were accepted by the city, and the city agreed to assume and pay the outstanding bonds issued by the water company in order to provide money with which to construct the waterworks, such bonds being secured (as was provided for by the agreement between the city and Coffin & Stanton) by a first mortgage upon the franchise and property of the water company;

*That the city by ordinance proposed to [311] refund its indebtedness under the act of 1893, describing in such ordinance 89 of the above first-mortgage bonds of the water company which it had assumed to pay, and stating therein that those bonds were a valid lien and charge upon the property known as the city waterworks, and became thereby a part of the bonded indebtedness of the city;

That a special election was ordered to determine whether the qualified electors approved the proposed refunding;

That notice of such election was given, which described the bonds proposed to be refunded and which stated that the above 89 bonds had been assumed by the city as part of the purchase price of the waterworks, and were a valid lien upon such works;

That more than two thirds of the qualified voters approved the proposed refunding, including the above 89 first-mortgage bonds;

That the city directed that any refunding bonds issued should state, upon their face, by way of recital, that they were issued under and in pursuance of the above act of 1893, and in conformity with the Constitution of California, the ordinance of the city, and with a vote of more than two thirds of all the qualified voters of the city at a special election duly and legally called, held and conducted as provided by the act of 1893; and,

That the above bonds should upon their face further certify and declare that all acts, conditions, and things required by law to be done precedent to and in the issue of the bonds had been properly done, happened, and performed, in legal and due form, as required by law.

The circuit court of appeals was of opinion that purchasers of the bonds were bound to take notice of the ordinances of the city, and that the entire issue of $360,000 in refunding bonds was invalid by reason of its including the $89,000 in bonds executed by the water company, the payment of which was assumed by the city. It reversed the judgment of the circuit court with directions to enter judgment for the city on the bonds.

1. The refunding act of March 1st, 1893, amendatory of the act approved March 15th, 1883, is as follows:

[312] “§ 1. That section one of the above entitled act is hereby amended to read as follows: ‘§ 1. That whenever any incorporated city or town, other than cities of the first class in this state, has an outstanding indebtedness, evidenced by bonds and warrants thereof, the common council, board of trustees, or other governing body thereof, shall have power to submit to the qualified electors of such city or town, at an election to be held for that purpose, the question of refunding such indebtedness. Said election shall be called and held in the same manner in which other elections are held in such city or town. The notice of such election shall recite the indebtedness to be refunded, together with the denomination, character, time of payment, rate of interest, as well as all other details of the bonds proposed to be issued. Such bonds shall be of the character known as “serials,” one fortieth of the principal being payable each year, together with interest due on all sums unpaid. Said bonds may be issued in denominations not to exceed $1,000, nor less than $100; principal and interest being payable in gold coin or lawful money of the United States, and either at the office of the treasurer of such city or town, or at a designated bank situated in the cities of San Francisco, New York, Boston, or Chicago. Interest upon the same shall not exceed 6 per cent per annum, and may be payable semiannually. Said bonds shall be sold in the manner provided by such city council, or other governing body, to the highest bidder for not less than their face value, in the same character of money in which they were payable. The proceeds of such sale shall be placed in the treasury to the credit of the funding fund, and shall be applied only for the purpose of refunding the indebtedness for which they have been issued. Said common council, or other governing body, shall, at the time of fixing the general tax levy for each year, and in the same manner for such tax levy provided, levy and collect annually, each year, sufficient money to pay one fortieth part of the principal of such bonds, and also the annual interest upon the portion remaining unpaid.’

“§ 2. That section 2 of said act be amended so as to read as follows: ‘§ 2. Whenever sufficient money is in the funding fund, in the hands of the treasurer, to redeem one or more of the outstanding bonds proposed to be refunded, he shall publish once a week for two weeks in some newspaper of general circulation published in such city or town, if there be any, a notice to the effect that he is prepared to pay such bond or bonds (giving the number thereof), and if the same are not presented for redemption within thirty days after the first publication of such notice, the interest on such bonds will cease. He shall, at the same time, deposit in the postoffice a copy of such notice, inclosed in a sealed envelope, with the postage paid thereon, addressed to the owner or owners of such bond or bonds, at the postoffice address of such owner or owners, as shown by the record thereof kept in the treasurer’s office. If such bond or bonds are not presented within the time specified in such notice, the interest thereon shall then cease, and the amount due be set aside for the payment of the same, whenever presented. All redemption of bonds shall be made according to the priority in the order of their issuance, beginning at the first number. Whenever such outstanding bonds are surrendered and paid, the treasurer shall proceed to cancel the same by indorsing on the face thereof the amount for which they are received, the word “canceled” and the date of cancelation. He shall also keep a record of such bonds so redeemed, and shall make a report of the same to the common council, or other governing body of such city or town, at least once a month, accompanying the same therewith by the bonds which have been taken up and canceled.’

“§ 3. That § 3 of said act be amended so as to read as follows: ‘§ 3. All moneys which shall remain in said funding fund after all outstanding bonds as were proposed to be refunded have been taken up and canceled, shall be paid into the general fund of such city or town, and become a part thereof.’

“§ 4. This act shall take effect and be in force immediately after its passage.”

One of the contentions of the city is that the words “outstanding indebtedness evidenced by bonds and warrants thereof,” in this act, do not embrace the 89 bonds executed by the water company. Those bonds, although not executed by the city, *certainly constituted a part of its outstanding indebtedness, for the reason that the city had assumed to pay them. Both the city authorities and the qualified electors so regarded the matter. The city’s assumption of the bonds imposed as much obligation upon it to pay them as if it had itself directly executed and issued them. It could not acquire complete ownership of the waterworks without paying for them, and it took a deed for the waterworks expressly subject to a valid lien in favor of the water company's first-mortgage bonds, including the above $9 bonds. In every substantial sense, therefore, these bonds were part of the city's outstanding bonded indebtedness. Such is the argument made in behalf of the plaintiff, and its force is recognized. But whether this view rests upon a sound construction of the act of 1893, we need not now say. That question is left open for determination when it must be decided, and our judgment is placed upon another ground, to be now stated.

2. The refunding bonds in suit, as we have seen, recited that they were issued under, in pursuance of, and in conformity with, the act of 1893, the Constitution of California, and the ordinances of the city of Santa Cruz, as well as in conformity with the vote of two thirds of all the qualified electors of the city, voting at a special election duly called, held, and conducted, as provided by the above act; also, that all acts, conditions, and things required by law to be done precedent to and in the issuing of the bonds had been properly done and performed, in legal and due form, as required by law. As between the city and a bona fide purchaser of such bonds, can the city be heard to say that the bonds were not of the class embraced by the words in the act of 1893, "outstanding indebtedness evidenced by the bonds and warrants thereof?" Is the city estopped to dispute the truth of the recitals in its refunding bonds, there being nothing in such recitals indicating or suggesting that they were not true?

The city contends that it is not thus estopped, because the ordinances under which the special election was held disclosed the fact that the $9 first-mortgage bonds of the water company were included in the proposed refunding; that purchasers were bound to take notice of the provisions of [315] such ordinances; and *that the ordinances, being examined, would have disclosed the fact that the bonds, although assumed by the city, were executed by the water company, and not by the city. Let us see whether a purchaser of the bonds was bound to know what those ordinances contained.

The first case to which we will refer is that of Hackett v. Ottawa, 99 U. S. 86, 95, 25 L. ed. 363, 365. The municipal bonds sued on in that case were issued by the city of Ottawa, Illinois. They contained recitals to the effect that they were issued by virtue of the charter of the city empowering it to borrow money, issue bonds therefor, and pledge its credit for their payment, and in accordance with certain ordinances of which the titles and dates were given. The bonds stated upon their face that one of those ordinances, passed June 15th, 1869, was entitled "An Ordinance to Provide for a Loan for Municipal Purposes," and the other, "An Ordinance to Carry into Effect the Ordinance of June 15th, 1869, Entitled 'An Ordinance for a Loan for Municipal Purposes.'" The principal defense was that the recital as to a loan for municipal purposes was untrue; that the bonds were not issued for municipal or corporate purposes, but as a simple donation to a private corporation whose business was in nowise connected with or under the control of the city; which facts, it was contended, appeared upon the faces of the ordinances themselves.

The Constitution of Illinois provided that counties, townships, school districts, cities, towns, and villages "may be vested with power to assess and collect taxes for corporate purposes." But this court did not deem it necessary to determine what were corporate purposes within the meaning of the Illinois Constitution, saying: "A direct decision of that question does not seem to be essential to the disposition of this case. We content ourselves with stating the propositions which counsel have urged upon our consideration, and without expressing any settled opinion as to what are corporate purposes within the meaning of the Illinois Constitution, we pass to another point, which, in our judgment, is fatal to the defense. It is consistent with the pleas filed by the city that the testator of plaintiff in error purchased the bonds before maturity for a valuable *consideration, without any [316] notice of want of authority in the city to issue them, and without any information as to the objects to which their proceeds were to be applied, beyond that furnished by the recited titles of the ordinances. For all corporate purposes, as we have seen, the council, if so instructed by a majority of voters attending at an election for that purpose, had undoubted authority, under the charter of the city, to borrow money upon its credit and to issue bonds therefor. The bonds in suit, by their recital of the titles of the ordinances under which they were issued, in effect, assured the purchaser that they were to be used for municipal purposes, with the previous sanction, duly given, of a majority of the legal voters of the city. If he would have been bound, under some circumstances, to take notice, at his peril, of the provisions of the ordinances, he was relieved from any responsibility or duty in that regard by reason of the representation, upon the face of the bonds, that the ordinances under which they were issued were ordinances 'providing for a loan for municipal purposes.' Such a representation by the constituted authorities of the city, under its corporate seal, would naturally avert suspicion of bad faith upon their part, and induce the purchaser to omit an examination of the ordinances themselves. It was, substantially, a declaration by the city with the consent of a majority of its legal voters, that purchasers need not examine the ordinances, since their title indicated a loan for municipal purposes. The city is therefore estopped, by its own representations, to say, as against a bona fide holder of the bonds, that they were not issued or used for municipal or corporate purposes. It cannot now be heard, as against him, to dispute their validity. Had the bonds, upon their face, made no reference whatever to the charter of the city, or recited only those provisions which empowered the council to borrow money upon the credit of the city and to issue bonds therefor, the liability of the city to him could not be questioned. Much less can it be questioned, in view of the additional recital in the bonds, that they were issued in pursuance of an ordinance providing for a loan for municipal purposes; that is, for purposes authorized by its charter. Marshall County v. Schenck, 5 Wall. 772, 18 L. ed. 556. It *would be the grossest injustice, and in conflict with all the past utterances of this court, to permit the city, having power under some circumstances to issue negotiable securities, to escape liability upon the ground of the falsity of its own representations, made through official agents and under its corporate seal, as to the purposes with which these bonds were issued. Whether such representations were made inadvertently, or with the intention, by the use of inaccurate titles of ordinances, to avert inquiry as to the real object in issuing the bonds, and thereby facilitate their negotiation in the money markets of the country, in either case, the city, both upon principle and authority, is cut off from any such defense." The same principles were announced in Ottawa v. First Nat. Bank, 105 U. S. 342, 343, 26 L. ed. 1127.

A case directly in point is that of Evansville v. Dennett, 161 U. S. 434, 443, 40 L. ed. 760, 764, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613, 617. That was an action on negotiable bonds payable to bearer and issued by the city of Evansville, Indiana, in payment of a subscription of stock in a railroad company. Each bond recited that it was issued in payment of such subscription, "made in pursuance of an act of the legislature of the state of Indiana, and ordinances of the city council of said city, passed in pursuance thereof." There were other negotiable bonds involved in that suit, which were issued by the city, each reciting that it was issued by virtue of the city's charter, by virtue of a certain act of assembly (its title and date being given), and by virtue of certain resolutions of the city council of named dates; and that the faith, credit, real estate, revenues, and all resources of the city were irrevocably pledged for the payment of principal and interest. It was contended in that case that the ordinances of the city, if examined, would show that the election held in the city upon the question of issuing the bonds was not legally held, and therefore that the bonds were issued without authority and were void. This court, upon a review of former decisions, said: "As, therefore, the recitals in the bonds import compliance with the city's charter, purchasers for value having no notice of the nonperformance of the conditions precedent were not bound to go behind the statute conferring the power to [318] subscribe, and to *ascertain, by an examination of the ordinances and records of the city council, whether those conditions had, in fact, been performed. With such recitals before them they had the right to assume that the circumstances existed which authorized the city to exercise the authority given by the legislature."

The only other case to which we need refer upon this point is Gunnison County v. E. H. Rollins & Sons, 173 U. S. 255, 262, 274, 275, 43 L. ed. 689, 693, 698, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390, 392, 397. That was a suit upon negotiable coupons attached to negotiable bonds executed by the board of commissioners of Gunnison county, Colorado, and which recited that they were issued "in exchange at par for valid floating indebtedness of the county outstanding prior to September 2, 1882, under and by virtue of and in full conformity with the provisions of an act of the general assembly of the state of Colorado entitled 'An Act to Enable the Several Counties of the State to Fund their Floating Indebtedness,' approved February 21, 1881; that 'all the requirements of law have been fully complied with by the proper officers in the issuing of this bond;' that the total amount of the issue did 'not exceed the limit prescribed by the Constitution of the state of Colorado;' and that such issue had been authorized by a vote of a majority of the duly qualified electors of the county, voting on the question at a general election duly held in the county on the 7th day of November, 1882."

The question presented was whether such recitals estopped the county from asserting against a bona fide holder for value, that the bonds created an indebtedness in excess of the limit prescribed by the Constitution of Colorado. The principal defense was that the purchaser of the bonds was bound to take notice of the orders and records of the county commissioners authorizing the issue of the refunding bonds, and that an examination of those orders would have disclosed the fact that the bonds were in excess of the limit prescribed by the Constitution of the state.

After a review of previous cases, namely, Buchanan v. Litchfield, 102 U. S. 278, 290, 292, 26 L. ed. 138, 140, 141; Orleans v. Pratt, 99 U. S. 676, 25 L. ed. 404; Northern Nat. Bank v. Porter Twp. 110 U. S. 608, 616, 619, 28 L. ed. 258, 261, 262, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 254; Dixon County v. Field, 111 U. S. 83, 92-94, 28 L. ed. 360, 363, 364, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 315; *Lake County v. Graham, 130 U. S. 674, 680, 683, 684, 32 L. ed. 1065, 1067, 1068, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; Chaffee County v. Potter, 142 U. S. 355, 363, 364, 366, 35 L. ed. 1040, 1043, 1044, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216; and Sulliff v. Lake County, 147 U. S. 230, 235, 237, 238, 37 L. ed. 145, 149, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318,—this court held that the Gunnison Case was controlled by the decision in Chaffee County v. Potter, which was a suit on coupons of negotiable municipal bonds that contained the same recitals as were made in the Gunnison county bonds. We said: "It was expressly decided in the Chaffee County Case that the statute under which the bonds there in suit (the bonds here in suit being of the same class), authorized the county commissioners to determine whether the proposed issue of bonds would in fact exceed the limit prescribed by the Constitution and the statute; and that the recital in the bond to the effect that such determination had been made, and that the constitutional limitation had not been exceeded, taken in connection with the fact that the bonds themselves did not show such recital to be untrue, estopped the county, under the law, from saying that the recital was not true. We decline to overrule Chaffee County v. Potter, and upon the authority of that case, and without re-examining or enlarging upon the grounds upon which the decision therein proceeded, we adjudge that as against the plaintiff the county of Gunnison is estopped to question the recital in the bonds in question to the effect that they did not create a debt in excess of the constitutional limit, and were issued by virtue of and in conformity with the statute of 1881, and in full compliance with the requirements of law." Again: "It is insisted with much earnestness that the principles we have announced render it impossible for a state, by a constitutional provision, to guard against excessive municipal indebtedness. By no means. If a state constitution, in fixing a limit for indebtedness of that character, should prescribe a definite rule or test for determining whether that limit has already been exceeded or is being exceeded by any particular issue of bonds, all who purchase such bonds would do so subject to that rule or test, whatever might be the hardship in the case of those who purchased them in the open market in good faith. Indeed, it is entirely competent for a state to provide by statute that all obligations, in whatever form executed by a municipality existing under its [320] laws, shall be subject to any *defense that would be allowed in cases of non-negotiable instruments. But for reasons that everyone understands, no such statutes have been passed. Municipal obligations executed under such a statute could not be readily disposed of to those who invest in such securities."

Applying to the present case the principles heretofore announced by this court, is there any escape from the conclusion that the city of Santa Cruz is estopped to dispute the truth of the recitals in the bonds in suit, which stated that they were issued in pursuance of the act of 1893 as well as in conformity with the Constitution of California authorizing it to incur indebtedness or liability with the assent of two thirds of the qualified voters at an election held for that purpose, and that all acts, conditions, and things required by law to be done precedent to issuing the bonds had been properly done and performed in due and lawful form as required by law? We think not.

The city of Santa Cruz had power, under the Constitution and laws of California, to refund its outstanding indebtedness, evidenced by bonds and warrants. The nature and extent of such indebtedness were matters peculiarly within the knowledge of its constituted authorities. When, therefore, the refunding bonds in suit were issued with the recitals therein contained, the city thereby represented that it issued them under, and in pursuance of, and in conformity with, the act of 1893 and the Constitution of the state. As nothing on the face of the bonds suggested that such representations were false, purchasers had the right to assume that they were true, especially in view of the broad recital that everything required by law to be done and performed before executing the bonds had been done and performed by the city. As there was power in the city to issue refunding bonds to be used in discharging its outstanding indebtedness of a specified kind, purchasers were entitled to rely upon the truth of the recitals in the bonds that they were of the class which the act of 1893 authorized to be refunded. They were under no duty to go further and examine the ordinances of the city to ascertain whether the recitals were false. On the contrary, purchasers could assume that the ordinances would disclose nothing in conflict with the recitals in the bonds.

*The circuit court having found—and as [321] we think correctly—that the "assignors" of the plaintiff, that is, the parties who placed the bonds in his hands, were bona fide purchasers, without notice of anything affecting the truth of the recitals in them, our conclusion is that the city cannot escape liability by reason of the fact, disclosed by its ordinances, that the $9 first-mortgage bonds of the water company assumed by the city were included in its refunding scheme.

3. It is said, however, that the act of 1893 was repugnant to the Constitution of California, in that it is a special law, relating to a subject concerning which that Constitution required all laws to be general. In Los Angeles v. Teed, 112 Cal. 319, 328, 329, 44 Pac. 580, 583, the validity of the act of 1883 and that of 1893 amendatory thereof having been questioned by counsel, the supreme court of California said: "On March 15th, 1883, an act was passed (Stat. 1883, p. 370) authorizing the governing body of every municipal corporation, other than cities of the first class, to fund or refund any indebtedness of the corporation by a vote of four fifths of their number. That act authorized the issue of bonds, to be exchanged for any existing indebtedness, or to be sold for money to be applied to the payment of such indebtedness. It is contended that this act violates the provisions of the Constitution against special legislation. But there can be no question that the act classifying municipal corporations is constitutional (Pritchett v. Stanislaus County, 73 Cal. 310, 14 Pac. 795), and that in matters pertaining to municipal organization the legislature may make different regulations for the different classes so created. Pasadena v. Stimson, 91 Cal. 249, 27 Pac. 604. The subject-matter of the act in question—the funding of municipal indebtedness—is 'peculiarly a matter pertaining to municipal organizations, and still more peculiarly a matter as to which cities of large population require different provision from that suitable to cities or towns of small population.' The act is, therefore, not obnoxious to that objection." Referring to the act of 1893, the court said: "It is contended that this act also is invalid, as special legislation; but what we have said as to the act of 1883 on this question applies equally to this act." Nothing further need be said upon this question.

[322] *4. Another defense is that Jeter, who signed the bonds, was not the rightful mayor of Santa Cruz. The facts bearing upon this point have been heretofore stated and need not be repeated. The circuit court said:

"It is claimed by the defendant that, as it is not shown that the bonds sued on were signed by William T. Jeter before the qualification of his successor in the office of mayor, the plaintiff has failed to prove that the bonds were signed by an officer authorized to do so, and they must therefore be held void, even in the hands of bona fide purchasers, under the rule declared in Coler v. Cleburne, 131 U. S. 162, 33 L. ed. 146, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720. That case is not authority for the proposition that the action of a de facto officer in signing bonds would not be as binding upon the municipality for which he assumes to act as that of an officer de jure; and it seems clear to me that if Jeter was the de facto mayor when he signed the bonds sued on, then such signing by him was a compliance with the ordinance requiring them to be signed by the mayor; and so, also, if he was de facto mayor, and those assuming to act as the common council of the defendant were de facto members of the common council at the time when he and they assumed as mayor and common council to accept the proposition of Coffin & Stanton in relation to the bonds, and directed their delivery to that firm, then such acts upon their part are to be treated, so far as concerns the public and third persons having an interest in what was done by them, as the acts of the de jure mayor and common council of the city. The rule that the acts of a de facto officer are valid as to the public and third persons is firmly established, although it is sometimes difficult to determine whether the evidence is such as to warrant a finding that a particular act or acts, the legality of which may be in issue in a given case, were those of a de facto officer. The contention of the defendant is that Jeter was not the de facto mayor at the time of the signing and delivery of the bonds, nor were the old members of the common council, who continued to act as such after the qualification of their successors, and until after the bonds were delivered to Coffin & Stanton, de facto members of the common council of defendant, after the qualification of their successors. Whether one

[323] was or was *not a de facto officer at the time when he assumed to perform duties belonging to a public office, is a mixed question of law and of fact. State ex rel. Van Amringe v. Taylor, 108 N. C. 196, 12 L. R. A. 202, 12 S. E. 1005; United States v. Alexander, 46 Fed. 728. And in passing upon the question presented by defendant's contention upon this point, it is well to first consider what facts are sufficient to constitute a de facto officer. A de facto officer may be defined as one whose title is not good in law, but who is in fact in the unobstructed possession of an office and discharging its duties in full view of the public, in such manner and under such circumstances as not to present the appearance of being an intruder or usurper. When a person is found thus openly in the occupation of a public office, and discharging its duties, third persons having occasion to deal with him in his capacity as such officer are not required to investigate his title, but may safely act upon the assumption that he is a rightful officer. Thus it is said in Petersilea v. Stone, 119 Mass. 468, 20 Am. Rep. 337: "Third persons, from the nature of the case, cannot always investigate the right of one assuming to hold an important office, even so far as to see that he has color of title to it, by virtue of some appointment or election. If they see him publicly exercising its authority, if they ascertain that this is generally acquiesced in, they are entitled to treat him as such officer, and, if they employ him as such, should not be subjected to the danger of having his acts collaterally called in question."

After referring to Jhons v. People, 25 Mich. 503; Atty. Gen. v. Crocker, 138 Mass. 214; Hamlin v. Kassafer, 15 Or. 456, 15 Pac. 778; State ex rel. Knowlton v. Williams, 5 Wis. 308, 68 Am. Dec. 65, and Magneau v. Fremont, 30 Neb. 843, 9 L. R. A. 786, 47 N. W. 280, the circuit court said: "The foregoing cases sufficiently illustrate the principle upon which courts proceed in determining whether one who has assumed to act as a public officer was at the time an officer de facto, and it only remains to apply the rule which they establish to the facts which have been already stated as appearing in the present case, and in doing so there is but one conclusion that can be reached, and that is that Jeter was the de facto mayor of the city of Santa Cruz, on the 16th day of April, 1894, at the time when he signed the bonds in question, and he and the persons who *as-

We are entirely satisfied with the treatment of this question by the circuit court, and deem it unnecessary to make any additional observations.

5. All of the bonds and coupons sued on were duly transferred to the plaintiff before the commencement of this action. It is agreed that he had at the bringing of this action the legal title to all of them, although he paid no money consideration for the transfer, and that the bonds and coupons were transferred to him for collection only.

It is contended by the defendant that it does not appear that the circuit court had jurisdiction, since the citizenship of the persons who put the bonds in the plaintiff's hands for collection is not set forth.

Prior to the passage of the judiciary act of August 13th, 1888, chap. 866, 25 Stat. at L. 433, it was the settled rule that the holder of a negotiable instrument payable to bearer was not an "assignee" thereof within the meaning of the judiciary act of 1789, chap. 20, or the act of March 3d, 1875, chap. 137, but was the holder in virtue of an original and direct promise moving from the maker to the bearer, and could sue without reference to the citizenship of the original or any intermediate holder. Thompson v. Perrine, 106 U. S. 589, 592, 593, 27 L. ed. 298, 300, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564, 568.

The above act of 1888 did not change this rule, but it made some alteration of former statutes. Its 1st section excluded from the cognizance of any circuit or district court of the United States "any suit, except upon foreign bills of exchange, to recover the contents of any promissory note or other chose in action in favor of any assignee, or of any subsequent holder if such instrument be payable to bearer and be not made by any corporation, unless such suit might have been prosecuted in such court to recover the said contents if no assignment or transfer had been made." 25 Stat. at L. 434, chap. 866.

The defendant, the city of Santa Cruz, is a corporation within the meaning of that section. Loeb v. Columbia Twp. 179 U. S. 472, 485, 45 L. ed. 280, 288, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. [325] 174. *So that, in respect of the bonds and coupons here in suit—they being payable to bearer and having been made by a corporation—the complaint need not have disclosed the citizenship of any previous holder of the bonds. It shows—and nothing more was necessary so far as citizenship was concerned—a diversity of citizenship as between the holder of the legal title to the bonds and coupons and the defendant city.

But the act of 1888 did not repeal the 5th section of the act of March 3d, 1875, chap. 137 (Lehigh Min. & Mfg. Co. v. Kelly, 160 U. S. 327, 339, 40 L. ed. 444, 449, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 307; Lake County v. Dudley, 173 U. S. 243, 251, 43 L. ed. 684, 688, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398), which provides "that if, in any suit, commenced in a circuit court or removed from a state court to a circuit court of the United States, it shall appear to the satisfaction of said circuit court, any time after such suit has been brought or removed thereto, that such suit does not really and substantially involve a dispute or controversy properly within the jurisdiction of said circuit court, or that the parties to said suit have been improperly or collusively made or joined, either as plaintiffs or defendants, for the purpose of creating a case cognizable or removable under this act, the said circuit court shall proceed no further therein, but shall dismiss the suit or remand it to the court from which it was removed as justice may require, and shall make such order as to costs as shall be just." 18 Stat. at L. 470, 472.

Does the present case come within this provision of the act of 1875 in respect of any cause of action embraced in it? It does not, if the only objection to the jurisdiction of the circuit court is that the plaintiff was invested with the legal title to the bonds and coupons simply for purposes of collection. But if the transfer was made for the purpose, in any way, of creating a case cognizable in the circuit court, of which it could not otherwise have taken cognizance, then the duty of this court is to take notice of that fact and give effect to the statute of 1875. Metcalf v. Watertown, 128 U. S. 586, 587, 32 L. ed. 543, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 173, and authorities there cited. The jurisdiction of the circuit court, it must be observed, depends equally on the citizenship of the parties and the value of the matter in dispute. If the transferrers of the plaintiff were citizens of states other than California, as they seem to have been, each could have sued in the circuit court, if the *amount in dispute [326] was sufficient; and therefore the transfers in such cases were not a fraud on the jurisdiction of the circuit court, so far as the question of diverse citizenship was concerned. But if the transfer enabled the plaintiff to embrace in his suit a claim or claims against the city of which the circuit court could not have entertained jurisdiction, at the suit of the transferrer, because of the insufficiency of the amount in dispute, then the act of 1875 would apply.

This question was presented and decided in Bernards Twp. v. Stebbins, 109 U. S. 341, 355, 356, 27 L. ed. 956, 962, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252, 262, 263, which was an action on negotiable bonds brought in the Federal court sitting in New Jersey, the plaintiffs being citizens of New York and the defendant a municipal township of New Jersey. Referring to the decision in Williams v. Nottawa, 104 U. S. 209, 26 L. ed. 719, we said that it "establishes that the circuit court of the United States cannot, since the act of 1875, entertain a suit upon municipal bonds payable to bearer, the real owners of which have transferred them to the plaintiffs of record for the sole purpose of suing thereon in the courts of the United States for the benefit of such owners, who could not have sued there in their own names, either by reason of their being citizens of the same state as the defendant, or by reason of the insufficient value of their claims. The principle of that decision is equally applicable to suits in equity to assert equitable rights under such bonds." Again, in the same case: "It follows, that these bills should have been dismissed so far as regarded the bond for $200, owned by a citizen of New York in the first case, and also as to all the bonds owned by citizens of New Jersey in either case. But no valid objection has been shown to the maintenance of these bills, so far as regards those bonds of which the plaintiffs are the bearers, and which are actually owned, either by themselves, or by other citizens of New York or Pennsylvania, to a sufficient amount by each owner to sustain the jurisdiction of the circuit court."

The same view of the act of 1875 was taken in Lake County v. Dudley, 173 U. S. 243, 252, 43 L. ed. 684, 688, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398, 401, which was an action upon coupons payable to bearer. This court said: "From the evidence in this cause of Dudley himself it is certain that he does not in fact own any of the coupons sued on, and that his [327] name, *with his consent, is used in order that the circuit court of the United States may acquire jurisdiction to render judgment for the amount of all the coupons in suit, a large part of which are really owned by citizens of Colorado, who, as between themselves and the board of commissioners of Lake county, could not invoke the jurisdiction of the Federal court, but must have sued, if they sued at all, in one of the courts of Colorado. It is true that some of the coupons in suit are owned by corporations of New Hampshire, who could themselves have sued in the circuit court of the United States. But if part of the coupons in question could not, by reason of the citizenship of the owners, have been sued on in that court, except by uniting the causes of action arising thereon with causes of action upon coupons owned by persons or corporations who might have sued in the circuit court of the United States, and if all the causes of action were thus united for the collusive purpose of making 'a case' cognizable by the Federal court as to every issue made in it, then the act of 1875 must be held to apply, and the trial court, on its own motion, should have dismissed the case without considering the merits."

Does the record show that the circuit court was without jurisdiction of some of the causes of action embraced by the complaint? We say "record," because this court will not reverse a judgment for want of jurisdiction in the circuit court, if its jurisdiction sufficiently appears either from the pleadings or from the record. Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Ramsey, 22 Wall. 322, 22 L. ed. 823; Briges v. Sperry, 95 U. S. 401, 24 L. ed. 390; Robertson v. Cease, 97 U. S. 646, 648, 24 L. ed. 1057, 1058. The complaint here shows diverse citizenship, as between the plaintiff and the defendant city, but the record reveals the fact that the plaintiff included in his suit a large number of claims owned by citizens of states other than California, but which, by reason of their small amount, could not have been sued on separately in the circuit court by the persons or corporations, the real owners, who put them in plaintiff's hands for collection.

Of this there can be no doubt. The entire issue of refunding bonds was 360, of $1,000 each, numbered consecutively from 1 to 360. [328] They were of the character *known as "serials," each series consisting of 9 bonds. The first series included the bonds numbered from 1 to 9, both inclusive, and each succeeding series included the 9 bonds numbered consecutively after those embraced in the next preceding series. The bonds of the first series fell due April 15th, 1895, and were the only bonds that had become due when the present action was brought. The remaining series were made payable in consecutive order on the 15th day of April in each succeeding calendar year thereafter until and including the year 1934. Now this suit is for the amount due on 9 of the 40 bonds of $1,000 each, constituting the first series, and falling due April 16th, 1895, and 282 coupons of $50 each, all which coupons, above the coupon of bond No. 40 of the first series, were attached to bonds that were not yet due. No owner of a $50 coupon attached to a bond not due could have sued upon it in the circuit court. Each coupon of that amount was a complete instrument, capable of supporting a separate action, in the proper forum, without reference to the maturity or ownership of the bonds to which they were attached. Koshkonong v. Burton, 104 U. S. 668, 26 L. ed. 886, and authorities there cited; Elgin v. Marshall, 106 U. S. 578, 27 L. ed. 249, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484. No owner of coupons, aggregating less than $2,000, could have sued in the circuit court by reason of the bonds to which they were attached (but which were not due) exceeding the jurisdictional amount. But when the several owners of $50 coupons which were due, but which coupons were attached to bonds not due, put them all in the hands of the plaintiff for collection, the amount appeared to be sufficient for purposes of jurisdiction. Thus a case was made by which the circuit court was led to take cognizance of certain claims too small for its jurisdiction if they had been severally sued on by the real owners, although there was jurisdiction as to the parties who owned 8 of the 9 bonds in suit. It also appears that one of the transferrers of the plaintiff owned only 1 bond of a $1,000. The value of the matter in dispute, as to him, was only the amount of that bond and 1 coupon of $50.

We adjudge that, as the plaintiff does not own the bonds or coupons in suit, but holds them for collection only, the circuit *court [329] was without jurisdiction to render judgment upon any claim or claims, whether bonds or coupons, held by a single person, firm, or corporation against the city, and which, considered apart from the claim or claims of other owners, could not have been sued on by the real owner by reason of the insufficiency of the amount of such claim or claims.

The specifications of errors assigned cover eighty pages of the elaborate brief of counsel for the city. They present many minor questions that are not discussed in this opinion. But what has been said embraces every point of substance or that requires consideration and disposes of the case upon its real merits.

The judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals is reversed, with directions to the Circuit Court to set aside its judgment and enter such judgment as may be in conformity with this opinion.

Reversed.

L. S. CLARK, Plff. in Err.,
v.

CITY OF TITUSVILLE.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 329-334.)

Constitutional law—license tax—classification of merchants.

An ordinance imposing a license tax upon the merchants of a city, by which they are divided into classes according to the amount of their sales, each class including all whose sales range between a certain minimum and maximum amount, does not violate the equality clause of U. S. Const. 14th Amend., although the result is to make persons in different classes pay different rates, and to make those in the same class pay at a different ratio if the amounts of their sales differ.

[No. 91.]

*Argued and Submitted January 14, 1902.
Decided March 3, 1902.*

NOTE.—As to the validity of class legislation—see State v. Goodwill (W. Va.) 6 L. R. A. 621, and note; and State v. Loomis (Mo.) 21 L. R. A. 789, and note.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (Ky.) 14 L. R. A. 579, and note.

Graduation of license fees according to extent of business.

It has been said to be unquestionably within the discretion of the taxing power to graduate the tax upon an occupation or vocation according to the extent of the business so taxed. State v. Powell, 100 N. C. 525, 6 S. E. 424.

So, a municipality has full power, under a charter authorizing it to license keepers of livery stables, to prescribe a rule that such license should be paid in proportion to the number of carriages kept for hire. Howland v. Chicago, 108 Ill. 500.

And a license tax imposed upon hotels is not unreasonable or oppressive because the amount paid is graduated by the number of rooms which may be devoted to the accommodation of the public. St. Louis v. Bircher, 7 Mo. App. 169.

So, under a charter provision authorizing the city council to license, tax, and regulate all such business and employments as the public good may require, an ordinance requiring a license for carrying on the business of selling goods, wares, and merchandise at a fixed place may graduate the amount or the fee according to the amount of sales or business done. Ex parte Mount, 66 Cal. 448, 6 Pac. 78.

A constitutional requirement that taxation be uniform does not invalidate a license fee imposed upon merchants or dealers in wines and liquors estimated upon the amount of their gross annual sales. Williamsport v. Stearns, 2 Pa. Dist. R. 351, 12 Pa. Co. Ct. 625; Allentown v. Gross, 132 Pa. 319, 19 Atl. 269.

And a tax upon vendors of merchandise, graduated according to the amount of annual sales, is not unconstitutional for want of uniformity, whether regarded as a tax on property or on the business of selling. Knisely v. Cotterel, 196 Pa. 614, 50 L. R. A. 86, 40 Atl. 861.

So, a license tax imposed by a municipality on merchants, the amount of which is graduated according to the amount of their monthly sales, is equal, and therefore not unconstitutional. 184 U. S.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Pennsylvania to review a decision affirming a judgment sustaining the constitutionality of an ordinance imposing a license tax. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Eugene Mackey argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Licenses imposed under an ordinance which simply and solely levies a tax for the general revenues of the city, and provides for its collection, are not an exercise of the police power, but of the ordinary power of taxation.

Dill. Mun. Corp. p. 766; Cooley, Const. Lim. 201; Beach, Pub. Corp. § 386; Tiedeman, Mun. Corp. § 123; State, North Hudson County R. Co., Prosecutors, v. Hoboken, 41 N. J. L. 79; St. Louis v. Marine Ins. Co. 47 Mo. 163; State, Benson, Prosecutor, v. Hoboken, 33 N. J. L. 282; Brennan v. Titusville, 153 U. S. 289, 38 L. ed. 719, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 658, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829.

This ordinance of the city of Titusville, tional as it applies uniformly to all persons in the same category. Sacramento v. Crocker, 16 Cal. 119.

Nor is a license tax dividing merchants into classes according to the amount of their gross sales, and graduating the tax accordingly, void for want of uniformity. Williamsport v. Wenner, 172 Pa. 173, 33 Atl. 544.

This same objection was made in the supreme court of Pennsylvania to the ordinance considered in CLARK v. TITUSVILLE, but was held not well taken, although it is plain that the result is to make persons in different classes pay different rates, and to make those in the same class pay at a different ratio if the amount of their sales differs. Com. use of Titusville v. Clark, 195 Pa. 634, 46 Atl. 286.

But a license fee imposed upon merchants, which is created by adopting the classification made by the appraisers of mercantile taxes, is void for want of uniformity, where the classification adopted exempts persons whose annual sales do not reach a certain amount. Williamsport v. Stearns, 2 Pa. Dist. R. 351, 12 Pa. Co. Ct. 625.

The individual liberty of the citizen guaranteed by the Pennsylvania and Federal Constitutions is not invaded by a statute taxing vendors of merchandise according to the amount of their annual sales. Knisely v. Cotterel, 196 Pa. 614, 50 L. R. A. 86, 40 Atl. 861.

So far as the Federal Constitution is concerned, the doctrine of this case is confirmed by the decision in CLARK v. TITUSVILLE, that such a license tax does not violate the equality clause of U. S. Const. Amend. 14, although the result is to make persons in different classes pay different rates, and to make those in the same class pay at a different ratio if the amount of their sales differs.

An ordinance imposing a license tax upon persons engaged in selling goods, wares, and merchandise is not unreasonable or unjust because it makes the amount of the tax depend upon the amount of receipts from the business transacted. San Luis Obispo County v. Greenberg, 120 Cal. 300, 52 Pac. 797.

No unconstitutional discrimination among persons engaged in the same class of business was made by N. C. Laws 1897, chap. 168, § 35, which imposed a license fee of $10 on all hotels whose gross receipts were over $1,000 and less than $2,000, and one half of 1 per cent on hotels whose gross receipts exceeded $2,000 per being an act of taxation and not of regulation and police power, distinguishes the case at bar from Gundling v. Chicago, 177 U. S. 185, 44 L. ed. 727, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633, which was an exercise of the police power.

This tax is not imposed upon the right to receive property from a decedent either as a legatee or heir, and therefore the rule in Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594, and kindred cases, does not apply.

A tax upon a business is a tax upon the article sold.

Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678; Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 278, 23 L. ed. 348.

The ordinance violates the 14th Amendment.

Railroad Tax Cases, 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 722; Santa Clara County v. Southern P. R. Co. 9 Sawy. 165, 18 Fed. 385; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Cooley, Taxn. pp. 2, 169, 243.

Mr. George Frank Brown submitted the cause for the defendant in error:

A license tax is not a property tax. A business tax is not a property tax, even though it be levied for general revenue purposes.

Morehouse v. Brigham, 41 La. Ann. 665, 6 So. 257; Denver City R. Co. v. Denver, 21 Colo. 350, 29 L. R. A. 608; 41 Pac. 826; Davis v. Macon, 64 Ga. 128, 37 Am. Rep. 60; annum. Cobb. v. Durham County, 122 N. C. 307, 30 S. E. 338. The court said that there was no doubt that the general assembly might, in its discretion, impose as a license fee on the business of hotel keeping either a specific tax or one graduated according to the extent of the business done,—the gross receipts derived from the business,—and that such tax was uniform and consistent with the Constitution when it was equal on all persons in the same class.

So, a city authorized to license insurance companies may properly vary the amount charged therefor to correspond with the incomes of the different companies licensed. Burlington v. Putnam Ins. Co. 31 Iowa, 102.

And the amount of premiums received by an insurance company on business done within a municipality the previous year is a proper and fair standard by which to measure the license or franchise tax to do business in such municipality. Fidelity Casualty Co. v. Louisville, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 1785, 50 S. W. 35.

And a percentage on the gross receipts of a foreign insurance company doing business in a municipality may be properly taken as an equitable mode of ascertaining the amount of a license fee charged for the privilege of carrying on such business. Walker v. Springfield, 94 Ill. 364.

So, the amount of the gross receipts of a building and loan association within the state is a fair and just standard by which to measure the amount of a license or franchise tax on foreign building and loan associations. Southern Bldg. & L. Assn. v. Norman, 98 Ky. 294, 31 L. R. A. 41, 32 S. W. 952.

Nor can a citizen doing a general business at the place of his domicile escape payment of a license tax imposed upon merchants by the municipal government because the amount of his tax is arrived at by reference to his profits. Ficklen v. Shelby County Taxing Dist. 145 U.

Newton v. Atchison, 31 Kan. 151, 47 Am. Rep. 486, 1 Pac. 288; Williamsport v. Wenner, 172 Pa. 173, 33 Atl. 544; Oil City v. Oil City Trust Co. 151 Pa. 454, 25 Atl. 124. See also Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Dow v. Beidelman, 125 U. S. 680, 31 L. ed. 841, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 56, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1028; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Iowa, 94 U. S. 164, sub nom. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Cutts, 24 L. ed. 94.

The Constitution of the United States permits classification of subjects of taxation on a proper basis and in a proper manner. The only restraint imposed by the 14th Amendment is that unequal taxes may not be imposed upon property of the same kind, in the same class, in the same condition, and used for the same purpose.

Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321, sub nom. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Giozza v. Tiernan, 148 U. S. 657, 37 L. ed. 599, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721; Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 30 L. ed. 578, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 32, 28 L. ed. 925, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 339, 35 L. ed. 1035, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 810, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 250.

Classification according to the amount of business done has been frequently recognized by the Federal courts.

Dow v. Beidelman, 125 U. S. 690, 31 L.

S. 1, 36 L. ed. 601, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 79, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 810.

To the contrary are two Louisiana cases in which the effect of the requirement of La. Const. art. 118, of uniformity of taxation was considered.

New Orleans v. Home Mut. Ins. Co. 23 La. Ann. 449, is the first of these cases. Here a city ordinance fixing the amount of a license tax upon insurance companies upon the basis of the amount of premiums received by them was held to contravene this provision.

So, a license fee imposed by a parish upon retail liquor dealers, the amount of which is regulated by the amount of business done, one sum being charged when the business is more than a specified amount, and another when it is less, was, in East Feliciana ex rel. Howell v. Gurth, 26 La. Ann. 140, held to conflict with this constitutional provision.

To meet this and kindred decisions it was provided by La. Const. 1879, art. 206, that the general assembly shall graduate the amount of license taxes. This provision exempts them from the constitutional requirement of equality and uniformity. State v. Liverpool, L. & G. Ins. Co. 40 La. Ann. 463, 4 So. 504.

This provision, not indicating any standard of graduation, leaves it to the legislature to determine the method to be adopted in effecting it. State v. Traders' Bank, 41 La. Ann. 329, 6 So. 582; New Orleans v. Pontchartrain R. Co. 41 La. Ann. 519, 7 So. 83; State v. Liverpool, L. & G. Ins. Co. 40 La. Ann. 463, 4 So. 504; Browne v. Selser, 106 La. 691, 31 So. 290.

And the judiciary has no authority to interfere in the absence of any rule to guide its investigation and scrutiny. State v. Traders' Bank, 41 La. Ann. 329, 6 So. 582; New Orleans v. Pontchartrain R. Co. 41 La. Ann. 519, 7 So. 83.

Thus, the division by the general assembly

ed. 844, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 56, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1028; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Iowa, 94 U. S. 164, sub nom. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Cutts, 24 L. ed. 96.

It is not expected of city councils, nor of any other legislative body levying taxes, that they shall produce absolute equality in their measures.

Com. v. Delaware Division Canal Co. 123 Pa. 620, 2 L. R. A. 798, 16 Atl. 584.

The moment we concede the power to classify, we have disposed of the question of uniformity, for then all that is required by the Constitution is uniformity of taxes among the members of a class.

Com. v. Delaware Division Canal Co. 123 Pa. 623, 2 L. R. A. 798, 16 Atl. 584; Kit-tanning Coal Co. v. Com. 79 Pa. 105.

The equal protection of the laws only requires the same means and methods to be applied impartially to all the constituents of a class so that the law shall operate equally and uniformly upon all persons in similar circumstances.

Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321, sub nom. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57.

It does not prohibit legislation which is limited either in the objects to which it is directed or by the territory within which it is to operate. It merely requires that all persons subjected to such legislation shall be treated alike under like circumstances and conditions, both in the privilege conferred and the liabilities imposed.

Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 30 L. ed. 578, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594.

And it has no concern with the impolicy of a law.

Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 26 L. ed. 238.

The 14th Amendment was not intended to compel the state to conform to an iron rule of equal taxation.

Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Giozza v. Tiernan, 148 U. S. 657, 37 L. ed. 599, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721; State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 23 L. ed. 663.

The only restraint imposed by the 14th Amendment is that unequal taxes may not be imposed upon property of the same kind, in the same class, in the same condition, and used for the same purpose.

Giozza v. Tiernan, 148 U. S. 657, 37 L. ed. 599, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721; Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 30 L. ed. 578, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 32, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 339, 35 L. ed. 1035, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 810, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 250; Merchants' & Mfrs. Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 461, 42 L. ed. 236, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829.

of companies and persons pursuing the business of insurance into different classes according to the amount of premiums collected, and the levying upon each class a different license tax, greater upon those receiving a larger amount than upon those receiving a less, is a sufficient graduation. State v. Liverpool, L. & G. Ins. Co. 40 La. Ann. 463, 4 So. 504.

And that a license law requires smaller insurance companies to pay a larger tax in proportion to their premiums than larger companies does not render it unconstitutional under that provision, there being no requirement that the tax shall be in proportion to the business done, though it may impugn its justice. Ibid.

A charter provision requiring rates of license for the transaction of business to be proportionate to the amount of business done, and that the license shall be discriminating, only requires that after the selection of a business as a subject for license the sum exacted from each person following that business shall be fixed by the amount of business done by each. Ex parte Hurl, 49 Cal. 557.

And a city council may provide that the license to be paid by laundrymen shall be in proportion to the number of persons employed by them under a city charter, which provides that licenses shall be discriminating and proportionate to the amount of the business done. Ex parte Sisto Li Protti, 68 Cal. 636, 10 Pac. 113.

A license tax on merchants is not a property tax, and therefore unconstitutional, because the amount thereof is graduated by the average amount of their stock. Newton v. Atchison, 31 Kan. 151, 47 Am. Rep. 486, 1 Pac. 288.

So, a license tax on peddlers by which they are divided into classes according to the value of goods carried by them, each class to pay a fixed amount, does not violate the requirement of the Pennsylvania Constitution that all taxes be uniform upon the same class of subjects within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax. New Castle v. Cutler, 15 Pa. Super. Ct. 612.

And a license tax imposed by county ordinance upon persons engaged in raising, grazing, herding, or pasturing sheep, of $50 for every 1,000 sheep, is not invalid as discriminating, special, unequal, or partial. Ex parte Mirande, 73 Cal. 365, 14 Pac. 888.

But a similar county ordinance was held invalid in Cache County v. Jensen, 21 Utah, 207, 61 Pac. 303, because, among other objectionable features, it was unjust and unequal in that by grading the tax at $50 per thousand sheep it permitted one having 3,000, 4,000, or 5,000 sheep to pay the same sum as one who had 999 more, and compelled him to pay $50 more than a person who had one less sheep.

But a license tax on retail merchants is not unequal and discriminating because it is so graded according to the amount of stock employed in the business that the owners of small stocks pay at a greater rate per $100 of stock than larger dealers. Saks v. Birmingham, 120 Ala. 190, 24 So. 728.

And a license tax on merchants, graduated according to the average value of stock or capital in use by them, is not unequal and oppressive although an absolutely level rate is not imposed on each $100 of valuation, and under it a merchant the average value of whose stock or capital does not exceed $200 is taxed $5, while another merchant engaged in the same business, who has stock of the average value of $2,700, is compelled to pay a license tax of but $30. Re Martin, 62 Kan. 638, 64 Pac. 43.

For an extended discussion of the limit of amount of license fees, see note to State ex rel. Toi v. French (Mont.) 30 L. R. A. 415.

[330] *Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This case is here on error to the supreme court of the state of Pennsylvania. It involves the constitutionality of an ordinance of the city of Titusville imposing a license tax upon the merchants of the city. The particular contention is that the ordinance violates the equality prescribed by the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, in that it divides the merchants into arbitrary classes.

The trial court sustained the ordinance, and its judgment was affirmed by the supreme court upon the opinion delivered by the trial court.

The case was submitted upon a case stated in the nature of a special verdict, from which it appeared that the city was duly incorporated, and passed on June 25, 1888, the ordinance complained of. The provisions of the ordinance were set out, and it was stipulated that if the court should be of the opinion that the ordinance was valid a fine should be entered against the defendant (plaintiff in error) for the total of the taxes prescribed.

The ordinance imposes a license tax upon persons who carry on certain occupations in the city. Persons in different occupations pay different amounts, and persons in the same occupation are classified by maximum and minimum amount of sales. For instance, persons dealing in merchandise are classified as follows, and we quote from the opinion of the trial court:

Class.	Business.	Tax.
1...	Over $60,000....	$100.00
2...	$50,000 to 60,000....	80.00
3...	40,000 to 50,000....	70.00
4...	30,000 to 40,000....	60.00
5...	20,000 to 30,000....	50.00
6...	10,000 to 20,000....	35.00
7...	5,000 to 10,000....	25.00
8...	2,500 to 5,000....	15.00
9...	1,000 to 2,500....	10.00
10...	1,000....	5.00

Wholesale.

[331]*1...	$100,000 and upwards..	$60.00
2...	60,000 to 100,000...	50.00
3...	50,000 to 60,000...	40.00
4...	40,000 to 50,000...	35.00
5...	30,000 to 40,000...	30.00
6...	20,000 to 30,000...	25.00
7...	10,000 to 20,000...	20.00
8...	5,000 to 10,000...	15.00
9...	2,500 to 5,000...	10.00
10...	2,500...	5.00

It is with this classification that we have immediate concern, because the plaintiff is a retail grocer. He was assessed in the sixth class in 1895, and in the seventh class in 1896.

The objection that plaintiff makes to the ordinance is that it classifies by amount or value with the result (1) that the lowest amount or value of property of a class "is required to pay the same amount of taxes with the highest amount or value of property therein;" (2) that the differences are not in kind, but only in amount, or value, and that the taxes decrease in rate or ratio as the value of the class increases; (3) that the so-called classes are subdivisions of a class, and taxes are imposed upon such subdivisions without regard to a common ratio, either as between the several subdivisions, or as between the members of each of the subdivisions. These objections are but the expression of the effect of classification by amount, and have been made before and considered before by this court, and the judgment has been adverse to the contention of plaintiff in error. We do not think that it is necessary to review the cases or enter again into the reasoning upon which they were based.

Classification by amount came up for consideration and decision in Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594, and was sustained. That case, plaintiff in error recognizes, may be urged against his contention, and attempts to limit its decision to the power of a state over inheritances, and to explain by that power, not only the taxes imposed, but the discriminations which were [332] claimed to have resulted from grading the taxes by the amount of the legacy. This, we think, is a misunderstanding of the opinion. The contentions of the parties in the case were extremely opposite. The appellee claimed that the power of the state could be exerted to the extent of making the state the heir of everybody; the appellant asserted a natural right of children to inherit. We expressed no opinion on either contention, but chiefly directed our consideration and decision to the alleged discriminating features of the law of Illinois. We said: "Our inquiry must be, not what will satisfy the provisions of the state Constitutions, but what will satisfy the rule of the Federal Constitution. The power of the states over successions may be as plenary in the abstract as appellee contends for; nevertheless it must be exerted within the limitations of that Constitution. If the power of devise or of inheritance be a privilege, it must be conferred or regulated by equal laws."

The law of Illinois was charged with inequality of operation because of the classes which it created. It was asserted, as it is in the case at bar, that the classes were formed upon arbitrary differences, and the provisions of the statute which fixed the tax upon legacies to strangers to the blood of the intestate were vigorously assailed. Those provisions were as follows:

"On each and every $100 of the clear market value of all property and at the same rate for any less amount on all estates of $10,000 and less, $3; on all estates over $10,000 and not exceeding $20,000, $4; on all estates over $20,000 and not exceeding $50,000, $5; and on all estates over $50,000, $6. Provided, that an estate in the above case, which may be valued at a less sum than $500, shall not be subject to any duty or tax."

Manifestly, there was inequality between the members of different classes, and that was conceded in the opinion, but as manifestly there was equality between the members of each class, and that equality was held to satisfy the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States; and the reasoning *by which that conclusion was supported is applicable to the case at bar. We met the contention accurately and squarely that there was no reasonable distinction between the classes. We said:

"If there is inequality it must be because the members of a class are arbitrarily made such and burdened as such, upon no distinctions justifying it. This is claimed. It is said that the tax is not in proportion to the amount, but varies with the amounts arbitrarily fixed, and hence that an inheritance of $10,000 or less pays 3 per cent, and that one over $10,000 pays, not 3 per cent on $10,000 and an increased percentage on the excess over $10,000, but an increased percentage on the $10,000 as well as on the excess, and it is said, as we have seen, that in consequence one who is given a legacy of $10,001 by the deduction of the tax receives $99.04 less than one who is given a legacy of $10,000. But neither case can be said to be contrary to the rule of equality of the 14th Amendment. That rule does not require, as we have seen, exact equality of taxation. It only requires that the law imposing it shall operate on all alike under the same circumstances. The tax is not on money, it is on the right to inherit, and hence a condition of inheritance, and it may be graded according to the value of that inheritance. The condition is not arbitrary because it is determined by that value; it is not unequal in operation because it does not levy the same percentage on every dollar; does not fail to treat 'all alike under like circumstances and conditions, both in the privilege conferred and the liabilities imposed.' The jurisdiction of courts is fixed by amounts. The right of appeal is. As was said at bar, the Congress of the United States has classified the right of suitors to come into the United States courts by amounts. Regarding these alone, there is the same inequality that is urged against classification of the Illinois law. All license laws and all specific taxes have in them an element of inequality; nevertheless they are universally imposed, and their legality has never been questioned."

Plaintiff in error, however, contends that the tax in the case at bar is a tax on property, not on the privilege to do business, because the final incidence of the tax is on the merchant, and *is paid by him. But every tax has its final incidence on some individual. That effect, therefore, cannot be urged to destroy well-recognized distinctions. The tax in the case at bar is a tax on the privilege of doing business, regulated by the amount of sales, and is not repugnant to the Constitution of the United States.

Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Justice Harlan did not hear the argument, and took no part in the decision.
184 U. S.

SIMON ROTHSCCHILD and Frank Rothschild, Copartners, Doing Business under the Firm Name and Style of S. Rothschild & Brother, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

ROBERT A. KNIGHT, Assignee in Insolvency of James McKeon.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 334-342.)

Appeal—error to state court—amendment of declaration—consent of counsel—attachment of debt to nonresident—proceedings in other state.

1. A Federal question is sufficiently raised in a state court for the purpose of review by the Supreme Court of the United States, although it was not raised in the court to which the writ of error was directed, and which entered the judgment after the case had been passed upon by the supreme court of the state, if the Federal question was raised in the supreme court.
2. The superior court of Massachusetts is the court to which a writ of error from the United States Supreme Court should issue for the review of a Federal question, after a rescript affirming its judgment has been sent to that court by the supreme court of the state.
3. The allowance of amendments to a declaration by consent of counsel cannot be deemed to deprive a party of property without due process of law, on the ground that counsel had no authority to give consent thereto.
4. Attachment of debts due to nonresident creditors at the place where the debtor resides, in accordance with the law of that state, does not deprive the creditor of property without due process of law.
5. The right to an attachment in an action to recover the value of goods which have been conveyed to the defendant in fraud of creditors is not to be denied on the ground that the action is not for a debt, but to recover a penalty.
6. The liability of a creditor to whom goods were delivered by a debtor in fraud of other creditors is not affected by judicial proceedings thereafter taken in another state to which the goods have since been carried.

NOTE.—On Federal jurisdiction over state courts; necessity of Federal question—see notes to Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267, and Kipley v. Illinois ex rel. Akin, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

As to what is a Federal question; when considered—see note to Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884.

As to what constitutes due process of law—see Kuntz v. Sumpton (Ind.) 2 L. R. A. 655, and note; Re Gannon (R. I.) 5 L. R. A. 359, and note; Ulman v. Baltimore (Md.) 11 L. R. A. 224, and note; Gilman v. Tucker (N. Y.) 13 L. R. A. 304, and note. And see notes to People v. O'Brien (N. Y.) 2 L. R. A. 258; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436, and Wilson v. North Carolina ex rel. Caldwell, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

As to how far admissions and statements of attorney bind client—see note to Turner v. Yates, 14 L. ed. U. S. 824.

As to general authority of attorney—see note to Union Bank v. Geary, 8 L. ed. U. S. 60.

As to situs of debt for purpose of attachment or garnishment—see note to King v. Cross, 44 L. ed. U. S. 211.

whereby the creditor attaches the goods as property of the debtor.

[No. 108.]

Argued January 16, 17, 1902. Decided March 3, 1902.

IN ERROR to the Superior Court of the State of Massachusetts to review a judgment against defendant in an action for the value of goods conveyed in fraud of creditors. Affirmed.

See same case, Massachusetts supreme judicial court, 176 Mass. 48, 57 N. E. 337.

Statement by Mr. Justice McKenna:

James McKeon was a retail merchant in Springfield, Massachusetts, and became indebted to plaintiffs in error in the sum of about $4,000.

[335] The indebtedness being overdue, Frank J. Rothschild, Jr., son of one of the plaintiffs in error, went to Springfield with full *power to collect the debt. When there, he received from McKeon a quantity of fur garments, part of McKeon's stock. The garments had not been purchased of plaintiffs in error, and when they were received by Rothschild, Jr., for plaintiffs in error he knew McKeon was insolvent.

The furs were sent to the railroad station in trunks, checked and taken to New York as the personal baggage of Rothschild, Jr. A receipted bill or list of the goods was delivered by McKeon to Rothschild, Jr. Subsequently, however, in New York it was testified that McKeon "tore from the bill the receipt and wrote on the bill the word abbreviation 'Memo.' to indicate that the goods were on memorandum or consignment, and the defendant said that he would write to his bookkeeper that night and have the entry in his books made to conform with the bill by writing in the word 'Memo.'"

This was done by the advice of the attorney of plaintiffs in error, and so stated by him in an affidavit filed in an action brought by plaintiffs in error in the supreme court of the city and county of New York against McKeon.

The advice was given, the attorney deposed, in order to make the transaction appear what it was stated in his presence to be: that is, for security only, and not for the sale of the goods; and he advised a suit by plaintiffs in error against McKeon and an attachment of the goods. The suit was subsequently brought and the goods attached.

On the 20th December, 1895, McKeon was adjudged an insolvent in Massachusetts, and the defendant in error was appointed his assignee, and as such he brought this action by trustee process in the superior court for Hampden county, Massachusetts, for the value of goods conveyed by McKeon to plaintiffs in error, on the ground that the conveyance was made in fraud of the insolvency laws of Massachusetts. The officer's return on the writ showed service on the trustees, but none on the plaintiffs in error.

574

The writ was duly entered on the first Monday in May, 1896, and a declaration for goods sold and delivered by McKeon to the plaintiffs in error was duly filed. Subsequently upon its being brought to the notice of the court that plaintiffs in error *were not [336] inhabitants of the commonwealth of Massachusetts, notice was ordered to be given to them by publication, and that the action be continued until such notice should be given. The notice was returnable on the first Monday in September, 1896, and was given as ordered, but no return or proof of it was made until July 6, 1899. On the 16th of September, 1896, plaintiffs in error (defendants in the action) appeared generally by their attorney, Charles C. Spillman, Esq., thereto duly authorized. On October 12, following, defendant in error (plaintiff) moved to amend his declaration, to which counsel for plaintiffs in error consented, and it was allowed. Plaintiffs in error filed an answer denying each and every allegation in the original and amended declaration. On June 21, 1897, the defendant in error again amended his declaration with the consent of E. N. Hill, Esq., who was then acting as counsel for plaintiffs in error, having been retained generally by plaintiffs in error, though his written appearance was not entered until June 26. By virtue of his general authority he could consent to the allowance of amendments. He conducted the case for plaintiffs in error.

The amendment added two counts to the declaration, charging the conveyance to plaintiffs in error by McKeon as having been made to prevent the property from coming to his assignee in insolvency, in fraud of the laws of the state relating to insolvent debtors.

The jury rendered a verdict against the plaintiffs in error for the sum of $6,420, and they moved for a new trial by their attorney, E. N. Hill. On the 31st of July, 1897, plaintiffs in error "alleged sundry exceptions to the opinions and rulings of the court, which, being found conformable to the truth, were allowed and signed by the presiding judge, and the questions were transmitted to the supreme judicial court for consideration."

The bill of exceptions contained the evidence, and concluded as follows:

"Upon this evidence the defendants asked the court to rule that there was no evidence to warrant the finding that McKeon intended to prefer the defendants, or intended to prevent this property from coming into the possession of the assignee or *from being distributed according to the laws relating to insolvency, and that the action could not be maintained. The court refused so to rule and the defendants duly excepted. [337]

"And the defendants being aggrieved by these rulings and refusals to rule, and having excepted thereto, after verdict against them, pray that their exceptions and their exceptions to the admission of testimony as hereinbefore stated be allowed."

On the 15th of February, 1898, the motion for a new trial was denied, and on the 28th of February, 1899, a rescript was received from the supreme judicial court overruling the exceptions of plaintiffs in error.

184 U. S.

On the 6th of March, 1899, judgment was entered against plaintiffs in error "for the sum of $7,071.63, damages, and costs of suit, taxed at $91.07, and that execution therefor issue against the goods, effects, and credits of the said defendants in the hands and possession of the said trustees, Smith & Murray and Houston & Henderson, who were by the court adjudged to be trustees" of plaintiffs in error.

On May 12, 1899, plaintiffs in error filed an assignment of errors under the state practice as follows:

"1. That the record discloses that there was no valid and effectual attachment of the goods, estate, or effects of the plaintiffs in error upon the writ, which is the necessary foundation of the jurisdiction of said superior court to support any proceeding against an unserved, absent defendant.

"2. That the record discloses that the action was an attempt to obtain jurisdiction over these nonresident plaintiffs in error by means of trusteeing a debt due them, and said attempt was an infringement of the rights of the plaintiffs in error as guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States.

"3. That the record discloses that neither the plaintiffs in error nor either of them were voluntarily before said superior court, and the record fails to show any service upon them, either personally or by publication as ordered by said court.

"4. That the record discloses that the judgment, if allowed to stand, will deprive [338] these plaintiffs in error of their property, contrary to the provisions of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

"10. That the record discloses that the various amendments to the declaration of the defendants in error converted the action into one for the recovery of a penalty, and that such attempt is an infringement of the rights, privileges, and immunities of the plaintiffs in error, guaranteed by the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

"11. That the record discloses that there were counts in the declaration of the defendants in error, which under the laws of this commonwealth involved a penalty, and that a judgment on said counts would be conclusive on these plaintiffs in error as to their liability therefor, and would, without further trial, subject their rights to such penalty, and that such attempt to obtain jurisdiction over the persons or property of these plaintiffs in error, by the trustee process served on a debtor in this state, for the purpose of fixing upon them a liability for such penalty, is contrary to the provisions of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States."

The assignments of error were subsequently amended by adding the following:

"16. That the record discloses that the judgment, if allowed to stand, will impair the obligation of contracts, contrary to the Constitution of the United States.

"17. That the record discloses that the superior court did not give full faith and credit to the judicial proceedings of the courts of New York, as required by the Constitution of the United States."

On the 7th of July, 1899, the defendant in error filed his plea and traverse. A hearing was subsequently had before a single justice to establish the plea and traverse, who, a doubt being suggested as to his authority to dispose of the case, after finding the facts, reported the case to the full court. The case was heard by the supreme court, and on May 15, 1900, a rescript was sent to the superior court affirming the judgment. 176 Mass. 48, 57 N. E. 337. This writ of error was then sued out and allowed by the chief justice of the superior court.

Mr. Harry J. Jaquith argued the cause, and, with Mr. Thomas J. Barry, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

This court has held that a Federal question was raised in time when first raised in a petition in error to the state supreme court.

Arrowsmith v. Harmoning, 118 U. S. 194, 30 L. ed. 243, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1023.

This court has taken judicial notice that in Massachusetts the record remains with the superior court, the highest court, after pronouncing its judgment, returning the record to it.

Atherton v. Fowler, 91 U. S. 143, 23 L. ed. 265.

And this court has just affirmed as correct a procedure exactly similar to that taken in this case.

McDonald v. Massachusetts, 180 U. S. 311, 45 L. ed. 542, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389.

A decision of a state court that its proceedings or the provisions of a statute constitute "due process of law" is not decisive upon this court.

Hallinger v. Davis, 146 U. S. 314, 36 L. ed. 986, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 105.

Nor is it decisive in any case in which the contention turns upon general, rather than strictly local, law.

Swift v. Tyson, 16 Pet. 1, 10 L. ed. 865; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Baugh, 149 U. S. 368, 37 L. ed. 772, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 914.

The prohibitions of the 14th Amendment "refer to all the instrumentalities of the state,—to its legislative, executive, and judicial authorities."

Blake v. McClung, 172 U. S. 239, 43 L. ed. 432, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581.

The powers of such instrumentalities "cannot be exercised with the effect of defeating or impairing rights secured to citizens of the several states by the supreme law of the land."

Blake v. McClung, 172 U. S. 254, 43 L. ed. 437, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165.

A state insolvency law cannot be given extraterritorial effect; if it is construed to interfere with the contracts of nonresidents, it is unconstitutional and void.

Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 6 L. ed. 606; Baldwin v. Hale, 1 Wall. 223, 17 L. ed. 531; Gilman v. Lockwood, 4 Wall. 409, 18 L. ed. 432; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. ed. 565; Savoie v. Marsh, 10 Met. 594, 43 Am. Dec. 451; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 4 L. ed. 529.

An action for a penalty is not such a "personal action"—that is, transitory—as may be brought against an absent defendant under Mass. Pub. Stat. chap. 164. A penalty means punishment, and involves jurisdiction over the culprit before it can be inflicted.

Galpin v. Page, 18 Wall. 350, 21 L. ed. 959; Freeman v. Alderson, 119 U. S. 185, 30 L. ed. 372, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165.

The fact that an agent of the defendants below was in the state of Massachusetts cannot be imputed to them to show an intent. The only cases found to that effect are where all the parties were bound by the law. In this case the defendants owed no allegiance to the law.

Sage v. Wynkoop, 16 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 363, Fed. Cas. No. 12,215; Vogle v. Lathrop, 4 Brewst. (Pa.) 253, Fed. Cas. No. 16,985; Mayer v. Hermann, 10 Blatchf. 256, Fed. Cas. No. 9,344; Graham v. Stark, 3 Ben. 520, Fed. Cas. No. 5,676; Wight v. Murlow, 8 Ben. 52, Fed. Cas. No. 17,629; Sartwell v. North, 151 Mass. 142, 23 N. E. 853; Bush v. Moore, 133 Mass. 198; Rogers v. Palmer, 102 U. S. 263, 26 L. ed. 164.

The law of Massachusetts involved being a nullity so far as nonresidents' obligations to it are concerned, proceedings founded upon it do not constitute due process of law, are fatally defective, and the question may be raised at any time.

Capron v. Van Noorden, 2 Cranch, 126, 2 L. ed. 229; Striker v. Mott, 6 Wend. 465; Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 274, 23 L. ed. 914; Voorhees v. Jackson ex dem. Bank of United States, 10 Pet. 473, 9 L. ed. 499; United States v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. 709, 8 L. ed. 554; Cooper v. Reynolds, 10 Wall. 308, 19 L. ed. 931; Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. ed. 872.

Waiver cannot cure such proceedings.

Chase v. Palmer, 25 Me. 341; Atty. Gen. v. Moliter, 26 Mich. 444; Union P. R. Co. v. Ogilvy, 18 Neb. 639, 26 N. W. 464; Collins v. Keller, 58 N. J. L. 429, 34 Atl. 753; Musselman's Appeal, 101 Pa. 169; School Dist. No. 28 v. Stocker, 42 N. J. L. 115; Whitehurst v. Pettipher, 105 N. C. 40, 11 S. E. 369; Lamson v. Worcester, 58 Vt. 381, 4 Atl. 145; Poindexter v. Burwell, 82 Va. 507; Carlisle v. Weston, 21 Pick. 535; Osgood v. Thurston, 23 Pick. 110; Mastick v. San Francisco City & County Super. Ct. 94 Cal. 347, 29 Pac. 869; Tootle v. French, 2 Idaho, 746, 25 Pac. 1091; Way v. Way, 64 Ill. 406; Richards v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 124 Ill. 516, 16 N. E. 909; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Sutton, 130 Ind. 405, 30 N. E. 291; McCoy v. Able, 131 Ind. 419, 30 N. E. 528; Orcutt v. Hanson, 71 Iowa, 514, 32 N. W.

482; Re Gregory, 13 Misc. 363, 35 N. Y. Supp. 105.

Where by reason of a Federal law the state court has no jurisdiction of the cause of action, jurisdiction cannot be given by waiver or filing a bond. It is a case of want of jurisdiction of the subject-matter.

Hamilton v. Merrill, 37 Ohio St. 682.

The cause of action must arise under laws which bound the defendants below.

D'Arey v. Ketchum, 11 How. 165, 13 L. ed. 648.

Notice and hearing alone do not constitute due process of law.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581.

Debts contracted and payable in New York were not subject to the trustee process of the state of Massachusetts.

Wabash R. Co. v. Tourville, 179 U. S. 322, 45 L. ed. 210, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 113.

A state can only separate the situs of a credit from a nonresident owner when the debt is either contracted or payable in the state where the garnishment is made.

Ibid.

It being uncertain upon what ground the verdict was found, the proceedings do not constitute due process of law, and are void under the provisions of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Rindge v. Green, 52 Vt. 204; Steen v. Norton, 45 Wis. 412; Holmes v. Doane, 9 Cush. 135; Whiting v. Cook, 8 Allen, 63; York v. Johnson, 116 Mass. 482; Peterson v. Patrick, 126 Mass. 395; Clapp v. Campbell, 124 Mass. 50.

The supreme court of Massachusetts has recently held to the common-law rule in this respect.

Kilberg v. Berry, 166 Mass. 488, 44 L. ed. 603.

In order to have the proceedings in a state court held due process of law, they must be founded upon reasonable rules or laws; and the reasonableness of those rules or statutes is a matter for the determination of this court upon the facts.

Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S. 389, 40 L. ed. 467, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344; Roller v. Holly, 176 U. S. 398, 44 L. ed. 520, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410.

An attorney by virtue of his employment can only prosecute or defend the cause of action for which he was retained.

Moulton v. Bowker, 115 Mass. 36, 15 Am. Rep. 72; Sartwell v. North, 144 Mass. 188, 10 N. E. 824.

The lack of authority may be set up after a trial upon the merits.

Wright v. Andrews, 130 Mass. 149; Graham v. Spence, 14 Fed. 603.

Neither a statute, nor a changed judicial construction of it or of the common law, can be retroactive so as to increase the liability or scope of, or to diminish the rights under, a contract entered into prior to it.

Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. 175, 17 L. ed. 520.

By the prior decisions of the supreme court of Massachusetts an attorney at law had not, by reason of his employment, authority to act for his principal, except in the cause for which he was retained. He could control the remedy, but could not prosecute or defend a suit for another cause.

Moulton v. Bowker, 115 Mass. 36, 15 Am. Rep. 72; Sartwell v. North, 144 Mass. 188, 10 N. E. 824.

The authority assumed by the state court to change the party and the place of performance without the consent of the non-resident other party is an impairment of the obligation of a contract, and is repugnant to art. 1, § 10, of the Constitution of the United States.

Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 6 L. ed. 606; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 4 L. ed. 529; State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds, 15 Wall. 300, sub nom. Cleveland, P. & A. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 21 L. ed. 179.

The trustee process operates as a species of compulsory statute assignment.

Strong v. Smith, 1 Met. 476; McCarty v. The City of New Bedford, 4 Fed. 818; Atlantic & P. R. Co. v. Hopkins, 94 U. S. 13, 24 L. ed. 48.

A discharge of that nature can only operate where the law is made by authority common to the creditor and debtor in all respects, where both are citizens or subjects.

Watson v. Bourne, 10 Mass. 337, 6 Am. Dec. 129; Baker v. Wheaton, 5 Mass. 509, 4 Am. Dec. 71.

The insolvency law of Massachusetts is void so far as by construction of the supreme court of the state it seeks to draw to it the contracts of nonresidents who do not voluntarily appear in the insolvency court and submit to its jurisdiction, and so far as it seeks to hold nonresidents liable to its penalties for collecting or securing the money due them from insolvent citizens of Massachusetts.

Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 4 L. ed. 529; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 6 L. ed. 606; Gilman v. Lockwood, 4 Wall. 409, 18 L. ed. 432; Baldwin v. Hale, 1 Wall. 223, 17 L. ed. 531; Savoie v. Marsh, 10 Met. 594, 43 Am. Dec. 451; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. ed. 565.

The common-law rights of nonresidents cannot be taken away by local legislation, and in construing these rights the Federal courts are not bound by state decisions.

Blake v. McClung, 172 U. S. 239, 43 L. ed. 432, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165.

In the matter of the restoration of the title to the merchandise to McKeon in New York, if any crime or offense was committed it must be tried in the courts of New York; if any liabilities were created they must be determined by the law of New York.

Buchanan v. Drovers' Nat. Bank, 5 C. C. A. 83, 6 U. S. App. 566, 55 Fed. 223; Milliken v. Pratt, 125 Mass. 374, 28 Am. Rep. 241; M'Intyre v. Parks, 3 Met. 207.

The judgment of a state court should have the same credit, validity, and effect in every other court in the United States which it had in the state where it was pronounced.

184 U. S.

Hampton v. M'Connel, 3 Wheat. 234, 4 L. ed. 378; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.

Until the insolvency court of the state of Massachusetts took possession of McKeon's goods he could ship them to anyone within or without the state, and, being lawfully in another state, the jurisdiction of Massachusetts over them was devested, and the laws of that other state alone governed the further acquisition of title to them, and the judicial sale of them carried with it a title clear of all liability for their value, as to the whole world.

Green v. Van Buskirk, 5 Wall. 307, 18 L. ed. 599, 7 Wall. 139, 19 L. ed. 109.

Mr. Charles M. Rice argued the cause, and, with Mr. Robert A. Knight, filed a brief for defendant in error:

No Federal questions were raised until after the final judgment in the superior court of Massachusetts, and such questions could not, after said final judgments, be then raised for the first time, so as to authorize this court to review the decision of said superior court.

Turner v. Richardson, 180 U. S. 87, 45 L. ed. 438, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 295; Scudder v. Coler, 175 U. S. 32, 44 L. ed. 62, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26; Citizens' Sav. Bank v. Owensboro, 173 U. S. 636, 43 L. ed. 840, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 530; Meyer v. Richmond, 172 U. S. 82, 43 L. ed. 374, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106; California Nat. Bank v. Thomas, 171 U. S. 441, 43 L. ed. 231, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Fowler v. Lamson, 164 U. S. 252, 41 L. ed. 424, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Southern P. Co. 137 U. S. 48, 34 L. ed. 614, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Loeber v. Schroeder, 149 U. S. 580, 37 L. ed. 856, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934; Bushnell v. Crooke Min. & Smelting Co. 148 U. S. 682, 37 L. ed. 610, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 771; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462, 35 L. ed. 225, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577.

In order to give this court jurisdiction of this writ of error to the superior court of Massachusetts, it must appear affirmatively that a Federal question was presented for decision by said superior court.

Columbia Water Power Co. v. Columbia Electric Street R. Light & P. Co. 172 U. S. 475, 43 L. ed. 521, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 37 L. ed. 1111, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Harrison v. Morton, 171 U. S. 38, 43 L. ed. 63, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 160 U. S. 556, 40 L. ed. 536, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Fowler v. Lamson, 164 U. S. 252, 41 L. ed. 424, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112; California Powder Works v. Davis, 151 U. S. 389, 38 L. ed. 206, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Cook County v. Calumet & C. Canal & Dock Co. 138 U. S. 635, 34 L. ed. 1110, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435.

This court, for the purpose of examining the case, will depend solely upon the true record of the superior court of the state of Massachusetts, and anything not properly a part of this record will not be considered.

Warfield v. Chaffe, 91 U. S. 690, 23 L. ed. 383; Redfield v. Ystalyfera Iron Co. 110 U. S. 174, 28 L. ed. 109, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep.

570; Struthers v. Drexel, 122 U. S. 487, 30 L. ed. 1216, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1293; Red River Cattle Co. v. Sully, 144 U. S. 209, 36 L. ed. 407, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 809; United States v. Taylor, 147 U. S. 695, 37 L. ed. 335, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 479. And see Ocean Ins. Co. v. Polleys, 13 Pet. 157, 10 L. ed. 105; Inglee v. Coolidge, 2 Wheat. 363, 4 L. ed. 261; Fisher v. Cockerell, 5 Pet. 248, 8 L. ed. 114; Spear, Federal Judiciary, pp. 547, 548.

But even if said assignment of errors could be taken into consideration, the errors set forth, so far as they relate to Federal questions, are in too general a form to properly raise a Federal question.

Clark v. McDade, 165 U. S. 168, 41 L. ed. 673, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 284.

The authority exercised by the highest court of the state of Massachusetts in hearing and determining the case in question is not the kind of authority which is referred to in § 709 of the Revised Statutes, which provides in what cases a writ of error will lie from this court to a state court.

Snow v. United States, 118 U. S. 346, 30 L. ed. 207, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1059; Bethell v. Demarct, 10 Wall. 537, 19 L. ed. 1007.

An attachment in due form, by trustee process, of debts due the plaintiffs in error from debtors residing in Massachusetts, gave jurisdiction to the superior court to render judgment.

Rothschild v. Knight, 176 Mass. 48, 57 N. E. 337; Freeman v. Alderson, 119 U. S. 185, 30 L. ed. 372, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165; King v. Cross, 175 U. S. 396, 44 L. ed. 211, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sturm, 174 U. S. 710, 43 L. ed. 1144, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797; Eliot v. McCormick, 144 Mass. 10, 10 N. E. 705.

And it made no difference that the attachment was by trustee process.

King v. Cross, 175 U. S. 396, 44 L. ed. 211, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sturm, 174 U. S. 710, 43 L. ed. 1144, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797; Cooper v. Reynolds, 10 Wall. 308, 19 L. ed. 931; Ocean Ins. Co. v. Portsmouth Marine R. Co. 3 Met. 420; Folger v. Columbian Ins. Co. 99 Mass. 267, 96 Am. Dec. 747; Story, Conf. Laws, 7th ed. § 592a.

The general voluntary appearance of plaintiffs in error by duly authorized attorneys who made answer and contested the case at all stages until judgment was rendered gave jurisdiction to the superior court, without reference to service.

Freeman v. Alderson, 119 U. S. 185, 30 L. ed. 372, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. ed. 565; Grover & B. Sewing Mach. Co. v. Radcliffe, 137 U. S. 287, 34 L. ed. 670, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Cooper v. Reynolds, 10 Wall. 308, 19 L. ed. 931; Wright v. Andrews, 130 Mass. 149; Loomis v. Wadhams, 8 Gray. 557; Eliot v. McCormick, 144 Mass. 10, 10 N. E. 705; Gilman v. Gilman, 126 Mass. 26, 30 Am. Rep. 646; Hazard v. Wason, 152 Mass. 268, 25 N. E. 465; Gleason v. Dodd, 4 Met. 333; Pierce v. Equitable L. Assur. Soc. 145 Mass. 56, 12 N. E. 856.

In order to show that they were not voluntarily before the superior court, it would have been necessary for the plaintiffs in error to show that they limited the authority of the attorney who appeared for them, or instructed him to appear specially.

Wright v. Andrews, 130 Mass. 149.

This court will not consider any questions of procedure with relation to the question whether there was or was not "due process of law." The opinion of the Massachusetts supreme court will be taken as conclusive on these points.

Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 685, 41 L. ed. 1165, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718; Loeber v. Schroeder, 149 U. S. 580, 37 L. ed. 856, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934.

For the above reasons, it can hardly be held that plaintiffs in error have been deprived of their property "without due process of law," and also because it appears, in the present case, that they had a full and fair trial in the superior court of Massachusetts, and in the supreme court on exceptions, and afterwards again in the supreme court of Massachusetts on writ of error.

Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 40 L. ed. 91, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Kennard v. Louisiana ex rel. Morgan, 92 U. S. 480, 23 L. ed. 478.

This court will not review a "judgment" of the highest court of a state because it might impair the obligation of contract.

Morley v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 146 U. S. 162, 36 L. ed. 925, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54. And see Arrowsmith v. Harmoning, 118 U. S. 194, 30 L. ed. 243, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1023; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co. 125 U. S. 18, 31 L. ed. 607, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 741.

The contract should appear in the record, if there is any contract, the impairment of the obligation of which could be questioned under the assignment of error.

Red River Cattle Co. v. Sully, 144 U. S. 209, 36 L. ed. 407, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 809; New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. ed. 943, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; St. Paul Gaslight Co. v. St. Paul, 181 U. S. 142, 45 L. ed. 788, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575.

There were no pre-existing contracts to be impaired by the insolvency statute; and they must have been pre-existing, or else the provision as to impairment of obligation does not apply.

Brown v. Smart, 145 U. S. 454, 36 L. ed. 773, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 958; Denny v. Bennett, 128 U. S. 489, 32 L. ed. 491, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 134; Lehigh Water Co. v. Easton, 121 U. S. 388, 30 L. ed. 1059, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 916; Mississippi & M. R. Co. v. McClure, 10 Wall. 511, 19 L. ed. 997.

Massachusetts could pass an insolvent law, provided it did not "impair the obligation of existing contracts."

Brown v. Smart, 145 U. S. 457, 36 L. ed. 775, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 958; Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 40 L. ed. 91, 16

Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Denny v. Bennett, 128 U. S. 489, 32 L. ed. 491, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 134.

By the "obligation of a contract" is meant, in the Constitution, the means which, at the time of its creation, the law affords for its enforcement.

Louisiana ex rel. Nelson v. Police Jury, 111 U. S. 716, 28 L. ed. 574, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648.

It was proper to attach credits due non-residents.

King v. Cross, 175 U. S. 396, 44 L. ed. 211, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sturm, 174 U. S. 710, 43 L. ed. 1144, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797; Rothschild v. Knight, 176 Mass. 48, 57 N. E. 337.

The action in question was not for the recovery of a "penalty," but to recover the value of goods conveyed in fraud of the laws relating to insolvency.

Rothschild v. Knight, 176 Mass. 48, 57 N. E. 337.

This court will follow the above adjudication of the Massachusetts supreme court, that no penalty was involved in the suit under said statute.

Knight v. United States Land Asso. 142 U. S. 185, 35 L. ed. 983, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258.

Had there been evidence in due form that any new York judicial proceedings existed which constituted a defense for plaintiffs in error, it would, even if such judicial proceedings were shown, in all cases have been necessary to show that such proceedings took place in a court having jurisdiction of the case and the parties, in order to entitle them to full faith and credit here.

Grover & B. Sewing Mach. Co. v. Radcliffe, 137 U. S. 288, 34 L. ed. 670, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Gilman v. Gilman, 126 Mass. 26, 30 Am. Rep. 646; Sewall v. Sewall, 122 Mass. 156, 23 Am. Rep. 299; Folger v. Columbian Ins. Co. 99 Mass. 267, 96 Am. Dec. 747; Carleton v. Bickford, 13 Gray, 591, 74 Am. Dec. 652.

[339] *Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

A motion is made to dismiss the writ of error upon the ground that no Federal question was raised in the superior court. Federal questions were raised, however, on writ of error to the supreme court, and that, we think, was a sufficient claim. Meyer v. Richmond, 172 U. S. 82, 43 L. ed. 374, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106; Arrowsmith v. Harmoning, 118 U. S. 194, 30 L. ed. 243, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1023; Sully v. American Nat. Bank, 178 U. S. 289, 44 L. ed. 1072, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935.

The objection that the writ of error should have been directed to the supreme court, and not to the superior court, is answered by McDonald v. Massachusetts, 180 U. S. 311, 45 L. ed. 542, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389.

The constitutional questions raised by plaintiffs in error are (1) that they have been deprived of their property without due process of law; (2) that if the judgment be allowed to stand it will impair the obligation of contracts, contrary to the Constitution of the United States; (3) that full faith and credit was not given to certain judicial proceedings had in the supreme court of the state of New York.

(1) (2) These grounds may be considered together. To sustain them plaintiffs in error assert the invalidity of certain Public Statutes of Massachusetts, viz., chapter 164, relating to absent defendants; chapter 183, relating to the trustee process; and chapter 157, relating to insolvency.

The sections in regard to insolvency are inserted in the margin.†

*The provisions relating to trustee process [340] are as follows:

"Sec. 21. When a person who is summoned as trustee has goods, effects, or credits of the defendant intrusted or deposited in his hands or possession, such goods, effects, and credits shall be thereby attached and held to respond to the final judgment in the suit, in like manner as goods or estate attached by the ordinary process, except as hereinafter provided."

"Sec. 25. Any money or other things due to the defendant may be attached, as herein mentioned, before it has become payable, if †The sections of the insolvency laws of Massachusetts, under which the action was originally brought in the superior court of Massachusetts, are §§ 96 and 98 of chapter 157 of the Massachusetts Public Statutes, and are as follows:

"Sec. 96. If a person, being insolvent or in contemplation of insolvency, within six months before the filing of the petition by or against him, with a view to give a preference to a creditor or person who has a claim against him, or is under any liability for him, procures any part of his property to be attached, sequestered, or seized on execution, or makes any payment, pledge, assignment, transfer, or conveyance of any part of his property, either directly or indirectly, absolutely or conditionally, the person receiving such payment, pledge, assignment, transfer, or conveyance, or to be benefited thereby, having reasonable cause to believe such person is insolvent or in contemplation of insolvency, and that such payment, pledge, assignment, or conveyance is made in fraud of the laws relating to insolvency, the same shall be void; and the assignee may recover the property or the value of it from the person so receiving it or so to be benefited."

"Sec. 98. If a person, being insolvent or in contemplation of insolvency, within six months before the filing of the petition by or against him, makes a sale, assignment, transfer, or other conveyance of any description, of any part of his property to a person who then has reasonable cause to believe him to be insolvent or in contemplation of insolvency, and that such sale, assignment, transfer, or other conveyance is made with a view to prevent the property from coming to his assignee in insolvency, or to prevent the same from being distributed under the laws relating to insolvency, or to defeat the object of, or in any way to impair, hinder, impede, or delay the operation and effect of, or to evade any of said provisions, the sale, assignment, transfer, or conveyance shall be void, and the assignee may recover the property or the value thereof as assets of the insolvency. And if such sale, assignment, transfer, or conveyance is not made in the usual and ordinary course of business of the debtor, that fact shall be prima facie evidence of such cause of belief."

it is due absolutely and without any contingency; but the trustee shall not be compelled to pay or deliver it before the time appointed by the contract."

[341] It is difficult to state the argument made to support the contention of plaintiffs in error. It rests ultimately on a claim of immunity from suit in Massachusetts and a claim of immunity from attachment of debts due plaintiffs in error from citizens of *Massachusetts. Argumentatively, it is said that the action originally brought did not justify trustee process, and that the amendments subsequently made to the declaration were not authorized, though consented to by counsel who appeared in and conducted the case. We do not assent to either proposition.

To what actions the remedy of attachment may be given is for the legislature of a state to determine and its courts to decide, and the power of counsel certainly extends to consenting to amendments authorized by the laws of the state. Indeed, it would be novel to hold that the court could not have granted the amendments, even against the opposition of counsel, without violating the Constitution of the United States. And the contention that the debts due to plaintiffs in error by certain citizens in Massachusetts were not subject to attachment in that state because their situs was in New York cannot be maintained. We decided adversely to the proposition in Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Strum, 174 U. S. 710, 43 L. ed. 1144, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797. That case was followed and applied in King v. Cross, 175 U. S. 396, 44 L. ed. 211, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131, and we are satisfied with the reasoning of both cases.

But it is urged that the transaction between McKeon and the agent of the plaintiffs in error did not constitute a debt, but was in the nature of an offense to which a penalty was incident, and to the commission of the offense an intent was necessary, and that the intent of the agent of plaintiffs in error could not be ascribed to them. The supreme court of the state, however, decided that "the action is not for the recovery of a penalty, but to recover the value of goods conveyed in fraud of the laws relating to insolvency, and it properly might be commenced by trustee process. Pub. Stat. chap. 157, §§ 96-98, chap. 135, § 1."

We need only add that the law would be of little value if its prohibition did not apply to nonresident creditors, whether acting directly or through an agent. That the conveyance to plaintiffs in error was made to give a fraudulent preference must necessarily have been found as a fact by the jury, and such finding we accept.

[342] (3) No record was introduced in evidence of the judicial proceedings to which, it is claimed, faith and credit were not given. The only evidence in regard to the proceedings consisted of *the affidavit already referred to, and an affidavit of like import made by S. Rothschild, one of the plaintiffs in error. The affidavits were introduced by defendants in error. On behalf of plaintiffs in error Frank J. Rothschild testified as follows: "These goods (meaning the goods received from McKeon) were attached by Simon Rothschild & Bro., and were sold by order of the sheriff. We bought them, that is, Simon Rothschild & Bro. bought them, at the sheriff's sale."

Assuming, but not deciding, that such evidence was sufficient, and that a record properly authenticated was not necessary to give the plaintiffs in error the benefit of the Constitution and statutory provisions, the proceedings, notwithstanding, did not constitute a defense to the action. The preference given by McKeon to plaintiffs in error was consummated in Massachusetts. Therefore the proceedings had in New York were immaterial.

Finding no error in the record, judgment is affirmed.

GEORGE SCHUERMAN, D. E. Dumas, and J. R. Beaton, Appts.,
v.

TERRITORY OF ARIZONA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 342-354.)

Funding bonds—validity of—date of issue—authority of loan commissioners—act of majority—territorial distinguished from congressional authority.

1. Funding bonds issued by Arizona in place of county bonds, under the act of Congress of June 6, 1896 (29 Stat. at L. 262, chap. 339), are not invalid because the county, after requesting their issue, withdrew the request before the bonds were issued, since the request or consent of the county was not requisite to their issue under the statute.
2. The authority of the territory of Arizona to issue funding bonds under the act of Congress of June 6, 1896 (29 Stat. at L. 262, chap. 339), which provides that certain indebtedness "may be founded . . . until January 1, 1897," is not limited to the issuance of the funding bonds before that date, but is limited to the issue of such bonds for indebtedness that had accrued prior to that date.
3. The board of loan commissioners created under Ariz. Rev. Stat. 1887, § 2039, though that statute was amended and approved by the act of Congress of June 25, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 175), derive their authority from the territory, and not from Congress, and they are therefore subject to the general provision of Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 2932, subd. 2, which provides for action by a majority of three or more public officers to whom a joint authority is given.

[No. 151.]

Submitted January 28, 1902. Decided March 3, 1902.

A PPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona to review a decision affirming a judgment granting a man-lamus to compel the levy of a tax for payment of interest on funding bonds. Affirmed.

See same case below (Ariz.) 60 Pac. 895.
184 U. S.

[343] *Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

This is an appeal by the defendants below from a judgment of the supreme court of the territory of Arizona affirming a judgment of the district court granting a mandamus. Upon the trial of the case certain facts were agreed upon, in substance, that the defendants were the supervisors of the county of Yavapai, and that prior to the year 1890 the county of Yavapai had issued what were known as railroad bonds in aid of the Prescott & Arizona Central Railroad Company, upon which there was due on the 17th of September, 1897, $260,218.80, and on that day they were received in exchange by the board of loan commissioners, who thereupon issued 258 funding bonds of the territory, each of the denomination of $1,000, and bearing interest at the rate of 5 per centum per annum, payable semiannually. On the 18th of November, 1896, the board of supervisors of defendant county requested the board of loan commissioners to fund the bonds issued for the aid of the railroad company, but the board subsequently and on December 5, 1896, rescinded such request before it had been acted upon, and on the 17th of September, 1897, the holders of the bonds requested the board of loan commissioners to refund the same, which they did upon such demand. The statement of facts then continues as follows:

"5. At the meeting of said board of loan commissioners at which said bonds were funded, only two members of said board were present or acted; the third member of said board of loan commissioners was at the time of said meeting absent from the territory of Arizona, and took no part in the funding of said bonds, and was not in any manner consulted with relation thereto.

"6. On January 15, 1898, there became due and payable as interest on the 258 territorial funding bonds issued in exchange for the bonds of said Yavapai county as aforesaid, the sum of $4,288.33 according to the tenor of said territorial funding bonds, and thereafter on the 15th days of July and January of each year there became due and payable as interest on said territorial funding bonds, according to the tenor thereof, the sum of $6,450.00, payable at the office of the territorial treasurer of the territory of Arizona.

[344] *"7. In compliance with the terms and conditions of said territorial funding bonds the territorial treasurer of said territory of Arizona has paid all the interest thereon at the times when the same became due and payable, amounting in all at the date hereof to the sum of $23,638.33, and has taken up and canceled interest coupons attached to said bonds to that amount.

"9. Save as aforesaid, no demand was ever made by the board of supervisors of said Yavapai county for the funding of said P. & A. C. Railroad bonds, and no notice was ever given to said board of supervisors at or about the time of the funding that said bonds had been funded.

"10. For the year 1899 the territorial board of equalization of said territory, at its annual session for that year, levied the sum of 37 cents on each $100 of valuation of the taxable property in said Yavapai county, for the purpose of paying interest on the funded indebtedness of said county of Yavapai; including the interest on the territorial funding bonds aforesaid maturing in the year 1900, and the territorial auditor duly certified the levy of said tax to the board of supervisors of said Yavapai county, that the defendants, comprising the board of supervisors of said county, failed and neglected to levy said tax of 37 cents on the $100, but only levied the sum of 6 cents on the $100 for the purpose of paying interest on the funded indebtedness of said county; said sum of 6 cents on the $100 was sufficient to pay the interest on all the funded indebtedness of said county other than the territorial funding bonds issued in lieu of said P. & A. C. Railroad bonds as aforesaid, but was insufficient to pay the interest on said territorial funding bonds or any part thereof.

"11. The above-mentioned P. & A. C. Railroad bonds were originally issued by the county of Yavapai in aid of the construction of the Prescott & Arizona Central Railroad, a line of railway running from Prescott Junction or Seligman to Prescott, Arizona, and were granted and issued as a subsidy to the corporation building and owning said railroad."

The county having refused to levy any taxes for the purpose of collecting money to pay any of the interest maturing on the *bonds of the territory given in exchange for [345] the bonds issued by the county, this proceeding was undertaken to compel the board of supervisors to levy a tax in accordance with the provisions of the statute, for the purpose of paying the interest which had been paid by the territory on the bonds.

Mr. Reese M. Ling submitted the cause for appellants.

Mr. C. F. Ainsworth submitted the cause for appellee.

Contentions of counsel sufficiently appear in the opinion.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after stating the [345] above facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

It is claimed on the part of the defendants below that the railroad bonds for which the territorial bonds were given were invalid when issued, and it is only by reason of the passage of the act of June 6, 1896 (29 Stat. at L. 262, chap. 339), that any action could be sustained to enforce their payment. That act has been held to be within the power of Congress to pass, and that by it the bonds therein described were made valid. Utter v. Franklin, 172 U. S. 416, 43 L. ed. 498, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 183.

Three grounds are now urged why the judgments of the lower courts should be reversed. They are:

(1) That the railroad bonds were illegally funded, without any demand having been made by the board of supervisors of Yavapai county upon the territorial loan commission for such funding.

(2) That said bonds were funded after January 1, 1897, and at a time when the board of loan commissioners were by the terms of the statute without power to fund them.

(3) That the bonds were improperly and illegally funded at a meeting of the board of loan commissioners of the territory of Arizona, at which only two members of the said board were present, the third member being absent from the territory and not in any manner consulted with reference to such funding.

[346] (1) In regard to the first ground, the supreme court of the territory has held that it was not necessary that a demand should be made by the municipal authorities, but that the *holders of the bonds could themselves make it by virtue of § 7 of the territorial funding act of Arizona, approved March 19, 1891. The 7th section of that act reads as follows:

"Sec. 7. Any person holding bonds, warrants, or other evidence of indebtedness of the territory, or any county, municipality, or school district within the territory, existing and outstanding on the 31st day of December, 1890, may exchange the same for the bonds issued under the provisions of this act at not less than their face or par value, and the accrued interest at the time of exchange; but no indebtedness shall be redeemed at more than its face value and any interest that may be due thereon."

Where a holder of bonds had made the demand it was held sufficient under that section. Bravin v. Tombstone (Ariz.) 56 Pac. 719; Yavapai County v. McCord (Ariz.) 59 Pac. 99.

This construction of the territorial act by the supreme court of Arizona we think was correct, and that it was not necessary in order to obtain a refunding of the bonds that the demand for the same must be made by the municipal authorities.

(2) It appears from the records that the bonds were funded after January 1, 1897, and it is objected that there was no power on the part of the board of loan commissioners to fund such bonds after that date.

The act of Congress under which this question arises was approved June 6, 1896 (29 Stat. at L. 262, chap. 339), and is set forth in the margin.†

[347] *The supreme court of Arizona has decided

†Chap. 339. An Act Amending and Extending the Provisions of an Act of Congress Entitled "An Act Approving with Amendments the Funding Act of Arizona," Approved June Twenty-fifth, Eighteen Hundred and Ninety, and the Act Amendatory Thereof and Supplemental Thereto Approved August Third, Eighteen Hundred and Ninety-four.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the provisions of the acts of Congress approved June twenty-fifth, eighteen hundred and ninety, and August third, eighteen hundred and ninety-four, authorizing the funding of certain indebtedness of the territory of Arizona, are hereby amended and this contention against the defendants upon the authority of its previous decisions in Gage v. McCord (Ariz.) 51 Pac. 977, decided in 1898, which was approved in Yavapai County v. McCord (Ariz.) 59 Pac. 99, decided in November, 1899. In the first-mentioned case the following is that portion of the opinion which discusses this particular objection:

"Stress is put upon the clause 'until January first, eighteen hundred and ninety-seven,' found in § 1 of the act, as bearing out the view that the purpose and intent of Congress was to limit the time within which the loan commissioners might act, and to require the completion of the work of funding, by the sale and disposition of bonds and the liquidation of the indebtedness allowed by this and prior acts to be funded. *by January 1, 1897. Even were we re-[348] stricted to the more literal meaning of the words used in construing remedial statutes of this kind, the narrow and circumscribed view thus taken of the statute can hardly be justified if regard be had to the whole of the statute, including the plain purpose of the act as expressed in its title. In the latter, it is clearly stated to be an amendment of previous statutes, and the extension and enlargement of their provisions. Again, an analysis of the body of the act bears out the view that, instead of the purpose being to limit or restrict the exercise of any powers, rights, or privileges previously granted, the legislative will was to add to, extend, and enlarge these. The 1st section contains two general provisions—one authorizing the amendment and extension of the congressional acts approved, respectively, June 25, 1890, and August 3, 1894, so as to include in their provisions 'all outstanding obligations' of the territory; the other directing the funding of all outstanding bonds, warrants, and other evidences of indebtedness of the territory, as well as of the counties, municipalities, and school districts thereof, which had been authorized by legislative enactments, and which bore a higher rate of interest than is authorized by the funding law, and which had been sold or exchanged in good faith. The 2d section likewise has reference to two classes of indebtedness, both of which are recognized obviously so as to confirm, approve, validate, and effectually fix their status as binding obligations upon the territory.

"The acts of June 25, 1890, and August 3, extended so as to authorize the funding of all outstanding obligations of said territory, and the counties, municipalities, and school districts thereof, as provided in the act of Congress approved June twenty-fifth, eighteen hundred and ninety, until January first, eighteen hundred and ninety-seven, and all outstanding bonds, warrants and other evidences of indebtedness of the territory of Arizona, and the counties, municipalities, and school districts thereof, heretofore authorized by legislative enactments of said territory bearing a higher rate of interest than is authorized by the aforesaid funding act approved June twenty-fifth, eighteen hundred and ninety, and which said bonds, warrants, and other evidences of indebtedness have been sold

1894, being referred to, we must therefore consider the act of June 6, 1896, in pari materia with the former. The former act confirmed and approved, with amendments, chapter 1, title 31, Rev. Stat., passed by the territorial legislature March 10, 1887. These amendments had reference to the rate of interest, the time bonds issued for funding purposes should run, and as to what indebtedness might be funded; the act being amended in this particular to include county, municipal, and school indebtedness. Congress added to the legislative enactment a provision that in effect validated a class of obligations otherwise invalid, because incurred in violation of the organic law of the territory, *as found in the 'Harrison act,' and provided for the funding of all the then existing and outstanding indebtedness, and that which might thereafter be evidenced by warrants issued for the necessary and current expenses of carrying on territorial, county, municipal, and school government for the year ending December 31, 1890, and added to the foregoing the declaration that thereafter no warrants, certificates, or other evidences of indebtedness should be allowed to issue or be legal when the same is in excess of the limit prescribed by the Harrison act. The act of August 3, 1894, provided 'that an act entitled "An Act Approving, with Amendments, the Funding Act of Arizona," approved June twenty-fifth, eighteen hundred and ninety, and paragraph twenty-two hundred and fifty-two (§ 15) of said act, be and the same is hereby amended by adding thereto as follows: "Provided, further, however, that the present outstanding warrants, certificates, and other evidences of indebtedness issued subsequent to December thirty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety, for the necessary and current expenses of carrying on the territorial government only, together with such warrants as may be issued for such purpose for the years ending December thirty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-four, and December thirty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, may also be funded and bonds issued for the redemption thereof; and thereafter no warrants, certificates or other evidences of indebtedness shall be allowed to issue, or to be legal where the same is in excess of the limit prescribed by the Harrison act."' It is to be noted that, in both the acts referred to, the only limitation imposed had reference to the class of obligations which were permitted to be funded, and did not in any manner restrict the territorial officers in the method of their procedure previously prescribed by the territorial law, or limit the time within which the acts of funding, by the sale and disposition of bonds, might lawfully be done. Bearing in mind the remedial character of this legislation, and reading the act of June 6, 1896, in the light of the previous congressional enactments upon the same subject-matter, we construe the former act to express only what obviously appears to be the congressional intent, viz., *to extend and enlarge the class of obligations which may be funded, and not to limit the time within which the board of loan commissioners might complete the acts of funding indebtedness, which has expressly been recognized by Congress as fundable. We therefore read § 1 of this act as authorizing the funding of all obligations of the territory which existed and were outstanding prior to January 1, 1897, and not as limiting the sale and disposition of bonds for funding purposes by the loan commissioners to the absurdly short period of six months for the successful accomplishment of the funding of the varied class of obligations validated and recognized by the act as fundable, and which necessarily amounted to large sums. It is not to be assumed that Congress would in one breath grant liberal and generous concessions, and in the next breath take away their practical benefits by the imposition of a seemingly unreasonable and unnecessary restriction, and thus defeat its own purpose and intent. It is to be noted that no contention is made that any of the indebtedness proposed to be funded by the sale and disposition of the bonds in question has been incurred since January 1, 1897, but the sole contention is as to the time within which the funding of the territorial indebtedness as limited by law may be done."

We are disposed to agree with the conclusions arrived at by the territorial supreme court. While it may be said that by the strict letter of the statute of 1896 there could be no funding of a bond after January 1, 1897, although the bond had been issued long prior to that date and represented an indebtedness of the county, which was provided for by the act of 1896, yet taking into consideration the series of acts which have been passed and the provisions made therein relating to the funding of the indebtedness of the territory and of the various counties and other municipal divisions therein, we or exchanged in good faith in compliance with the terms of the acts of the legislature by which they were authorized, shall be funded, with the interest thereon, which has accrued and may accrue until funded into the lower interest-bearing bonds, as provided by this act.

Sec. 2. That all bonds and other evidences of indebtedness heretofore funded by the loan commission of Arizona under the provisions of the act of Congress approved June twenty-fifth, eighteen hundred and ninety, and the act amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto approved August third, eighteen hundred and ninety-four, are hereby declared to be valid and legal for the purposes for which they were issued and funded; and all bonds and other evidences of indebtedness heretofore issued under the authority of the legislature of said territory, as hereinbefore authorized to be funded, are hereby confirmed, approved, and validated, and may be funded, as in this act provided, until January first, eighteen hundred and ninety-seven: Provided, That nothing in this act shall be so construed as to make the government of the United States liable or responsible for the payment of any of said bonds, warrants, or other evidences of indebtedness by this act approved, confirmed, and made valid, and authorized to be funded.

Approved June 6, 1896.

think the intent of Congress was to provide that there should be no funding of bonds or other indebtedness which arose subsequently to January 1, 1897, the date named in the statute, and that date was named as the limit of the indebtedness that could be refunded, and the statute was not intended to limit the mere process of exchanging one bond [351] for the other to the time specified. *There was no special reason for a limitation of time for the mechanical exchange of bonds under the statute, so long as the time was limited which applied to the indebtedness to be recognized.

Although bonds executed by many counties in favor of railroads had been held invalid because the acts of the legislature of Arizona permitting the counties to issue such bonds were violations of the restrictions imposed upon the territorial legislature by Congress (Lewis v. Pima County, 155 U. S. 54, 39 L. ed. 67, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22), yet the legislative assembly of the territory of Arizona had adopted a memorial asking Congress to pass such curative legislation in regard to such bonds as would protect the bondholders, when such bonds had been issued under the authority of the acts of the territorial legislature. A copy of the memorial is to be found in the report of the case of Utter v. Franklin, 172 U. S. 416, 421, 43 L. ed. 498, 500, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 183.

It was, therefore, the desire of the territory of Arizona to have the bonds validated, and that they should be paid, and to pay them. We think it quite plain that the 2d section of the Federal statute of June 6, 1896, was passed in response to the request of the legislature of Arizona. When these bonds were validated by such statute it would seem hardly reasonable that the short period of six months from June 6, 1896, to January 1, 1897, should be given, not alone for their presentation and exchange, but also for all the indebtedness mentioned in that act; while, on the contrary, having made all such bonds valid, it would seem to be quite reasonable that the limitation of time provided for in the Federal act referred to the character of indebtedness which was to be limited, and not to the particular time when the bonds were actually to be exchanged.

It is to be noted that by the acts prior to that of June 6, 1896, there was no limit whatever placed upon the time for the board of loan commissioners to act upon the funding of the indebtedness of the territory, but the limitation was in regard to the time when the debts which were to be refunded were created. The only limit named in the act of Congress of June 25, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 175, chap. 614), was as to the date when the indebtedness was created. Section 7 of the territorial act of March 19, 1891, [352] it *will be perceived, did not limit the date of refunding but did limit the indebtedness to that which was existing or outstanding on December 31, 1890. By the act of Congress approved August 3, 1894 (28 Stat. at L. 224, chap. 200), the time for the creation of debts of the territory which might be funded was extended from December 1, 1890, to December 31, 1895, which was over a year beyond the date of the passage of the act, but the time of refunding was not limited.

In none of these acts, as stated, was there any limitation as to the time of refunding, but the limitation in each was in regard to the indebtedness which was to be refunded. Upon consideration of all the circumstances existing when the various acts of Congress were passed, we are inclined to concur with the supreme court of Arizona on the construction it has placed upon the act of Congress of 1896. While we admit that it is against the strict letter of the statute, we think the construction adopted is within its clear meaning and intention.

(3) The last objection raised to the validity of the funding is that the bonds were improperly and illegally funded at a meeting of the board of loan commissioners of the territory of Arizona, at which only two members of the board were present, the third member being absent from the territory, and not in any manner consulted with reference to the funding.

There is a statute of Arizona (Rev. Stat. § 2932, subdiv. 2) which reads as follows: "All words purporting to give a joint authority to three or more public officers or other persons shall be construed as giving such authority to a majority of such officers or other persons, unless it shall be otherwise expressly declared in the law giving the authority."

The objection is made that the loan commissioners of Arizona obtained their authority from the act of Congress, and not from the territorial legislature, and hence the statute above referred to does not apply. The territory of Arizona passed an act in 1887 known as the Revised Statutes, in which was "Title XXXI. Funding." That act, by § 2039, created the governor of the territory, together with the territorial auditor and the territorial secretary, and their successors in office, a board of commissioners to be styled the "Loan Commissioners of the *Territory of Arizona," who should have and [353] exercise the powers and perform the duties provided for in the act, which gave them power to provide for the payment of the existing territorial indebtedness and such future indebtedness as might be authorized by law, and granted them power to issue negotiable coupon bonds of the territory under the conditions named in the act. This act was somewhat amended and then approved by Congress June 25, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 175, chap. 614). The powers of the commissioners have been extended from time to time. It is claimed that the power vested in them came from Congress instead of the territorial legislature, and that therefore the statute relating to the exercise of powers given to a board of public officers does not apply.

We think that the territorial statute, although approved by Congress, is the foundation for the appointment of the loan commissioners, and that the body thus created comes directly within the provisions of the Arizona statute just referred to. Upon this subject it was said by the supreme court of Arizona as follows:

"There is no provision in the funding act of 1887, as amended by Congress in 1890, that the commissioners should jointly act, but the board was treated as a unit. The funding act is not a strictly congressional act: it is a territorial act, passed by the legislature of the territory and embodied in the Revised Statutes of 1887. For the purpose of assuring the validity of the act, and of placing any issuance of bonds under it beyond dispute, the act was presented to Congress for its affirmative approval, which it gave with some few amendments, generally verbal in their nature and evidently for the purpose of making the act more specific. The title of the act passed by Congress clearly carries out that view, for the first provision of that act is 'that the act of the Revised Statutes of Arizona of 1887, known as "Title XXXI. Funding," be and is hereby amended so as to read as follows: And that as amended the same is hereby approved and confirmed, subject to future territorial legislation.' The act being a territorial act, and the commission being the creation of the Territory, is directly affected by § 2932, supra."

[354] The record does not show that the absent commissioner had *not been notified to attend the meeting at which the bonds were funded. It is not to be presumed that notice of the intended meeting was not given. Under the provisions of the territorial act, the proceedings of the board of loan commissioners were legal.

We think the three objections made by the appellants are untenable, and the judgment of the Supreme Court of Arizona was right, and must be affirmed.

SKANEATELES WATERWORKS COMPANY, Plffs. in Err., v.

VILLAGE OF SKANEATELES, E. Norman Leslie, as President of Said Village, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 354-368.)

Waterworks—implied contract of village to purchase—restrictions on right to build municipal waterworks.

An implied contract that a village will not construct its own waterworks, or provide itself therewith otherwise than by purchase or condemnation of the works of an incorporated water company, after the expiration of a contract for the supply of water by such company for a term of years, does not arise from the consent of the village to the incorporation of the company and its construction of waterworks under a franchise that is not exclusive and which does not require the village to take water of that company, where the statutes give the village merely the right, without imposing upon it any express liability, to condemn such waterworks, and also preclude the village from making an express contract for a water supply for more than five years without a vote of the electors.

[No. 134.]

Argued January 24, 27, 1902. Decided March 3, 1902.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of New York to review a judgment in favor of a village in a suit to restrain it from constructing a waterworks system. Affirmed.

See same case below, in New York Court of Appeals, 161 N. Y. 154, 46 L. R. A. 687, 55 N. E. 562, and in New York Supreme Court, 33 App. Div. 642, 53 N. Y. Supp. 1115.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

*This is a writ of error to the supreme [355] court of the state of New York, the record having been remitted to that court from the court of appeals after the hearing of an appeal to the latter court and an affirmance by it of the judgment appealed from. 161 N. Y. 154, 46 L. R. A. 687, 55 N. E. 562.

The action was brought by the water company to restrain the village of Skaneateles and the individual defendants, its officers, from proceeding further with the construction of a waterworks system, or from doing anything in furtherance of the construction or operation of any system of waterworks for that village. The plaintiff claimed that the village ordinance under which the proposed action on the part of the village was taken was void as impairing the obligation of a contract between plaintiff and the village; also, that its action, if continued, would result in the taking of plaintiff's property without due process of law; that the action of the defendant, if permitted, would result in the taking of private property for public use without compensation; and that such legislation denied to plaintiff the equal protection of the laws.

The defendants answered denying the contentions of plaintiff, and the case was referred to a referee for trial, who, after hearing the parties, reported that the defendants were entitled to judgment, dismissing the complaint upon the merits, with costs, and judgment was thereupon entered which was affirmed by the appellate division of the supreme court of the state and upon appeal by the court of appeals.

*As matters of fact the referee in his re- [356] port found that the plaintiff was a domestic corporation organized under the act of 1873, chap. 737, and the several acts amendatory thereof; that the village of Skaneateles was a municipal corporation and the individual defendants were respectively the president, water commissioners, and trustees of the village. On April 5, 1887, the village granted a franchise to the plaintiff to maintain and operate within the village of Skaneateles a system of waterworks for furnishing the village and its inhabitants pure and wholesome

NOTE.—On the exclusiveness of franchise granted to water companies—see note to Re Barre Water Co. (Vt.) 9 L. R. A. 195.
184 U. S.

water upon the terms and conditions stated in the franchise. The plaintiff constructed the waterworks under this franchise and completed it about the year 1889 and put the same in operation; that the system was a complete and adequate one, no complaint having been made that the water furnished by the plaintiff was not pure and wholesome, or that it had been inadequate for the purposes for which the system was erected. Prior to this time the village of Skaneateles was not supplied with water by any company or corporation, nor did it possess any system of its own; that since its incorporation, and for the purpose of carrying on its works, the plaintiff had encumbered its property by mortgages to secure the payment of bonds issued by it, which bonds were outstanding at the time of the trial. After the erection and completion of the waterworks and on February 1, 1891, the plaintiff and defendants entered into a contract for the supply of water and the erection of hydrants and for the payment of certain compensation therefor by the defendants; that such contract was limited by its terms to the period of five years from February 1, 1891, and that it has not been renewed since the time of its expiration on February 1, 1896; that after such time, without any proceeding to vacate or annul the franchise of the plaintiff, or to dissolve the corporation, the defendant Leslie, as president of the village, appointed some of the other defendants to be water commissioners of the village, having in contemplation the purpose of constructing for said village a waterworks system of its own; that the persons so appointed commissioners entered upon the performance of their duties, called a meeting of the electors of the village, who voted in [357] favor of municipal ownership of the waterworks, and after such election the water commissioners issued or caused to be issued bonds of the village to the amount of $30,000, which they sold for the purpose of obtaining money to construct a waterworks system of its own; that the board of water commissioners of the village have entered into a contract for the construction of waterworks for said village, and have expended thereon about the sum of $24,000, and the works are substantially completed; that all of the proceedings were taken without instituting any proceeding to condemn the property of the plaintiff herein, although the plaintiff offered to participate in a proceeding looking towards the condemnation of its property; that the works of the plaintiff were constructed at large expense and its property rights and franchise mortgaged to secure its bonds which had been issued, and the income of the plaintiff from the operation of its plant had been insufficient to meet its outgoing expenses, and will be insufficient to meet its outgoing expenses when it shall cease to furnish water to the village of Skaneateles.

As conclusions of law the referee held:

(1) That the village of Skaneateles was not required to institute proceedings to condemn the property of the plaintiff before commencing the construction of a waterworks system for the use of the village.

(2) That the consent of the village of Skaneateles to the organization of the plaintiff as a waterworks company, and the making of a contract by the village of Skaneateles with the plaintiff for the supply of pure and wholesome water, did not vest in plaintiff the exclusive right to furnish said village with water, or prevent the village from granting to another corporation the right to supply water within the said village, or the village from constructing and maintaining a waterworks system to supply itself with water.

(3) That subsequently to February 1, 1896, no contractual relations existed between the plaintiff and the village of Skaneateles, and the village was not under legal obligation to enter into any contract with the plaintiff after that date, or to continue to take water from the plaintiff; but was entitled to construct and maintain a waterworks system of its own.

* (4) That the defendants were entitled to [358] judgment dismissing the complaint upon the merits with costs, and judgment was ordered accordingly.

Though not, perhaps, material upon the legal rights of the parties, yet it is seen from correspondence found in the record that prior to the expiration of the contract in February, 1896, the company gave notice to the village that it intended to increase its rents for hydrants, etc., to $50, which sum was $10 per hydrant more than it was entitled to under the franchise granted it, and $20 more than the sum named in the expiring contract. The village authorities refused to pay the increase, and the water company, on learning it had under its franchise the right to charge but $40 per hydrant, reduced its demand, but the parties failed to agree, and the contract expired. After its expiration the company notified the village that the hydrants had been closed and that there must be no interference with them, even in case of fire. Both parties became somewhat excited, it would seem, and it resulted in the village taking proceedings under chapter 181 of the Laws of 1875, and its amendments, for erecting and operating waterworks of its own.

Mr. Charles A. Hawley argued the cause, and, with Mr. George Barrow, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The grantor of a franchise agrees that it will do nothing repugnant to its grant.

Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 700, sub nom. Union P. R. Co. v. United States, 25 L. ed. 496; Greenwood v. Union Freight R. Co. 105 U. S. 13, 26 L. ed. 961; Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 87, 137, 3 L. ed. 162. 178; People v. O'Brien, 111 N. Y. 1, 2 L. R. A. 255, 18 N. E. 692.

In the grant of a franchise is the implied agreement on the part of the state that the grantee shall forever enjoy the rights granted, unless there are words of limitation.

Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 184 U. S.

Wheat. 518, 4 L. ed. 629; Fletcher v. Peek, 6 Cranch, 87, 137, 3 L. ed. 162, 178.

All corporations, in the absence of express restrictions, have the implied power to do all acts that may be necessary to enable them to exercise the powers expressly conferred, and to accomplish the objects for which they were created.

Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Keokuk & H. Bridge Co. 131 U. S. 385, 33 L. ed. 161, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770; Fort Worth City Co. v. Smith Bridge Co. 151 U. S. 294, 38 L. ed. 167, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339; Jacksonville, M. P. R. & Nav. Co. v. Hooper, 160 U. S. 514, 40 L. ed. 515, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; 7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 699; Pearshall v. Great Northern R. Co. 161 U. S. 646, 40 L. ed. 838, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705; People ex rel. Woodhaven Gaslight Co. v. Deehan, 153 N. Y. 528, 47 N. E. 787.

Contracts may be created without express words, i. e., by the acts of the parties; and these contracts are as much within the protection of the contract clause of the Federal Constitution as any other contracts.

Fisk v. Police Jury, 116 U. S. 131, 29 L. ed. 587, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 329.

Every valuable privilege given by the charter, and which conduced to an acceptance of it and an organization under it, is a contract.

Piqua Branch of State Bank v. Knoop, 16 How. 369, 14 L. ed. 977.

Franchises of the character under consideration are contracts.

Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77.

When a municipality makes a contract, or enters into contractual relations with another, it may make itself liable upon implied contracts, or covenants, just as individuals and private corporations may, if within the scope of their powers, to be deduced by inference from authorized corporate acts, without either vote, deed, or writing.

Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 459; 15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 1081; New York v. Second Ave. R. Co. 32 N. Y. 261.

When the government, possessing the power of choosing whether it will itself engage in the performance of a public duty, or contract with a private corporation, makes choice of the private corporation, it agrees with such private corporation to waive its own right.

Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; White v. Meadville, 177 Pa. 643, 34 L. R. A. 567, 35 Atl. 693.

The defendant municipality, as the owner and operator of a system of waterworks, is not in any sense the competitor or rival of the plaintiff.

White v. Meadville, 177 Pa. 643, 34 L. R. A. 567, 35 Atl. 693.

The reserved power of the legislature to alter or amend cannot be resorted to, to enable the grantor to take back for its own uses and purposes the rights and privileges which it granted.

184 U. S.

Shields v. Ohio, 95 U. S. 319, 24 L. ed. 357; Miller v. New York, 15 Wall. 478, 21 L. ed. 98; Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 700, sub nom. Union P. R. Co. v. United States, 25 L. ed. 496.

A repeal of the charter of a corporation does not carry with it the destruction of a franchise granted to the corporation.

People v. O'Brien, 111 N. Y. 40, 2 L. R. A. 255, 18 N. E. 692; Greenwood v. Union Freight R. Co. 105 U. S. 13, 26 L. ed. 961.

The prohibition of the 14th Amendment against depriving a person of his property without due process of law is a restriction on every branch of government, and applies to the acts of a political subdivision of the state under a delegation of the authority of its legislature.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 L. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581.

Corporations are protected equally with natural persons.

Smyth v. Ames. 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 560, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198.

The property of the plaintiff when, in 1896, under delegated authority, the defendant village organized a board of water commissioners, consisted first of its franchise.

Gulf & S. I. R. Co. v. Hewes, 183 U. S. 66, 46 L. ed. 26, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26.

Such franchise was not the exclusive privilege of supplying the village and its inhabitants with water, but it was the privilege of supplying the village and its inhabitants on equal terms with all other corporations and individuals. This right or privilege of equality in the service to be rendered was an "essential attribute" of the plaintiff's property; and to deprive one of an essential attribute of his property without due process of law is as much within the constitutional inhibition as depriving him of the property itself.

Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636; Pumpelly v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 13 Wall. 166, 20 L. ed. 557; Wynehamer v. People, 13 N. Y. 378; People ex rel. Manhattan Sav. Inst. v. Otis, 90 N. Y. 48. See also State v. Julow, 129 Mo. 163, 29 L. R. A. 257, 31 S. W. 781; Janesville v. Carpenter, 77 Wis. 288, 8 L. R. A. 808, 46 N. W. 128.

The question turns in part upon a consideration of the question whether the laws operate on the plaintiff and defendant alike.

Duncan v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 377, 38 L. ed. 485, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Giozza v. Tiernan, 148 U. S. 657, 37 L. ed. 599, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462, 35 L. ed. 225, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577; Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. ed. 232, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Story, Const. § 1935.

And whether the plaintiff is exempted from the exercise of the unequal or arbitrary power of the government.

Ibid.; Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U. S. 114, 32 L. ed. 623, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; Caldwell v. Texas, 137 U. S. 692, 34 L. ed. 816, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.

"Due process of law" does not mean merely an act of the legislature.

Dorman v. State, 34 Ala. 216.

The guaranty of the equal protection of the laws relates as well to corporations as to natural persons.

Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Beckwith, 129 U. S. 26, 32 L. ed. 585, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Home Ins. Co. v. New York, 134 U. S. 594, 33 L. ed. 1025, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 593; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581.

And it is a denial of the equal protection of the laws to discriminate in legislation between different corporations and natural persons engaged in the same business.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 19 Fed. 679; San Matco County v. Southern P. R. Co. 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 733.

Under this act the property taken under the guise of taxes is taken under the exercise of the power of eminent domain, and not under the power of taxation.

People ex rel. Griffin v. Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 419, 55 Am. Dec. 266.

By operation of the law which the village itself made "the law of the state," the plaintiff was deprived of its right to consider the defendant even a possible patron. In other words, it was deprived of its franchise,—the privilege which had been granted to it of supplying the defendant,—which was its property.

Gulf & S. I. R. Co. v. Heeces, 183 U. S. 66, ante, 86, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26.

Messrs. M. F. Dillon and William G. Tracy argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error:

The rule is fully established that public grants are to be construed against the grantee; that acts granting franchises to corporations are to be construed strictly according to their terms; that the party accepting the franchise takes nothing by implication against the power making the grant, or against other corporations or individuals; that the only contract on the part of the grantor is that it will not do any act, or refrain from doing any act, other than to allow the exercise of the franchise.

Syracuse Water Co. v. Syracuse, 116 N. Y. 167, 5 L. R. A. 516, 22 N. E. 381; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. ed. 516, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252; Re Brooklyn, 143 N. Y. 596, 26 L. R. A. 270, 38 N. E. 983, Affirmed in 166 U. S. 685, 41 L. ed. 1165, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718; Warsaw Waterworks Co. v. Warsaw, 16 App. Div. 502, 44 N. Y. Supp. 870, 161 N. Y. 176, 55 N. E. 486; Louisville Gas Co. v. Citizens' Gaslight Co. 115 U. S. 683, 29 L. ed. 510, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; Fort Plain Bridge Co. v. Smith, 30 N. Y. 44; Hamilton Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Hamilton, 146 U. S. 258, 36 L. ed. 963, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90; Colby University v. Canandaigua, 69 Fed. 671; Auburn & C. Pl. Road Co. v. Douglass, 9 N. Y. 444.

A municipality cannot, without express legislative authority, grant exclusive rights.

Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. §§ 692-696; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Cincinnati Gaslight & Coke Co. 18 Ohio St. 262; Indianapolis v. Indianapolis Gaslight & Coke Co. 66 Ind. 396; Norwich Gaslight Co. v. Norwich City Gas Co. 25 Conn. 19.

A municipal corporation can bind itself by contract only so far as it is authorized to do so by statute. It cannot enter into an agreement to take water forever from a water corporation, unless authorized to do so by the legislature. It cannot curtail by contract the right to exercise the powers vested in its legislative board.

Syracuse Water Co. v. Syracuse, 116 N. Y. 167, 5 L. R. A. 516, 22 N. E. 381.

Municipal corporations have no power as parties to make contracts which shall control or embarrass their legislative powers and duties.

New York v. Second Ave. R. Co. 32 N. Y. 261.

The remedy against unwise or unjust modes of taxation is to be sought from the legislative department of the government, and not from the judiciary.

People ex rel. Griffin v. Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 419, 55 Am. Dec. 266; People v. Home Ins. Co. 92 N. Y. 347.

It is only where a tax law transcends the legislative power that the courts can interfere.

People ex rel. Panama R. Co. v. New York Tax Comrs. 104 N. Y. 250, 10 N. E. 437.

The power of the legislature over the subject of taxation, except as limited by constitutional restrictions, is unbounded.

Re Van Antwerp, 56 N. Y. 265.

The two clauses of the Constitution which declare that no person shall be deprived of his property without due process of law, and that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation, have no application to the exercise of the taxing power.

People ex rel. Crowell v. Lawrence, 41 N. Y. 140; Howell v. Buffalo, 37 N. Y. 270.

It is a part of the legitimate exercise of the state power of taxation to ascertain, subject to no judicial review, the public burdens to be borne, and the persons or classes of persons who are to bear them.

Brewster v. Syracuse, 19 N. Y. 118.

The legislature has power to authorize the condemnation of any property for a public use.

West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 507, 12 L. ed. 535.

This includes franchises of every description, whether exclusive or not, and it is not apparent how the exercise of such power is unconstitutional upon the ground that it deprives water corporations of the equal protection of the laws.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 5th ed. § 341.

*Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the [358] above statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

The power of this court to review the judgment of the New York court of appeals is limited to a consideration of the question whether any right of the plaintiff's protected by the Federal Constitution has been denied by the judgment. Whether the plaintiff is entitled to relief under the facts disclosed in the record upon general principles of equitable jurisdiction is not a matter for us to inquire into so long as the question does not involve the constitutional rights of the plaintiff.

[359] *The claim is made that the ordinance adopted by the authorities of the village of Skaneateles in 1896, providing in substance for the erection and operation of a water system by the village, which ordinance was passed pursuant to an authority of the legislature under the act, chapter 181 of the Laws of 1875, and amendments (giving authority to cities and villages to build their own waterworks), impaired the obligations of the contract existing between the village and the company. The contract to which reference is made is not the one which was entered into in 1891 between these parties for the term of five years, because that contract was fully carried out and had expired by its own limitation in February, 1896, but it is the contract which the plaintiff in error claims was implied by reason of its organization and incorporation in 1887, in pursuance of an application made to, and with the consent of, the village authorities, and under the provisions of chapter 737 of the Laws of New York of 1873, and the acts amendatory thereof. It is said the village at the time of plaintiff's incorporation had the election to do the work itself under the above act of 1875, or to confer upon a private company like the plaintiff, under the act of 1873, the right to do it, and when with these two different methods for obtaining a supply of water the village chose that which called for a supply by a private company, it impliedly contracted that it would not itself thereafter take the other method for obtaining such supply, unless it bought the plant of the company or condemned it under the provisions of the act of 1875. This, it is said, was implied in the grant made by the village. Sections 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5 of the act of 1873, under which the plaintiff was incorporated, are set forth in the margin.†

†Chap. 737, Laws of 1873.

Sec. 1. Any number of persons not less than seven may hereafter organize in any town or village of this state a waterworks company, under the provisions of this act.

Sec. 2. Whenever any persons to the number of seven or more shall organize for the purpose of forming a waterworks company in any of the towns or villages in this state, they shall present to the town or village authorities an application, setting forth the persons who propose to form said company, the proposed capital stock thereof, the proposed number and character of the shares of such capital stock, and the name or names of the streams, ponds, springs, lakes, or other sources and their locations, from which water is to be supplied. Such applications shall be signed by the persons who propose to form said company, and shall contain a request that the said town or village authorities shall consider the application of said company to supply said town or village of this state, or the inhabitants thereof, with pure and wholesome water. Upon the presentation of such application, the authorities of any town or village, which authorities are for the purposes of this act defined to consist for incorporated villages and towns, the board of trustees and supervisor, and for all other towns, the supervisor, justices of the peace, town clerk, and commissioner of highways. Said authorities shall within thirty days of the presentation of said application determine by a vote of a majority of the authorities of said town or village, whether said application shall be granted; and the authorities of any town or village in this state are hereby authorized and empowered to make such determination, and when the same shall be made, to sign a certificate to that effect, and immediately transmit the same to the persons making such application or either of them. Duplicate certificates of such determination shall be filed in the office of the clerk of said town or village, and in the office of the county clerk of the county in which said town or village granting such application shall be situated. The persons named in such application shall thereupon meet and organize as a waterworks company under such corporate name as they may select. They shall file in the office of the secretary of state a certificate of such organization. Said certificate shall contain the name of the corporation, the names of the members of said corporation and their residences, the amount of capital stock, the location of the office of said company. Such certificate shall be subscribed and sworn to by the president of said corporation, and shall be attested by the secretary thereof. Upon the filing of said certificate said waterworks company shall be known and deemed a body corporate, and shall be capable of suing and being sued by the corporate name which they shall have selected, in any of the courts of this state. The capital stock of said company shall be paid in the manner and within the time provided by the "Act to Authorize the Formation of Corporations for Manufacturing, Mechanical, or Chemical Purposes," passed February 17th, 1848, and the several amendments thereto, and the stockholders of said companies shall be personally liable for the debts of said companies in the same manner and to the same extent as is provided by said act and the amendments thereto.

Sec. 3. Said corporation shall have power to take and hold real estate for the purpose of their corporation, and may have, hold, and occupy any of the waters of this state; provided, however, that nothing herein contained shall be deemed to infringe upon any private right which shall not have been the subject of an agreement and lease or purchase by said corporation. Provided, that said company shall have no power to take or use water from any of the canals of this state or any canal reservoirs as feeders or any streams which have been taken by the state for the purpose of supplying the canals with waters.

Sec. 4. Any corporation organized under the provisions of this act may, and they are hereby authorized and empowered, to lay their water pipes in any streets or avenues or public places, in any streets or avenues of an adjoining town or village, to the town or village where their application shall have been granted.

Sec. 5. Said corporations are authorized and empowered to supply the authorities or inhabitants of any town or village where they may have organized with pure and wholesome water, at such rates and cost to consumers as they shall agree upon.

- [360] *Under the act of 1875, chap. 181, the village was authorized to erect and operate its own works. Provision was made in the act in detail for the organization of a board of water commissioners and the building of waterworks, the mode of paying for the same, and other matters connected with the supply of water. That part of the 22d section of the act, in *regard to the taking of the property of a private company, is set forth in the margin.†
- [361]

Pursuant to the provisions of the act of 1873, certain persons on July 5, 1887, applied to the village authorities for permission to organize a water company to supply the village with pure and wholesome water, and on that day the authorities granted the request. On August 1, 1887, a certificate was duly filed in the office of the secretary of state at Albany, by which the corporation was formed under the name of the Skaneateles Waterworks Company. Subsequently [362] to the incorporation of *the plaintiff it built the waterworks and entered into a contract with the village authorities to supply water to the village for five years from February 1, 1891.

It would seem to be clear, under the decisions of this court, that the plaintiff in applying to the village and filing its certificate with the secretary of state under the act of 1873 acquired no contract right, expressed or implied, to any exclusive privilege of using the streets of the village for supplying it with water. Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 9 L. ed. 773; Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 685, 696, 41 L. ed. 1163, 1168, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 13, 43 L. ed. 341, 347, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77. The court of appeals of New York held to the same effect in regard to a provision in the charter of Syracuse relating to the rights of a water company, the provision being similar to the charter here involved. Syracuse Water Co. v. Syracuse, 116 N. Y. 167, 5 L. R. A. 516, 22 N. E. 381, decided in 1889; also Re Brooklyn, 143 N. Y. 596, 26 L. R. A. 270, 38 N. E. 983, affirmed in this court, 166 U. S. 685, 41 L. ed. 1165, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718. Indeed, this proposition is conceded by counsel for the plaintiff, and it admits that the village, notwithstanding its grant to the plaintiff, possessed the power to grant to any other individual company the same kind of privilege it had already granted to plaintiff. But it denies the right of the village to avail itself of the authority to itself build and operate the works, given under the act of 1875, unless the plaintiff's plant be taken by purchase or condemnation.

Having before it the above act of 1873, amended in 1877, the court of appeals, in People, ex rel. Mills Waterworks Co. v. Forrest, 97 N. Y. 97, 100, decided in 1884, said that "the state authorized the formation of waterworks companies in its towns and villages (Laws of 1877, chap. 171), but it does not require one so organized to supply water to the town or village, nor does it require the town or village to take its supply of water from the company so formed."

It is true that by chapter 566 of the Laws of 1890 it was provided that the water companies "shall supply the authorities or inhabitants of any town or village . . . [through which the conduits or mains of such corporation may pass] with *pure and [363] wholesome water at reasonable rates and cost;" and the act provided that contracts might be made therefor. But there was no provision making it incumbent upon the municipal authorities to take water from any such company.

By virtue of its incorporation under this act of 1873 the plaintiff secured simply the right to be a corporation and the authority to lay its water pipes in any of the streets and avenues or public streets of the village of Skaneateles. The village, however, as stated, was under no obligation to take water from the company. That was a matter for subsequent contract between the parties. Admitting that in every grant there is an implication that the grantor will do nothing to detract from the full and complete operation of the grant itself, we cannot find any implication that, after the termination of the contract the plaintiff and defendant were empowered to make, there should be no right in the defendant to build its own system of waterworks under the statute of 1875, unless it purchased or condemned the property of the plaintiff.

There is no implied contract in an ordinary grant of a franchise, such as this, that the grantor will never do any act by which the value of the franchise granted may in the future be reduced. Such a contract would be altogether too far reaching and important in its possible consequences in the way of limitation of the powers of a municipality, even in matters not immediately connected with water, to be left to implication. We think none such arises from the facts detailed.

It is not amiss to here recall the situation at the time plaintiff became incorporated, in 1887, under the act of 1873. That act provided for the organization and incorporation of water companies which might furnish water to cities, villages, and towns of the state. There was also the act of 1875

184 U. S.

†Part of Sec. 22, Chap. 181, Laws of 1875.

Sec. 22. "Whenever any corporation shall have been organized under the laws of this state for the purpose of supplying the inhabitants of any village with water, and it shall become or be deemed necessary by the board of water commissioners herein authorized to be created, that the rights, privileges, grants, and properties of such corporation shall be required for any of the purposes of this act, the commissioners herein authorized to be created shall have the power, and it shall be their duty, to make, or cause to be made, a thorough examination of the works, rights, privileges and properties owned or held by such corporations, or any of them, and if such commissioners shall determine that said works, rights, privileges, and properties are necessary for the purposes of this act, they shall have the right to make application to the supreme court. . . ." The section then provides for taking the property by condemnation.

(chapter 181) and its amendments, granting to the village authorities the right to erect and operate a water system of their own. There was the further statutory provision (chapter 120 of the Laws of 1879, relating to the municipality, and chapter 422 of the Laws of 1885, relating to a water company), that the contracts to be entered into between the water companies and the municipal authorities should not extend beyond five years, [364] unless *there was a vote of the electors authorizing a contract for a longer period, but in no case longer than thirty years. Now, while the parties are prohibited from contracting for more than five years without a vote of the electors, which was not taken, how can it be said that when they contracted only for the time permitted by the legislature, there was nevertheless an implied contract that the village would never avail itself of the right provided by statute, without purchasing or condemning the property of the plaintiff? No such condition is stated in any statute. We cannot see any solid foundation for the claim that there was a final and conclusive election of methods by the village, out of which sprang the implied contract contended for, when the legislature at that very time prohibited a contract for more than five years. It would seem in the nature of things that the election of methods was for no longer a time than the law permitted a contract to be made under the method chosen by the village. After the expiration of that time we cannot see why the parties were not in the same condition as to their respective rights that they were in before the contract for the five years was made. Otherwise, we have the anomalous condition that the village may grant, unconditionally, the franchise to supply it with water, to another private company, while ceasing and refusing to take from the old company, and yet it cannot erect its own water system (unless it purchases or condemns the plant of the plaintiff), because it chose to enter into a contract with plaintiff for a supply of water by it for five years, although the contract has expired by its own limitation and the parties are under no legal obligation to renew it. We can appreciate the argument that the village had no right to build and use its own plant during the running of the five years' contract, but we fail to see the force of the claim that, on account of once making a contract with the plaintiff for five years, the village irrevocably bound itself by an implied contract never to build its own plant without taking by condemnation the property of the plaintiff if the parties could not agree on terms of purchase. We cannot see the logic of such contention.

The very fact that the taking of the plant [365] of a private existing *company was not made a condition for the exercise of the authority to build, granted the village by the act of 1875, shows there was no implied contract to take such property. The right to build was specifically given to the village under the act of 1785, whether any private company existed or not, and that right to build was nowhere in the statute conditioned upon a taking by the village of the plant of the private company. The act recognized the fact that there might be an existing private company, and the 22d section gave the village authority to take it, but did not compel it. It, therefore, authorized the village to build and operate its works without taking the plant of the private company. Both these acts were in existence when the plaintiff was incorporated under the act of 1873, and it took the chance of the village thereafter availing itself of the act of 1875 to build and operate, unconditionally, its own plant.
184 U. S.

When the contract for the five years had expired we look in vain for anything in either of the statutes of 1873 or 1875 upon which to base the implied contract contended for. The court below, after careful consideration of the statute of 1875, came to the conclusion that there was nothing in the language of the 22d or any other section thereof compelling the village to purchase or condemn the plant of the company, and that no contract could be implied therefrom. Chief Judge Parker, in his opinion in this case, 161 N. Y. 154, 46 L. R. A. 687, 55 N. E. 562, at page 162, L. R. A. p. 689, N. E. p. 563, says:

"On the other hand, the appellant urges that the statute authorizing villages to supply themselves with water, and permitting the acquisition of the works of any private corporation that may be supplying such municipalities with water, also makes it the duty of the water commissioners to acquire the property of the existing corporation or corporations. But after a very careful examination of the statute it seems to us very clear that this is not so. It is probable that the legislature mistakenly assumed that such authorities would not act unjustly or oppressively, but would recognize the property rights of others. Be that as it may, the right to determine whether the property of an existing waterworks corporation should be taken *or not is clearly submitted [366] to the determination of the local authorities. The refusal of the defendant, therefore, to acquire the plaintiff's property by proceedings in invitum does not tend to support the plaintiff's claim for an injunction. The defendant has done precisely what the statute authorizes, and all that remains for the court to determine is whether the act was within the legislative power, or void because in contravention of the organic law."

The judge then proceeded to discuss that question, and held that the action of the village was legal. We concur in this view. The language too plainly leaves it to the discretion and judgment of the water commissioners, to permit of any other construction. Not being bound by the statute to take the property of the plaintiff as a condition of building its own plant, there is, as we have said, no implication of a contract to do that which the statute itself does not direct.

Reference was made on the argument to two Pennsylvania cases, decided by the supreme court of that state. They are White v. Meadville, 177 Pa. 643, 34 L. R. A. 567, 35 Atl. 693, and Metzger v. Beaver Falls, 178 Pa. 1, 35 Atl. 1134. They decide what is the proper construction to be given certain statutes of that state relating to municipal corporations, and to water companies formed to supply them with water. The actions were brought by taxpayers of the municipalities to restrain the latter from erecting works of their own to supply water. The court held that under the powers given to the municipalities by those statutes, they had not the right to erect such works unless they took the plant of the water companies then operating such plant. They did not hold there was any implied contract on the part of the municipalities that they would so take the plant, or that to operate works of their own without doing so would be a taking of the property without due process of law or without making compensation, or that it would be a denial of the equal protection of the laws. The cases were maintained on equitable principles and in favor of taxpayers who were complainants, and there was no question of contract between the city and the water company upon the basis of which the actions were permitted to stand. It was a simple question of the powers granted to the *parties by the different statutes. The court said that although the city was not bound to become the owner of the works, it had no power to destroy their value by duplicating them at the expense of the taxpayers. A taxpayer was the plaintiff. The court decided no Federal question in either case. The statutes of New York are somewhat different, and the state court has come to the conclusion that under them the village was not bound to take the plant of the plaintiff. We agree in the view that there was no implied contract to take the property of plaintiff, even though the village should subsequently to the expiration of the written contract erect its own water system.

It is also plain that as there was no contract, such as is claimed by the plaintiff, the action of the village has not resulted in the taking of any of the property of the plaintiff without due process of law or without compensation. It has not taken any of the property of the plaintiff in any aspect of the case. Its action may have seriously impaired the value of the plaintiff's property, but it has taken none of it, and such decrease in value, caused by the village exercising its right to build and operate its own plant, furnishes, under the facts in this case, no foundation for the plaintiff's claim. Lehigh Water Co. v. Easton, 121 U. S. 388, 390, 30 L. ed. 1059, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 916.

In Pumpelly v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 13 Wall. 166, 20 L. ed. 557, the land of the plaintiff had been overflowed by water under a claim of right under a statute, and it was held that such continuous overflow and user amounted to a taking of the plaintiff's property.

This is not such a case. The property of the plaintiff remains wholly untouched. Its value has decreased because the village no longer takes water from it, and the inhabitants will probably also take their supply from the village works, but the plaintiff's property has not been taken, as that term is understood in constitutional law. What the village ought to do in the moral aspect of the case is, of course, not a question for us to determine.

The court of appeals has held in this case that the provisions in the statute for the taxation of the property of the company in common with other owners of property to pay the obligations *incurred in the construction of the works by the village, and all discriminating taxation of the patrons of the company, are invalid. See also Warsaw Waterworks Co. v. Warsaw, 161 N. Y. 176, 55 N. E. 486. The plaintiff is therefore freed from the obligations imposed by those provisions. [368]

The views above expressed show that there was no such contract as claimed by the plaintiff, and consequently no impairment of the obligations of any contract, and there has been no taking of plaintiff's property, nor has it been denied by the state the equal protection of the laws. The judgment of the Court of Appeals of New York is right, and must therefore be affirmed.

CITY OF DETROIT, William C. Maybury, Mayor, and Charles Flowers, Corporation Counsel, Appts.,

v.

DETROIT CITIZENS' STREET RAILWAY COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 368-399.)

Equity—remedy at law—street railways—contract rights as to rates—reduction of rates by ordinance—statutes—object expressed in title—validity of ordinance extending franchise beyond corporate life—reserved power to reduce rates.

1. The defense that complainant in a bill to restrain the enforcement of municipal ordinances reducing street railway fares as

NOTE.—On the jurisdiction of equity where remedy at law exists—see notes to Meldrum v. Meldrum (Colo.) 11 L. R. A. 65, Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards & Transit Co. (N. J. Eq.) 6 L. R. A. 855, and Tyler v. Savage, 36 L. ed. U. S. 83.

On jurisdiction of equity to prevent multiplicity of suits—see notes to Fuller v. Detroit F. & M. Ins. Co. (C. C. N. D. Ill.) 1 L. R. A. 801, and Corinth v. Locke (Vt.) 11 L. R. A. 207.

As to when the object of an act is expressed in its title—see notes to Titusville Iron Works v. Keystone Oil Co. (Pa.) 1 L. R. A. 332; People ex rel. Hart v. McElroy (Mich.) 2 L. R. A. 609; Astor v. New York Arcade R. Co. (N. Y.) 2 L. R. A. 789, and Evansville v. State ex rel. Blend (Ind.) 4 L. R. A. 93.

Contract exemptions from legislative power to fix tolls, rates, or prices.

Two cases have held that the right to fix and regulate the charges of common carriers is so

Impairing contract obligations has a plain and adequate remedy at law will not be recognized on appeal, where from the averments of the bill it appears that the enforcement of such ordinances might result in a multiplicity of suits or in harassing or expensive litigation, and might impair complainant's ability to renew or extend its mortgage indebtedness, or so reduce its income as seriously to imperil its solvency,—especially if no objection was taken to the jurisdiction of a court of equity over the subject-matter at any stage of the litigation, or insisted upon at the hearing before the appellate court.

2. A state legislature, unless prohibited by constitutional provisions, may authorize a municipal corporation to contract with a street railway company as to rates of fare, and so to bind during the specified period any future common council from altering or in any way interfering with such contract.
3. Binding agreements relative to rates of fare between a municipality and street railways organized either under the Michigan tram railway act as amended in 1861, or under the street railway act of 1867, which cannot be altered without consent of both parties, were expressly authorized by § 20 of the latter act, declaring that street railway rates shall be established by agreement between the company and the corporate authorities, the provisions of which section were by § 29 made applicable to all street railway corporations already organized and in operation.

4. An ordinance adopted under legislative authority, which provides that the rate of fare to be charged by a street railway company shall not exceed 5 cents, gives the company, when accepted by it, a contract right to charge that rate, which cannot be reduced by the city without the consent of the company under the right to prescribe from time to time rules and regulations for the running and operation of the road.
5. No permission to municipal authorities to reduce street railway fares without the con-clearly a governmental power, a matter of internal police, that the legislature cannot irrevocably give the right to charge certain fixed rates so as to preclude future legislatures from interfering with such rates. Laurel Fork & S. H. R. Co. v. West Virginia Transp. Co. 25 W. Va. 324; West Virginia Transp. Co. v. Sweetzer, 25 W. Va. 434.

So, in Griffin v. Goldshoro Water Co. 122 N. C. 206, 41 L. R. A. 240, 30 S. E. 319, the court said that water rates prescribed in a charter granted by the legislature since the adoption of the North Carolina Constitution of 1868 would be subject to revocation, and would be subject to such revocation independently of the provision of that Constitution.

And in Dillon v. Erie R. Co. 19 Misc. 116, 43 N. Y. Supp. 320, the court said that if the legislature had undertaken to preclude its successors from regulating the tolls and charges of a railroad company and its successors in interest it was open to serious question whether such act in that respect would be operative; and that the legislature had no power to divest the state of its police power.

A contrary doctrine has been maintained in a number of cases. Thus, in Pingree v. Michigan C. R. Co. 118 Mich. 314, 53 L. R. A. 274, 76 N. W. 635, it was held that the legislature may confer upon a railroad company the exclusive power to fix within a certain limit its rates for the transportation of passengers and freight, and that a subsequent attempt by the legislature to fix such rates was invalid as an impairment of the obligation of the contract.

So, a provision in a statute changing the charter of a railroad company giving it the power to fix rates, and declaring that it shall not be subject to future legislation until ten years afterward, was held to exempt the company from a subsequent act of the legislature prohibiting a charge for transportation to exceed a charge made for any shorter distance. Sloan v. Pacific R. Co. 61 Mo. 24, 21 Am. Rep. 397.

And a railroad company organized under the Ohio act of 1848, which has not relinquished its privilege under that act, is held not subject to reduction of its rates by the legislature unless it has realized a net profit on its capital for the ten years next preceding the passage of the statute. Iron R. Co. v. Lawrence Furnace Co. 29 Ohio St. 208, 49 Ohio St. 102, 30 N. E. 616.

But the validity of a reduction in such a case does not depend on the actual realization by the company of 10 per cent future profits, but the legislature must exercise its deliberate judgment in regard to such probable future profits, 184 U. S.

and a subsequent change in the condition and affairs of the company will not take it out of the operation of a statute. Iron R. Co. v. Lawrence Furnace Co. 49 Ohio St. 102, 30 N. E. 616.

Questions of the relinquishment or transfer of a charter right of exemption from legislative control of rates were involved, and the power to create such a contract exemption assumed, in Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co. v. Cole, 29 Ohio St. 126, 23 Am. Rep. 729; Shields v. State, 26 Ohio St. 86; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Gill, 156 U. S. 649, 39 L. ed. 367, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484, Affirming 54 Ark. 101, 11 L. R. A. 452, 15 S. W. 18; Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Moore, 33 Ohio St. 384, 31 Am. Rep. 543; Stone v. New Orleans & N. E. R. Co. 116 U. S. 352, 29 L. ed. 651, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349, 391; Smith v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 114 Mich. 460, 72 N. W. 328, Reversed in 173 U. S. 684, 43 L. ed. 858, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Matthews v. Corporation Comrs. 97 Fed. 400; Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 560, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198.

A change of the tolls to be charged by a boom company for rafting logs was sustained in Machias Boom v. Sullivan, 85 Me. 343, 27 Atl. 189; but here the charter of the company expressly reserved to the legislature the power of revision or alteration of the tolls.

Municipal corporations may be invested by statute with the power to bind themselves by an irrevocable contract not to regulate rates. Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport, 180 U. S. 587, 45 L. ed. 679, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co. 177 U. S. 558, 44 L. ed. 886, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736; DETROIT V. DETROIT CITIZENS' STREET R. CO.

The power of a city to contract with a gas company for the period of ten years under Ohio Rev. Stat. § 2489, is upheld in Foster v. Findlay, 5 Ohio C. C. 455; Toledo v. Northwestern Ohio Natural Gas Co. 5 Ohio C. C. 557; Manhattan Trust Co. v. Dayton, 8 C. C. A. 140, 16 U. S. App. 588, 59 Fed. 327.

And an ordinance accepted by a gas company fixing the maximum price of gas was held to be a contract which was protected against an attempt of the city to reduce the price, in State ex rel. St. Louis v. Laclede Gaslight Co. 102 Mo. 472, 14 S. W. 974, 15 S. W. 383, and this regulation of the price of gas was held not to constitute such a police governmental power that it could not be bartered away.

So, an ordinance accepted by a gas company, which provides for furnishing gas upon such terms as the common council and gas company may thereafter determine, was, in Toledo v. Northwestern Ohio Natural Gas Co. 6 Ohio N.

sent of the company below the rate at which they were fixed in compliance with the Michigan street railway act of 1867, § 20, which declares that such rates shall be established by agreement between the parties, can be implied from the further provision of that section that the rates of fare agreed upon shall not be increased without the consent of the city authorities.

6. No right to reduce street railway fares established by agreement between a city and the railway company subsequent to the amendment of March 27, 1867, to § 34 of the Michigan tram railway act, so long as by such reduction rights or franchises already granted were not destroyed or impaired, or the company deprived of granted rights of construction and operation, was given such city by the provision of that amendment forbidding municipal authorities from making any regulations or conditions which would have that effect, as such provision, being a general one, does not limit the express authority of the municipality, previously conferred by § 20 of the Michigan street railway act, to bind itself by an agreement fixing street railway fares.

7. The provision of an act entitled "An Act to Provide for the Formation of Street Railways," making such act applicable to corporations of like character already organized and in operation, is within the general object of such act as expressed in its title.
8. An ordinance renewing, upon additional conditions, the consent of a municipality to the construction and operation of a street railway through the city streets, is not invalid because by such ordinance the term of consent is extended beyond the then limit of the corporate life of such company.
9. A reservation, in an ordinance granting a street railway franchise, of the right from time to time to make such further rules, orders, or regulations as to the common council may seem proper, does not include the right

P. 531, held to be a contract which was protected against an attempt by the city to reduce the price by an ordinance passed under a subsequent statute authorizing the common council to regulate the price of gas by ordinance.

And an ordinance accepted by a street railway company, prescribing the rate of fare to be collected, is a contract which will be protected against an attempt by the city to reduce the rates. Cleveland City R. Co. v. Cleveland, 94 Fed. 385.

And in DETROIT v. DETROIT CITIZENS' STREET R. Co. an ordinance adopted under legislative authority, which provided that the rate of fare to be charged by a street railway company shall not exceed 5 cents, was held to give the company, when accepted by it, a contract right to charge that rate, which could not be reduced by the city without the consent of the company, under the right to prescribe from time to time rules and regulations for the running and operation of the road.

So, an explicit contract of a municipality with certain persons, granting them an exclusive privilege of supplying water, and an "unrestrained right to establish such rates for the supply of water to private persons as they may deem expedient, provided that such rates be general," was upheld as valid, notwithstanding a subsequent adoption of a constitution, and subsequent legislation under it, providing for the regulation of water rates, in Santa Ana Water Co. v. San Buenaventura, 56 Fed. 339. And a corporation which had succeeded to the rights of the original parties to the contract was protected in it.

In several cases general power to fix tolls, given by a charter, has been held to constitute an irrevocable contract. Thus, express power in the charter of a railroad company to demand such tolls as they think reasonable, provided they do not exceed a specified maximum, was held, in Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. v. Bowers, 4 Howst. (Del.) 506, to constitute a contract which could not be changed by subsequent legislation, if there was no reservation of power to alter the charter.

So, an exclusive power to fix passenger and freight rates, which cannot be impaired by subsequent legislation requiring the issuance of "family mileage tickets," was conferred upon the Michigan Central Railroad Company by the provision of its charter that it shall be lawful for the company to fix the tolls and charges for the transportation of property and persons, subject only to a limitation as to passengers of 3 cents a mile; and such right is not qualified by subsequent provisions empowering the company to charge such rates as shall be lawfully established by its by-laws, and to pass any necessary by-laws not conflicting with the state or Federal Constitution. Pingree v. Michigan C. R. Co. 118 Mich. 314, 53 L. R. A. 274, 76 N. W. 635.

And the Mississippi railroad commission has no power to fix the rates to be charged by a railroad company whose charter empowers it to charge its own rates within certain limits; but such commission has the right to see that the company keeps within the limits of its charter rights, and for that purpose is entitled to demand the same reports from it as from other railroad companies. Mississippi Railroad Commission v. Gulf & S. I. R. Co. 78 Miss. 750, 29 So. 789.

So, in Louisville & N. R. Co. v. McChord, 103 Fed. 216, Reversed in 183 U. S. 483, ante, 289, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165, the court thought that where a railroad charter fixed the maximum rates which the company might charge this provision might not be changed without its consent.

In Central Trust Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 81 Fed. 1, a provision in a general incorporation act empowering street railway directors to make by-laws regulating fares was held to exempt a street railway company organized under that act from any subsequent attempt of the legislature to reduce such rates in any other way than by a valid amendment of such act according to the terms of the provision therein that "this act may be amended or repealed at the discretion of the legislature."

In another case, however, arising under the same act, the supreme court of Indiana thought that the right of the legislature to regulate the fare upon street railroads organized under that act did not depend upon the reservation of the right to amend or repeal, and said: "That power would exist even if the right to amend or repeal the act had not been reserved. In order to exempt a common carrier from legislative control over its rates of fare it must appear that the exemption was made in its charter by clear and unmistakable language inconsistent with the exercise of such power of the legislature." Indianapolis v. Navin, 151 Ind. 139, 41 L. R. A. 337, 47 N. E. 525, 51 N. E. 80.

On rehearing, however, the court rested its decision upon the ground that the subsequent regulation was a valid amendment of the general incorporation act under the reserved right to amend or repeal, taking issue on this point with the decision in Central Trust Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 82 Fed. 1, supra, and said that, on the part of the city at its own pleasure to reduce the rates of fare agreed upon in such ordinance.

[No. 152.]

Argued November 4, 5, 1901. Decided March 3, 1902.

A PPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Michigan to review a decree perpetually enjoining the enforcement of municipal ordinances reducing street railway rates of fare. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

[369] *The bill in this suit was filed by the railway company for the purpose of obtaining an injunction to restrain the city of Detroit and the individual defendants from enforcing certain ordinances of the common coun-such being the case, it was not material whether the legislature would have had the power to regulate the fare upon street railways organized under that act if that provision had been omitted.

A provision in a railroad charter that the company may from time to time fix, regulate, and receive the toll and charges to be received was declared to create a valid and binding contract which cannot be impaired by subsequent legislation as to rates, in the case of Farmers' Loan, etc., Co. v. Stone (Miss.) 18 Cent. L. J. 472.

But this decision was reversed by the Supreme Court of the United States holding that such a charter provision did not constitute a contract, but left the state free, within the limits of its general authority, to declare what shall be deemed reasonable. Stone v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 116 U. S. 307, 29 L. ed. 636, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191.

A charter giving a railroad company power to adopt such tariff of charges as it might think proper, and alter and change the same at pleasure, was held by the circuit court of the United States, in Illinois C. R. Co. v. Stone, 20 Fed. 468, to constitute a contract which would be impaired by any legislative interference with its rates. The court distinguished the case from those arising in Illinois, Iowa, and Wisconsin on the ground that in the latter states the Constitutions reserved the right to the legislatures to fix rates of charges for transportation, and that there was no such constitutional reservation of power in Mississippi. The court also held that the state was attempting to regulate interstate commerce by its attempted regulation of rates. But this decision also was reversed in Stone v. Illinois C. R. Co. 116 U. S. 347, 29 L. ed. 650, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 348.

So a statute authorizing a board of directors to establish rates of toll for railroad business from time to time, and also providing that the company's tolls shall not be repugnant to the Constitution and laws of the state, does not prevent the legislature from providing for the fixing of maximum rates by railroad commissioners on the ground that the former statute was a contract the obligation of which would be impaired by the later statute. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Jones, 149 Ill. 361, 24 L. R. A. 141, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 683, 37 N. E. 247.

And subsequent legislation, whereby a limit is prescribed for railroad rates, does not impair the obligation of any contract created by a provision in a railroad charter giving the company power "from time to time to fix, regulate, and receive the tolls and charges . . .

184 U. S.

oil of the city, adopted in 1899, reducing the rates of fare on the various city railways of the complainant and providing for transfers of passengers from one route to another on payment of one fare of 5 cents, on the ground that such ordinances were violations of the Federal Constitution, because they impaired the obligation of contracts theretofore entered into between the city and the various predecessors *of the complainant. [370] The circuit court granted a decree perpetually enjoining the defendants as prayed for, and they have appealed therefrom to this court.

As further ground for equitable jurisdiction, the complainant, after setting up in the bill its alleged contracts with the city, and the attempted violation thereof by the latter, made the following averments:

"Your orator further shows unto the court to be received for transportation of property and persons," without prescribing any limit for such tolls. Dillon v. Erie R. Co. 19 Misc. 116, 43 N. Y. Supp. 320.

The exemption of railroad rates from state regulation by virtue of a charter provision must appear by such clear and unmistakable language that it cannot be reasonably construed consistently with the reservation of the power by the state. Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. v. Smith, 128 U. S. 174, 32 L. ed. 377, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47; Indianapolis v. Navin, 151 Ind. 139, 41 L. R. A. 337, 47 N. E. 525, 51 N. E. 80.

A charter provision giving a railroad company power to charge such sums for transportation of persons and property as shall seem desirable, or it shall deem reasonable, does not preclude the authority of the legislature to provide by law for a maximum of charges that it may lawfully make. Peik v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 94 U. S. 164, 24 L. ed. 97; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Ackley, 94 U. S. 179, 24 L. ed. 99; Stone v. Wisconsin, 94 U. S. 181, 24 L. ed. 102, Affirming Peik v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 6 Biss. 177, Fed. Cas. No. 11,138.

Likewise, where a grant of power to the directors of a railroad company to make by-laws, rules, and regulations for the management of its affairs is made subject to the laws of the state, it does not exempt the company from the operation of laws subsequently enacted within the scope of legislative power for the regulation of the business. Stone v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 116 U. S. 307, 29 L. ed. 636, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; Stone v. Illinois C. R. Co. 116 U. S. 347, 29 L. ed. 650, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 348.

So, the mere general provision in a railroad company's charter that it may make all needful rules, regulations, and by-laws touching the rates of toll does not constitute an irrevocable contract with the company that it shall have the right for all future time to prescribe its rates of toll free from legislative control. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702.

Again, the power of legislative regulation of railroad rates is held, in Ruggles v. Illinois, 108 U. S. 526, 27 L. ed. 812, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 832, not to be taken away by a charter provision that a railroad company shall have power to establish by-laws, rules, and regulations such as may be deemed expedient and necessary, provided they are not repugnant to the Constitution and laws of the United States or of the state, and to establish such rates of toll as they shall by their by-laws determine. It is held that such by-laws must not be repugnant to the

595

that as owner and lessee it is now engaged in the operation of upwards of 135 miles of street railways in the streets of the city of Detroit; that in such operation it has in use upwards of 400 street cars, which are propelled by electricity, and has in its employ, engaged in such operation, upwards of 1,000 men as motormen and conductors; that it carries an average of — thousand passengers per day over the lines owned and operated by it; that under and by virtue of the provisions of said ordinances, Exhibits A, B, C, D, and E, and the obligation of your orator to carry such passengers as may offer themselves for carriage, it will be subjected to innumerable demands upon the part of the traveling public to sell to such persons as may make such demands tickets in accordance with the provisions of said ordinances, Exhibits A, B, C, D, and E, and to issue as provided and required thereby, and to accept and carry such passengers and transfer the same at the rates of fare fixed by said ordinances; that on your orator's refusal to comply with such demands and requests your orator may be subjected to numerous actions at law by persons so refused, and to annoyance, litigation, and loss by reason thereof; that the said city of Detroit will seek and now seeks and threatens and intends by such power and authority as it may possess, and by vexatious legal proceedings, to compel your orator to comply with the provisions of said ordinances, Exhibits A, B, C, D, and E, and as a result your orator will be put to great loss, damage, hindrance, and annoyance in the transaction of its business, which it is entitled to carry on without such suits, litigation, actions, annoyance, hindrance, loss, and damage.

laws of the state, and the establishment of rates by such by-laws is subject to the legislative power to regulate them.

A charter giving a railroad company the exclusive right of transportation over its railroad, provided the charge shall not exceed a sum specified, does not make the provision as to rates a contract. Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. v. Smith, 70 Ga. 694.

Charter power to demand such sums as the corporation may deem reasonable for carrying freight and passengers, provided they are reasonable, does not preclude the legislature from afterwards fixing the maximum of charges, even if there is no reserved power to alter or repeal the charter. Laurel Fork & S. H. R. Co. v. West Virginia Transp. Co. 25 W. Va. 324.

A general railroad law providing that a company organized under it may charge and receive such reasonable rates as may from time to time be fixed by the company or prescribed by law does not constitute any contract with the corporation fixing the rates of charges so as to deprive the legislature of the power to regulate. Minneapolis Eastern R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 467, 33 L. ed. 985, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 224, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 473.

An implied restriction that the corporation in fixing the rates of toll shall make them reasonable is held to exist in a charter giving the corporation power to fix its own rates. Therefore, the legislature has the same power to say what are reasonable maximum charges as if the charter was silent on that point. Ruggles v. People, 91 Ill. 256; Illinois C. R. Co. v. People, 95 Ill. 313.

So, the contract right of a gas company by its charter to charge and collect reasonable rates is not impaired by a delegation of authority to the city to fix reasonable prices for gas. Capital City Gaslight Co. v. Des Moines, 72 Fed. 829.

A railroad company cannot claim that by the mere force of its legal organization and the construction of its road it has any implied contract exemption to charge reasonable rates for its services, and to differ rates when competition exists from rates applicable where there is no competition, which cannot be impaired by a constitutional enactment prohibiting railroad companies from charging more for a shorter than for a longer haul, except by permission of the railroad commission in special cases after investigation; as it must be deemed to have accepted its charter subject to the general right of the state to regulate and control the grant in the interest of the public. Louisiana & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 503, ante, 298, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95.

596

But the right to charge a reasonable rate for all gas furnished by a corporation chartered with the right to manufacture and sell gas is a right that is implied, and forms part of the charter contract. New Memphis Gas & Light Co. v. Memphis, 72 Fed. 952.

A corporation formed under a general law declaring that it may have power to collect and receive such tolls or freights as it may prescribe has a vested and contract right to charge a reasonable compensation, but not an absolute right to fix its own rates and fares. The legislature may limit the same to what is reasonable, but cannot require the corporation to accept less than a reasonable compensation. Ex parte Koehler, 11 Sawy. 37, 23 Fed. 529; Wells, F. & Co. v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 8 Sawy. 600, 15 Fed. 561.

These cases were followed in State v. Southern P. Co. 23 Or. 424, 31 Pac. 960, where the same provision was held not to constitute a contract between the state and a railroad company formed under that act, the obligation of which could not be impaired by subsequent legislation.

An ordinance fixing the price of gas to be charged by a gas company was held void, and an injunction against its enforcement was granted, in Cleveland Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Cleveland, 71 Fed. 610, on the ground that there was an implied charter right to charge a reasonable price, and that the ordinance fixed the price below what was reasonable or what the gas could be made for without loss.

A provision of a railroad charter that the rates shall be fixed by the directors providing they do not exceed a specified maximum was held in Hamilton v. Keith, 5 Bush, 458, to constitute a contract which could not be constitutionally changed by subsequent legislation.

But, overruling Hamilton v. Keith, a Kentucky statute regulating the tolls to be charged on bridges was sustained in Com. v. Covington & C. Bridge Co. 14 Ky. L. Rep. 836, 21 S. W. 1042, the court holding that a charter provision of the bridge company that its rates might be fixed by its directors, but not to exceed a certain amount, did not constitute a contract. This case was reversed by the Supreme Court of the United States (154 U. S. 204, 38 L. ed. 962, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 649, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1087) on the ground that the bridge traffic was interstate commerce and beyond the power of the state to regulate. But the decision on the question of the contract right was not touched by the Federal court. The doctrine of that case was affirmed in Winchester & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Croxton, 98 Ky. 739, 33 L. R. A. 177, 34 S. W. 518, where a charter specification of rates which

184 U. S.

"That, in full reliance upon its right to charge the full rates of fare fixed by the various contracts and grants hereinbefore referred *to, and for the purpose of procuring such money as it was necessary that it should have for the construction, maintenance, repairing and reconstruction, and operation of the various lines of railway hereinbefore described, it issued its bonds and borrowed thereon the money so needed; that your orator and its predecessors and lessors have issued for the purposes aforesaid bonds amounting in the aggregate to $8,200,000, payable in gold coin, with semi-annual interest at the rate of 5 per cent per annum; that many of said bonds mature and will be due and payable within the next three years, and it will be necessary for your orator to borrow a considerable amount of money to assist in the payment and retirement of said bonds, by the issue of bonds of the same character; that all of said bonds outstanding are secured by mortgages given at various dates, by the terms of which all of the property, rights, privileges, and franchises of your orator, its lessors and predecessors, including the franchises or rights fixed by the said various contracts and grants to charge the rates of fare therein named, together with all the tolls, fares, issues, earnings, and profits arising therefrom, have been mortgaged to trustees therein named for the use and benefit and security of the holders of such bonds; that said bonds have been sold to parties purchasing the same in the full faith and belief that your orator, its lessors and predecessors and grantors, had the right to charge the full rates of fare fixed by the various contracts and grants without any right upon it shall be lawful for a turnpike company to charge, subject to a certain increase or decrease if necessary to keep the company's dividends within certain limits, was held not to constitute an irrevocable contract between the state and the corporation, but to be merely an indication that such rates are supposed to be reasonable without precluding the subsequent exercise of legislative power to change the rates.

So, an ordinance granting an exclusive franchise to a water company with the right to use the public streets, and fixing the rates to be charged to individual consumers during the existence of the franchise, does not give a contract right to charge such rates for the whole period of the franchise, as such a provision is simply a declaration that at the time such rates are reasonable, and does not amount to a stipulation that those rates shall remain unchanged during the term of the franchise. Rogers Park Water Co. v. Fergus, 178 Ill. 571, 53 N. E. 363, Affirmed in 180 U. S. 624, 45 L. ed. 702, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490.

But a reservation by a city in a contract to reconstruct its waterworks and operate them for thirty years, of the right to regulate rates provided they be not reduced below the then existing rates, must, if valid, be deemed a limitation upon the right of the city as a municipality to regulate water rates, which will preclude it from reducing the rates by ordinance during the term below that standard, and not a mere granting back by the grantee, of the right of the city in its proprietary capacity only. Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co. 177 U. S. 558, 44 L. ed. 886, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736.

And the city cannot so reduce such rates by ordinance, even after the expiration of the term, without impairing the obligation of the contract, where it fails to pay or tender to the water company the value of the improvements as required by the contract, and insists that the company shall continue to keep the works in repair, make requisite extensions, and furnish water free for public uses as therein provided; but until it makes such payments or tender all the covenants and provisions of the contract remain in force. Los Angeles City Water Co. v. Los Angeles, 103 Fed. 711.

A statute amending the charter of a turnpike company, and changing its rates of toll, does not constitute a contract with the company so as to prevent subsequent changes of the rates. Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sanford, 14 Ky. L. Rep. 689, 20 S. W. 1031, Reversed on other grounds in 164 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 560, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198.

A provision that a plank-road company may collect the same tolls and enjoy the same privileges granted to other companies by general law does not fix the company's rates according to the general law as it then exists, but makes it subject to changes thereof which apply to other companies. Snell v. Chicago, 133 Ill. 413, 8 L. R. A. 858, 24 N. E. 532.

A statute regulating the rates of a railroad company is within the reserve power to alter its charter. Capital City Gaslight Co. v. Des Moines, 72 Fed. 829; American Coal Co. v. Consolidation Coal Co. 46 Md. 15; Shields v. State, 26 Ohio St. 86, Affirmed in 95 U. S. 319, 24 L. ed. 357; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Ryan, 56 Ark. 245, 19 S. W. 839.

And the legislature under the power reserved in a railroad charter to "at any time hereafter alter, modify, or repeal this act" has the right to fix the rate of fares which may be charged by such company without being subject to the charge of impairing the obligation of contracts. Beardsley v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 15 App. Div. 251, 44 N. Y. Supp. 175, Reversed on other grounds in 162 N. Y. 230, 56 N. E. 488.

Where the charter of a railroad company empowers it to exact tolls at its discretion, an act of the legislature restricting the rates that may be taken is an alteration of the charter within the scope of a reserved power to alter or repeal. Atty. Gen. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 35 Wis. 425.

A statute empowering city councils to regulate the price to be charged for gas may constitute a valid exercise of the power to alter the charter of a gas company. State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Cincinnati Gaslight & Coke Co. 18 Ohio St. 262.

The right of the legislature to regulate and provide for the rates at which water shall be supplied by a water company organized under the Illinois general incorporation act of 1872 is reserved by § 9 of that act, which provides that the general assembly shall have power to prescribe such regulations and provisions as it may deem advisable, which shall be binding on corporations formed under such act. Danville v. Danville Water Co. 178 Ill. 299, 53 N. E. 118.

An act creating a state corporation commission, and giving it the right to regulate railroad rates, is an exercise of the reserved power to amend or repeal the charter of a railroad company, giving it the exclusive right to regulate rate charges. Matthews v. Corporation Comrs. 97 Fed. 400.

A statute requiring railroad companies to issue mileage books good for two years, and fixing the maximum price therefor, is within the reserve power to alter, amend, or repeal the the part of the said city of Detroit, or of any other person, corporation, or authority to interfere with, lessen, reduce, or impair the same, and, the said right to have and receive the rates of fare so fixed being so mortgaged as a part of the security for the payment of said bonded indebtedness, the action of said city by the adoption of the ordinances, Exhibits A and B, is an impairment of the obligation of said contract as against the rights of said bondholders under and by virtue of the security created by said various mortgages and in contravention of said § 10 of article 1 of the Constitution of the United States."

Complainant also averred in its bill the granting of consent by the city to its predecessors to lay tracks in the streets and [372]*charge tolls at the rates named in certain ordinances, for transporting passengers, and the due assignments by the various companies of all such rights, by purchase or lease to the complainant, and the defendant by its answer makes no issue as to the validity of such assignments or the ownership by complainant of all the interests of the former companies in the contracts and ordinances set forth in the bill.

The answer admits the passage by the common council of the ordinances of 1899, reducing the rates of fare on the roads operated by the complainant, and also admits that the city intends to compel the complainant to comply with the provisions of such ordinances, which the defendants aver are valid because, as they claim, the former ordinances did not constitute a contract as to rates of fare which could not be altered by the city.

This litigation arises out of the different constructions placed by the parties upon the statutes of Michigan, called respectively the tram railway act and the street railway act, and the various amendments of those acts, and also out of the different claims of the parties as to the character and validity of the ordinances passed by the common council subsequently to the passage of those statutes.

The tram railway act was passed in 1855, and the street railway act in 1867. Prior to the amendment in 1861, made to the former act, there was no authority for the incorporation of street railways, and in the year charter of a railroad company. Smith v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 114 Mich. 460, 72 N. W. 328, Reversed in 173 U. S. 684, 43 L. ed. 858, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565.

But a statute requiring a railroad company to issue "family mileage tickets" cannot be deemed an exercise of the power of amendment reserved in its charter subject to the right to compensation for all damages sustained by reason of the amendment, where such statute does not purport to be an amendment of the charter, and contains no provision for compensating the company for the loss of its exclusive power under its charter to fix its rates. Pingree v. Michigan C. R. Co. 118 Mich. 314, 53 L. R. A. 274, 76 N. W. 635.

The provision in the California act of 1858 for the determination of water rates by a com-named that act was amended by adding §§ 33 and 34, which are as follows:

"Sec. 33. It shall be competent for parties to organize companies under this act to construct and operate railways in and through the streets of any town or city in this state.

"Sec. 34. All companies or corporations formed for such purposes shall have the exclusive right to use and operate any street railways constructed, owned, or held by them: Provided, that no such company or corporation shall be authorized to construct a railway under this act through the streets of any town or city without the consent of the municipal authorities of such town or city, and under such regulations and upon such terms and conditions as said authorities may from time to time prescribe." [2 Mich. Comp. Laws 1897, §§ 6424, 6425.]

*In 1867 the above § 34 was further [373] amended by adding an additional proviso, as follows:

"Provided further, that after such consent shall have been given and accepted by the company or corporation to which the same is granted, such authorities shall make no regulations or conditions whereby the rights or franchises so granted shall be destroyed or unreasonably impaired, or such company or corporation be deprived of the right of constructing, maintaining, and operating such railway in the street in such consent or grant named pursuant to the terms thereof."

These sections of the tram railway act, it will be seen, made no special provisions as to rates of fare, and there were no other sections of the act which did. The last amendment, above set out, of § 34, was passed March 27, 1867, or twenty-two days after the passage of the original street railway act, March 5, 1867.

The provisions of the street railway act material in this controversy are as follows:

"Sec. 13. Any street railway corporation organized under the provisions of this act may with the consent of the corporate authorities of any city or village given in and by an ordinance or ordinances duly enacted for that purpose and under such rules, regulations, and conditions as in and by such ordinance or ordinances shall be prescribed, construct, use, maintain, and own a street railway for the transportation of passengers in and upon the lines of such streets and mission does not constitute a contract with a corporation formed under that statute which will be impaired by enforcing the provision in the state Constitution of 1879 giving the board of supervisors power to fix such rates. Spring Valley Waterworks v. Bartlett, 8 Sawy. 555, 16 Fed. 615; Spring Valley Waterworks v. Schottler, 110 U. S. 347, 28 L. ed. 173, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48.

A statute imposing severe penalties for exceeding the charter rates does not violate the contract of a railroad charter. Camden & A. R. & Transp. Co. v. Briggs, 22 N. J. L. 623.

For an extended discussion of the legislative power to fix tolls, rates, or prices, see note to Winchester & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Croxton (Ky.) 33 L. R. A. 177.

ways in said city or village as shall be designated and granted from time to time for that purpose in the ordinance or ordinances granting such consent, but no such railway company shall construct any railway in the streets of any city or village until the company shall have accepted in writing the terms and conditions upon which they are permitted to use said streets; and any such company may extend, construct, use, and maintain their road in and along the streets or highways of any township adjacent to said city or village upon such terms and conditions as may be agreed upon by the company and the township board of the township, which agreement and the acceptance by the company of the terms thereof shall be recorded by the township clerk in the records of his township.

[374] *"Sec. 14. After any city, village, or township shall have consented as in this act provided to the construction and maintenance of any street railways therein, or granted any rights and privileges to any such company, and such consent and grant have been accepted by the company, such township, city, or village shall not revoke such consent, nor deprive the company of the rights and privileges so conferred.

"Sec. 15. Any street railway company may also purchase and acquire, either at public or private sale, whether judicial or otherwise, or may hire any street railway in any city, village, or township owned by any other corporation or company, together with the real and personal estate belonging thereto, and the rights, privileges, and franchises thereof, and may use, maintain, and complete such road, and may use and enjoy the rights, privileges, and franchises of such company and upon the same terms as the company whose road and franchises were so acquired might have done. Every street railway company may also purchase, hold, own, or take upon lease such real estate, barns, stables, buildings, fixtures and property as may be necessary for the use and business of their road; and the whole or any part thereof, together with their railway, fixtures, property, and appurtenances, rights, privileges, and franchises, may sell, lease, dispose of, pledge or mortgage, whenever the corporation shall deem it expedient so to do."

"Sec. 20. The rates of toll or fare which any street railway company may charge for the transportation of persons or passengers over their road shall be established by agreement between such company and the corporate authorities of the city or village where the road is located, and shall not be increased without consent of such authorities."

"Sec. 29. All companies and corporations heretofore organized in this state for the purpose of building and operating street railways under the statutes then in force shall have the same powers, rights, protection, and privileges, and shall be subject to all the liabilities, as are hereby provided for companies and corporations organized under the provisions of this act." [2 Mich.

184 U. S.

Comp. Laws 1897, §§ 6446-6448, 6453, 6461.]

Section 30 in substance provides that all companies and corporations thereafter formed for street railway purposes must be organized under this act.

*Some of the railroads of which the com-[375] plainant is the owner or lessee were organized under the tram railway act, and some were organized under the street railway act of 1867. The Detroit Street Railway Company, now owned by the complainant, was organized under the tram railway act, and the city adopted an ordinance assenting to the laying of tracks through the designated streets of the city on November 24, 1862. Section 1 of the ordinance provides:

"Sec. 1. That consent, permission, and authority is hereby given, granted and duly vested in Eben N. Wilcox and his associates, who may be approved by the council, their successors and assigns, organized into a corporation, under the laws of the state of Michigan, as aforesaid, to lay a single or double track for a railway, with all the necessary and convenient tracks for turnouts, side tracks and switches, in and along the course of the streets of, and bridges in, the city of Detroit, hereinafter mentioned, and the same to keep, maintain, and use, and to operate thereon railway cars and carriages, during all the term hereinafter specified and described, and in the manner and upon the condition set forth in this ordinance."

The following sections then provide for the streets in which the rails are to be laid, the manner of laying, whether double or single track, and various other matters not essential to enumerate.

Section 8 reads as follows: "The rate of fare for any distance shall not exceed 5 cents in any one car, or on any one route named in this ordinance, except where cars or carriages shall be chartered for specific purposes: Provided, cars so chartered shall not be considered regular cars, within the meaning of the preceding section."

Section 20 limits the powers and privileges conferred by the ordinance to thirty years from and after the date of its passage.

On November 14, 1879, an ordinance was passed supplementary to the one passed on November 24, 1862, which provided for extensions by the railway company of its tracks through various other streets of the city, and also provided, among other things, for a special tax on the gross receipts of the several lines of railway operated by the company, payable to the city, which tax was to be in lieu of license or other taxes and charges under the existing ordinances. [376]

Section 5 of the supplemental ordinance provided that the powers and privileges conferred and the obligations imposed on the railway company, by the ordinance passed November 24, 1862, and the amendments thereto, should be thereby extended and limited to thirty years from date (November 14, 1879).

Section 6 provided that the ordinance should take immediate effect when written acceptances of the terms thereof were filed in the office of the city clerk of Detroit by the different companies controlled by the Detroit City Company; and it also provided that all ordinances or parts of ordinances in conflict with the provisions thereof were thereby repealed; and all ordinances and parts of ordinances not in conflict therewith were thereby affirmed and continued in force. The acceptances were subsequently duly filed in the city clerk's office.

A similar ordinance to that of November 14, 1879, was passed on June 30, 1880, relative to the Fort Wayne & Elmwood Street Railway Company, confirming and extending for thirty years its grant under the ordinance of January 31, 1865. Similar ordinances were passed in favor of other lines which had been organized under the tram railway act and its amendments.

And ordinances of the same nature were passed relating to the companies organized under the street railway act of 1867.

The original ordinance under which the city gave consent to the laying of the rails of the Grand River Street Railway was adopted on May 1, 1868, and the section providing for the rate of fare is the same in language as § 8, in the foregoing ordinance relative to the Detroit Street Railway.

The ordinance relating to the Dix Avenue Railway provided in § 6 "that the rate of fare for a single trip shall not exceed 5 cents for any distance within the city limits." Similar language was used in § 5 of the ordinance approved by the common council July 13, 1886, relating to the Highland Park Railway. The 8th section of the ordinance approved by the common council January 31, 1868, with regard to the Fort Wayne & Elmwood Railway Company, provides that [377] "the *rate of fare for any distance shall not exceed 5 cents in any car."

These ordinances embrace the various railroads now owned or leased and operated by the complainant, and it is in them, taken in connection with the statutes already referred to, that the complainant finds the contracts or agreements as to the rate of fare, the obligation of which agreements it avers is impaired by the later ordinances passed in 1899.

The charter of the city of Detroit, approved June 7, 1883, by §§ 121 and 122, clothed the common council with power over the streets, highways and alleys, to establish, open, widen, extend, straighten, alter, vacate, etc., and generally to control and regulate the manner in which the highways and streets, avenues, lanes, alleys, public grounds, and spaces within the city should be used and enjoyed.

The Constitution of the state of Michigan, art. 15, § 1, provides that—

"Corporations may be formed under general laws, but shall not be created by special act, except for municipal purposes. All laws passed pursuant to this section may be amended, altered, or repealed."

The various ordinances which have been referred to contain certain reservations of the right to alter, etc., which are thus worded: Section 19 of the grant of November 24, 1862, to the Detroit City Railway, is as follows:

"It is hereby reserved to the common council of the city of Detroit the right to make such further rules, orders, or regulations as may from time to time be deemed necessary to protect the interest, safety, welfare, or accommodation of the public in relation to said railways."

Section 7 of the grant of November 14, 1879, re-enacting and extending the grant of November 24, 1862, is as follows:

"The right to amend or repeal this ordinance in case of its violation by said company or companies is expressly reserved."

Section 3 of the grant of January 5, 1885, authorizing the Brush street line, is as follows:

"It is hereby reserved to the common council of the city of Detroit the right to make such further rules, orders, or regulations *as [378] may from time to time be deemed by the common council necessary to protect the interest, safety, welfare, or accommodation of the city and public in relation to said railway."

Section 3 of the Trumbull avenue line grant of July 31, 1865, is a literal copy of the one last quoted.

Section 18 of the grant to the Grand River Street Railway of May 1, 1868, is as follows:

"It is hereby reserved to the common council of the city of Detroit the right to make such further rules, orders, or regulations as may from time to time be deemed necessary to protect the interest, welfare, or accommodation of the public in relation to said railways."

The same reservation was contained in § 4 of the grant of June 27, 1885, of the Myrtle street route.

And § 3 of the grant of August 3, 1888, relating to the Grand River line, is the same.

Section 19 of the grant of January 31, 1865, to the Fort Wayne & Belle Isle Company is as follows:

"It is hereby reserved to the common council of the city of Detroit the right to make such further rules, orders, or regulations as may from time to time be deemed necessary to protect the interest, safety, welfare, or accommodation of the public in relation to said railways."

Mr. Timothy E. Tarsney argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

The common council of Detroit possessed no authority to pass the various ordinances under which the complainant is operating its road, except such as was conferred upon it by express grant of the legislature of the state of Michigan.

People's Pass. R. Co. v. Memphis City R. Co. 10 Wall. 38, 19 L. ed. 844; Wright v. Nagle, 101 U. S. 791, 25 L. ed. 921; Saginaw Gaslight Co. v. Saginaw, 28 Fed. 529;

Detroit v. Fort Wayne & B. I. R. Co. 95 Mich. 456, 20 L. R. A. 79, 54 N. W. 958; Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport, 180 U. S. 587, 45 L. ed. 679, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Rogers Park Water Co. v. Fergus, 180 U. S. 624, 21 L. ed. 490, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490; Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit, 26 L. R. A. 667, 12 C. C. A. 365, 22 U. S. App. 570, 64 Fed. 628; Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit, 110 Mich. 384, 35 L. R. A. 859, 68 N. W. 304, 171 U. S. 48, 43 L. ed. 67, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 732.

A state has power to limit the amount of charges by railroad companies for the transportation of persons and property within its own jurisdiction, unless restrained by some contract in the charter, or unless what is done amounts to a regulation of foreign or interstate commerce.

Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Maryland, 21 Wall. 456, 22 L. ed. 678; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Iowa, 94 U. S. 155, sub nom. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Cutts, 24 L. ed. 94; Peik v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 94 U. S. 164, 24 L. ed. 97; Winona & St. P. R. Co. v. Blake, 94 U. S. 180, 24 L. ed. 99; Ruggles v. Illinois, 108 U. S. 531, 27 L. ed. 815, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 832.

This power of regulation is a power of government, continuing in its nature; and if it can be bargained away at all, it can only be by words of positive grant, or something which is in law equivalent. If there is reasonable doubt, it must be resolved in favor of the existence of the power.

Stone v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 116 U. S. 307, 29 L. ed. 636, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 560, 7 L. ed. 955; Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 9 L. ed. 773; The Delaware Railroad Tax, 18 Wall. 206, sub nom. Minot v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. 21 L. ed. 888; Bailey v. Magwire, 22 Wall. 215, 22 L. ed. 850; Northwestern Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U. S. 660, 24 L. ed. 1036; Newton v. Mahoning County, 100 U. S. 548, 25 L. ed. 710; Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. v. Smith, 128 U. S. 174, 32 L. ed. 377, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 685, 40 L. ed. 849, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714; Wheeling & B. Bridge Co. v. Wheeling Bridge Co. 138 U. S. 287, 34 L. ed. 967, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301; Slidell v. Grandjean, 111 U. S. 412, 28 L. ed. 321, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 560, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198; Stein v. Bienville Water Supply Co. 141 U. S. 67, 35 L. ed. 622, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 892; Winchester & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Croxton, 98 Ky. 739, 33 L. R. A. 177, 34 S. W. 518; Omaha Horse R. Co. v. Cable Tramway Co. 30 Fed. 324; Saginaw Gaslight Co. v. Saginaw, 28 Fed. 529; Hamilton Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Hamilton, 146 U. S. 258, 36 L. ed. 963, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90.

Franchises are always granted subject to the police power.

Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Iowa, 94 U. S. 155, sub nom. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. 184 U. S.

Cutts, 24 L. ed. 94; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 19 Fed. 679; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Maryland, 21 Wall. 456, 22 L. ed. 678; Stone v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 116 U. S. 307, 29 L. ed. 636, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Bristol, 151 U. S. 556, 38 L. ed. 269, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25, 24 L. ed. 989; Northwestern Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U. S. 659, 24 L. ed. 1036; Budd v. New York, 143 U. S. 517, 36 L. ed. 247, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468; Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 78 Fed. 236; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 858, 43 L. ed. 858, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565.

The police power cannot be delegated or bargained away, nor can the corporation by any contract hamper itself in the exercise of it.

Birdsall v. Clark, 73 N. Y. 73, 29 Am. Rep. 105; Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. v. Jacksonville, 67 Ill. 37, 16 Am. Rep. 611; Laurel Fork & S. H. R. Co. v. West Virginia Transp. Co. 25 W. Va. 324; Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 97; Milbau v. Sharp, 27 N. Y. 611, 84 Am. Dec. 314; Goszler v. Georgetown, 6 Wheat. 593, 5 L. ed. 339; Richmond County Gaslight Co. v. Middletown, 59 N. Y. 228; People's Pass. R. Co. v. Memphis City R. Co. 10 Wall. 38, 19 L. ed. 844; Gale v. Kalamazoo, 23 Mich. 344, 9 Am. Rep. 80; Pontiac v. Carter, 32 Mich. 164; Re First Street, 66 Mich. 42, 33 N. W. 15; Petz v. Detroit, 95 Mich. 169, 54 N. W. 644; Knoxville v. Africa, 23 C. C. A. 252, 47 U. S. App. 74, 246, 77 Fed. 501; Wabash R. Co. v. Defiance, 167 U. S. 88, 42 L. ed. 87, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 748.

The regulation of fares in the ordinances in question may be supported by the reserve power of alteration, amendment, or repeal, contained in the Constitution and statutes of Michigan.

Pennsylvania College Cases, 13 Wall. 213, 20 L. ed. 553; Stone v. Wisconsin, 94 U. S. 181, 24 L. ed. 102; Atlantic & G. R. Co. v. Georgia, 98 U. S. 359, 25 L. ed. 185; Spring Valley Waterworks v. Schottler, 110 U. S. 347, 28 L. ed. 173, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Tomlinson v. Jessup, 15 Wall. 454, 21 L. ed. 204; Miller v. New York, 15 Wall. 478, 21 L. ed. 98; Close v. Glenwood Cemetery, 107 U. S. 466, 27 L. ed. 403, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267; Inland Fisheries Comrs. v. Holyoke Water Power Co. 104 Mass. 446, 6 Am. Rep. 247; Sioux City Street R. Co. v. Sioux City, 138 U. S. 98, 34 L. ed. 898, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 226; Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co. 130 U. S. 396, 32 L. ed. 979, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 160 U. S. 1, 40 L. ed. 319, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Louisville Water Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 1, 36 L. ed. 55, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346; Grand Rapids Electric Light & P. Co. v. Grand Rapids Edison Electric Light & Fuel Gas Co. 33 Fed. 659; Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 317; Atty. Gen. ex rel. Barbour v. Pingree, 120 Mich. 550, 46 L. R. A. 407, 79 N. W. 814; Indianapolis v. Narin, 151 Ind. 139, 41 L. R. A. 337, 47 N. E. 525, 51 N. E. 80; Detroit City

Street R. Co. v. Guthard, 51 Mich. 180, 16 N. W. 328.

The purpose of the provision of the Michigan Constitution that "no law shall embrace more than one subject, which shall be expressed in its title," was to arrest corruption and "log-rolling" in legislation, and the insertion by dexterous management of clauses in bills of which the titles gave no intimation, and thus securing their passage by legislative bodies whose members were not generally aware of their intention and effect.

People ex rel. Drake v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 481; Kurtz v. People, 33 Mich. 279; Thomas v. Collins, 58 Mich. 64, 24 N. W. 553; Bissell v. Durfee, 58 Mich. 237, 24 N. W. 886; Atty. Gen. ex rel. Longyear v. Weimer, 59 Mich. 580, 26 N. W. 773; Davies v. Saginaw County Supers. 89 Mich. 295, 50 N. W. 862.

The Constitution requires that titles shall be truthful indices of legislation.

Wardle v. Cummings, 86 Mich. 395, 49 N. W. 212, 538.

Under our Constitution the title of an act is significant and usually controlling in determining its scope. The body of the statute must be reasonably harmonious with it.

McKellar v. Detroit, 57 Mich. 158, 23 N. W. 621; Northwestern Mfg. Co. v. Chambers, 58 Mich. 381, 25 N. W. 372; Booth v. Eddy, 38 Mich. 245.

Titles may be as general or as specific as the legislature sees fit to make them, but the body of the act must be confined in its purposes to the object expressed in the title. And when the act is broader than the title, if after striking out all not indicated by the title, what is left is complete, in itself capable of execution and wholly independent of what was rejected, the act may be sustained.

Callahan v. Chipman, 59 Mich. 610, 26 N. W. 806; Skinner v. Wilhelm, 63 Mich. 568, 30 N. W. 311; Sanilac County v. Auditor General, 68 Mich. 659, 36 N. W. 794; Ellis v. Hutchinson, 70 Mich. 154, 38 N. W. 14.

The title of the street railway act, "An Act to Provide for the Formation of Street Railway Companies," is not broad enough to warrant the sweeping into such act corporations not formed or organized thereunder, but which are governed and controlled by different provisions of law.

Isle Royale Land Corp. v. Osmun, 76 Mich. 162, 43 N. W. 14.

The street railway act cannot control the provisions of the tram railway act, and thus operate as an indirect amendment thereof, without violating the constitutional provision which forbids any amendment without re-enactment of the section amended.

Mok v. Detroit Bldg. & Sav. Asso. No. 4, 30 Mich. 511; Burton v. Schildbaeh, 45 Mich. 504, 8 N. W. 497.

The reservations in the ordinances were intended to meet any changes in conditions, and to cover rules, orders, and regulations for the benefit of the public, even though such rules, orders, and regulations cover matter that was originally specified.

Detroit v. Fort Wayne & E. R. Co. 90 Mich. 646, 51 N. W. 688; Detroit v. Fort Wayne & B. I. R. Co. 95 Mich. 456, 20 L. R. A. 79, 54 N. W. 958; Kalamazoo v. Michigan Traction Co. 126 Mich. 525, 85 N. W. 1067.

Mr. Henry M. Duffield argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Michael Brennan and John C. Donnelly, filed a brief for appellee:

The provisions in the ordinances giving to the Detroit City Railway and to the other grantors of the complainant company the right to fix fares within the limit of 5 cents for a single fare, when accepted by the company, constituted an irrevocable contract with the city which passed to the complainant company on its purchase of the property, franchises, rights, and privileges of its grantors.

Detroit v. Detroit City R. Co. 76 Mich. 421, 43 N. W. 447; Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit, 125 Mich. 673, 85 N. W. 96, 107, 86 N. W. 809; Electric R. Co. v. Grand Rapids, 84 Mich. 257, 47 N. W. 567; Pingree v. Michigan C. R. Co. 118 Mich. 314, 53 L. R. A. 274, 76 N. W. 635; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. ed. 516, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252; Electric R. Co. v. Grand Rapids, 84 Mich. 257, 47 N. W. 567; Hamtramck Twp. v. Rapid R. Co. 122 Mich. 472, 81 N. W. 337; Union Street R. Co. v. Saginaw Circuit Judge, 113 Mich. 94, 71 N. W. 1073; Detroit v. Ellis, 103 Mich. 612, 27 L. R. A. 211, 61 N. W. 886; Detroit v. Detroit City R. Co. 60 Fed. 161; City R. Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 166 U. S. 557, 41 L. ed. 1114, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653. To the same effect, Louisville Trust Co. v. Cincinnati, 22 C. C. A. 34, 47 U. S. App. 36, 76 Fed. 309; Knoxville v. Africa, 23 C. C. A. 252, 47 U. S. App. 74, 246, 77 Fed. 501, 70 Fed. 730; Stone v. Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. 62 Miss. 607, 52 Am. Rep. 193.

The ordinances do not purport to regulate fares, but attempt an unlawful discrimination between passengers against the legal rights of the company.

Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684, 43 L. ed. 858, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Old Colony Trust Co. v. Atlanta, 83 Fed. 45.

The exercise by the city of the police power must be in subordination to the provisions of the Federal Constitution.

Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684, 43 L. ed. 858, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565.

The class of rights which the city may not bind itself from exercising are such rights only as are public or governmental in their nature, and are essential only to the protection of the health, safety, and welfare of the citizen and the public convenience.

Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 2, 43 L. ed. 342, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 577; Beach, Pub. Corp. § 1248; People v. Jackson & M. Pl. Road Co. 9 Mich. 306; Grand Rapids Street

R. Co. v. West Side Street R. Co. 48 Mich. 433, 12 N. W. 643; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 43 L. ed. 702, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; Baltimore v. Baltimore Trust & Guarantee Co. 166 U. S. 673, 41 L. ed. 1160, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 696; Detroit v. Fort Wayne & B. I. R. Co. 95 Mich. 456, 20 L. R. A. 79, 54 N. W. 958.

A regulation designed to affect the city or the inhabitants in a financial way does not come within this class of powers.

Newport v. Newport & C. Bridge Co. 90 Ky. 193, 8 L. R. A. 484, 13 S. W. 720; St. Louis v. Bell Teleph. Co. 96 Mo. 623, 2 L. R. A. 278, 10 S. W. 197.

The reservation by the legislature of the right to alter, amend, or repeal was not delegated to the city.

City R. Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 166 U. S. 557, 41 L. ed. 1114, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653.

Mr. John C. Donnelly also argued the cause, and, with Mr. Michael Brennan, filed a brief for appellee:

The effect of the new agreement between the city and the railway companies was to re-execute or renew and extend the original contract existing between the parties.

Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit, 26 L. R. A. 667, 12 C. C. A. 368, 22 U. S. App. 570, 64 Fed. 628.

The street railway act being in force at the time of the making of such new contracts, the provisions thereof apply, and by operation of law became a part of the agreements; and the rights of the parties and their powers and obligations in the making of such contract must be construed with reference to the street railway act.

Ibid.

When the consent of the municipality to the use of the streets has been given, and the conditions upon which such consent is given have been agreed to, a contract is thereby created, and the power of the city is exhausted so far as it has any power to deal with the substantial rights created by that contract.

Chicago v. Sheldon, 9 Wall. 50, 19 L. ed. 594; City R. Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 166 U. S. 557, 41 L. ed. 1114, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653. See also Baltimore Trust & Guarantee Co. v. Baltimore, 64 Fed. 153; Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit, 26 L. R. A. 667, 12 C. C. A. 365, 22 U. S. App. 570, 64 Fed. 628; People ex rel. Bliss v. Chicago West. Div. R. Co. 118 Ill. 113, 7 N. E. 116; Tudor v. Chicago & S. S. Rapid Transit Co. 164 Ill. 73, 36 L. R. A. 379, 46 N. E. 446; State ex rel. Kansas City v. Corrigan Consol. Street R. Co. 85 Mo. 263, 55 Am. Rep. 361; Ashland v. Wheeler, 88 Wis. 607, 60 N. W. 818; Columbus v. Columbus Street R. Co. 45 Ohio St. 104, 12 N. E. 651; Cincinnati & S. R. Co. v. Carthage, 36 Ohio St. 634; Cincinnati Street R. Co. v. Smith, 29 Ohio St. 292; People ex rel. Kunze v. Fort Wayne & E. R. Co. 92 Mich. 522, 16 L. R. A. 752, 52 N. W. 1010; Atty. Gen. v. Detroit Suburban R. Co. 96 Mich. 65, 55 N. W. 562.

While the legislature in the exercise of its police power has the right to fix the rates to be exacted by railroad companies for the carriage of persons and property in the first instance, yet wherever it has in the charter or act of incorporation fixed the rate to be charged, and authorized the company to charge that rate, or authorized the company to regulate and fix the tolls up to a certain maximum rate, a contract right is thereby created and conferred, and the grantee cannot be deprived of the right to exact the toll fixed, or the right to regulate the toll up to the maximum mentioned, by subsequent legislation.
184 U. S.

Pingree v. Michigan C. R. Co. 118 Mich. 314, 53 L. R. A. 274, 76 N. W. 636; Detroit v. Detroit City R. Co. 60 Fed. 171; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Iowa, 94 U. S. 155, sub nom. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Cutts, 24 L. ed. 94; Peik v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 94 U. S. 164, 24 L. ed. 97; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; State v. Maine C. R. Co. 66 Me. 488.

Section 20 of the street railway act in express terms removes the question of the rates of fare from the domain of general legislative authority and jurisdiction, and declares that it shall be a subject of agreement alone.

This section must therefore not only be considered as a grant of authority to the city to deal with the subject, but also as a limitation upon the authority of the city to deal with it, and is the full measure of that authority.

Loveland v. Detroit, 41 Mich. 367, 1 N. W. 952.

The reservations contained in the various ordinances by which the city retains the right to make further rules and regulations were not intended, and cannot be construed, to have the effect of giving the city the right to interfere with or lessen the substantial rights of the companies, nor as giving to the city, with the consent of the company, the right to treat as a matter of legislation the rate of fare, which by the terms of the street railway law is expressly made a matter of agreement, in the making of which the company is one of the contracting parties.

Old Colony Trust Co. v. Atlanta, 83 Fed. 39, Affirmed in 32 C. C. A. 125, 59 U. S. App. 230, 88 Fed. 859; Africa v. Knoxville, 70 Fed. 729; Electric R. Co. v. Grand Rapids, 84 Mich. 257, 47 N. W. 567.

The general rule is that there is no objection to a statute as not within its title so long as it is not made to cover legislation incongruous in its character, or which by no fair intendment can be considered as having a necessary or proper connection.

People ex rel. Secretary of State v. State Ins. Co. 19 Mich. 392; South St. Paul v. Lamprecht Bros. Co. 31 C. C. A. 585, 60 U. S. App. 78, 88 Fed. 449; Tabor v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 10 C. C. A. 429, 27 U. S. App. 111, 62 Fed. 387.

Messrs. Henry M. Duffield, Michael Brennan, and John C. Donnelly filed an additional brief on the question of equitable jurisdiction:

The bill is a bill of peace, and its allegations make a case of equitable jurisdiction.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Norman, 77 Fed. 13; Smith v. Bivens, 56 Fed. 352; Parker v. Winnipiscogee Lake Cotton & Woolen Co. 2 Black, 551, 17 L. ed. 337; Wahle v. Reinbach, 76 Ill. 322; Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. McConnell, 82 Fed. 65; Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 108, 41 L. ed. 648, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 262; Dinsmore v. Southern Exp. Co. 92 Fed. 74; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

The court is not compelled to consider this question. It is waived by failure to raise it in the answer or on the proofs.

Waite v. O'Neil, 34 L. R. A. 550, 22 C. C. A. 248, 47 U. S. App. 19, 76 Fed. 408; Dumont v. Fry, 18 Fed. 578, 130 U. S. 354, 32 L. ed. 934, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 486; Kilbourn v. Sunderland, 130 U. S. 505, 32 L. ed. 1005, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594.

Mr. Fred. A. Baker also filed a brief for appellee:

The language of § 20 of the street railway act of 1867, that the rates of fare "shall be established by agreement between such company and the corporate authorities of the city or village where the road is located," is too plain to require or admit of construction or interpretation.

Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport City, 180 U. S. 587, 45 L. ed. 679, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493.

Municipal corporations, in making grants to street railway, gas, and other corporations, for the use of public highways and streets, may enter into irrevocable contracts with the grantees surrendering a portion of their governmental functions.

People ex rel. Maybury v. Mutual Gas-light Co. 38 Mich. 154; People ex rel. Kunze v. Fort Wayne & E. R. Co. 92 Mich. 522, 16 L. R. A. 752, 52 N. W. 1010; Atty. Gen. v. Detroit Suburban R. Co. 96 Mich. 65, 55 N. W. 562; Detroit v. Detroit City R. Co. 76 Mich. 421, 43 N. W. 447; Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit, 125 Mich. 673, 85 N. W. 96, 86 N. W. 809.

The fact that the exclusive privilege to build street railways in Detroit, attempted to be granted by the ordinance of November 24, 1862, was invalid, in the judgment of the supreme court of Michigan, and of the Supreme Court of the United States (Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit R. Co. 171 U. S. 48, 43 L. ed. 67, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 732), is a conclusive reason why the contract fixing the rates of fare should be held to be irrevocable.

The reservation made by § 19 of the ordinance of November 24, 1862, to the common council, of "the right to make such further rules, orders, and regulations as may from time to time be deemed necessary to protect the interest, safety, welfare, or accommodation of the public in relation to said railways," was not intended to apply, and does not apply, to taxation or rates of fare.

Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit,
604

26 L. R. A. 667, 12 C. C. A. 365, 22 U. S. App. 570, 64 Fed. 628.

As a business proposition, the theory that the rates of fare were to be reasonable under common-law rules, enforced by ordinances passed from time to time by the common council is not consistent with the subject-matter of the contract and the relations of the parties to it.

The fact that the original ordinance and the ordinance extending, as modified, the terms and conditions of the grant, were each limited to thirty years from their respective dates, shows that the rates of fare agreed upon were to be irrevocable during these periods of time.

See Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit R. Co. 171 U. S. 48, 43 L. ed. 67, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 732.

*Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the [378] foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

A question has arisen at the outset as to the jurisdiction of a court of equity over a case like the one now presented. Assuming the right to relief in some form, has the complainant a plain and adequate remedy at law, or is the case such in its nature *and [379] in the relief demanded as would be cognizable in a court of equity? The foundation of the right of action lies in the alleged invalidity of the ordinances of 1899, reducing the rates of fare on the railways of the complainant, because, as averred, those ordinances are in violation of the Federal Constitution, as impairing the obligation of contracts between the parties already existing, and therefore the claim is made that they should not be permitted to be enforced against the complainant where such enforcement might result in a multiplicity of suits, or in harassing and expensive litigation.

The averments in the complainant's bill upon this subject, which are set forth in the above statement of facts, show the additional and special grounds upon which the jurisdiction in equity is invoked. Of course, if the complainant obey these ordinances, no controversy can arise, but if in good faith it believe them to be invalid and hence not binding upon it, and, without resorting to the courts for equitable relief, it refuses to obey them, the consequences may be not only embarrassing but may lead to much unnecessary and expensive litigation. Continuous demands for the tickets mentioned in the ordinances at the reduced price therein provided for may be made by passengers while in the cars of complainant, and they may refuse to pay fare at the old rate, and may carry such refusal to the point of suffering removal from the cars on account of nonpayment of fare. What amount of force would be necessary in the opinion of the various passengers to demonstrate that their going was not voluntary would, of course, give rise to disputes between them and the conductors, and would possibly, if not probably, lead to frequent breaches of the peace in the course of these attempts at removal. If not removed, then the passengers would either pay no fare, or the complainant would have to accept the fare as provided in the ordinances of 1899, and that would be the same in fact as submitting to their enforcement.

[380] The roads operated by complainant are also indebted to an extent of over $8,000,000, secured by mortgages upon the railways, their franchises, rights, and privileges, together with the tolls and fares, earnings and profits arising therefrom, *and some of this indebtedness is soon to mature, and it is admitted that the bonds issued as evidence of such indebtedness and secured by its mortgages were so issued and sold to and purchased by the holders thereof in the full faith and belief that the various roads represented by the complainant had the right to charge the rates of fare fixed by the ordinances already mentioned; such belief being based upon the existence and terms of such ordinances.

The ability of the complainant to renew or extend its mortgage indebtedness might depend upon belief in the validity of the contracts as to the rates of fare agreed upon before the attempted alteration thereof by the ordinances of 1899. The immediate enforcement of these later ordinances might result in such a decrease of income as to seriously imperil the solvency of the complainant. An equitable action like this would certainly be more adequate and offer more effective and immediate relief than for the complainant to await the various actions at law to which it would otherwise be subjected by the defendants and the individuals demanding the reduced rates for transportation.

The mayor and corporation counsel have, as is seen, been joined with the city as defendants in the suit. The reason for the joining of the individual defendants would seem to be that they are the officers upon whom would devolve the execution of the ordinances passed by the common council, and in the answer of the defendants it is admitted that they intend to enforce obedience by the company to such ordinances. The case is similar in some of its aspects to that of Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418. It is true there are no penalties fixed in the ordinances for disobedience to their commands on the part of the company, but the bill shows that there are a large number of passengers carried over the roads of the complainant daily, amounting to many thousands, each of whom would have the right to demand transportation at the rates provided for by the ordinances in case they were valid. As is said in Smyth v. Ames, p. 518, L. ed. p. 839, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 423: "The transactions of a single week would expose any company questioning the validity of the statute to a vast number of suits by shippers, to say [381] nothing of the heavy *penalties named in the statute. Only a court of equity is competent to meet such an emergency and determine, once for all, and without a multiplicity of suits, matters that affect, not simply individuals, but the interests of the entire community as involved in the use of a public 184 U. S.

highway and in the administration of the affairs of the quasi-public corporation by which such highway is maintained." While this is not such an extreme case, and there are no penalties provided in the ordinances for disobedience, yet the same principle applies.

It is a matter of general public interest, as well as of vital importance to the complainant, that the question involved in this litigation should be determined at the earliest possible moment, and once for all, and thus a multiplicity of suits and other complications prevented.

Taking all these facts into consideration, and bearing in mind that the answer does not set up any defense of the lack of jurisdiction of a court of equity over the subject-matter, and does not insist that there is an adequate and plain remedy at law (and no such objection has been taken at any time, and has not been insisted upon before us), we do not feel compelled, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, to ourselves take notice of it.

It is not such a case as on its face equity could have no jurisdiction over, such as an action to recover damages for an assault, or for a libel or slander, but the question between the parties as to the validity of various ordinances and the right of the city to enforce them, involving, as they may, the credit and possibly the solvency of the complainant, and taking into consideration the public interests involved in a speedy and final determination of the question, all these as well as other facts already mentioned, we think, make out a case for following the general rule, that a defense of this nature will not be recognized where it has not been taken by answer or in any other manner and is not insisted upon on the hearing before the court. Reynes v. Dumont, 130 U. S. 354, 32 L. ed. 934, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 486; Kilbourn v. Sunderland, 130 U. S. 505, 32 L. ed. 1005, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Brown, B. & Co. v. Lake Superior Iron Co. 134 U. S. 530, 33 L. ed. 1021, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 604.

We do not mean to assert that in all cases of this nature, involving *simply the [382] validity of a subsequent ordinance or law, a court of equity would be the proper forum, but confine our decision to the special facts of this case, including the fact that no objection has been taken to the jurisdiction of the court at any stage of the litigation, and is not now raised by any party to the same.

This brings us to a consideration of the questions argued at the bar.

In furtherance of the claim by defendants that the ordinances of 1899 reducing the rates of fare are valid, it is urged that express authority from the legislature is required to enable the common council of a city to pass ordinances such as those described in this case, providing for the consent of the city to the laying of tracks and the running and operation of a railroad through its streets and the fixing of rates of fare, and that no such power was granted in this case, and if there were, there has been no agreement made by the passage of the ordinances referred to in the statement of facts. It may be conceded that clear authority from the legislature is needed to enable the city to make a contract or agreement like the ordinances in question, including rates of fare. But there can be no question in this court as to the competency of a state legislature, unless prohibited by constitutional provisions, to authorize a municipal corporation to contract with a street railway company as to the rates of fare, and so to bind during the specified period any future common council from altering or in any way interfering with such contract. New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. ed. 516, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 683, 29 L. ed. 528, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; St. Tammany Waterworks Co. v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 120 U. S. 64, 30 L. ed. 563, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 405; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 9, 43 L. ed. 341, 345, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co. 177 U. S. 558, 570, 44 L. ed. 886, 892, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736; Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport, 180 U. S. 587, 593, 45 L. ed. 679, 686, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493. The contract once having been made, the power of the city over the subject, so far as altering the rates of fare or other matters properly involved in and being a part of the contract, is suspended for the period of the running of the contract.

It is, however, urged that the terms employed in the ordinances *under which the complainant runs its different lines of street railways are not sufficient to constitute contracts, which may not be altered at the pleasure of the common council. It is said that at least in regard to the ordinances relating to those companies organized under the tram railway act, no contract can be found in them, as there was no special provision in that act for an agreement between the city and a company applying for the use of its streets, as to the rates of fare, and therefore a statement in an ordinance upon that subject would amount to no more than a license which might be altered or revoked at any time; and that if the language were a contract, it was in the power of the common council to alter or abrogate it under § 34 of the tram railway act.

It will be seen that under § 34 of the tram railway act, as it was enacted in 1861, a railway corporation organized under the act could not construct a railway through the streets of a city without the consent of the municipal authorities, "and under such regulations and upon such terms and conditions as said authorities may from time to time prescribe." Hence, it is argued that any terms or conditions under which the railway company obtained the consent of the municipal authorities might by the same authorities be from time to time altered as they should in their discretion think fit.

In Pingree v. Michigan C. R. Co. 118 Mich. 314, 53 L. R. A. 274, 76 N. W. 635, decided in 1898, the supreme court of Michigan held that § 15 of the laws of 1846, relating to the incorporation of the Michigan Central Railroad Company and other sections mentioned in the act which provided that the company might fix, regulate, and receive tolls taken for the transportation of passengers or property on the railroad, subject only to the limitation, as to passengers, of 3 cents per mile, etc., the company having the power to charge for tolls and transportation such sums as might be lawfully established by the by-laws of the company, and the board of directors having power to pass all by-laws necessary for carrying into execution all powers vested in the company, conferred a contract right on the corporation to fix tolls within the limits of 3 cents per mile, which right could not be violated by the acts of a succeeding legislature.

*There is no provision in the act referred to in the above-cited case, of a nature similar to the one in question here, providing for regulations, terms, and conditions which might from time to time be prescribed. The case shows, however, that in the opinion of the supreme court of Michigan language similar to that used in the ordinance (omitting such provision) amounted to a contract, and the question remaining would be whether the further language contained in the ordinance permitted an alteration of the terms of the contract as the common council might from time to time prescribe. The rate of fare is among the most material and important of the terms and conditions which might be imposed by the city in exchange for its consent to the laying of railroad tracks and the running of cars thereon through its streets. It would be a subject for grave consideration and conference between the parties, and, when determined by mutual agreement, the rate would naturally be regarded as fixed until another rate was adopted by a like agreement. Can it be possible that under this language permitting consent upon such terms and conditions as the city might from time to time prescribe, the power was reserved to make a rate of fare which might ruin the whole enterprise? That a rate once deliberately and mutually agreed upon might be thereafter and from time to time altered at the pleasure of the city alone? Will it be believed the parties thus understood the meaning of that provision? It would hardly be credible that capitalists about to invest money in what was then a somewhat uncertain venture, while procuring the consent of the city to lay its rails and operate its road through the streets in language which as to the rate of fare amounted to a contract, and gave the company a right to charge a rate then deemed essential for the financial success of the enterprise, would at the same time consent that such rate then agreed upon should be subject to change from time to time by the sole decision of the common council. It would rather seem that the language above used did not and was not intended to give the right to the common council to change at its pleasure from time to time those important and fundamental rights affecting the very existence and financial success of the [385] company in the operation *of its road, but that by the use of such language there was simply reserved to the city council the right from time to time to add to or alter those general regulations or rules for the proper, safe, and efficient running of the cars, the character of service, the speed and number of cars, and their hours of operation and matters of a like nature, such as are described in the opinion of the court below in this case. Such would seem to be a reasonable construction of the language. It is unnecessary to conclusively determine the question, because we think that under §§ 20 and 29 of the street railway act of 1867, above set out, and by the subsequent adoption of the ordinance of 1879 (set out in the foregoing statement of facts) relating to the Detroit City Railway Company (and by the adoption of similar ordinances thereafter with regard to the other companies), binding agreements were made and entered into between the city on the one side and the companies on the other relating to rates of fare, and such agreements could not be altered without the consent of both sides.

These agreements had express legislative authority, not only under the tram railway act, but also and particularly under the street railway act of 1867. By the 20th section of the latter act it was provided that the rates of toll or fare, which any street railway may charge for the transportation of persons or passengers over its road, should be established by agreement between the company and the corporate authorities of the city or village where the road is located, and should not be increased without the consent of such authorities. The provisions of this section, among others, were by the 29th section of the act transferred to "all companies and corporations heretofore organized in this state for the purpose of building and operating street railways under the statutes then in force, shall have the same powers, rights, protection, and privileges, and shall be subject to all the liabilities, as hereby provided for companies organized under the provisions of this act."

It is plain that the legislature regarded the fixing of the rate of fare over these street railways as a subject for agreement between the parties, and not as an exercise of a governmental *function of a legislative character by the city authorities under a delegated power from the legislature. It was made matter of agreement by the expressed command of the legislature. Ordinances of a like nature were passed by the common council relating to the other companies, and all of them were accepted in writing, and they all had in them provisions relating to, or referred to ordinances providing for, the rate of fare in language similar to the foregoing.

Coming to a consideration of the effect of the language used, we think it amounted to a contract as to rates of fare. The ordinance of 1879 and the similar ordinances thereafter passed relating to the other corporations, together with the street railway act of 1867, and §§ 20 and 29 thereof, make out plain agreements entered into between the parties in relation, among other things, to the rates of fare to be charged by those companies. In the ordinance of 1879 and in the other ordinances under consideration, there were provisions made for special taxation of the companies which the supreme court of Michigan in Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit, 125 Mich. 673, 85 N. W. 96, 86 N. W. 809, has held amounted to a contract between the parties which was as binding as though made by the legislature itself. Such decision by the supreme court of Michigan is entitled to very great respect and weight. If the ordinance constituted a contract between the parties in relation to taxes which were to be levied upon the company, we do not see any reason, in the language used providing for the rates of fare, for not holding that there is a contract as to those rates equally binding with that in regard to taxes.

In City R. Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 166 U. S. 557, 41 L. ed. 1114, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653, the common council of Indianapolis, on January 18, 1864, adopted an ordinance which said: "Consent, permission, and authority are hereby given, granted, and duly vested unto the company organized with R. B. Catherwood as president, a body politic and corporate by the name of the Citizens' Street Railway Company of Indianapolis, and their successors, to lay a single or double track for passenger railway lines," etc., under which ordinance the railway was built. This court *said, p. 567, L. ed. p. 1118, [387] Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 656: "The original ordinance of January 18, 1864, was plainly a proposition on the part of the city to grant to the company the use of its streets for thirty years, in consideration that the company lay its tracks and operate a railway thereon upon certain conditions prescribed by the ordinance. This proposition, when accepted by the company and the road built and operated as specified, became a contract which the state was not at liberty to impair during its continuance; but if, at the expiration of the thirty years, the road had been sold to another company, and that company had applied for and obtained from the common council a franchise to occupy its streets for another period, it seems to be clear that such a contract would need no other consideration to support it than the continued operation of the road under such conditions as the city chose to impose."

Although in that case there was no provision in the statute directing that the rates of fare should be established by agreement, yet nevertheless it was held that the language used amounted to an agreement upon the subject-matter which could not be altered during its continuance by either party.

Upon this question considerable stress has been laid in the brief and in the arguments of counsel for the defendants upon the case of Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. v. Smith, 128 U. S. 174, 32 L. ed. 377, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47. The 12th section of the charter to that company declared, among other things, that it should have the exclusive right of transportation or conveyance of persons, merchandise, etc., over the railroad to be constructed, and it provided that the charge of transportation or conveyance should not exceed 50 cents per 100 pounds for heavy articles, and 10 cents per cubic foot on articles of measurement for every 100 miles, and 5 cents per mile for every passenger. Permission was granted the company to rent or farm out any part of their exclusive right of transportation to any individual on such terms as might be agreed upon. Pursuant to that authority the company leased to one Wadley for the term of ninety-nine years such privileges. Afterwards the legislature of Georgia erected a board of *railroad commissioners (Ga. Laws 1879, p. 125), and gave the board power to prevent railroad companies from charging other than just and reasonable rates. That board prescribed rates for the transportation of freight and passengers by railroad companies in the state which were less than the maximum rates authorized by the 12th section of the charter of the company above referred to. The question of the validity of this order of the board of commissioners was brought before this court, and it was held that the language of the charter did not justify the holding that, notwithstanding any altered conditions of the country in the future, the legislature had, in 1833, at the time of the grant of the charter, contracted that the company might for all time charge rates for the transportation of persons or property over its line up to the limits there designated. The reasons for so holding are stated by Mr. Justice Field at pages 180 and 181 of the report, L. ed. p. 380, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 49, and it was not thought that in the exercise of the merely governmental function of creating a charter and incorporating the banking and railway company the legislature had in regard to this particular matter of rates surrendered the right to alter the maximum charges. The language used was regarded as a mere delegation of authority by the legislature to the company to make those charges until the authority was altered or withdrawn. In other words, that the language did not constitute a contract or agreement between the parties, the legislature and the railroad company.

In the case at bar, however, the rates are fixed under the provisions of a statute which declares that they shall be so fixed by agreement between the parties. The ordinance of 1879 adopts that of 1862 and reaffirms it. The rate of fare therein provided is made a rate under the ordinance of 1879, and that ordinance was adopted while the street railway act was in force, and which specially provided for an agreement as to rates of fare, and the provisions of that act were transferred to the companies organized under the tram railway act. It may very well be that language used by a legislature in merely conferring authority upon a company to fix certain charges for fare might not be regarded as amounting to a contract, when the same language used by parties in fixing rates under a legislative authority and direction to agree upon them would be regarded as *forming a contract because the statute provided specially for that mode of determining them. Under such direction, we are of opinion the language used in the ordinances amounts to an agreement, for that is the way in which the rates are to be arrived at, and the reaffirmation of the previous language, by reaffirming and adopting the ordinance of 1862, by the ordinance of 1879, and its acceptance, constitute an agreement as of that time. The same as to the ordinances relative to the other roads. The rate of fare having been fixed by positive agreement under the expressed legislative authority, the subject is not open to alteration thereafter by the common council alone, under the right to prescribe from time to time the rules and regulations for the running and operation of the road.

Nor does the language of the ordinance, which provides that the rate of fare for one passenger shall not be more than 5 cents, give any right to the city to reduce it below the rate of 5 cents established by the company. It is a contract which gives the company the right to charge a rate of fare up to the sum of 5 cents for a single passenger, and leaves no power with the city to reduce it without the consent of the company. The language of § 20 in the street railway act of 1867, which provides that the rate of fare agreed upon shall not be increased without the consent of the city authorities, does not mean that the rate may be reduced without the consent of the railway companies, nor does it show the parties did not suppose there was a contract between them as to rates. That provision does not seem to perform any material function, because without it, the parties having agreed upon the subject of rates, it would follow that the agreement could not be altered by either party without the consent of the other. It may be that it was meant that the company, while unable to increase the rates of fare without the consent of the city authorities, had the right to reduce the rates as it might please without consulting the city.

It was probably inserted from abundant caution, but in no event can it properly or fairly be regarded as an implied permission to the city authorities to reduce the rates of fare as agreed upon without the consent of the railway company. The reasons are obvious and need not be restated.

*It is said, however, that § 34 of the tram railway act was amended some twenty-two days after the passage of the street railway act containing the above §§ 20 and 29, and that, therefore, the provisions of the amended tram railway act must apply exclusively.

The amendment made to § 34 of the latter act in 1867 has been set forth in the statement of facts above made, but for convenience will be repeated here, as follows:

"Provided further, that after such consent shall have been given and accepted by the company or corporation to which the same is granted, such authorities shall make no regulations or conditions whereby the rights or franchises so granted shall be destroyed or unreasonably impaired, or such company or corporation be deprived of the right of constructing, maintaining, and operating such railway in the street in such consent or grant named pursuant to the terms thereof."

Referring to this amendment, it is argued that the city had the right to pass these ordinances of 1899 as a regulation and condition for the operation of the road, unless the rights or franchises already granted to the company should thereby be destroyed or unreasonably impaired, or unless the company would be thereby deprived of the right of constructing, maintaining and operating its railway pursuant to the terms of the original consent, and such impairment is not alleged in the complainant's bill. It is obvious that the additions to the original tram railway act made in 1861 and 1867 were laws in pari materia with the street railway act passed in 1867, and should therefore be construed together to obtain the legislative meaning.

[391] Bearing in mind the provision of § 29 of the street railway act, granting to other corporations the same powers as are given to the companies organized under that act, and coming to a consideration of the amendment to § 34 of the tram railway act made in 1867, we find no inconsistency or contradiction between the two acts. The amendment to the 34th section prohibited the city from making any regulations or conditions whereby the rights or franchises of the company should be destroyed or unreasonably impaired, or whereby it *should be deprived of the right of constructing, maintaining, and operating its railway pursuant to the terms of the consent, while § 20 of the street railway act provided in terms for an agreement between the parties upon the question of rates of fare, and the parties having fixed such rate by agreement, entered into by authority of the legislature, there can be no question of its binding force. Section 14 of the same act also safeguarded the rights of the companies, and that section might be referred to in aid of its rights, by the company. The tram railway act amendment of 1867 is a general provision regarding regulations or conditions, destroying or unreasonably impairing rights or franchises already granted, or depriving the company of rights of construction and operation, and should be construed also in connection with § 14 of the street railway act, while the matter of rates of fare is specially provided for by § 20 of the last-named act, which provides for an agreement on that subject. The two acts are entirely harmonious, and may be fully carried out so as to involve neither ineongruity nor inconsistency.

But the defendants raise the objection that § 29 of the street railway act cannot be applied to companies formed under any other act for the reason that to apply it to such companies would violate the state Constitution, § 20 of art. 4, which provides that "no law shall embrace more than one object which shall be expressed in its title."

The title of the street railway act is "An Act to Provide for the Formation of Street
184 U. S.

Railways," and the claim is made that the provision of § 29, making the act applicable to other companies, is outside and beyond the object of the act as expressed in its title.

The meaning to be given to the constitutional provision was stated in People ex rel. Secretary of State v. State Ins. Co. 19 Mich. 392, wherein Chief Justice Cooley, at page 398, said:

"We must give the constitutional provision a reasonable construction and effect. The Constitution requires no law to embrace more than one object, which shall be expressed in its title. Now, the object may be very comprehensive and still be *without ob- [392]jection, and the one before us is of that character. But it is by no means essential that every end and means necessary or convenient for the accomplishment of the general object should be either referred to or necessarily indicated by the title. All that can reasonably be required is that the title shall not be made to cover legislation incongruous in itself, and which by no fair intendment can be considered as having a necessary or proper connection."

Similar provisions are to be found in the Constitutions of several of the states, among them that of New Jersey, and the meaning of such provision was brought before this court in Montclair Twp. v. Ramsdell, 107 U. S. 147, 27 L. ed. 431, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391, and it was held that the provision did not require a detailed statement or index or abstract of its contents in the title of an act, and that it did not prevent uniting, in the same act, numerous provisions for one general object fairly indicated by its title.

The Constitution of Illinois contains a similar provision, the construction of which also came before this court in Jonesboro v. Cairo & St. L. R. Co. 110 U. S. 192, 199, 28 L. ed. 116, 118, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67, 71. In that case this court said, through Mr. Justice Harlan:

"The title of the act is 'An Act to Amend the Charter of the Cairo & St. Louis Railroad Company.' The contention is, that the legalization of an election previously held, and at which the people voted in favor of a subscription of stock to that company, and the granting of authority to issue bonds in payment of such subscription, is not a subject expressed by the title of the act. In this view we do not concur, and our conclusion is justified by the later decisions of the supreme court of Illinois construing a similar provision in the state Constitution of 1870. It was held in Johnson v. People, 83 Ill. 431, that the Constitution 'does not require that the subject of the bill must be specifically and exactly expressed in the title; hence we conclude that any expression in the title which calls attention to the subject of the bill, although in general terms, is all that is required.'"

We have examined the various cases cited by counsel for the defendants, arising in the state of Michigan under the constitutional provision in question, and it is sufficient to say that *we think not one of them extends [393] that provision so as to embrace a case like the one at bar. Narrowly considered, an act to provide for the formation of street railway companies should contain nothing but provisions relating to their formation and organization, but it would be absurd to hold that the constitutional provision would prevent the introduction into such an act of various details in regard to the corporations after their formation and in regard to their government, operation, regulation, and other matters which might be fairly considered as germane to the particular object named in the title of the statute, and hence, we think it would be a most narrow construction of the constitutional provision to hold that under such a title it was incompetent for the legislature to provide that the benefits and obligations conferred and provided for in the act should be made applicable to corporations of a like character already organized and in operation. It is germane and appropriate to the subject-matter of the act; and to enact under such a title that all companies of the like nature should have the same privileges is fairly within the general object described in the title. This being true, the companies organized under the tram railway act were equally, with those organized under the street railway act, enabled by the express authority of the legislature to enter into a contract for a rate of fare with the city, and when in 1879 and the subsequent years those companies which were organized under the tram railway act entered into further agreements with the city in the way of ordinances, those agreements were valid so far as the objections heretofore considered are concerned, and not subject, in regard to this matter, to alteration at the will of one party only. The agreements being valid in the case of companies organized under the tram railway act, it follows that those entered into with the other companies organized under the street railway act were also valid.

Still another objection is raised by the defendants to the validity of the ordinances passed in 1879 and 1880 and 1885, by which the powers and privileges conferred and the obligations imposed upon the railway companies by the former ordinances were extended and limited to thirty years from the date of the supplemental ordinances, the objection being that the extending of *the term of the consents beyond the then limit of the corporate life of the companies was illegal and void. We are not of that opinion.

This was matter of agreement between the parties. The franchise to be a corporation came from the state, and all that the company required from the city was its consent to the laying down of the rails and the operation of the road through the streets of the city, and such consent was to be given upon terms and conditions to be agreed on. This consent, when given, became a privilege or franchise granted to the corporation, and was property belonging to it. By the ordinance of 1879 the duties and obligations of the company therein mentioned were largely increased, additional taxes were provided for, and also extensions of its tracks as stated in the ordinance. The company also agreed to furnish all the materials and do all the paving mentioned at its own expense. One inducement to the company to agree upon and accept this ordinance was that the term which the city had originally consented to for the use of its streets by the company should be extended to thirty years from the date of the new ordinance. Although the company itself, by the act under which it was incorporated, was limited in its corporate life to a term of thirty years from the date of its organization in 1862, the extension of the term of consent by the city carried such consent about sixteen years beyond its then corporate life. Of course, no one contends that this extension of the term for the use of the streets of the city in any manner affected the limit of the term of the corporate life of the company, but the limitation of its life did not prevent it from taking franchises or other property, the title to which would not expire with the corporation itself. A corporation whose corporate existence was limited to a term of years could always purchase the fee in property which it needed for the operation of its business. If at the end of its term its life were not extended, the property which it owned was an asset payable to the shareholders after the payment of its debts, and in a case like the present, where the consent was assignable and transferable, particularly by virtue of § 15 of the street railway act above set forth, any company itself having corporate existence *for that purpose could purchase the outstanding term and operate its road thereunder. We see no reason why the company could not take the extended term as provided for in the ordinance, and it formed a good consideration for the agreement on the part of the company to perform the other obligations contained in the ordinance. This exact proposition has been determined by the circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit in Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit, 26 L. R. A. 667, 12 C. C. A. 365, 22 U. S. App. 570, 64 Fed. 628. In the course of the opinion of the court in that case, the cases of People v. O'Brien, 111 N. Y. 1, 2 L. R. A. 255, 18 N. E. 692, and Miner v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 123 N. Y. 242, 25 N. E. 339, were cited. People v. O'Brien is one of the leading cases in New York upon that subject, and it was there held that a corporation, although created for a limited period, might acquire title in fee to property necessary for its use; and where the grant to a corporation of the franchise to construct and operate its road in the streets of a city is not, by its terms, limited and revocable, the grant is in fee, vesting the grantee with an interest in the street in perpetuity to the extent necessary for a street railroad; the rights granted to be exercised by the corporation or whomsoever may lawfully succeed to such rights. In that case the authorities show that a franchise of the above nature is invested with the character of property and is transferable as such, independently of the life of the original corporation. The other case, in 123 N. Y., announces the same doctrine. It is not a new one, and the decisions have all been one way, in favor of the right of a corporation, limited as to the time of its corporate existence, to purchase or acquire by agreement or condemnation property for its use, the title to which it might own in fee.

[395]

[394]

The case above cited in the circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit, it will be noticed, is between the same parties as the case at bar, and if the judgment therein had been pleaded or put in evidence upon the trial of this action, we cannot now see why it would not have been res judicata between the parties in this suit upon that question, at least as to the particular road then under discussion.

[396] In Detroit v. Ellis, 103 Mich. 612, 27 L. R. A. 211, 61 N. W. 886, *upon an application for a mandamus the decision of the United States circuit court of appeals was regarded as res judicata of the question in issue in that suit on an application by the city and certain individual citizens for a mandamus to compel the attorney general to file an information in the nature of quo warranto to inquire by what right the railway company maintained and used its tracks in the streets after the date named. Without treating the case in the circuit court of appeals as strictly res judicata, we regard the conclusion arrived at by that court upon the question under discussion as correct, and consequently the objection now urged by the defendants to the validity of the ordinance of 1879 and the other ordinances similar to it cannot be maintained.

The further objection is made that under the power of alteration and repeal, provided for in the Constitution of Michigan and under the terms of the various ordinances giving power to the common council in certain cases to provide for further rules and regulations, the right is reserved to the common council to alter the rates of fare provided for in the various ordinances under consideration, as it alone may regard reasonable and just, without the consent of the company.

The Constitution of the state of Michigan, art. 15, § 1, provides: "Corporations may be formed under general laws, but shall not be created by special act except for municipal purposes. All laws passed pursuant to this section may be amended, altered, or repealed." Counsel for the defendants contends "that the regulation of rates of fare or toll upon the street railway is a governmental function, delegated by the legislature of the state of Michigan to the municipalities, and no matter in what form such delegation of power may be exercised, whether by ordinance or an assumed contract, it is nevertheless a law, subject to alteration, amendment, or repeal. It has not been the policy of the state of Michigan, since the adoption of the present Constitution, to permit irrevocable legislation. The state cannot do it itself, and if it cannot, surely one of its creatures, like a city, cannot be permitted to do that which its creator is prohibited from doing."

184 U. S.

We have already seen that the legislature was competent to *grant to the city of De- [397] troit the right to give its consent to the laying of the tracks of a street railway and the operation of the same in and through its streets upon such terms and conditions as the parties might agree upon. The grant of this power was not the formation of a municipal corporation, directly or indirectly, either in substance or effect. The legislative act which granted the power to the city could not be altered, amended, or repealed by the latter. No such power was given to it by the legislature, and probably could not even be delegated in any event. It is sufficient to say that none was attempted. City R. Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 166 U. S. 557, 563, 41 L. ed. 1114, 1116, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653.

The legislature has not attempted to interfere with the rights of the street railway companies in Detroit, and hence the extent of its power so to do is not involved in the case.

We are then brought to the question of the reservations in the ordinances themselves. An examination of them leads us to the conclusion that not one provided or was intended to provide for a power to alter an agreement in relation to the rates of fare entered into between the parties. The right from time to time to make such further rules, orders, or regulations as to the common council may seem proper, cannot be held to extend to the alteration of a contract as to the rate of fare which shall be charged for the transportation of passengers. We think, as was stated by the court below, that this reservation permitted the city to make further rules or regulations than those contained in the ordinances, in regard "to all matters incident to the construction and operation of the road, such as the location of the tracks in the streets, the placing of switches and turntables, the repair of the pavement between the tracks, the removal or limitation of the number of tracks, in the interest of public travel, the frequency with which cars should be run for the public convenience, the stopping of cars at street crossings, the use of fenders, the rate of speed to be maintained, the sale of tickets, and generally to details of the conduct and operation of the railway, which experience might show to be necessary, in addition to or in amendment of those specified in the consent for the protection of life, the accommodation of the public, *and the avoidance of [398] injury to private property. Such regulations are not invasions of the contract rights of the company, and are just and reasonable." Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 305, 43 L. ed. 702, 709, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465.

The fixing of rates is, as we have already said, among the most vital portions of the agreement between the parties contained in the ordinances. It cannot be supposed for one moment, with regard to a right so fundamental in its nature, that there was any intention to permit the common council in its discretion to thereafter make an alteration which might be fatal to the pecuniary success of the company. For the reasons already given, we think the language used does not, in fact, give any such power to the common council. The ordinances of 1899 are, so far as this record shows, the first wherein the common council has assumed to make any change in the rates of fare without the assent of the company to be affected thereby. From 1862 until 1899 there seems to have been no attempt to exercise this alleged power of alteration by the common council without the consent of the railway company. While the rate of fare existed as agreed upon between the city and the railway company, expenditures involving millions of dollars were entered upon, changing the mode of transportation from animal to electric power, and no claim seems ever to have been made on the part of the city of a right of alteration to be exercised in accordance only with its own views of reason and propriety. This in itself is a strong implication of the want of any such power under the various reservations set forth in the foregoing statement of facts and contained in the ordinances specified. But, aside from that and considering only the nature of the right itself growing out of the agreement as to fares, we are of the opinion that not one of the reservations of the right to make further rules or regulations could by any fair construction be held to include the right on the part of the city at its own pleasure to reduce the rates of fare agreed upon in those ordinances.

[399] We have thus answered the chief objections of the city to the maintenance of this action. Some others have been made, which we have examined, but do not think it necessary to further *refer to them than to say they are in our opinion not well founded.

We think the conclusions arrived at by the court below are correct, and its judgment is therefore affirmed.

T. K. WILSON, Plff. in Err.,
v.

J. F. STANDEFER.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 399-416.)

Contracts—impairing obligation—forfeiture of lands of state.

The judicial proceeding to forfeit lands bought of the state, provided by the Texas act of July 8, 1879, § 12, in case of a default in the payment of interest, is not a contract right of the purchaser, and therefore his contract with the state is not impaired by the enact-

NOTE.—As to what laws are void as impairing obligation of contracts—see notes to Franklin County Grammar School v. Bailey (Vt.) 10 L. R. A. 405; Fletcher v. Peck, 3 L. ed. U. S. 162; McCanna v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 20, and Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & Silver Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 12.

That impairing the remedy impairs the obligation of contract—see notes to Best v. Baumgardner (Pa.) 1 L. R. A. 356; Louisiana ex rel. Ranger v. New Orleans, 26 L. ed. U. S. 132, and Phlinney v. Phlinney (Me.) 4 L. R. A. 348.

ment of the act of March 25, 1897, which authorizes forfeiture in such cases without any judicial proceeding, but which provides that at any time within six months after forfeiture the purchaser may institute a suit to establish the fact of payment, which was the sole defense allowed to him by the former statute.

[No. 105.]

Argued January 16, 1902. Decided March 3, 1902.

IN ERROR to the Court of Civil Appeals for the Third Supreme Judicial District of the State of Texas to review a judgment entered in accordance with an opinion of the Supreme Court sustaining a forfeiture of land bought of the state, against the contention that the purchaser's contract was impaired by a state statute. Affirmed.

See same case in Texas supreme court, 54 S. W. 898, and in Texas court of civil appeals, 55 S. W. 1135.

Statement by Mr. Justice Shiras:

This was an action brought in the district court of Tom Green county, Texas, in May, 1899, by J. F. Standefer against T. K. Wilson, involving the title and ownership of a tract of land containing 640 acres situated in said county.

At the trial a jury was waived, and an agreed statement of facts was filed, which was as follows:

*"1. The land sued for and described in [400] plaintiff's petition, to wit, section No. 42, district No. 11, S. P. R. R. Co., in Tom Green county, Texas, was on May 1, 1882, public free school land, being the alternate section surveyed by said S. P. R. R. Co. for the public school fund of Texas and reserved under the Constitution and laws for the use and benefit of the public free schools of Texas, and was a part of the said land, the sale of which was authorized under the act of the legislature of Texas, approved July 8, 1879, and the amendment thereto approved April 6, 1881.

"2. That on the 1st day of May, 1882, said survey of land was recognized and abstracted by the state as situated wholly in Concho county and was so recognized, abstracted, assessed for taxation, and taxes paid thereon until the year 1891, when the boundary line between the counties of Concho and Tom Green was run and established under a joint survey made by the two counties, and said land was ascertained to be in Tom Green, and has since said year been recognized and abstracted by the state as situated in Tom Green county, and since said year has been assessed for taxation and the taxes paid thereon in said Tom Green county.

"3. That the county surveyor of Concho county, in obedience to and under the act approved July 8, 1879, and the amendment thereto approved April 6, 1881, viewed and appraised said land under oath, as required by said act, and made return of same to the commissioners' court of Concho county, which said court examined and approved same, classifying as suitable only for grazing purposes, no timber or water, and appraised it at $1.00 per acre.

"4. That upon the completion of said appraisalment the county commissioners' court of Concho county prepared a tabulated report of their action as to said survey, setting forth the following, to wit, 'Survey No. 42, district No. 11, 640 acres, S. P. R. R. Co., $1 per acre, suitable only for grazing purposes, no timber or water,' one copy of which said report was filed in the office of the county surveyor of Concho county, one copy forwarded to the commissioner of the general land office, and one copy to the treasurer of the state.

[401] "5. That upon receipt of said tabulated report by the commissioner of the general land office the same was by him examined and in all things approved, and the said commissioner of the general land office notified the county surveyor of Concho county of his approval of said tabulated report and appraisalment.

"6. That thereafter, on May 1, 1882, Thomas Dolan made his application in writing to the county surveyor of Concho county to purchase said land, which said application was as follows, to wit: 'To the surveyor of Concho county: In accordance with the provisions of an act to amend the caption and §§ 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, and 8 of an act to provide for the sale of alternate sections of land in organized counties, as surveyed by railroad companies and other works of internal improvements and set apart for the benefit of the common school fund, to provide for the investment of the proceeds and to repeal all laws in conflict therewith, approved July 8, 1879, and to provide for the sale of such lands in unorganized counties, approved April 6, 1881, I hereby apply to purchase the following land: Section No. 42, district No. 11, Concho County, about N. 12 miles from Kickapoo Springs, surveyed for S. P. R. R. Co. certificates: Beginning at N. E. corner S. P. R. R. Co. survey 117, thence north 1,900 varas, thence west 1,900 varas, thence south 1,900 varas, thence east 1,900 varas to the place of beginning. Date, 1st day of May, 1882. (Signed) Thomas Dolan;' which said application was on same day filed with said county surveyor and recorded by him May 22, 1882, and all fees required by law paid to said surveyor.

"7. That immediately thereafter said Thomas Dolan forwarded to the state treasurer his application, with the sum of $32, being 1-20 of the appraised value of said land at $1 per acre, and said treasurer entered a credit on his books in the name of said Dolan, and thereafter, on June 22d, 1882, the state treasurer issued a receipt for said first payment as follows: Treasurer's office, Austin, Texas, June 22d, 1882. Received of Maddox Bros. & A. on account of Thomas Dolan the sum of $32, the same being first payment on section No. 42, district No. 11, S. P. R. R. Co., of state school of land set apart for the benefit of the common school fund. Approved April 6, 1881. (Signed) F. R. Lubbock, treasurer. And said state treasurer forwarded said receipt, together with said application, to the commissioner of the general land office, who filed said application in his office on June 22d, 1882, and issued his certificate in lieu thereof, setting forth the amount paid to the treasurer, and the quantity, description, and valuation of the land applied for; which said certificate was by said Thomas Dolan presented to the county surveyor of Concho county, who thereupon surveyed the land embraced in said original application, recorded the field notes thereof in his office, and forwarded same to the commissioner of the general land office, and entered said land on his books July 2, 1882, as sold to said Thomas Dolan, and he paid the said surveyor all fees required by law.

[402] land in Concho county under an act to provide for the sale of the alternate sections

"8. That when said surveyor received said application said Thomas Dolan executed and delivered his obligation to the state for the balance of the purchase money of said survey of land, said obligation being as follows, to wit: '$608.00. Note for purchase money, common school lands. For value received, I, the subscriber hereto, do promise to pay to the governor of the state of Texas and his successors in office the sum of six hundred and eight dollars, with interest thereon at the rate of 8 per cent per annum, as hereinafter specified, the same being the purchase money for the following-described tracts of land this day purchased by me from the state of Texas in accordance with the terms of an act of the legislature of said state, viz., An Act to Amend the Caption and §§ 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, and 8 of an Act to Provide for the Sale of Alternate Sections of Land in Organized Counties as Surveyed by Railroad Companies and Other Works of Internal Improvement and Set Apart for the Benefit of the Common School Fund; to Provide for the Investment of the Proceeds, and to Repeal All Laws in Conflict Therewith, Approved July 8, 1879, and to Provide for the Sale of Such Lands in Unorganized Counties, Approved April 6, 1881, to wit, Survey 42, District 11, Surveyed for the S. P. R. R. Co., Concho County. I am to pay or cause to be paid into the treasury of the state *of [403] Texas, on the 1st day of January of each year, one-twentieth of the above amount, together with the annual interest of 8 per cent, upon the unpaid principal until this entire obligation is liquidated, and it is expressly understood that I am to comply with all the conditions and requirements and am subject to all the penalties contained and prescribed in the above-recited act. Witness my hand this the 1st day of May, 1882. (Signed) Thomas Dolan;' which said obligation was forwarded to the commissioner of the general land office and by him registered in a book kept for that purpose, setting forth the name of the purchaser, the amount and date of the obligation, the tract of land for which it was given, and the county in which situated, and indorsed said obligation as follows: 'Registered June 22nd, 1882. W. C. Walsh, commissioner of the general land office,' and delivered said obligation to the treasurer of the state, who filed the same in his office.

"9. That said Thomas Dolan and his vendees paid on account of interest on said obligation as the same accrued the sum of $272.65, which was received and applied as interest thereon, but the other payments of principal, except the first payment of 1-20 of the appraised value of said land, to wit, $32, which paid at the time of his said application to purchase, as aforesaid, was deferred, as authorized and permitted by said act.

"10. That thereafter said Thomas Dolan sold said land and conveyed it by deed in proper form to H. Buckley, duly acknowledged and recorded and filed in the land office, and thereafter by regular and constructive chain of transfers said title vested in the Ostrander & Loomis Land & Live Stock Company on April 4, 1888, all of which said conveyances being properly acknowledged and duly recorded and filed as required by law, each of said vendees in succession assuming to pay to the state the balance of the purchase money and interest, as provided in the obligation of said Dolan.

[404] "11. That said land, among others, was mortgaged by said Ostrander & Loomis Land & Live Stock Company to the Knickerbocker Trust Company to secure payment of $600,000.00 due holders of its coupon bonds; that in 1892 said Ostrander & Loomis Land & Live Stock Company became insolvent and [404] *unable to meet any of its obligations, and in a suit in the district court of Tom Green county, brought to foreclose said mortgage, judgment was entered on the 17th day of May, 1898, foreclosing the same and ordering the sale of the land so mortgaged, including said survey 42 described in plaintiff's said petition; that an order of sale issued in due form and time on said judgment, and said survey of land, with others, was sold thereunder by the sheriff of Tom Green county, after due and legal notice, on the first Tuesday in July, 1898, being the fifth day of said month, when the land described in plaintiff's petition was bid in by T. K. Wilson, defendant herein, with some other lands, for the sum of $3,250, the amount of his bid paid, and the said sheriff executed to him a deed in due and legal form, properly acknowledged, conveying to him the title of the said Ostrander & Loomis Land & Live Stock Company, and was on the same day filed and duly recorded in Tom Green county.

"12. That on the 20th day of August, 1897, the commission of the general land office of Texas, acting under and by virtue of the authority conferred upon him by the act of the legislature of Texas, entitled 'An Act to Authorize the Commissioner of the General Land Office to Forfeit All Lands Heretofore sold by the State under Any of the Various Acts of the Legislature for Failure to Pay Any Portion of the Interest Thereon, Approved March 25, 1897,' indorsed on the application of said Thomas Dolan given as aforesaid 'Land forfeited,' and caused an entry to that effect to be made on the account kept of said Thomas Dolan, purchased as aforesaid, and declared said land forfeited to the state without the necessity of re-entry or judicial ascertainment, and had said land duly and regularly reclassified under chapter 12 A, title 87, of Revised Civil Statutes of Texas of 1895 and the amendment thereto, chapter 129, General Laws of Texas of 1897.

"13. That the commissioner of the general land office did not at any time prior to the forfeit entered and declared on the 20th day of August, 1897, notify the county or district attorney of the county in which said land was situated of the failure of said Thomas Dolan or his vendees to pay any interest due on the said obligation of Thomas Dolan hereinbefore mentioned, *and neither [405] the county nor district attorney of the county in which said land is situated caused any writ to be served upon said Thomas Dolan or his vendees or the mortgagee or beneficiaries thereunder, all of whom resided at said date in Concho and Tom Green counties, requiring him, them, or any or either of them to show cause why he or they should not be ejected from said land, and no judgment was rendered in any court against said Thomas Dolan or any or either of his vendees or the mortgagee or beneficiary under the mortgage aforesaid awarding a writ of possession against him or them in favor of the state, and no copy of any such judgment was forwarded to the state treasurer and commissioner of the general land office, as required by § 12 of the said act approved July 8, 1879, and no proceedings whatever were had as required and provided by said § 12 of the act aforesaid, but said forfeiture was entered and declared on August 20, 1897, without any judicial proceedings whatever in any court of Texas, and no judicial proceedings of any kind or character have ever been had by the state to forfeit or rescind the sale made to Thomas Dolan, as hereinbefore set out, or to recover on or enforce his obligation given, as aforesaid, for the purchase money of said land, but said forfeiture was made under said act of March 25, 1897, and was without re-entry or judicial ascertainment, and without any actual or personal notice to said Dolan or any of his vendees or to the mortgagees or beneficiaries aforesaid.

"14. The commissioner of the general land office of Texas, after the forfeiture entered and declared, as aforesaid, on August 20, 1897, classified said land described in plaintiff's petition as dry grazing land, and appraised and valued the same at $1 per acre, and placed the same upon the market for sale, and notified in writing the county clerk of Tom Green county on September 11, 1897, of the valuation placed by him upon the said land, and that said land was offered for sale, which said notification was duly recorded on September 11, 1897, by the said clerk in a book for that purpose in his office; and it is agreed that in the classification, valuation, and the placing of said land on the market September 11, 1897, ev-

[406] everything was done as required and in strict compliance with chapter 12 A, *title 87, Revised Civil Statutes of Texas of 1895, and the amendment thereto, chapter 129, General Laws of Texas of 1897.

"15. That thereafter, on September 13, 1897, plaintiff J. F. Standefer, residing upon with his family and being an actual settler on said land, made his application, in writing, as required by law, and on the form adopted and prescribed by the commissioner of the general land office, to purchase said survey 42, district 11, S. P. R. R. Co., 640 acres, in Tom Green county, as an actual settler thereon, at the valuation and classification placed thereon by said commissioner, to wit, \$1 per acre, as dry grazing land, and accompanied his said application with his affidavit, stating that he desired to purchase said land for a home, that he had in good faith settled thereon, and that he was not acting in collusion with others for the purpose of buying the land for any other person or corporation, and that no other person or corporation was interested in the purchase thereof, which said application was forwarded by said J. F. Standefer to the commissioner of the general land office, together with his obligation to the state, duly executed, binding him to pay to the state on the 1st day of November of each year thereafter until the whole purchase money was paid $\frac{1}{10}$ of the aggregate price of said land, with interest, at the rate of 3 per cent per annum, on the whole unpaid purchase money, payable on the 1st day of November of each year, and upon the same day that he forwarded his application and obligation to the commissioner of the general land office he also transmitted to the state treasurer \$16, being $\frac{1}{10}$ of the aggregate purchase money for said land at \$1 per acre; and thereafter, on October 25, 1897, the commissioner of the general land office awarded said land to him under his said application to purchase as aforesaid and notified him on that date of said award, and the said Standefer has since said purchase paid all interest due upon his said obligation to the state and has continuously resided upon said land as a home and is now residing thereon, and he has in all things strictly complied with the said laws of 1895 and 1897 and the regulations adopted by said commissioner of the general land office.

[407] "16. That on April 25, 1899, defendant T. K. Wilson, through *his attorneys, tendered to the state treasurer all interest and principal due on account of said Thomas Dolan purchase, as aforesaid, as is fully shown by the following certificate of said state treasurer, to wit: 'I, John W. Robbins, treasurer of the state of Texas, do hereby certify that Messrs. Hill & Wright have tendered to this department all interest and principal due on account for section No. 42, in district No. 11, S. P. R. R. Co., in Tom Green county, sold to Thomas Dolan under act of April 6, 1881, which cannot be accepted for the reason that the account for said land under said act has been forfeited for nonpayment of interest to January 1, 1896. In testimony whereof I hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of office, at Austin, Texas, this the 29th day of April, 1899, John W. Robbins, state treasurer, by R. C. Roberdeau, chief clerk and acting treasurer. (Seal.)'

"And on the same day Wilson, by his attorneys, made written application to the commissioner of the general land office for a patent on said survey under said Dolan purchase, and tendered to said commissioner the patent fee of $6, and the commissioner of the general land office refused to issue said patent for the reason that it appeared from the records of his office that the sale to Thomas Dolan was made under the act of 1879 and amendment thereto of 1881, and that the Dolan purchase of this land was forfeited August 20, 1897, by the commissioner of the general land office for nonpayment of interest and because this land was afterwards, on September 13, 1897, sold to J. F. Standefer.

"17. It is further agreed that at the time of said forfeiture, August 20, 1897, the state did not pay or offer to pay to Thomas Dolan or any of his vendees the purchase money on said land or any of the interest paid on said obligation, and has not since paid or offered to pay any part of said principal or interest, and the said obligation of Thomas Dolan, executed May 1, 1882, as aforesaid, has not been returned or offered to be returned to said Dolan or his vendees or said Wilson, but the same is still held and retained by the state treasurer."

On May 27, 1899, the district court entered judgment in favor of the defendant. Thereupon an appeal was taken to the court *of civil appeals of the third supreme judicial [408] district of Texas, and by that court certain questions were certified to the supreme court of Texas, viz.: "1. Did the state, through its commissioner of the land office, without judicial proceedings, have the authority to legally declare a forfeiture of the Dolan title on account of the failure to pay the interest, as stated? 2. Are the principles of law, as decided by the supreme court of this state in the case of Fristoe v. Blum, 92 Tex. 76, 45 S. W. 998, applicable and controlling of the question certified?"

On January 15, 1900, the supreme court of Texas filed an opinion answering the certified questions in the affirmative, and directing that a copy of the opinion should be certified to the court of civil appeals for the third supreme judicial district, and that said cause be therein proceeded with in accordance with said opinion.

On February 7, 1900, the court of civil appeals, in accordance with the opinion of the supreme court, reversed the judgment of the district court, and rendered judgment in favor of Standefer, the appellant. Thereupon a petition was filed in the supreme court of Texas by T. K. Wilson for a writ of error to the court of civil appeals, but this application was by the supreme court refused. Thereafter a writ of error, bringing the cause to this court, was allowed by the Chief Justice of the court of civil appeals.

Mr. Jared W. Hill argued the cause, and, with Mr. T. K. Wilson, read a brief for plaintiff in error:

Whether § 12 of the act of 1879 is a part of the contract is a question which this court will decide for itself.

McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 665, 34 L. ed. 305, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 972; McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 102, 43 L. ed. 382, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 134; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Nebraska ex rel. Omaha, 170 U. S. 57, 42 L. ed. 948, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 66, 44 L. ed. 673, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 549.

The Federal question is squarely presented by the record, and submitted by the court of civil appeals on certified question to the supreme court of Texas.

Columbia Water Power Co. v. Columbia Electric Street R. Light & P. Co. 172 U. S. 475, 43 L. ed. 521, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247.

An instrument shall be considered as a whole, and every clause and every word shall be given effect, and no part will be disregarded unless absolutely repugnant to the general intent.

17 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 7.

That one party is the state makes no difference as to the contract. The principles governing them are the same.

Jumbo Cattle Co. v. Bacon, 79 Tex. 13, 14 S. W. 840; Fristoe v. Leon, 92 Tex. 80, 45 S. W. 998; People v. Stephens, 71 N. Y. 549.

The legislature is presumed to have intended that every word and clause in a statute shall be of some force and effect, and courts will so construe statutes that the whole may stand and be effective.

Ogden v. Strong, 2 Paine, 584, Fed. Cas. No. 10,460.

The law under which the purchase was made having provided that, in the event of a default in payment of annual interest, a forfeiture of the contract of purchase should be had through a judicial proceeding, and the re-entry should be by a judgment of the court and a writ of possession, such law became a part of the contract.

International Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Hardy, 86 Tex. 615, 24 L. R. A. 284, 26 S. W. 497; Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 87, 3 L. ed. 162; Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How. 190, 13 L. ed. 383; Winter v. Jones, 10 Ga. 190; State ex rel. Damman v. School & University Land Comrs. 4 Wis. 414.

When there is an offer made by the legislature, which is accepted by an individual, there is a contract which it is not within the power of the state to impair.

Jumbo Cattle Co. v. Bacon, 79 Tex. 13, 14 S. W. 840.

Parties have the right to make remedies the subject of their contract, and when they do they are as much protected against impairment as any other provision of the contract.

International Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Hardy, 86 Tex. 615, 24 L. R. A. 284, 26 S. W. 497; Billmeyer v. Evans, 40 Pa. 327; Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 322, 11 L. ed. 143, 147; Breitenbach v. Bush, 44 Pa. 313, 84 Am. 616

Dec. 442; McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 11 L. ed. 397; Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, sub nom. United States ex rel. Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 18 L. ed. 403; Brine v. Hartford F. Ins. Co. 96 U. S. 627, 24 L. ed. 858; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 24 L. ed. 793; Seibert v. Lewis, 122 U. S. 284, sub nom. Seibert v. United States ex rel. Lewis, 30 L. ed. 1161, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1190; Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 119, 41 L. ed. 95, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1042; State ex rel. Damman v. School & University Land Comrs. 4 Wis. 414; Simms v. Wright (Tex. Civ. App.) 56 S. W. 110.

The "remedy" which the state has the right to change refers to those modes of procedure in the courts which lead up to and end in the judgment and its execution.

Johnson v. Fletcher, 54 Miss. 628, 28 Am. Rep. 388.

The state cannot change the obligation of the state to a purchaser under pretense of a change of remedy.

The general law of the state prescribing remedies enters into and forms a part of all contracts.

McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 11 L. ed. 397.

When authority is given to do a particular thing, and the mode of doing it is prescribed, it is limited to be done in that mode; all other modes are excluded.

Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 326.

A valid forfeiture of school lands in Kansas cannot be had without giving the sixty days' notice of the state's intention to declare a forfeiture required by law, when default is made in the payment of the purchase money or interest.

Hansen v. Wilson, 40 Kan. 211, 19 Pac. 717.

Where by statute a purchaser of lands from the state has the right, upon the forfeiture of his contract of purchase for the nonpayment of the sum due upon it, to revive it at any time before a public sale of the lands by the payment of all sums due upon the contract, with a penalty of 5 per cent, this right cannot be taken away by the subsequent change in the law which subjects the forfeited land to private entry and sale.

State ex rel. Damman v. School & University Land Comrs. 4 Wis. 414.

The several courts of civil appeals of Texas, wherever the question came before them prior to the decision of the supreme court in Fristoe v. Leon, 92 Tex. 76, 45 S. W. 998, uniformly held that the acts of the legislature of Texas authorizing summary forfeitures were not applicable to sales made previous to the passage of such acts.

Cuba v. Island City Sav. Bank (Tex. Civ. App.) 41 S. W. 532; Capps v. Garvey (Tex. Civ. App.) 41 S. W. 379; Simms v. Wright (Tex. Civ. App.) 56 S. W. 110.

The doctrine of nonjudicial rescission has never been favored, and it has been only in strong instances where the courts have upheld the right to resort to this remedy.

Moore v. Giesecke, 76 Tex. 551, 13 S. W. 290.

No counsel for defendant in error.

[408] *Mr. Justice Shiras delivered the opinion of the court:

The Federal question in this case is founded upon the contention that the act of July 8, 1879, under which the land was purchased by Dolan, having provided in its 12th section for the forfeiture of the contract of purchase, in event of default in payment of annual interest, by a judicial proceeding, such section became part of the obligation [409] of the contract between the state *and the purchaser, which was impaired by the subsequent act of August 20, 1897, authorizing a forfeiture without judicial ascertainment or proceedings, and that therefore the proceedings under the last-mentioned act were null and void, as a violation of § 10, art. 1, of the Constitution of the United States.

As the supreme court of Texas overruled that contention, and as the civil court of appeals entered the final judgment in the case in accordance with the opinion of the supreme court, the question is properly before us for determination.

The reasoning upon which the supreme court of Texas proceeded can be best presented by the following extracts from its opinion, as it appears in this record:

"The act of 1897, under which the commissioner took the action the effect of which is in question, authorized the commissioner, when any portion of the interest due by purchasers of such land has not been paid, to declare a forfeiture of the purchase without judicial aid, and gave to his action the effect of putting an end to the contract. That this statute by its terms applies to cases such as this is not disputed.

"We think it clear that all of the terms of the contract between the state and a purchaser under the act of 1879 are contained in §§ 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10, above outlined, and their rights, the obligations of their contract, arise from a compliance with those provisions. The contract there provided for is an executory contract of sale and purchase, which arises upon acceptance of and compliance with the stated terms of the offer made by the state for the sale of the lands. The purchaser presents his application, makes the cash payment, causes the land to be surveyed, and executes his obligation to perform the things to be done in the future. The contract then is complete, and its terms are fixed. Jumbo Cattle Co. v. Bacon, 79 Tex. 12, 14 S. W. 840. Both the state and the purchaser are bound so long as there is compliance with the obligation,—the purchaser to make the further payments, and the state, upon completion thereof, to grant the land to the purchaser. But no title passes, and a right of rescission in the state may arise just as it might arise in an individual upon default in performance on the part of the other party.

[410] *"This right might be exercised either by legislative act or by the act of some officer properly empowered thereto. . . . The statute of 1879 does not give authority to any officer to rescind without judicial action; but the right of rescission existed in 184 U. S.

the state, and its exercise might be subsequently authorized through the lawmaking power, and an exercise of it, based upon the default of the other party, would not be a denial of any right of his. It could only be held that the right of rescission for default of the purchaser did not exist by holding that the contract provided that it should not exist, or that it should be exercised in a particular manner. But the contract embraces no such provision. There is no undertaking on the part of the state with the purchaser that the remedy prescribed in this statute, and no other, shall be pursued, unless it is to be implied from the mere presence of the provision in the statute, and we think it well settled that no such implication arises. In the proposition often stated in the decisions that parties contract with reference to existing laws, and that such laws become a part of the contract, the reference is to those laws which determine and fix the obligation of the contract, the correlative rights and duties springing from it, and not to laws of mere procedure prescribing remedies. With reference to these, there is ordinarily no obligation arising, but the contract is made in contemplation of the power of the legislature to change them. Of course, all remedy cannot be taken away, nor can the existing remedy be so altered as to take away or impair any of the rights given by the contract as interpreted by existing law. It is also true that a specific remedy, provided by the contract itself, cannot be changed by legislation, because it constitutes a part of the contract. International Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Hardy, 86 Tex. 610, 24 L. R. A. 284, 26 S. W. 497. But none of these limitations on legislative power are applicable to this legislation. The act of 1897 simply enforces a right which existed in the state from the formation of the contract. It takes away no right of the purchaser, unless it can be said that he had the right to demand that the particular remedy provided by the act of 1879 should be followed. This could only be true if the contract made that remedy exclusively applicable, which was not the case.

*"That prompt payment of interest instal-[411]ments was made an essential part of this contract is made very clear by the terms of the statute, as well as by its purpose, to provide available funds annually for the support of the public schools, and that a breach of his obligation to make such payment on the part of the purchaser gave the state the right to rescind the contract is equally clear. If the facts did not exist to authorize the action taken by the commissioner, that could be made to appear whenever such action came in question in the courts, and thus the purchaser could be deprived of no right by such action. The statute would only be taken as authorizing rescission when the right of rescission existed." [93 Tex. 232, 54 S. W. 898.]

It will be observed that, in this opinion, the supreme court of Texas concedes that a contract of sale and purchase of land between the state and Dolan was created by the transactions as they are admitted to have taken place. It is also conceded that it was competent for the parties to have provided, as a substantive part of the contract, special remedies, each against the other, for the enforcement of their respective obligations, and that, in such a case, neither party could, without the consent of the other, resort to any form of remedy other than those stipulated for. But the court held that, in the present case, there was no undertaking on the part of the state with the purchaser that the remedy prescribed for the state in the act of 1879, and no other, should be pursued, if the purchaser should fail to comply with his part of the contract; that § 12 of the act was not a contract with purchasers, but was a general law of the state, regulating its method of procedure against delinquent purchasers, and that purchasers in default had no vested rights in the form of remedy reserved by the state in its own behalf.

We are first confronted with a question of construction. The supreme court of Texas having held that § 12 was a law, and not a term of a contract with a purchaser, is it open for this court to put a different construction upon the statute? It is settled law that this court, when reviewing the final judgment of a state court upholding a state enactment alleged to be in violation of the contract clause of the Constitution, possesses paramount authority to determine for [412] itself the existence or the *nonexistence of the contract set up, and whether its obligation has been impaired by the state enactment. Jefferson Branch Bank v. Skelly, 1 Black, 436, 17 L. ed. 173; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co. 125 U. S. 18, 31 L. ed. 607, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 741; Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Tennessee, 153 U. S. 486, 38 L. ed. 793, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 968; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Nebraska ex rel. Omaha, 170 U. S. 58, 42 L. ed. 948, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513; McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 102, 43 L. ed. 382, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 134.

But as the general rule is that the interpretation put on a state Constitution or laws by the supreme court of such state is binding upon this court, and as our right to review and revise decisions of the state courts in cases where the question is of an impairment by legislation of contract rights, is an exception, perhaps the sole exception, to the rule, it will be the duty of this court, even in such a case, to follow the decision of the state court when the question is one of doubt and uncertainty. Especial respect should be had to such decisions when the dispute arises out of general laws of a state, regulating its exercise of the taxing power, or relating to the state's disposition of its public lands. In such cases it is frequently necessary to recur to the history and situation of the country in order to ascertain the reason as well as the meaning of the laws, and knowledge of such particulars will most likely be found in the tribunals whose special function is to expound and interpret the state enactments.

The legislation in question in this case is one of that general character, providing for the sale of public lands theretofore set apart for the benefit of common schools, and was enacted in twenty sections, on July 8, 1879. On April 6, 1881, an act was passed, amendatory of several of the sections of the act of 1879, but such amendments do not seem to have any important bearing on the case. On May 1, 1882, one Thomas Dolan made an application in writing to the county surveyor to purchase the land in question. Under the formalities of the statute, Dolan paid down, on June 22, 1882, the sum of $32, and gave his note, dated May 1, 1882, for the balance of the purchase money, being $608, payable in instalments with annual interest of 8 per cent upon the unpaid principal. Thereafter Dolan sold and conveyed said land to one Buckley, and by successive transfers the title of Dolan became vested, on April 4, 1888, in the Ostrander & *Loomis Land & Live Stock Company,—[413] each of the successive vendees assuming to pay the balance of the purchase money and interest, as provided in the obligation of Dolan. Said land with other tracts was mortgaged by said Land & Stock Company to the Knickerbocker Trust Company to secure the payment of $600,000. In 1892 the land company became insolvent, and in a suit in the district court of Tom Green county, to foreclose said mortgage, judgment was entered on May 17, 1898. Upon a sale on said judgment on the first Tuesday of July, 1898, the Dolan tract, with other lands, was bid in by T. K. Wilson, the plaintiff in error, for the sum of $3,250, and the sheriff executed and delivered to him a deed conveying the title of the said Ostrander & Loomis Land & Live Stock Company.

On August 20, 1897, the commissioner of the general land office of Texas, acting under the act of March 25, 1897, indorsed on the application of Thomas Dolan that said land was forfeited, and restored the said land to the public domain. Thereafter J. F. Standefer, on September 13, 1897, who was then residing with his family and being an actual settler upon said land, made his application in writing to purchase said land, and on October 25, 1897, the commissioner of the land office awarded said land to him, and Standefer paid down the money and gave his obligation to pay the balance of the purchase money with interest to the state, and has since said purchase paid all interest due upon his said obligation, and has continuously resided upon said land as a home, and has in all things strictly conformed to the laws and with the regulations adopted by the commissioner of the general land office.

On April 25, 1899, T. K. Wilson, through his attorneys, tendered to the state treasurer all the purchase money and back interest due on account of the Dolan purchase, and, on the same day, demanded from the commissioner of the general land office a patent for the land. This tender and demand were refused by the officers, giving the reason that said Dolan purchase had been forfeited on August 20, 1897, for nonpayment of interest, and because said land had afterwards, on September 13, 1897, been sold to J. F. Standefer.

[414] It therefore appears that when T. K. Wilson bid in this land *the interest on the Dolan purchase was in arrears from January 1, 1896, to July, 1898, and that when he made a tender to the state treasurer, more than three years' interest was in arrears, and that, in the meantime, and before Wilson's purchase, the land had been declared forfeited, and had been sold by the state for a valuable consideration to J. F. Standefer. While the agreed statement of facts shows that Wilson paid $3,250 for the lands bid in by him at the sheriff's sale, it does not appear how much, if any, of that sum was on account of the Dolan tract. It seems to have been a lump sum for all the lands bought by Wilson. At the time of that sale Standefer was in actual possession of and residing on the land in dispute. It may fairly be presumed that when Wilson bid at the sheriff's sale he knew of the forfeiture and sale of the Dolan tract, for they were matters of record. But whether this were true or not, he certainly had notice of an existing outstanding title by Standefer's actual possession, a fact admitted in the agreed statement of facts.

But whatever may have been the views of the state courts as to the legal rights and equities between the parties, the sole question for our consideration is whether the Supreme Court of Texas erred in overruling the contention of the plaintiff in error that the state was precluded by contract from changing its mode of procedure in respect to purchasers in default.

There seems to be no ground for complaint by the plaintiff in error in point of equity. His counsel does, indeed, contend that he was deprived by the change of remedy of a right to have the forfeiture declared by a judicial proceeding, and that he was thereby deprived of his property without due process of law. But this argument is refuted by the fact that the only question on which he had a right to be heard was whether he had made payment in compliance with his part of the contract. By the 12th section of the act of July, 1879, the purchaser was shut up to the defense whether he had paid the annual interest as provided for in his agreement. True he had a right to show that he had made the requisite payments, and thus defeat the forfeiture. But he had the same right and privilege under the act of March, 1897, which expressly provided that "the purchaser of said land shall have the right, [415] at any time *within six months after such indorsement of 'Lands forfeited,' to institute a suit in the district court of Travis county, Texas, against the commissioner of the general land office, for the purpose of contesting such forfeiture and setting aside the same, upon the ground that the facts did not exist authorizing such forfeiture, but if no such suit has been instituted as above provided, such forfeiture of the commissioner of the general land office shall then become fixed and conclusive; and provided, that if 184 U. S.

any purchaser shall die, or shall have died, his heirs or legal representatives shall have one year in which to make payment after the 1st day of November next after such death." What would have been the rights of the parties, if time had not been given by the last statute within which to contest the forfeiture evidenced by the commissioners' indorsement, is a question not now necessary to be decided.

It is apparent that the purchaser was not deprived by the act of 1897 of the right to be heard in a court of justice as to the fact of payment. His position under that act was quite as favorable as under the prior act of 1879. It is scarcely necessary to say that this court, when asked to revise proceedings in state courts, have always held that due process of law is afforded litigant, if they have an opportunity to be heard at any time before final judgment is entered. Walker v. Sauvinet, 92 U. S. 90, 23 L. ed. 678; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 345, 31 L. ed. 763. 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921; Gallup v. Schmidt, 183 U. S. 307, ante, 213 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; King v. Mullins, 171 U. S. 404, 43 L. ed. 214, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 925.

Neither Dolan nor any of the successors to his title availed of the opportunity to be judicially heard afforded by the law; and the reason for not doing so clearly appears in the admitted fact that the payments were in arrears for a considerable period of time. The tender made, if it could have had any legal effect at any time, was manifestly too late after the state had declared the forfeiture and sold the land to another.

Upon the whole, we agree with the conclusion of the supreme court of Texas, that no contract rights of a purchaser under the act of 1879 were impaired by the provisions of the subsequent act of 1897; that the 12th section of the act of 1879 was not, in legal contemplation, a stipulation by the state that *the only remedy which might be resorted to [416] by the state was the one therein provided for; that, in the language of Chief Justice Marshall, "the distinction between the obligation of a contract and a remedy given by the legislature to enforce that obligation exists in the nature of things, and without impairing the obligation of the contract, the remedy may certainly be modified as the wisdom of the nation may direct." Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 4 L. ed. 529. The judgment of the Court of Civil Appeals for the Third Judicial District of the State of Texas is affirmed.

UNITED STATES, Appt.,
v.
RIO GRANDE DAM & IRRIGATION COMPANY et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 416-425.)

Appeal in equity—discretionary orders—reversal for absence of material evidence.

1. Error in the denial of a motion for the 619 continuance of a cause and of an application for a rehearing does not constitute a ground for the reversal of the final decree.

2. A decree dismissing a suit by the United States, under the act of Congress of September 19, 1890, chap. 907 (26 Stat. at L. 426, 454, § 10), to enjoin the creation of an obstruction of a navigable stream, will be reversed in the exercise of the power, on an appeal in equity, to render such a decree as under all the circumstances may seem proper, and the cause will be remanded for further hearing, where material evidence is absent from the record because of the action of the trial court in not giving sufficient time to the government to prepare its case for the inquiry directed on a prior appeal to be made on the question whether the navigability of the stream would be substantially diminished by the creation of such obstruction.

[No. 239.]

Argued November 14, 15, 1901. Decided March 3, 1902.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of New Mexico to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court for the Third Judicial District of New Mexico dismissing a suit by the United States to enjoin an obstruction of a navigable stream. Reversed and remanded for further hearing.

See same case below (N. M.) 65 Pac. 276.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Marsden C. Burch argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant.

Mr. J. H. McGowan argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees.

[417] Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit presents a contest between the United States and the appellee corporations as to the right asserted by the latter to construct over and near the Rio Grande a certain dam and reservoir for the purpose of appropriating the waters of that river in their private business.

By the 7th article of the treaty of February 2d, 1848, between the United States and the Republic of Mexico, it is provided that "the river Gila and the part of the Rio Bravo del Norte lying below the southern boundary of New Mexico, being, agreeably to the 5th article, divided in the middle between the two Republics, the navigation of the Gila and of the Bravo below said boundary shall be free and common to the vessels and citizens of both countries; and neither shall, without the consent of the other, construct any work that may impede or interrupt, in whole or in part, the exercise of this right; not even for the purpose of favoring new methods of navigation.

. . . The stipulations contained in the present article shall not impair the territorial rights of either Republic within its established limits." 9 Stat. at L. 928. And by the 4th article of the treaty of December 30th, 1853, between the same countries, it was further provided that "the several provisions, stipulations, and restrictions contained in the 7th article of the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo shall remain in force only so far as regards the Rio Bravo del Norte, below the initial of the said boundary provided in the 1st article of this treaty, that is to say, below the intersection of the 31° 47' 30" parallel of latitude, with the boundary lines established by the late treaty dividing said river from its mouth upwards, according to the 5th article of the treaty of Guadalupe." 10 Stat. at L. 1034. Again, by a convention between the United States and Mexico, concluded December 26th, 1890, provision was made for an international boundary commission, empowered, upon application by the local authorities, to inquire whether any works were being constructed on the Rio Grande which were forbidden by treaty stipulations. 26 Stat. at L. 1512.

Just before the last-named convention, Congress, by the act of September 19th, 1890, chap. 907, provided: "That the creation of any obstruction not affirmatively authorized by law, to the navigable capacity of any waters, in respect of which the United States has jurisdiction, is hereby prohibited. The continuance of any such obstruction, except bridges, piers, docks, and wharves, and similar structures erected for business purposes, whether heretofore or hereafter created, shall constitute an offense, and each week's continuance of any such obstruction shall be deemed a separate offense. Every person and every corporation which shall be guilty of creating or continuing any such unlawful obstruction in this act mentioned, or who shall violate the provisions of the last four preceding sections of this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $5,000, or by imprisonment (in the case of a natural person) not exceeding one year, or by both such punishments, in the discretion of the court; the creating or continuing of any unlawful obstruction in this act mentioned may be prevented and such obstruction may be caused to be removed by the injunction of any circuit court exercising jurisdiction in any district in which such obstruction may be threatened or may exist; and proper proceedings in equity to this end may be instituted under the direction of the Attorney General of the United States." 26 Stat. at L. 426, 454, § 10.

These treaties with the above and other acts of Congress being in force, the present suit was brought, May 24th, 1897, in the district court for the third judicial district of New Mexico—the plaintiff being the United States of America, and the original defendant being the Rio Grande Dam & Irrigation Company, a corporation of that territory. By an amended bill, the Rio Grande Irrigation & Land Company—a British corporation doing business in the territory of New Mexico—was also made defendant. The latter corporation, it is alleged, was organized as an adjunct and agent of the New Mexico corporation.

The bill and amended bill show that the object of the suit was to obtain a decree enjoining the defendants from commencing or attempting to construct or build a certain [419] dam and reservoir* or any other dam, breakwater, reservoir or other structure, or obstruction of any character whatsoever, "across the Rio Grande or the waters thereof, or from maintaining such dam or obstruction in the territory of New Mexico, and especially at Elephant Butte in said territory, or any other point on said river in said territory of New Mexico, as shall affect the navigable capacity of said Rio Grande at any point throughout its course, whether in the territory of New Mexico or elsewhere."

The court of original jurisdiction said it was a fact of which it could take judicial notice, and it adjudged, that the Rio Grande was not navigable within the territory of New Mexico, and it dissolved the injunction theretofore granted against the defendants, and dismissed the suit. Upon appeal to the supreme court of the territory that decree was affirmed, August 24th, 1890.

The case was then brought here by appeal. This court in its opinion rendered May 22d, 1899, among other things said that to assert that Congress intended by its legislation "to confer upon any state the right to appropriate all the waters of the tributary streams which unite into a navigable watercourse, and so destroy the navigability of that watercourse in derogation of the interests of all the people of the United States, is a construction which cannot be tolerated. It ignores the spirit of the legislation and carries the statute to the verge of the letter and far beyond what under the circumstances of the case must be held to have been the intent of Congress." United States v. Rio Grande Dam & Irrig. Co. 174 U. S. 690, 708, 710, 43 L. ed. 1136, 1143, 1144, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770, 777.

Referring especially to the above act of September 19th, 1890, the court also said: "It is urged that the true construction of this act limits its applicability to obstructions in the navigable portion of a navigable stream, and that as it appears that although the Rio Grande may be navigable for a certain distance above its mouth, it is not navigable in the territory of New Mexico, this statute has no applicability. The language is general, and must be given full scope. It is not a prohibition of any obstruction to the navigation, but any obstruction to the navigable capacity, and anything, wherever done [420] or however *done, within the limits of the jurisdiction of the United States, which tends to destroy the navigable capacity of one of the navigable waters of the United States, is within the terms of that prohibition. Evidently Congress, perceiving that the time had come when the growing interests of commerce required that the navigable waters of the United States should be subjected to the direct control of the National government, and that nothing should be done by any state tending to destroy that navigability without the explicit assent of the National government, enacted the statute 184 U. S.

ute in question. And it would be to improperly ignore the scope of this language to limit it to the acts done within the very limits of navigation of a navigable stream. . . . The question always is one of fact, whether such appropriation substantially interferes with the navigable capacity within the limits where navigation is a recognized fact." 174 U. S. 690, 708, 43 L. ed. 1136, 1143, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770, 777.

The decree of the supreme court of the territory was reversed by this court, and the cause was remanded "with instructions to set aside the decree of dismissal, and to order an inquiry into the question whether the intended acts of the defendants in the construction of a dam and in appropriating the waters of the Rio Grande will substantially diminish the navigability of that stream within the limits of present navigability, and if so, to enter a decree restraining those acts to the extent that they will so diminish."

The mandate of this court, based upon its final order of May 22d, 1899, was issued June 24th, 1899. On the 14th of July, 1899, the supreme court of the territory remanded the cause to the court of original jurisdiction to be there proceeded with in accordance with our mandate.

On the 5th day of August, 1899, the district court heard, at chambers, an application of the defendants, based on notice to the United States, to set the cause for final hearing upon evidence taken under the mandate of the supreme court of the territory. That application was sustained, and the cause was set for final hearing on the 1st day of November, 1899.

Subsequently, October 17th, 1899, the United States moved the court for a further continuance and extension of time for the *hearing of the cause, until February 5th, [421] 1900, or such other date as the court deemed reasonable and proper. The grounds upon which the motion was based were stated in writing, as follows: "That said plaintiffs have been and are unable to collect and present to this honorable court the necessary and proper evidence and oral testimony from witnesses for a proper presentation of the plaintiffs' side of said cause, notwithstanding having used due diligence to that end, all of which will more fully appear from an affidavit hereto attached and made a part of this motion in support thereof, and to which the court is respectfully referred. The plaintiffs, as a condition for the extension of time for the taking of testimony for the trial of said cause, have offered and hereby offer to enter into any proper and reasonable stipulation to enable the supreme court of the territory of New Mexico to take jurisdiction of any appeal which may be taken by either party at its ensuing January term, and dispose of the cause during said term, or at any adjourned session of the same."

In support of its motion for continuance, the government filed the affidavit of its attorney, Mr. Burch, who was specially charged with the duty of representing its interests in its litigation. That affidavit is too lengthy to be embodied in this opinion. It is sufficient to say that it fully supported the grounds of the motion made by the government for further time.

The motion for a continuance was sustained only so far as to fix December 12th, 1899, as the date for the final hearing of the cause. The hearing was commenced on the latter day, and continued from day to day until December 21st, 1899, when the cause was taken under advisement. On the 2d day of January, 1900, a finding of facts was filed in the court. In the last paragraph of that finding it was stated "that the intended acts of the defendants in the construction of a dam or dams, or reservoirs, and in appropriating the waters of the Rio Grande, will not substantially diminish the navigability of that stream within the limits of the present navigability." The court ordered a decree to be prepared dismissing the bill.

[422] On the 3d of January, 1900, the government moved to set aside the findings and grant a rehearing upon the ground of newly discovered evidence which could not by any reasonable diligence on its part have been discovered and procured for use on the hearing of the cause. The grounds of the motion were stated in writing, and were abundantly sustained by the affidavits filed therewith.

The motion for rehearing was denied, and by a final order, entered January 9th, 1900, the bill was dismissed. From that order the present appeal was prosecuted.

At the argument of the cause our attention was called to the action of the district court in setting the cause for final hearing at a date so early as the 1st day of November, 1899; to the denial of the motion made on behalf of the United States on the 17th of October, 1899, to extend the time for final hearing to February 5th, 1900; and to the order denying the motion, made after the facts were found but before final decree, for a rehearing. The making of the last order was specially assigned for error.

The inquiry which this court directed to be made, namely, whether the intended acts of the defendants in the construction of a dam and in appropriating the waters of the Rio Grande would substantially diminish the navigability of that stream within the limits of present navigability was not only of great importance, but was one that could not properly be made and concluded within the time ordinarily required for the preparation of an equity cause for final hearing. We think that the district court, upon the showing made by the government, might well have granted the motion to postpone the final hearing to a date later than that fixed. We make the same observations in reference to the motion for a rehearing in respect of the facts to be specially found, supported by affidavits as to newly discovered evidence, and made before the final decree was entered. The evidence set forth in those affidavits, if it had been brought before the court, would, we think, have materially strengthened the case of the United States.

But the motion for the continuance of the cause, and the application for a rehearing, were addressed to the discretion of the trial court; and it is well settled that matters of discretion *or practice cannot, generally [423] speaking, be made the basis of an appeal, and do not constitute in themselves grounds for the reversal of a final decree. 2 Dan. Ch. Pl. & Pr. 5th ed. *1462, and authorities cited in note, *1463; Cook v. Burnley, 11 Wall. 659, 672, 20 L. ed. 29, 31; Freeborn v. Smith, 2 Wall. 160, 176, 17 L. ed. 922, 924; Parsons v. Bedford, 3 Pet. 433, 445, 7 L. ed. 732, 736; Wiggins v. Gray, 24 How. 303, 306, 16 L. ed. 688, 689; Woods v. Young, 4 Cranch, 237, 2 L. ed. 607; Sims v. Hundley, 6 How. 1, 6, 12 L. ed. 319, 321; Thompson v. Selden, 20 How. 195, 198, 15 L. ed. 1001, 1002; San Antonio v. Mehaffy, 96 U. S. 312, 315, 24 L. ed. 816, 817; Terre Haute & I. R. Co. v. Struble, 109 U. S. 381, 384, 27 L. ed. 970, 971, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 270. We cannot therefore reverse the decree merely upon the ground that the trial court erred in its denial of the motions to which we have referred.

But there are other considerations which may be properly made the basis for the reversal of the decree to the end that injustice may not be done. As upon this appeal in equity the whole case is before us, we can render such decree as under all the circumstances may be proper. Ridings v. Johnson, 128 U. S. 212, 218, 32 L. ed. 401, 403, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72. If it appears that injustice may be done by proceeding to a final decree upon the record as it is presented to us, we have the power to forbear a determination of the merits and remand the cause for further preparation.

In Estho v. Lear, 7 Pet. 130, 131, 8 L. ed. 632, 633, involving the validity of a certain paper purporting to be and which had been recorded as the last will and testament of Kosciuszko, the bill charged that the paper was not a will. The bill made no reference to any other will. The answer insisted that the will referred to in the bill was a valid instrument and operative. Chief Justice Marshall, speaking for the court, said: "Before the court can decide the intricate questions which grow out of this will, we think it necessary to possess some information which the record does not give." It appearing that the testator had made another will, which was not in the record, the court said that "since we are informed of its existence, it would be desirable to see it. We do not think the case properly prepared for decision; and therefore direct that the decree be reversed and the cause remanded, with liberty to the plaintiff to amend his bill." In United States v. Galbraith, 22 How. 89, 96, 16 L. ed. 321, 323, the question was as *to the validity of a claim for five [424] leagues of land. The Board of Land Commissioners decided against the United States, upon the ground that there was an absence of any rebutting testimony that would overcome the prima facie case made by the claimant. Speaking by Mr. Justice Nelson, this court said that it was "of opinion that, in consideration of the doubtful character of the claim, and entire want of any merits upon the testimony, the decree of the court below should be reversed, and the case remitted for further evidence and examination." In Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 146 U. S. 387, 36 L. ed. 1018, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110, one of the questions arising in the pleadings was whether the Illinois Central Railroad Company was entitled to maintain certain docks, piers, and wharves on the lake front at Chicago. The circuit court decided that question in favor of the railroad company. But this court was of opinion that the evidence in the record was not adequate for the determination of that question, and upon its own motion reversed the decree and remanded the cause with directions for further investigation, so as to enable the court to determine whether the structures in question extended into the lake beyond the point of practical navigability, having reference to the manner in which commerce was conducted on the lake.

In the present case it is quite clear that the record does not contain evidence of a material character, and that the absence of such evidence is due to the action of the trial court in not giving sufficient time to the government to prepare its case. We cannot resist the conviction that if we proceed to a final decree upon the present record, great wrong may be done to the United States, as well as to all interested in preserving the navigability of the Rio Grande. As the record does not show that the representatives of the government were chargeable with want of diligence in their preparation of the cause, we think that the decree should be reversed and the cause remanded, with liberty to both parties to take further evidence.

[425] We are the better satisfied with this disposition of the case because the questions presented may involve rights secured by treaties concluded between this country and the Republic of Mexico. As the latter country cannot be indifferent to the result of this litigation, and is not a party to the record, the court ought not to determine the important question before us in the absence of material evidence, which we are not at liberty upon this record to doubt would be in the record but for the somewhat precipitate action of the trial court.

Without considering the merits the decree must be reversed, and the cause remanded to the Supreme Court of New Mexico, with directions to reverse the decree of the District Court and to remand the case with direction to grant leave to both sides to adduce further evidence.

It is so ordered.

Mr. Justice Gray and Mr. Justice McKenna did not sit in this case nor participate in its decision.

Mr. Justice Brewer and Mr. Justice Shiras dissented.
184 U. S.

ALFRED BOOTH, Plff. in Err.,
v.

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 425-432.)

Constitutional law—liberty — prohibition against options.

The prohibition against options to buy or sell grain or other commodities at a future time, which is made by Ill. Crim. Code, § 130, does not invade the liberty granted to every citizen by U. S. Const. 14th Amend.

[No. 201.]

Argued and Submitted November 6, 1901.
Decided March 3, 1902.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction for a violation of the Illinois act against options. Affirmed.

See same case below, 186 Ill. 43, 50 L. R. A. 762, 57 N. E. 798.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles H. Aldrich argued the cause, and, with Mr. Lee D. Mathias, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The word "options" at the time the law was enacted (1874) was a trade word, and had the significance of a contract of purchase and sale of grain or other commodity for future delivery, in which the parties did not intend to deliver the thing bought or sold, but intended to settle the transaction by the payment from one to the other of the difference between the contract price and the price at the date of delivery, in accordance with the rise or fall of the market.

Shaw v. Clark, 49 Mich. 384, 43 Am. Rep. 474, 13 N. W. 786; 8 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 1011; Wolcott v. Heath, 78 Ill. 433; Tenney v. Foote, 95 Ill. 99; Pearce v. Foote, 113 Ill. 228, 58 Am. Rep. 414; Cothran v. Ellis, 125 Ill. 496, 16 N. E. 646.

The supreme court of Illinois has practically overruled this interpretation of the act, and held that the legislature did not intend by the act to make the most prevailing form of gambling in commodities a crime, but only intended that the law should prohibit option contracts, strictly speaking, whether the same were moral or immoral.

Schneider v. Turner, 130 Ill. 28, 6 L. R. A. 164, 22 N. E. 497; Schlee v. Guckenhaimer, 179 Ill. 593, 54 N. E. 302; Coreoran v. Lehigh & F. Coal Co. 138 Ill. 390, 28 N. E.

NOTE.—As to the constitutionality of statutes restricting contracts and business—see note to State v. Loomis (Mo.) 21 L. R. A. 789.

On the validity of contracts for future delivery, and of optional contracts—see notes to Preston v. Cincinnati, C. & H. V. R. Co. (C. C. S. D. Ohio) 1 L. R. A. 141; Osgood v. Bauder (Iowa) 1 L. R. A. 655; Sprague v. Warren (Neb.) 3 L. R. A. 679; Kimball v. Gafford (Iowa) 4 L. R. A. 398; Harvey v. Merrill (Mass.) 5 L. R. A. 200; Austin v. Davis (Ind.) 12 L. R. A. 120; Baumgardner v. Leavitt (W. Va.) 12 L. R. A. 776, and Irwin v. Williar, 28 L. ed. U. S. 225.

759; Kerting v. Hilton, 51 Ill. App. 437; Ubben v. Binnian, 78 Ill. App. 330; McKeon v. Wolf, 77 Ill. App. 325; Wolsey v. Neeley, 62 Ill. App. 141; Peterson v. Currier, 62 Ill. App. 163.

Bona fide speculation is not gambling.

Kirkpatrick v. Bonsall, 72 Pa. 155.

Option contracts are not immoral, nor were they illegal at common law.

Schneider v. Turner, 130 Ill. 28, 6 L. R. A. 164, 22 N. E. 497; Schlee v. Guckenheimer, 179 Ill. 593, 54 N. E. 302.

Courts of equity compel the specific performance of option contracts.

Watts v. Kellar, 5 C. C. A. 394, 12 U. S. App. 274, 56 Fed. 1.

The act, in so far as it prohibits the making of bona fide moral option contracts, deprives the citizen of liberty and property without due process of law. The liberty to contract is protected by the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; State v. Goodwill, 33 W. Va. 179, 6 L. R. A. 621, 10 S. E. 285; Braceville Coal Co. v. People, 147 Ill. 66, 22 L. R. A. 340, 35 N. E. 62; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Com. v. Perry, 155 Mass. 117, 14 L. R. A. 325, 28 N. E. 1126; Re Grice, 79 Fed. 627; State v. Fire Creek Coal & Coke Co. 33 W. Va. 188, 6 L. R. A. 359, 10 S. E. 288.

If a statute prohibiting dealing in "futures" must be construed to apply to all contracts for future delivery which a broad interpretation of the statute might justify, then it would be unconstitutional.

Fortenbury v. State, 47 Ark. 188, 1 S. W. 58. See also State v. Gritzner, 134 Mo. 512, 36 S. W. 39.

The act cannot be justified under the doctrine of police power.

Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. v. Jacksonville, 67 Ill. 37, 16 Am. Rep. 611; Wilkinson v. Lealand, 2 Pet. 627, 7 L. ed. 542; Des Plaines v. Poyer, 123 Ill. 348, 14 N. E. 677; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; State v. Noyes, 47 Me. 189.

Public policy requires that men of full age and competent understanding shall have the utmost liberty of contracting.

Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 175 U. S. 91, 44 L. ed. 84, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33; Printing & Numerical Registering Co. v. Sampson, L. R. 19 Eq. 462, 465.

The reasonableness or unreasonableness of a state enactment is always to be considered in determining whether the legislation comes within the police power, and it is submitted that the statute as construed comes within the principles announced in—man, 138 U. S. 78, 34 L. ed. 862, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 485, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Chicago & G. T. R. Co. v. Wellman, 143 U. S. 339, 36 L. ed. 176, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 400; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 560, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 43 L. ed. 702, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684, 43 L. ed. 858, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565.

Stone v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 116 U. S. 307, 29 L. ed. 636, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 313, 34 L. ed. 455, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Brimmer v. Reb-

Messrs. Howland J. Hamlin and Elbert S. Smith submitted the cause for defendant in error:

The power of the legislature to pass police regulations is not restricted by any constitutional limitation.

Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 32, 28 L. ed. 925, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273.

The police power is the general power of the government to protect and promote the public welfare, even at the expense of private rights.

Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25, 24 L. ed. 989; 18 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 739, Police Power.

The police power extends, not only to the right to prohibit gambling, but also to prohibit those acts which may be used as disguises for unlawful practices, and so have a tendency to injure public interests and degrade the public welfare.

Tiedeman, Pol. Power, § 99a; Schneider v. Turner, 130 Ill. 28, 6 L. R. A. 164, 22 N. E. 497; Tenney v. Foote, 4 Ill. App. 594, 95 Ill. 99; Minnesota Lumber Co. v. Whitebreast Coal Co. 160 Ill. 98, 31 L. R. A. 529, 43 N. E. 774; Pearce v. Foote, 113 Ill. 234, 58 Am. Rep. 414.

The general assembly may, by valid enactments,—i. e., by due process of law,—prohibit all things hurtful to the comfort, safety, and welfare of society, even though such prohibition invades the right of liberty or property of an individual.

Lake View v. Rose Hill Cemetery Co. 70 Ill. 191, 22 Am. Rep. 71; Magner v. People, 97 Ill. 320; 18 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 739, 740.

With the wisdom, policy, or necessity for such enactments, courts have nothing to do.

Booth v. People, 186 Ill. 43, 50 L. R. A. 762, 57 N. E. 798.

Laws whose purpose and tendency are to suppress gambling or other crimes are constitutional.

Crandell v. White, 164 Mass. 54, 41 N. E. 204.

Where a law operates alike upon all persons and property similarly situated it is not obnoxious to any constitutional provision guaranteeing equal protection to all persons and classes of persons.

Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 32, 28 L. ed. 925, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Soon Hing v. Crowley, 113 U. S. 709, 28 L. ed. 1145, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Humcs, 115 U. S. 513, 29 L. ed. 463, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 30 L. ed. 578, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Herrick, 127 U. S. 210, 32 L. ed. 109, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1176; Walston v. Nevins, 128 U. S. 578, 32 L. ed. 544, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 293, 42 L. ed. 1037, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594.

It is not required that the statute shall embrace all kinds of personal property, whether they are the usual subjects of option dealings or not.

State v. Gritzner, 134 Mo. 512, 36 S. W. 39.

[426] *Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

By § 130 of the Criminal Code of Illinois it is provided that "whoever contracts to have or give to himself or another the option to sell or buy, at a future time, any grain, or other commodity, stock of any railroad or other company, or gold, or forestalls the market by spreading false rumors to influence the price of commodities therein, or corners the market, or attempts to do so in relation to any of such commodities, shall be fined not less than $10 nor more than $1,000, or confined in the county jail not exceeding one year, or both; and all contracts made in violation of this section shall be considered gambling contracts, and shall be void." Ill. Rev. Stat. Crim. Code, § 130.

The defendant was indicted in the criminal court of Cook county, Illinois, being charged with violating this statute so far as it related to options to buy grain or other commodities at a future time.

The memorandum of the option purchased by the defendant was as follows:

B. Al. V. Booth, Grain and Provision Broker.
Chicago, Aug. 16, 1899.
10 Weare Com. Co.
Sep. corn, 1899. C., 31½. Paid.
Good till close of 'change, Sat., Aug. 26, 1899. Weare C. Co.
J. C. C.

The defendant was found guilty and adjudged to pay a fine of $100 and the costs of the prosecution.

At the trial, by motions to quash the indictment, in arrest of judgment, and for a new trial, the accused insisted that the statute under which he was prosecuted was repugnant to that clause of the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States declaring that no state shall "deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws." This contention was overruled both in the trial court and in the supreme court of Illinois. 186 Ill. 43, 50 L. R. A. 762, 57 N. E. 798.

There was no dispute as to the meaning of the above memorandum. It meant that on the 16th day of August, 1899, the defendant, a grain and provision broker, and the Weare Commission Company, made an agreement whereby, in consideration of the sum of $10 paid by Booth, he obtained from the company and was given the option of purchasing from it 10,000 bushels of corn at 31½ cents a bushel,—the option to remain good until the close of business on the 26th day of August, 1899.

In Schneider v. Turner, 130 Ill. 28, 39, 6 L. R. A. 164, 166, 22 N. E. 497, 498, the question was whether the statute embraced an agreement in these words: "Chicago, November 11, 1885. In consideration of one dollar and other valuable considerations, receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, I hereby agree to sell to George Schneider, Walter L. Peck, and Fred W. Peck seventeen hundred and eighty-six shares of the capital stock of the North Chicago City Railway at six hundred dollars per share, if taken on or before the 15th day of December, 1885. V. C. Turner."

It was contended that that agreement was not prohibited by the statute: that the legislature only intended to make such option contracts unlawful as were gambling contracts, that is, option contracts that did not contemplate the delivery or acceptance of any property and which only required a settlement by "differences;" whereas it was insisted, the option there in question had no element of gambling, being only one that entitled the parties obtaining it to elect on or before a named day whether they would buy the stock described in the agreement.

The supreme court of Illinois, in that case, observed that at common law all gambling contracts were void, and that an agreement [428] for the sale of property was a mere wager or gambling contract and void, if made with the understanding of the parties that no property was to be delivered or accepted but could be satisfied by an adjustment simply on the basis of the difference between the contract and the market price. It said: "It must be presumed that the object of the legislature was to declare that unlawful which theretofore had been lawful. Prior to this act it was lawful to contract to have or give an option to sell or buy, at a future time, grain or other commodity. Such contracts were neither void nor voidable at the common law. The statute makes them unlawful and void in Illinois."

That such is the scope and effect of the statute in question was recognized by the supreme court of Illinois in the present case. Booth v. People, 186 Ill. 43, 50 L. R. A. 762, 57 N. E. 798.

Taking the statute to mean what the highest court of the state says it means, is it unconstitutional?

In support of the position that the statute is repugnant to the 14th Amendment, the learned counsel for the plaintiff advance many propositions that meet our entire approval. They cite, as in their judgment controlling, what this court said in Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 589, 41 L. ed. 832, 835, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427, 431, namely, that the liberty mentioned in the 14th Amendment "means, not only the right of the citizen to be free from the mere physical restraint of his person, as by incarceration, but the term is deemed to embrace the right of the citizen to be free in the enjoyment of all his faculties; to be free to use them in all lawful ways; to live and work where he will; to earn his livelihood by any lawful calling; to pursue any livelihood or avocation, and for that purpose to enter into all contracts which may be proper, necessary, and essential to his carrying out to a successful conclusion the purposes above mentioned."

These declarations state, in condensed form, principles which had been announced in previous cases, and which may be regarded as expressing the deliberate judgment of this court. But those declarations do not, in themselves, determine the question now presented. When it is said that the liberty of the citizen includes freedom to use his faculties "in all lawful ways," and to earn his living by any "lawful calling," the inquiry remains *whether the particular calling or the particular way brought in question in a given case is lawful, that is, consistent with such rules of action as have been rightfully prescribed by the state.

It is, however, said that the statute of the state, as interpreted by its highest court, is not directed against gambling contracts relating to the selling or buying of grain or other commodities, but against mere options to sell or buy at a future time without any settlement between the parties upon the basis of differences, and therefore involving no element of gambling. The argument then is, that the statute directly forbids the citizen from pursuing a calling which, in itself, involves no element of immorality, and therefore by such prohibition it invades his liberty as guaranteed by the supreme law of the land. Does this conclusion follow from the premise stated? Is it true that the legislature is without power to forbid or suppress a particular kind of business, where such business, properly and honestly conducted, may not, in itself, be immoral? We think not. A calling may not in itself be immoral, and yet the tendency of what is generally or ordinarily or often done in pursuing that calling may be towards that which is admittedly immoral or pernicious. If, looking at all the circumstances that attend, or which may ordinarily attend, the pursuit of a particular calling, the state thinks that certain admitted evils cannot be successfully reached unless that calling be actually prohibited, the courts cannot interfere, unless, looking through mere forms and at the substance of the matter, they can say that the statute enacted professedly to protect the public morals has no real or substantial relation to that object, but is a clear, unmistakable infringement of rights secured by the fundamental law. Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 661, 31 L. ed. 205, 210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 313, 320, 34 L. ed. 455, 458, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Brimmer v. Rebman, 138 U. S. 78, 34 L. ed. 862, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 485, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Voight v. Wright, 141 U. S. 62, 35 L. ed. 638, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 855.

We cannot say from any facts judicially known to the court, or from the evidence in this case, that the prohibition of options to sell grain at a future time has, in itself, no reasonable relation to the suppression of gambling grain contracts in respect of which the parties contemplate only a settlement on the basis *of differences in the contract and[430] market prices. Perhaps the legislature thought that dealings in options to sell or buy at a future time, although not always or necessarily gambling, may have the effect to keep out of the market, while the options lasted, the property which is the subject of the options, and thus assist purchasers to establish, for a time, what are known as "corners," whereby the ordinary and regular sales or exchanges of such property, based upon existing prices, may be interfered with and persons who have in fact no grain, and do not care to handle any, enabled to practically control prices. Or, the legislature may have thought that options to sell or buy at a future time were, in their essence, mere speculations in prices and tended to foster a spirit of gambling. In all this the legislature of the state may have been mistaken. If so, the mistake was not such as to justify the conclusion that the statute was a mere cover to destroy a particular kind of business not inherently harmful or immoral. It must be assumed that the legislature was of opinion that an effectual mode to suppress gambling grain contracts was to declare illegal all options to sell or buy at a future time. The court is unable to say that the means employed were not appropriate to the end sought to be attained and which it was competent for the state to accomplish.

The supreme court of the state in this case said: "The practice of gambling on the market prices of grain and other commodities is universally recognized as a pernicious evil, and that the suppression of such evil is within the proper exercise of the police power has been too frequently declared to be open to discussion. The evil does not consist in contracts for the purchase or sale of grain to be delivered in the future, in which the delivery and acceptance of the grain so contracted for is bona fide contemplated and intended by the parties, but in contracts by which the parties intend to secure, not the article contracted for, but the right or privilege of receiving the difference between the contract price and the market price of the article. The object to be accomplished by the legislation under consideration is the suppression of contracts of the latter character, which are in truth mere wagers as to the future market price of *the article or commodity which is the[431] subject-matter of the wager. Clearly a contract which gives to one of the contracting parties a mere privilege to buy corn, but does not bind him to accept and pay for it, is wanting in the elements of good faith to be found in a contract of purchase and sale where both parties are bound, and offers a more convenient cover and disguise for mere wagers on the price of grain than contracts which create the relation of vendor and vendee. Such contracts are in the nature of wagers, that contracted for being the mere privilege to buy the grain should its market value prove to be greater than the price fixed in the contract for such privilege. The prohibition of the right to enter into contracts which do not contemplate the creation of an obligation on the part of one of the contracting parties to accept and pay for the commodity which is the purported subject-matter of the contract, but only to invest him with the option or privilege to demand the other contracting party shall deliver him the grain if he desires to purchase it, tends materially to the suppression of the very evil of gambling in grain options which it was the legislative intent to extirpate, for the reason such evil injuriously affected the welfare and safety of the public. The denial of the right to make such contracts tended directly to advance the end the legislature had in view, and was not an inappropriate measure of attack on the evil intended to be eradicated. So far as that point is concerned, the act must be deemed a valid law of the land, and as such must be enforced, though it infringe in a degree upon the property rights of citizens. To that extent private right must be deemed secondary to the public good." 186 Ill. 51, 50 L. R. A. 764, 57 N. E. 800.

We are unwilling to declare these views of the state court to be wholly without foundation, and therefore cannot adjudge that the legislature of Illinois transcended the limits of constitutional authority when enacting the statute in question. In reaching this conclusion we have recognized the principle, long established and vital in our constitutional system, that the courts may not strike down an act of legislation as unconstitutional, unless it be plainly and palpably so.

The statute here involved may be unwise. [432] But an unwise enactment is not necessarily, for that reason, invalid. It may be, as suggested by counsel, that the steady, vigorous enforcement of this statute will materially interfere with the handling or moving of vast amounts of grain in the West which are disposed of by contracts or arrangements made in the Board of Trade in Chicago. But those are suggestions for the consideration of the Illinois legislature. The courts have nothing to do with the mere policy of legislation.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Illinois is affirmed.

Mr. Justice Brewer and Mr. Justice Peckham dissented.
184 U. S.

JOHN C. GOODRICH et al., Plffs. in Err.,
v.

CITY OF DETROIT.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 432-441.)

Constitutional law—due process—notice of proceedings in local improvement—misdescription of lands.

1. Notice to the owners of land which may be assessed for a local improvement need not be given of the proceedings to make the improvement, in order to constitute due process of law, if none of their property is taken for that purpose, and they have notice and opportunity to be heard on the question of the assessment of their property.
2. A resolution that the common council fix and determine that a specified district is benefited by the opening of a certain street, and that there be assessed and levied upon the real estate therein included a certain amount, in proportion, as near as may be, to the advantage which each lot or parcel is deemed to acquire, by the improvement, is in substantial conformity to Mich. Comp. Laws 1897, § 3406, which in effect provides that the common council may assess upon such district as it deems benefited the whole or a part of the cost of the improvement, in proportion, as nearly as may be, to the advantage which each lot derives, and limits the assessment on any lot to the benefits received.
3. A misdescription of the lands taken in proceedings to make a local improvement constitutes no defense to a person whose lands were not taken, against an assessment upon his property for benefits.

[No. 123.]

Argued January 20, 1902. Decided March 3, 1902.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Michigan to review a decision affirming a decree dismissing a bill to enjoin the collection of assessments for benefits from a street improvement. Affirmed.

See same case below, 123 Mich. 559, 82 N. W. 255.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

*This was a bill in equity filed in the circuit court for the county of Wayne by Goodrich and another against the city of Detroit and its treasurer, to enjoin the defendants

NOTE.—As to what constitutes due process of law—see Kuntz v. Sumption (Ind.) 2 L. R. A. 655, and note; Re Ganuon (R. I.) 5 L. R. A. 359, and note; Ulman v. Baltimore (Md.) 11 L. R. A. 224, and note; Gillman v. Tucker (N. Y.) 13 L. R. A. 304, and note. And see notes to People v. O'Brien (N. Y.) 2 L. R. A. 258; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436, and Wilson v. North Carolina ex rel. Caldwell, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

On notice and hearing required to constitute due process of law—see notes to Kuntz v. Sumption (Ind.) 2 L. R. A. 657; Chauvin v. Valiton (Mont.) 3 L. R. A. 194, and Ulman v. Baltimore (Md.) 11 L. R. A. 225.

On the necessity of special benefit to sustain assessments for local improvements—see note to Re Madera Irrig. Dist. Bonds (Cal.) 14 L. R. A. 755.

from enforcing the collection of certain taxes assessed upon several parcels of property owned by the plaintiffs, for benefits derived from the opening of Milwaukee avenue, upon the ground, amongst others, that such assessment was in violation of the 14th Amendment, and deprived plaintiffs of their property without due process of law.

These proceedings were taken under the authority of certain sections of the Compiled Laws of 1897, printed in the margin.†

[434] *The proceedings in the case were substantially as follows: On November 14, 1893, a resolution was passed by the common council providing for the opening and extending of Milwaukee avenue, and on January 6, 1894, a petition by the city was filed in the recorder's court, together with a map or plan of the private property proposed to be taken, certified as correct by the city engineer. The owners and persons interested in the real estate proposed to be taken were duly summoned, a jury impaneled, a hearing had, and a verdict rendered condemning certain lands, and fixing the total amount of damages at $15,214.75. This verdict was confirmed by the court.

Thereafter, and on August 7, 1894, a resolution was adopted by the common council, which was rescinded on November 20, and on January 22, 1895, another was adopted of which the following is a copy:

"Resolved, that the said common council of the city of Detroit do hereby fix and determine that the following district and portion of said city of Detroit, to wit: (Here follows list of descriptions, many of which are different from those in first assessment district) is benefited by the opening of Milwaukee avenue, from Chene street to the easterly city limits, where not already opened. And further resolved, that there be assessed and levied upon the several pieces and parcels of real estate included in the above descriptions, the amount of $15,214.75, in proportion, as near as may be, to the advantage which each lot or parcel is deemed to acquire [435] by this improvement. And further resolved, that the board of assessors of the city of Detroit be, and they are hereby, directed to proceed forthwith to make an assessment roll in conformity with the requirements of the charter of the city of Detroit relating to special assessments for collecting the expense of public improvements when a street is graded, comprising the property hereinbefore described, upon which they shall assess and levy the amount of $15,214.75, each lot or parcel to be assessed a ratable proportion, as near as may be of said amount, in accordance to the amount of benefit derived by such improvements."

On March 12, 1895, the assessors reported an assessment roll for defraying the expenses of opening the avenue, which was affirmed by the common council April 4, 1895. The property of plaintiffs was included in the assessment district, which was fixed and determined by the common council.

Defendants filed an answer, which was a little more than a demurrer to the bill, and upon hearing upon pleadings and proofs the bill was dismissed, an appeal taken to the supreme court, by which the decree of the circuit court was affirmed. 123 Mich. 559, 82 N. W. 255.

†"Sec. 3394. The city, village, or county clerk shall make and deliver to such attorney, as soon as may be, a copy of such resolution certified under seal, and it shall be the duty of such attorney to prepare and file in the name of the city, village, or county, in the court having jurisdiction of the proceedings, a petition signed by him in his official character and duly verified by him: to which petition a certified copy of the resolution of the common council, board of trustees, or board of supervisors shall be annexed, which certified copy shall be prima facie evidence of the action taken by the common council, board of trustees, or board of supervisors, and of the passage of said resolutions. The petition shall state, among other things, that it is made and filed as commencement of judicial proceedings by the municipality or county in pursuance of this act to acquire the right to take private property for the use or benefit of the public, without consent of the owners, for a public improvement, designating it, for a just compensation to be made. A description of the property to be taken shall be given, and generally the nature and extent of the use thereof that will be required in making and maintaining the improvement shall be stated, and also the names of the owners and others interested in the property, so far as can be ascertained, including those in possession of the premises. The petition shall also state that the common council or board of trustees or board of supervisors has declared such public improvement to be necessary, and that they deem it necessary to take the private property described in that behalf for such improvement for the use or benefit of the public. The petition shall ask that a jury be summoned and impaneled to ascertain and determine whether it is necessary to make such public improvement, whether it is necessary to take such private property as it is proposed to take, for the use or benefit of the public, and to ascertain and determine the just compensation to be made therefor. The petition may state any other pertinent matter or things and may pray for any other or further relief to which the municipality or county may be entitled within the objects of this act.

"Sec. 3395. Upon receiving such petition, it shall be the duty of the clerk of said court to issue a summons against the respondents named in such petition, stating briefly the object of said petition, and commanding them, in the name of the people of the state of Michigan, to appear before said court, at a time and place to be named in said summons, not less than twenty nor more than forty days from the date of the same, and show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted."

"Sec. 3399. The jury shall determine in their verdict the necessity for the proposed improvement and for taking such private property for the use or benefit of the public for the proposed improvement, and in case they find such necessity exists they shall award to the owners of such property and others interested therein such compensation therefor as they shall deem just," etc.

Section 3406, which is also pertinent, is reprinted in full in Voight v. Detroit. 184 U. S. 115, ante, 459, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337.

Mr. Eldridge F. Bacon argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

As the statute does not provide for any notice or hearing, or any tribunal where the landowners liable to assessment can have a hearing, as to the necessity of making the improvement and the amount of compensation, it is in violation of the 14th Amendment.

Paul v. Detroit, 32 Mich. 108; Wells County v. Fahlor, 132 Ind. 426, 31 N. E. 1112; State ex rel. Flint v. Fond du Lac, 42 Wis. 287; Stuart v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 183, 30 Am. Rep. 289; Scott v. Toledo, 36 Fed. 385.

The determination by the aldermen of the land benefited, and the amount to be assessed upon the land, is judicial in its nature, and cannot be binding upon the taxpayer, and the taxpayer is entitled to a hearing before his rights are finally determined by such action.

Scars v. Boston Street Comrs. 173 Mass. 350, 53 N. E. 876; Murdock v. Cincinnati, 39 Fed. 891.

The statute violates the 14th Amendment because by its express terms the city council is authorized to assess the whole or any just proportion of the amount awarded by the jury upon the lands in the assessment district, without limiting such assessment to the amount which the lands included in the district are benefited by the improvement.

Detroit v. Recorder's Ct. Judge, 112 Mich. 588, 42 L. R. A. 638, 71 N. W. 149; Norwood v. Baker, 172 U. S. 269, 43 L. ed. 443, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187; Tide-Water Co. v. Coster, 18 N. J. Eq. 518, 90 Am. Dec. 634; State, Agents, Prosecutor, v. Newark, 37 N. J. L. 415, 18 Am. Rep. 729; State, New Brunswick Rubber Co., Prosecutor, v. New Brunswick Street & Sewer Comrs. 38 N. J. L. 190, 20 Am. Rep. 380; Barnes v. Dyer, 56 Vt. 469; Stuart v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 183, 30 Am. Rep. 289.

The resolution of the common council directing the assessment conflicts with the 14th Amendment because it does not find that the property included in the assessment district is benefited to the amount ordered to be assessed upon such district.

Adams v. Bay City, 78 Mich. 211, 44 N. W. 138; Greeley v. People, 60 Ill. 19; Crawford v. People ex rel. Runsey, 82 Ill. 557; Chamberlain v. Cleveland, 34 Ohio St. 551; Dyar v. Farmington, 70 Me. 515.

By this resolution the assessors were not directed to assess upon each piece of property only such amount as it was benefited, but were directed to assess the entire amount ratably upon the various lots, in proportion to the benefit of each lot, although such assessment might be several times the amount of the benefit; and while the proportion may have been maintained as between the various parcels of property, still the assessment was not limited to the benefit to each lot, and was void.

Greeley v. People, 60 Ill. 19.

As the petition of the city of Detroit, and the certified copy of the resolution to the common council, attached thereto, do not describe the several parcels of land to be taken for such improvement, the court has no jurisdiction to proceed in the matter.

Mathias v. Carson, 49 Mich. 465, 13 N. W. 818; Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co. v. Munson, 57 Mich. 42, 23 N. W. 455; Detroit, S. & D. R. Co. v. Gartner, 95 Mich. 318, 54 N. W. 946; Galena & C. U. R. Co. v. Pound, 22 Ill. 399; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Chicago, 132 Ill. 372, 23 N. E. 1036; New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 70 N. Y. 191; California C. R. Co. v. Hooper, 76 Cal. 404, 18 Pac. 599.

The verdict of the jury follows substantially the same descriptions given in the petition, and does not contain any description of the several parcels of land taken, and contains no data from which the several parcels of property condemned can be ascertained, and is therefore void.

Milton v. Wacker, 40 Mich. 229; Bay City Belt Line R. Co. v. Hitchcock, 90 Mich. 533, 51 N. W. 808; Vail v. Morris & E. R. Co. 21 N. J. L. 189.

The proceedings being void, the city did not acquire title to the street through such parcels, and, not having acquired title, it would have no authority to levy a tax to pay for such parcels, and as the amount of damages awarded by the jury, and the amount assessed upon the property, included the sums allowed as compensation for such property, the assessment is unauthorized and void.

Brush v. Detroit, 32 Mich. 43; Detroit, M. & T. R. Co. v. Detroit, 49 Mich. 47, 12 N. W. 904; Lorenz v. Armstrong, 3 Mo. App. 574.

The rights of no person can be concluded by the judgment in a case to which he is not a party.

Hale v. Finch, 104 U. S. 261, 26 L. ed. 732.

A judgment of the state court, even if it is authorized by statute, whereby private property is taken for the city, or under its direction for public use, without compensation made or secured to the owner, is upon principle and authority wanting in the due process of law required by the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and the affirmance of such judgment by the highest court of the state is a denial by that state of a right secured to the owner by that instrument.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581.

Mr. Timothy E. Tarsney argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The taxpayer has no right to be heard upon the determination of the extent of the territory to be embraced within the assessment district, for this is a purely legislative question.

Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 26 L. ed. 238; Hager v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 349, 31 L. ed. 764, 8 Sup.

Ct. Rep. 921; Walston v. Nevins, 128 U. S. 578, 32 L. ed. 544, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; Williams v. Eggleston, 170 U. S. 305, 42 L. ed. 1047, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Paulsen v. Portland, 149 U. S. 30, 37 L. ed. 637, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750.

Whether the property was defectively described in the condemnation proceedings was settled by the confirmation of the court and verdict of the jury in the recorder's court. That court had jurisdiction of the parties and the subject-matter; its judgments cannot be collaterally attacked except for questions affecting its jurisdiction.

Voorhees v. Jackson ex dem. Bank of United States, 10 Pet. 449, 9 L. ed. 490. See also Moore v. Greene, 19 How. 69, 15 L. ed. 533; Ransom v. Williams, 2 Wall. 313, 17 L. ed. 803; Comstock v. Crawford, 3 Wall. 396, 18 L. ed. 34.

[435] *Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

This case raises the question whether certain proceedings taken under the Compiled Laws of Michigan for the assessment of benefits upon neighboring lots derived from the opening of Milwaukee avenue, in the city of Detroit, deprived the owners of such lots of their property without due process of law.

[436] These proceedings began with a resolution of the common council declaring the necessity of opening the street. Thereupon the city petitioned the recorder's court for a jury to determine the necessity of such improvements and of taking *private property (a map or plan of which was annexed to the petition), and "to ascertain and determine the just compensation to be made for such private property proposed to be taken," and for the issue of a summons to all persons mentioned in the petition as being interested in the property proposed to be taken. The jury returned a verdict in favor of the necessity of opening the avenue, of taking private property therefor, and fixed the compensation at the aggregate sum of $15,214.75.

Thereupon the common council passed another resolution fixing the district benefited by the opening, and declaring that there should be assessed upon the real estate included in such district the sum of $15,214.75, "in proportion, as near as may be, to the advantage which each lot or parcel is deemed to acquire by this improvement." The resolution further required the board of assessors to make an assessment roll to that amount, assessing upon each lot "a ratable proportion, as near as may be, of said amount in accordance to the amount of benefit derived by such improvements." Thereupon the matter was referred to the board of assessors, who reported the amount assessed against each lot. The bill averred that none of the plaintiffs' land thus assessed abutted upon those parts of the street opened by these proceedings, but that they had already dedicated to the city all that portion of Milwaukee avenue lying in front of their lands, without cost or expense to the city.

630

Plaintiffs made a large number of objections to the validity of such assessment, none of which require to be noticed, except so far as they are pertinent to the provision of the 14th Amendment, concerning due process of law.

1. The first of these objections is that while the statute provides for a notice to the parties whose land is to be taken for the street, no provision is made for giving notice to the owners of the land liable to be assessed for the improvement. Section 3394 provides for the filing of a petition by the city attorney for the condemnation of land, and that the petition, among other things, shall contain "a description of the property to be taken, . . . also the names of the owners and others interested in the property, so far as can be ascertained, including those in *possession of the premises." See-[437] tion 3395 provides that, "upon receiving such petition, it shall be the duty of the clerk of said court to issue a summons against the respondents named in such petition," that is, all interested in the property to be taken, "commanding them, . . . [to] show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of such petition should not be granted."

It will be observed that this section makes no express provision for notice to the owners of property not to be taken, but assumed to be benefited by the improvements. These owners, however, are not then known, because the proceedings for the condemnation of the property taken precedes the determination of the benefits and the fixing of the assessment district. The sections of the statute taken together provide for two distinct and separate proceedings: (1) for the assessment of compensation for property taken, and (2) for the assessment of benefits to property not taken. In the former, only the owners of the land taken are interested. Their rights are amply protected by §§ 3394 and 3395, requiring notice to be given to show cause why the petition should not be granted.

The argument of the plaintiffs is that the owners of the property liable to be assessed for the benefits are just as much interested in the question as to the necessity of making the improvement and the amount of compensation as are the owners of land to be taken for such improvement, and the same reasons for notice apply in the one case as in the other. A number of cases are cited which, it is argued, give countenance to this position. Paul v. Detroit, 32 Mich. 108; Wells County v. Fahlor, 132 Ind. 426, 31 N. E. 1112; State v. Fond du Lac, 42 Wis. 287; Stuart v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 183, 30 Am. Rep. 289; Scott v. Toledo, 1 L. R. A. 688, 36 Fed. 385.

But whatever weight be given to these authorities, the law in this court is too well settled to be now disturbed, that the interest of neighboring property owners, who may possibly thereafter be assessed for the benefit to their property accruing from opening a street, is too remote and indeterminate to require notice to them of the taking of lands for such improvement, in which they have no direct interest. The position of the plaintiffs in this particular would require a re-[428] adjustment of *the entire proceedings, and a determination of the property incidentally benefited, before any proceedings are taken for the condemnation of land directly taken or damaged by such improvement. It might be argued upon the same lines that, whenever the city contemplated a public improvement of any description, personal notice should be given to the taxpayers, since all such are interested in such improvements and are liable to have their taxes increased thereby. It might easily happen that a whole district or ward of a particular city would be incidentally benefited by a proposed improvement, as, for instance, a public school, yet to require personal notice to be given to all the taxpayers of such ward would be an intolerable burden. Hence it has been held by this court that it is only those whose property is proposed to be taken for a public improvement that due process of law requires shall have prior notice.

184 U. S.

Thus in Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 345, 31 L. ed. 763, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921, it was held that, if a state legislature direct the expense of laying out a street to be assessed upon the owners of land benefited thereby, and also determine the whole amount of the tax and what lands are, in fact, benefited, and provides for notice to and hearing of each owner, at some stage of the proceedings, upon the question what proportion of the tax shall be assessed upon his land, there is no taking of property without due process of law. Said Mr. Justice Gray, p. 356, L. ed. p. 767, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 927: "But the legislature has the power to determine, by the statute imposing the tax, what lands, which might be benefited by the improvement, are in fact benefited; and if it does so, its determination is conclusive upon the owners and the courts, and the owners have no right to be heard upon the question whether their lands are to be benefited or not, but only upon the validity of the assessment, and its apportionment among the different parcels of the class which the legislature has conclusively determined to be benefited." So, in Parsons v. District of Columbia, 170 U. S. 45, 42 L. ed. 943, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 521, it was held that an enactment by Congress that taxes levied for laying water mains in the District of Columbia should be at a certain rate per front foot against all lots or lands abutting upon the street in which the main should be [439] laid, was conclusive alike *of the necessity of the work and of its benefit to all abutting property. So, also, it was said in Williams v. Eggleson, 170 U. S. 304, 311, 42 L. ed. 1047, 1049, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617, 619: Nor "can it be doubted that, if the state Constitution does not prohibit, the legislature, speaking generally, may create, a new taxing district, determine what territory shall belong to such district, and what property shall be considered as benefited by a proposed improvement. And in so doing it is not compelled to give notice to the parties resident within the territory or permit a hearing before itself, one of its committees, or any other tribunal, as to the question whether the property so included within the taxing district is in fact benefited." Cooley, Taxn. 2d ed. p. 149.
 184 U. S.

This question, however, is decided in the case of Voigt v. Detroit, recently disposed of, 184 U. S. 115, ante, 459, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337, and will not be further considered here. Indeed, so far as this question is concerned, this case might be affirmed upon the authority of that.

2. The second objection is that the resolution of January 22, 1895, fixing the assessment district and levying a gross amount thereon for benefits, does not expressly state that the property included therein is benefited to the amount ordered to be assessed. This resolution was passed in pursuance of § 3406, reprinted in the Voigt Case, 184 U. S. 115, ante, 459, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337, which provides that "if the common council . . . believe that a portion of the city . . . will be benefited by such improvement, they may . . . determine that the whole or any just proportion of the compensation awarded by the jury shall be assessed upon the owners or occupants of real estate deemed to be thus benefited, and thereupon they shall by resolution fix and determine the district or portion of the city . . . benefited, and specify the amount to be assessed upon the owners or occupants of the taxable real estate therein. The amount of the benefit thus ascertained shall be assessed upon the owners or occupants of such taxable real estate, in proportion, as nearly as may [be], to the advantage which such lot, parcel, or subdivision is deemed to acquire by the improvement."

The resolution declares that the "common council do hereby fix and determine that the following district . . . is benefited by the opening of Milwaukee avenue," . . . and "that *there be assessed and levied upon the [440] several pieces and parcels of real estate, included in the above description, the amount of $15,214.75, in proportion, as near as may be, to the advantage which each lot or parcel is deemed to acquire by this improvement." If this resolution be not a literal, we think it is a substantial, compliance with the statute, declaring that if the common council believe that the property will be benefited by such improvement, they may determine the proportion of the compensation to be assessed upon the owners; but whether this be so or not, there was no want of due process of law within the 14th Amendment, inasmuch as § 3406 expressly provides, following the language already quoted, "that the assessment shall be made and the amount levied and collected in the same manner and by the same officers and proceeding, as near as may be, as is provided in the charter of the municipality for assessing, levying, and collecting the expense of a public improvement when a street is graded." Interpreting this, the supreme court of Michigan held in the case of Voigt v. Detroit, 123 Mich. 547, 82 N. W. 253, that "the statute provides for a hearing in relation to the proportion each piece of property shall bear to the whole cost of the improvement;" and further, that "when the proceeding has reached that stage when it becomes necessary to decide what proportion of the cost of a proposed improvement shall be assessed to any given description of land, there must be an opportunity given to the owner of the land to be heard upon that question." There was, in that case, as well as in the one under consideration, no claim in the bill that plaintiffs' property was not benefited by the proposed improvement in excess of the amount assessed, nor was there any claim that he was not allowed to be heard in relation to the amount which should be assessed against his property. Upon such hearing the property owner may insist that his property was not benefited to the amount assessed, or that it was not benefited at all, and thus obtain every advantage which he might obtain were he informed of every step of the proceedings. The terms of the resolution, that each lot shall be assessed "in accordance with the amount of benefits derived from such improvements," opens the whole question of the amount of benefit derived by the lot, even to showing that no benefit whatever was occasioned by the improvement. It does not follow, however, that he has a right to be heard upon the extent of the territory to be embraced within the assessment district.

[441]

3. The last objection, that there were several of the parcels of land constituting the extension of Milwaukee avenue so defectively described that the judgment of condemnation was absolutely void, is untenable. Not only is it not shown that the plaintiffs were interested in the lands alleged to be misdescribed, but it is obviously impossible, in a proceeding to assess benefits upon other property, to show a misdescription in the lands taken for such improvement. Voorhees v. Jackson ex dem. Bank of United States, 10 Pet. 449, 9 L. ed. 490; Comstock v. Crawford, 3 Wall. 396, 18 L. ed. 34. It is not only an attempt to raise the question collaterally by one who has no interest in it, but it is exceedingly doubtful if a simple misdescription involves any Federal question whatever. The errors, too, were merely clerical, since a map of the property taken, annexed to the condemnation proceedings, exhibits accurately the lands affected thereby.

There was no error in the decree of the Supreme Court affirming the dismissal of the bill, and it is therefore affirmed.

Mr. Justice Harlan did not sit in this case.

UNITED STATES, Appt.,

v.

JOSE ISABEL MARTINEZ et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 441-450.)

Private land claims—parties to suit for 632

confirmation—recovery of value of lands patented to third parties—laches.

1. Failure to make patentees from the United States of land within the limits of a Spanish land grant parties to a suit for the confirmation of such grant, as required by § 6 of the court of private land claims act, does not affect the validity of the decree of confirmation, where the patents and the boundaries of the land patented are undisputed, as the only consequence of such omission in such a case is an acknowledgment of the title of such patentees to the land, and of its boundaries.
2. An unexplained delay of over six years after a land grant has been confirmed by the court of private land claims will defeat the right to recover a money judgment against the United States, under § 14 of the court of private land claims act, for the value of lands within the grant, disposed of and patented by the United States to third parties before the filing of the original petition.

[No. 169.]

Argued and Submitted January 31, 1902.
Decided March 3, 1902.

APPEAL from the Court of Private Land Claims to review a judgment against the United States for the value of lands within a Spanish land claim, which had been patented to third parties before the confirmation of the grant. Reversed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

*This was a petition, under the 14th sec-[442] tion of the court of private land claims act, for a money judgment against the United States for lands within a Spanish land claim, which lands had been patented by the United States to third parties before the Spanish land grant had been acted upon or confirmed.

The original proceeding out of which the present claim for indemnity grew was a suit begun February 28, 1893, by the present appellees, who, with one exception, claimed to be the heirs at law and legal representatives of Juan José Lobato, against the United States, in the court of private land claims, for the confirmation of a grant alleged to have been made to Lobato August 24, 1740, of which juridical possession was given, and the grant ratified and confirmed by the proper authorities June 15, 1744. In their petition it was alleged that the same tract had been previously granted to Cristobal de Torres, but that his grant had been revoked in 1733 and the tract declared to be Crown lands; that from the date of the grant to Lobato in 1740 and for a period of 153 years (down to the time of filing the petition) he and his legal representatives had been in peaceable adverse possession of the same, and that "there are no adverse holders, possessors, or claimants of or to any portion *of said tract." The suit resulted in a de-[443] cree in favor of the claimants (appellees) confirming the grant, and finding the title complete and perfect in the claimants, at the date of the cession by the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo. The decree fixed the boundaries of the tract as shown in a map annexed to the petition. From this decree no appeal was prosecuted, and becoming final, it was executed by a survey approved by the court, and the land patented to the grantees.

184 U. S.

More than six years after the confirmation of the Lobato grant the petitioners filed the present petition, alleging that several parcels of land, amounting to 2,056 acres in the aggregate, had been disposed of, granted, and patented by the United States to certain persons named in an exhibit to the petition; that the lands so granted lay wholly within the boundaries of the Lobato grant as confirmed, and were among the most valuable parts of such grant. The petition concluded with a prayer for judgment against the United States for the value of the lands so patented.

The United States answered, admitting the confirmation of the Lobato grant, and averring that the plaintiffs neglected to make the holders of the patented land parties defendant to the suit as required by law, but that they proceeded to try their cause, obtain a decree of confirmation, which had long since become final; and that by failure to make the patentees parties defendant, and by averring that there were no adverse claimants to any portion of the tract, "they thereby waived and disclaimed all right, if any they had, to challenge any disposition theretofore made under the laws of the United States to any portion of said grant."

The petitioners filed a general demurrer to this answer, accompanied by an affidavit to the effect that the plaintiffs, until the survey of said grant, did not and could not know or certainly allege and affirm that the lands granted and disposed of by the United States, as set forth in their petition, were within the exterior limits of their grant, and consequently no allegation with relation thereto was made in their original petition, and that such knowledge only came to the petitioners within the last two years.

[444] *The demurrer to the answer was sustained, the case submitted upon an agreed statement of facts, and a judgment rendered against the United States for $2,320.91, for 1,856.73 acres at $1.25 per acre, in accordance with the prayer of the petition,—Justices Shuss and Murray dissenting.

Mr. Matthew G. Reynolds argued the cause, and, with Solicitor General Richards, filed a brief for appellants.

It would have been improper to award judgment for indemnity in the original decree without first bringing in by process the vendees of the United States and requiring them to produce their titles, so that the court might ascertain their boundaries, quantity, and value, and decree as is provided by the 8th and 14th sections.

United States v. Moore, 12 How. 209, 13 L. ed. 958; United States v. Castant, 12 How. 437, 13 L. ed. 1056; United States v. Davenport, 15 How. 1, 14 L. ed. 575; United States v. Roselius, 15 How. 31, 14 L. ed. 587.

184 U. S.

The claim for indemnity should have been made in the original petition.

Real de Dolores del Oro v. United States, 175 U. S. 71, 44 L. ed. 76, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71.

The whole theory of indemnity under private land-claim acts is that neither land scrip nor money indemnity can properly be decreed, except where the vendees of the government are made parties.

United States v. Moore, 12 How. 209, 13 L. ed. 958; United States v. Castant, 12 How. 437, 13 L. ed. 1056; United States v. Roselius, 15 How. 31, 14 L. ed. 587; United States v. Davenport, 15 How. 1, 14 L. ed. 575.

Messrs. George Hill Howard and Henry M. Earle submitted the cause for appellees:

In cases of this nature this court has held that it is "called on to decide according to the rules governing a court of equity."

United States v. Moore, 12 How. 209, 13 L. ed. 958.

The necessity cited by the court for making the United States vendees parties in the case of United States v. Moore, 12 How. 223, 13 L. ed. 963, does not exist in the case at bar, for the reason that the title is not in dispute (as in the Moore Case): to the contrary, the title of the United States vendees is expressly confirmed by the decree and the 8th section of the act creating the land court, the sole question here being the right of the claimants to a money judgment for the property of which they have been divested by the United States.

*Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court. [444]

This case raises the question whether, after a land grant has been confirmed by the court of private land claims, that court may, after an unexplained delay of over six years, entertain a supplemental petition for the value of certain parcels disposed of and patented by the United States to third parties, before the filing of the original petition.

The following sections of the court of private land claims act (26 Stat. at L. 854, chap. 539) are pertinent in this connection:

"Sec. 6. That it shall and may be lawful for any person . . . claiming lands within the limits of the territory derived by the United States from the Republic of Mexico . . . by virtue of any such Spanish or Mexican grant . . . which . . . have not been confirmed by act of Congress, . . . and which are not already complete and perfect, in every such case to present a petition, in writing, to the said court, etc.

"The petition shall set forth fully the nature of their claims to the lands, . . . the name or names of any person or persons in possession of or claiming the same, or any part thereof, otherwise than by the lease or permission of the petitioner; . . . and a copy of such petition, with a citation to any adverse possessor or claimant, shall, immediately after the filing of the same, be served on such possessor or claimant in the ordinary legal manner of serving such process in the proper state or territory," etc.

[445] *"Sec. 8. That any person or corporation claiming lands in any of the states or territories mentioned in this act under a title derived from the Spanish or Mexican government that was complete and perfect at the date when the United States acquired sovereignty therein, shall have the right (but shall not be bound) to apply to said court in the manner in this act provided for other cases for a confirmation of such title.

"If in any such case a title so claimed to be perfect shall be established and confirmed, such confirmation shall be for so much land only as such perfect title shall be found to cover, always excepting any part of such land that shall have been disposed of by the United States," etc.

"Sec. 14. That if in any case it shall appear that the lands or any part thereof decreed to any claimant under the provisions of this act shall have been sold or granted by the United States to any other person, such title from the United States to such other person shall remain valid, notwithstanding such decree, and upon proof being made to the satisfaction of said court of such sale or grant, and the value of the lands so sold or granted, such court shall render judgment in favor of such claimant against the United States for the reasonable value of said lands so sold or granted, exclusive of betterments, not exceeding one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre for such lands; and such judgment, when found shall be a charge on the Treasury of the United States."

Under these sections the holder of a complete and perfect title may resort to either of two remedies: He may bring suit in the local courts upon his title against anyone in possession of the land covered by the grant, or any portion of it (United States v. Pillerin, 13 How. 9, 14 L. ed. 28; Ainsa v. New Mexico & A. R. Co. 175 U. S. 76, 90, 44 L. ed. 78, 84, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28); or he may file his petition in the court of private land claims under § 8, subject to the condition that the "confirmation shall be for so much land only as such perfect title shall be found to cover, always excepting any part of such land that shall have been disposed of by the United States." In such case, however, while he affirms the title of the patentee of the United States he may,

[446] under § 14, if "it *shall appear that the lands or any part thereof decreed to any claimant . . . shall have been sold or granted by the United States to any other person," recover a money judgment against the United States "for the reasonable value of said lands so sold or granted."

As the petitioners in this case elected the latter remedy, they are entitled to a recourse against the United States to recover the value of the land patented, unless they have in some way estopped themselves to make the claim at this time. The argument of the government in this connection is that, under § 6, the petitioners were bound to set forth in their original petition "the name or names of any person or persons in possession of or claiming the same, or any part thereof, otherwise than by the lease or permission of the petitioners," and that "a copy of such petition, with citation to any adverse possessor or claimant, shall, immediately after the filing of the same, be served upon such possessor or claimant in the ordinary legal manner," etc., whose duty it shall be to enter an appearance and plead, answer, or demur to said petition; in default of which the court is at liberty to proceed to hear the case upon the petition and proofs presented. Apparently, however, the only object of requiring notice to be given the adverse possessors or claimants is to compel them to show the location and boundaries of their claims and that they are not mere squatters or trespassers, but hold the land under a grant from the United States, in which case, under § 14, such title from the United States to such other person "shall remain valid notwithstanding such decree." If, however, it appear, as it does in this case, that the petitioners admit that the adverse possessors or claimants do hold under grants from the United States, and there are no disputed boundaries, there would appear to be no substantial reason for making them parties, inasmuch as they could not be affected by the decree. The only consequence of an omission to serve on them a copy of the petition is an acknowledgment of their title and of its boundaries.

The government could doubtless exonerate itself from payment by showing that it had never granted or disposed of the lands; *but [447] no attempt of that kind was made, and the proof that the lands were entered under the homestead laws and subsequently patented comes from the land office at Santa Fé, as well as by the express stipulation of the parties. It is true that in United States v. Moore, 12 How. 209, 223, 13 L. ed. 958, 964, it was said with regard to a similar act that persons holding under patents from the United States "should be compelled to produce their title, so that, if a decree was made for complainant, the court could ascertain what part of the land should be granted to him by patent; and as this could only be done by a specific ascertainment of interfering claims, the decree must of necessity specify their boundaries and quantities." But where, as in this case, the quantities and boundaries of the lands patented or otherwise disposed of are expressly stipulated between the United States and the claimants of the land grant, and the rights of the entrymen cannot be affected by the decree, we see no occasion for making them parties.

The second objection is that the language of § 14, "that if in any case it shall appear that the lands or any part thereof . . . shall have been sold or granted," limits the recovery of the value of such lands to cases wherein it appears in the original petition for confirmation that such lands have been granted, and that the original petition in this case having gone to a decree affirming the survey, the court lost control of the grant; and in addition thereto that the petitioners had, by the lapse of six years, waived and abandoned their claim, and are guilty of inexcusable laches. The original petition for confirmation was filed February 28, 1893, the decree of confirmation pronounced December 4, 1893, and the decree approving the survey October 19, 1895. The present petition for the value of the lands granted was filed April 23, 1900, over seven years after the original petition was filed, and over four years from the time of the decree approving the survey. While § 14 evidently contemplates that the names of the adverse holders shall be set forth in the original petition, that notice shall be given them and that the claim for a money judgment for the lands granted them shall be incorporated therein, we should not refuse relief solely [448] upon that ground, if sufficient *excuse were shown for the omission to make these grantees parties; since it might well be that, if the grant were a large one and its boundaries indefinite or unsettled, entries might inadvertently be made within the exterior limits of such grant and patents issued therefor in good faith and without the knowledge of the original grantee. In such event the right to reimbursement ought not to be denied, if due diligence to ascertain the facts were exercised at the time the petition for confirmation was filed.

But we are unwilling to admit that a claimant may wait an unlimited time and then, upon a simple allegation that certain lands within the grant had been disposed of, may recover their value. We think the claimant is bound to act with promptness, and if a long delay has occurred, to explain it by proper averments. The original petition for confirmation in this case, not only suggested no adverse claimants, but alleged positively that "there are no adverse holders, possessors, or claimants of or to any portion of said tract," when a simple reference to the records of the land office at Santa Fé would have shown the facts stated in Exhibit A annexed to the petition in this case, that fifteen homesteads had been entered upon this tract before the original petition was filed, in all but five of which patents had already issued. Not the slightest effort appears to have been made to ascertain these facts, and it was not until more than seven years thereafter that the petition in this case was filed. The petition sets forth that several parcels of land aggregating 2,056 acres, within the Lobato grant, were disposed of by the United States to other parties, but there is no allegation explaining why these grantees were not made parties to the original petition, or why the long delay occurred in making the claim for a money judgment.

The answer of the United States sets up the failure of the petitioners to make the patentees parties to the original petition, 184 U. S. and alleges that they thereby waived and disclaimed all right to a money judgment. Upon the same day this answer was filed, April 26, 1900, a demurrer thereto was filed, together with a deposition or affidavit setting up the fact that "prior and up to the survey of said grant, under the decree of confirmation," *neither the original claim-[449] ants nor their solicitor "knew or could know, or certainly allege and affirm, that the lands granted and disposed of by the United States as set forth and shown in the above said petition were within the exterior limits of the said Lobato grant," and that the facts were not ascertained "until within the past two years." How this affidavit came upon the record is not shown. No order was made permitting it to be filed. No reference to it or to the allegations it contains was made in the stipulation or agreed statement of facts upon which the case was tried, nor in the finding of facts incorporated in the decree of the court. For aught that appears, it was thrust upon the files without authority. But even if the affidavit were treated as a proper part of the record, it fails to show the slightest diligence to ascertain the real facts, although a map annexed to the original petition exhibited the claimed boundaries of the tract, and a reference to the records of the land office would have shown the description of each parcel entered as a homestead. Indeed it virtually confesses a neglect to file the petition for two years after the facts came to the knowledge of the petitioners.

The case then comes to this: Whether upon a petition for value filed seven years after the original petition for confirmation, a decree against the United States can be entered upon a simple allegation that certain parcels had been conveyed and patented by the United States, without showing some excuse for the delay in presenting the petition, or some diligence in ascertaining the real facts. Under the court of claims act petitions must be presented to that court within six years from the time the cause of action accrues (24 Stat. at L. 505, chap. 359), and while there is no limitation of the time for petitions of this character to be filed in the court of private land claims, we have held that a similar act required that cases should be heard and disposed of upon equitable principles, and that we were "bound to give due weight to lapse of time." United States v. Moore, 12 How. 209, 222, 13 L. ed. 958, 963; Indiana v. Kentucky, 136 U. S. 479, 509, 510, 34 L. ed. 329, 332, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1051. We think there has been such unexplained delay in this case as to justify the court in holding that petitioners had abandoned their claim for a pecuniary judgment.

The decree of the Court of Private Land Claims is therefore reversed*, and the case remanded to that court for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion. [450]

Mr. Justice Harlan and Mr. Justice Gray did not sit in this case.

MICHAEL W. O'BRIEN et al., Exrs., Petitioners,
v.

JOHN G. WHEELLOCK et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 450-496.)

Levee assessments—unconstitutional statute—suit in equity to charge land—estoppel of landowners—laches in bringing suit.

1. The work of constructing a great levee along the bank of a river subject to overflow, and independent of a system of drainage, is not embraced within the Illinois act of April 24, 1871, authorizing the construction of drains and ditches for agricultural and sanitary purposes, and of levees if deemed necessary for drainage.
2. The special assessments for drains, ditches, and other works which the Illinois act of April 24, 1871, provides may be imposed in proceedings taken in the county court, with the aid of commissioners and a jury, are not authorized by Ill. Const. 1870, art. 9, § 9, which provides that the general assembly may vest corporate authorities of cities, towns, and villages with power to make local improvements by special assessments and by special taxation of contiguous property, since this constitutional provision limits the grant of such power to the authorities of cities, towns, and villages, and thereby excludes the grant of it to a county court, board of commissioners, or jury.
3. Landowners are not estopped to deny the constitutionality of a statute authorizing assessments for a local improvement, as against one who purchased, in the open market and on the advice of counsel, bonds which such assessments, if valid, would be used to pay, merely because they, or some of them, had secured the passage of the act providing for the improvement, had participated in the organization of the assessment district, and in various ways proceeded under the assumption that the act was valid.
4. The application of the doctrine of courts of equity, to withhold relief from those who have delayed the assertion of their claims for an unreasonable length of time, does not depend upon mere lapse of time, but upon change of situation during neglectful repose, rendering it inequitable to afford relief.
5. The delay in bringing a suit to charge landowners in equity or on the principle of estoppel with liability for the amount of levee assessments under an unconstitutional statute is fatal, where, after a decree in a former suit permitting the owner of the bonds, by supplemental or original bill, to bring in the landowners, he took no steps to do so during his life, which continued for about six years after the decree, and the bill was brought by his executors about nine years after such decree, during which time the owners of the property assessed were constantly changing, and they had spent large sums for the repair of the levee, and had also become liable to very large assessments under a new statute.

[No. 38.]

Argued October 21, 22, 1901. Decided February 24, 1902.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit to review a decree affirming a decision of the Circuit Court dismissing a bill to charge lands in equity with liability for the amount of invalid levee assessments. Affirmed.

See same case below, 37 C. C. A. 309, 95 Fed. 883.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

*This case is brought here by certiorari to the circuit court of appeals for the seventh circuit to review a decree of the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of Illinois, 78 Fed. 673, affirmed by the court of appeals, 37 C. C. A. 309, 95 Fed. 883. The bill relates to certain proceedings under an act of the general assembly of the state of Illinois, approved April 24, 1871, entitled "An Act to Provide for the Construction and Protection of Drains, Ditches, Levees, and Other Works." The opinion of the circuit court of appeals was delivered by Mr. Justice Harlan, presiding as circuit justice, and the case is therein stated thus:

"By the above act of the general assembly of Illinois, it was provided that whenever one or more owners or occupants of lands desired to construct a drain or drains, ditch or ditches, across the lands of others, for agricultural and sanitary purposes, such person or persons may file a petition in the county court of the county in which the drain or drains, ditch or ditches, shall be proposed to be constructed, setting forth the necessity of the same, with a description of its or their proposed starting point, route, and terminus, and if it shall be deemed necessary for the drainage of the land of such petitioners that a levee or other work be constructed, the petitioners shall so state, and set forth a general description of the same as proposed, and may pray for the appointment or commissioners for the construction of such work, pursuant to the provisions of this chapter." § 1.

"The act required notice by publication to be given of any petition filed under its provisions, and that: 'Such notice shall state when and in what court the petition is filed, the starting point, route, and terminus of the proposed drain or drains, ditch or ditches, or levees, and, if a levee or other work is intended *to be constructed in connection therewith, shall so state, and at what term of court the petitioners will ask a hearing upon such petition.' § 2.

"If the drain or drains, ditch or ditches, levee or other work proposed to be constructed, was to pass through or over, or be constructed upon, lands lying in different counties, the petition could be filed in the county court of either county." § 4.

NOTE.—On estoppel by silent acquiescence—see notes to Reichert v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. (Ark.) 5 L. R. A. 183; Brookhaven v. Smith (N. Y.) 7 L. R. A. 755; Tarkington v. Purvis (Ind.) 9 L. R. A. 607, and Michigan v. Flint & P. M. R. Co. 38 L. ed. U. S. 478.

As to laches as a defense—see notes to Hammond v. Hopkins, 36 L. ed. U. S. 135; Felix v. Patrick, 36 L. ed. U. S. 720; Middletown v. Newport Hospital (R. I.) 1 L. R. A. 191; Calhoun v. Delhi & M. R. Co. (N. Y.) 8 L. R. A. 248, and Coffey v. Emigh (Colo.) 10 L. R. A. 125.

"The court in which the petition was filed was empowered to determine all matters pertaining to the subject-matter of the petition.

"If it appeared that the proposed drain or drains, ditch or ditches, levee or other work, was necessary or would be useful for the drainage of the lands for agricultural and sanitary purposes, the court was required to so find, and appoint three competent persons as commissioners to lay out and construct such proposed work. § 5.

"It was made the duty of the commissioners to examine the lands proposed to be drained, and those over or upon which the work was proposed to be constructed, and determine: '(1) Whether the starting point, route, and terminus of the proposed drain or drains, ditch or ditches, and if a levee or other work is proposed, the proposed location thereof, is or are in all respects proper or most feasible, and if not, what is or are so; (2) The probable cost of the proposed work, including all incidental expenses, and the expenses of the proceeding therefor; (3) What lands will be injured thereby, and the probable aggregate amount of all damages such lands will sustain by reason of the laying out and construction of the proposed work; (4) What lands will be benefited by the construction of the proposed work, and whether the aggregate amount of benefits will equal or exceed the costs of constructing such work, including all incidental expenses and costs of the proceeding.' § 9.

"If the commissioners found and reported that the expense would more than equal the benefits, the proceedings were to be dismissed; if less, then they were to have plans, profiles, surveys, and specifications made, and report the same to the court. §§ 10, 11.

[453] "The commissioners were not confined to the point of commencement, route, or terminus of the drains or ditches, or to the number, extent, or size of the same, or the location, plan, or extent of any levee or other work, as indicated in the petition. But they were directed to locate, design, lay out, and plan the same as they thought would drain the petitioners' land with the least drainage, and for the greatest benefit of all the lands to be affected thereby. All plans proposed by the commissioners could be changed by the court on the application by them or by any person interested. § 12.

"The act required due notice by publication to be given of any application to confirm the report, and the privilege was given to all persons interested to appear and contest its confirmation, or to ask any modification thereof. If no objections were made to the report, or if the objections made to it were not well taken, it was to be confirmed. If the court was of opinion that the report should be modified, it was given authority to make such modification as would be equitable. §§ 13, 14.

"If the report was confirmed, then the court was authorized to impanel a jury of twelve men competent to serve as jurors.

who, being duly sworn, were required to assess damages and benefits according to law; or the court could direct that a jury be impaneled before a justice of the peace for the assessment of damages and benefits, in which case the commissioners could apply to any justice of the peace in the county, who should immediately, without the formality of any written application, proceed to summon and impanel a jury of six men competent to serve as jurors, who should be sworn in the same manner as was provided in case of a jury impaneled by the court in which the proceeding is pending, the justice to enter upon his docket a minute of such proceeding before him, and the names of the jurors. § 16.

"The duty of the jury was to examine the land to be affected by the proposed work; ascertain to the best of their ability and judgment the damages and benefits sustained by or accruing to the land affected by the construction of the proposed work; make out an assessment roll, in which should be set down in proper columns the names of owners, when known, a description of the premises affected, in words or figures, or both, as was most convenient, the number of acres in each tract, and, if damages were allowed, the amount of the same; and in case damages were allowed to, and benefits assessed against, the same tract of land, the balance, if any, should be carried forward to a separate column for damages or benefits, as the case might be. § 17.

"In making the assessment the jury were required to award and assess damages and benefits in favor of and against each tract of land separately, in the proportion in which such tract of land would be damaged or benefited; and in no case should any tract of land be assessed for benefits in a greater amount than its proportionate share of the estimated cost of the work and expenses of the proceeding, nor in a greater amount than it would be benefited by the proposed work, according to the best judgment of the jury. § 18.

"The commissioners, or any person who made objection to the assessment, were given the right of appeal from the finding of the jury. If, upon such appeal, there were corrections of the assessment, or if the assessment roll was confirmed, then the roll was to be spread upon the record, with right of appeal or writ of error therefrom. §§ 24, 26.

"At the time of confirming the assessment the court could order the assessment of benefits to be paid in instalments of such amounts and at such times as would be convenient for the accomplishment of the proposed work; otherwise, the whole amount should be payable immediately, upon the confirmation, and should be 'a lien upon the lands assessed until paid.' § 27.

"It was made the duty of the clerk, immediately after the entry of the order of confirmation, to make out and certify to the commissioners a copy of the assessment roll, and also to make out and deliver to the commissioners separate copies of the same, pertaining to the lands situated in different counties, to be recorded in the recorder's office of the respective counties in which the lands were situated, and which should be notice of the lien thereon to all persons. § 28.

[455] "Upon receiving a certified copy of such assessment, the commissioners *could proceed to collect the same, or any instalment thereof, or certify the assessment of any instalment thereof which they might be entitled to collect at the time to the county clerk of the county in which the lands assessed were situated, who was required to 'extend the same, in a separate column, upon the proper tax books for the collection of state and county taxes: Provided, the owner, agent, or occupant of any land through or on which any drain, ditch, or levee shall be constructed shall have the right, under the direction of said commissioners, within such time as they shall prescribe, to construct such drain, ditch, or levee, or any part thereof, at his own cost; and in case he shall so construct the same, he shall be allowed for the value thereof upon his assessment.' § 29.

"In case the assessment for benefits should be payable in instalments, such instalments were to draw interest at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from the time they became payable till they were paid, and the interest could be collected and enforced as part of the assessment. § 30.

"Other sections of the act are as follows:

"§ 31. When the commissioners shall have elected to collect any assessment or instalment thereof themselves, or shall not have caused the same to be extended upon the state and county tax books, and any assessment or instalment shall be due and uncollected, and as often as any instalment shall become due and be uncollected at the time for making return of the tax books for the collection of state and county taxes next succeeding the time of the receipt of the certified copy of the assessment by the commissioners, or the falling due of any instalment, the commissioners may return a certified list of such delinquent lands, with the amount due thereon, to the officer who shall be authorized by law to receive the return of the books for the collection of state and county taxes in the counties or respective counties where the lands are situated, who shall proceed to collect and enforce the same in the same manner as other taxes or special assessments are enforced, and shall pay over the amounts so collected to the commissioners."

[456] "§ 34. The commissioners, when appointed and qualified pursuant to this chapter, may do any and all acts that may be *necessary in and about the surveying, laying out, constructing, repairing, altering, enlarging, cleaning, protecting and maintaining any drain, ditch, levee, or other work for which they shall have been appointed, including all necessary bridges, crossings, embankments, protections, dams, and side drains, and may employ all necessary agents and servants, and enter into all necessary contracts, and sue and be sued.

"§ 35. The commissioners may borrow money, not exceeding in amount the amount of assessment unpaid at the time of borrowing, for the construction of any work which they shall be authorized to construct, and may secure the same by notes or bonds, bearing interest at a rate not exceeding 10 per cent per annum, and not running beyond one year after the last assessment on account of which the money is borrowed shall fall due, which notes or bonds shall not be held to make the commissioners personally liable for the money borrowed, but shall constitute a lien upon the assessment for the repayment of the principal and interest thereof."

"§ 37. All damages over and above the benefits to any tract of land shall be payable out of all the amounts assessed against other lands for benefits, and shall be paid or tendered to the owner thereof before the commissioners shall be authorized to enter upon his land for the construction of any work thereon. In case the owner is unknown, or there shall be a contest in regard to the ownership of the land, or the commissioners cannot, for any reason, safely pay the same to the owner, they may deposit the same with the clerk of the court, and the court may order the payment thereof to such party as shall appear to be entitled to the same."

"§ 45. Any person who shall wrongfully and purposely fill up, cut, injure, destroy, or in any manner impair the usefulness of any drain, ditch, or other work constructed under this chapter, or that may have been heretofore constructed, for the purposes of drainage or protection against overflow, may be fined in any sum not exceeding $200, to be recovered before a justice of the peace in the proper county; or if the injury be to a levee, whereby lands shall be overflowed, he may, on conviction in any court of competent jurisdiction, be fined in any *sum not exceeding $5,000, or imprisoned in [457] the county jail not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the court. All complaints under this section shall be in the name of the people of the state of Illinois, and all fines when collected shall be paid over to the proper commissioners, to be used for the work so injured.

"§ 46. In addition to the penalties provided in the preceding section, the person so wrongfully and purposely filling up, cutting, injuring, destroying, or impairing the usefulness of any such drain, ditch, levee, or other work, shall be liable to the commissioners having charge thereof for all damages occasioned to such work, and to the owners and occupants of lands for all damages that may result to them by such wrongful act, which may be recovered before a justice of the peace, if within his jurisdiction, or before any court of competent jurisdiction." Ill. Laws 1871, 1872, pp. 356-365.

"Proceeding under the above act, numerous owners and occupants of the lands known at the time as the 'Mississippi bottom lands,' in the counties of Adams, Pike, and Calhoun, Illinois, filed a petition in the county court of Pike county, expressing their desire to construct drains and ditches, and also a levee and other works, across the lands of others in that bottom, for agricultural and sanitary purposes, so as to reclaim the bottom land from overflow by the waters of that river, 'in order to make the location salubrious, and render the soil available for tillage and otherwise develop the agricultural resources of said bottom land.' They represented that 'said bottom land has been from time immemorial, and now is, a low and nearly level tract of land formed by deposits of alluvion from said river; that it is traversed throughout nearly its entire length by a slough or bayou known as "the Sny Cartee slough;" that said bottom land is also variously intersected by other and smaller sloughs, some of which are short channels putting out from the river and returning thereto, while others start from and return to the said Sny Cartee slough, and others are, again, lateral branches connecting said Sny Cartee slough with the river; that the said bottom land is below the level of the high-water mark of said river, and absolutely without protection therefrom; *that the greater part thereof is nearly every year inundated by the waters of said river, and all are subject to inundation, and have been repeatedly submerged by said overflow, the river on such occasions being a stream from about 4 to 8 miles wide, and running from bluff to bluff on either side;' 'that, by reason of said exposure to overflow, the mass of the said bottom land has been allowed to remain in its primitive condition, and will so remain unless reclaimed; that it is but sparsely populated, and that the occupants thereof support themselves almost exclusively by the cultivation of the soil; that they are every year greatly embarrassed in putting in their crops by the peculiar character of the rise in said river, which has no regular time for reaching its maximum height, nor any fixed number of rises during a season; that their crops when planted are frequently destroyed by an unexpected rise in said river, and in such cases they are either compelled to replant their crops, or the crops are destroyed so late in the year as to render the operations of the season a total failure;' 'that upon the subsiding of the waters the said bottom land is left in a wet and marshy condition, so that the stagnant water is left on various parts of its surface, and the succeeding heat of summer and autumn evolve therefrom malaria and disease;' 'that by reason of said facts said bottom land not only now remains sparsely populated, while the territory around it is thickly settled, but the same is practically incapable of supporting any further population, so that the average taxable value of the lands now subject to overflow is no more than about 50 cents per acre, and the present occupants of said bottom lands have been in most cases induced to remain solely by the prospect of the ultimate reclamation of said land,—a consummation which has been the theme of their enterprise and endeavor ever since the settlement of the bottom lands described.'

"The petitioners called the attention of the court to the act of 1871, and asked the appointment of commissioners, in accordance with the provisions of that law, 'for the purpose of constructing a levee on the Mississippi river, from a point on said river at or near the head of the Sny Cartee, in the county of Adams and state of Illinois, and thence in a southerly direction *along[459] or near the east bank of the Mississippi river, as shall be deemed advisable for the safety of the proposed work, to a point at or near the mouth of Hamburg bay, in the county of Calhoun, state of Illinois, and to do and perform any and all acts, as provided in said law, for the surveying, laying out, and constructing, altering, repairing, enlarging, protecting, and maintaining, said proposed levee, or to render it efficient for the protection and reclamation of the lands lying east of the said levee, and between it and the bluffs, and now subject to overflow by the Mississippi river and other streams.'

"After asking a confirmation of the report of the commissioners, if they found and reported that the proposed levee could be constructed at a cost not exceeding $5 per acre for all lands benefited and reclaimed from overflow, the petitioners prayed: 'That the assessment for benefits upon the property to be affected by the construction of said work shall be paid in ten equal annual instalments, the first instalment being due and payable three years after the date of the commissioners' report and the filings of the plans and specifications with the court, and one tenth of such assessment, with accrued and accruing interest, each year thereafter, until the whole amount shall have been paid.'

"The county court of Pike county, having found that the proposed work was necessary, appointed in 1871, William Dustin, George W. Jones, and John G. Wheelock commissioners, and they duly qualified and acted in that capacity. In the same year the commissioners reported the result of their examination, and in their report indicated, by map and profiles, the work to be done. The report was confirmed without objection, and a jury of twelve was organized to assess damages and benefits, and make an assessment roll. The assessments were made and put upon the record of the court. Certified copies of the assessments were recorded in Pike, Adams, and Calhoun counties. An order was made requiring the assessments to be paid in ten annual instalments, with interest from October, 1872.

"In conformity with the order of the court, the commissioners issued bonds from time to time, upon estimates made by the engineer as the work progressed, to be used in the construction *and completion of the[460] work. They were delivered directly to the contractors as they were earned. The first issue of bonds amounted to $499,500, of which Francis Palms purchased $202,500.

A second issue was made, amounting to $148,500, which were also purchased by him. That issue was the result of a second petition under the act of 1871, proceedings under which resulted in further assessments.

"It may be here stated that by an act of the general assembly of Illinois, approved April 9, 1872, it was provided that whenever it appeared by the findings of the court before which proceedings were pending or might be had, under the act of April 24, 1871, that any drain, ditch, levee, or other work authorized by that act to be made would be of public benefit for the promotion of the public health, or in reclaiming or draining lands, the same should be deemed 'a public work;' and that it should be lawful for the commissioners appointed under the act of 1871 to register at the office of the auditor of public accounts any bonds issued by them under order of court; such registration to show the date, amount, number, maturity, and rate of interest of the bonds, and the fact of such registration to be certified by the auditor, under his seal of office, upon each bond. The act contained other provisions, but it is not necessary to refer to them.

"All of the bonds issued by the commissioners were in the same form. We give here a copy of one of them, issued in 1872:

"No. 6. United States of America. $500.
Sny Island Levee Bond.
(Ten per cent interest bond.)

"State of Illinois.

"The commissioners appointed by the county court of Pike county and state of Illinois, on the petition of John Morris and others, to locate and construct a levee on the Mississippi river, in the counties of Adams, Pike, and Calhoun, by virtue of an act of the general assembly of the state of Illinois entitled "An Act to Provide for the Construction and Protection of Drains, Ditches, Levees, and Other Works," and by power vested in them by said act, acknowledge [461] themselves, as such commissioners, held and firmly bound unto John G. Wheelock or bearer in the sum of five hundred dollars, lawful money of the United States, payable in the city of New York, at the bank or agency used by the treasurer of the state of Illinois, on the first day of October, A. D. 1882, with interest at the rate of ten per cent per annum, interest payable on the first day of July in each year, on the surrender of annexed coupons as severally due.

"This bond is one of a series of five hundred thousand dollars issued for the purpose aforesaid, and after an order of the county court of Pike county aforesaid approving of the assessment made by a jury of the cost of said levee.

"In witness whereof, the said commissioners,' etc.

"Annual interest coupons, payable to bearer, were attached to each bond.

"On each bond was indorsed a certificate in these words:

"Auditor's Office, Illinois.

Springfield, Nov. 12th, 1872.

"I, Charles E. Lippincott, auditor of public accounts of the state of Illinois, do hereby certify that the within bond has been registered in this office this day pursuant to the provisions of an act entitled "An Act to Provide for the Registration of Drainage and Levee Bonds, and Secure the Payment of the Same," approved April 9th, 1872, and in force July 1st, 1872.

"In testimony whereof,' etc.

"At the January term, 1876, of the supreme court of Illinois, the case of Updike v. Wright, 81 Ill. 49, was decided. That case involved, among other questions, the constitutionality of the above act of April 24, 1871, providing for the construction and protection of drains, ditches, levees, and other works. The case related to certain proceedings taken for the construction of a levee on the banks of the Wabash river. The representation to the county court was that the lands of the petitioners were subject to overflow from that river, that their fences and crops were liable to be swept away and destroyed by such overflow, and that the same could be prevented by an earthwork levee.

"After observing that the above act of [462] 1871 was evidently passed in view of article 4, § 31, of the Illinois Constitution of 1870, declaring that 'the general assembly may pass laws permitting the owners or occupants of lands to construct drains and ditches for agricultural and sanitary purposes across the lands of others,' Chief Justice Scott, delivering the unanimous judgment of the court, said: 'Apparently, an effort, was made to have the law enacted conform to the constitutional provisions in every particular. Hence it is declared the work to be done is the construction of drains and ditches for agricultural and sanitary purposes, and if it becomes necessary, in the construction of a system of drainage, that a "levee or other work" be adopted to make that system available, such levee or other work may be constructed under the provisions of the statute. But it is nowhere intimated the owners or occupants of land may undertake, under the provisions of this law, the building and maintenance of an immense levee on the borders of the river, not connected with any system of drainage by ditches. Neither the Constitution nor the statute contemplates any such work. What was in the mind of the framers of the Constitution, and the legislators who enacted the law in pursuance of its provisions, must have been the drainage of lands by means of drains and ditches, and what is said in the statute on the subject of a "levee or other work" is always in connection with a system of drainage in that mode. The work outlined by the Constitution and the statute is comparatively insignificant, and may be done at no great cost; but that which is undertaken in this case is the construction of a levee on the banks of the Wabash river, of many miles in length and estimated to cost a great many thousand dollars. No system of drainage by drains and ditches was planned, nor deemed necessary for agricultural and sanitary purposes. The representation to the county court is, the lands of the petitioners are subject to overflow from the Wabash river; that their fences and crops are liable to be swept away and destroyed by such overflow; and that the same can be prevented by an earthwork levee. The undertaking is one of great magnitude, and will require the expenditure of large sums of money. The assessment [463] *on complainant's land is over $10,000. And the allegation in the bill is that, unless all further assessments proposed to be made be arrested, the levee will cost more than the land is worth. Any construction of the statute that would warrant the owners or occupants of lands to enter upon such an immense and costly work seems forced and unreasonable. It is only in connection with drainage for agricultural and sanitary purposes that "levees or other works" may be undertaken, as auxiliary to the drainage of the lands. Our opinion is, this is the only construction the statute will bear, consistently with the Constitution; otherwise, one owner, whose lands are subject to overflow at certain seasons of the year from a river, could set in motion the proceedings for the erection of a levee sufficient to protect his lands, no matter how expensive, and have the cost levied upon the lands of others in the vicinity which commissioners appointed by the court might deem benefited by the improvement. Such a work cannot be said to be draining lands by drains and ditches over the lands of others; nor is such a levee, in any just sense, in the language of the statute, "necessary to the drainage of the lands." The work of constructing a great levee along the banks of a river subject to overflow, which defendants are about to do, is not embraced within the provisions of the statute, and is therefore without authority of enabling law.'

"But the court proceeded to observe that the decision could be placed on the ground that the general assembly possessed no power under the Constitution to vest commissioners or juries selected, or the county court, with authority to assess and collect taxes or special assessments for the contemplated improvement. It said: 'Section 5, article 9, of the Constitution of 1848, which declared "the corporate authorities of counties, townships, school districts, cities, towns, and villages may be vested with power to assess and collect taxes for corporate purposes, such taxes to be uniform in respect to persons and property within the jurisdiction of the body imposing the same," was always construed by the decisions of this court as a limitation upon the power of the general assembly to grant the right to assess and collect taxes to any other than [464] the corporate *or local authorities of the municipalities or districts to be taxed. Directors for Leveeing Wabash River v. Houston, 71 Ill. 318; Harvard v. St. Clair & M. Levee & Drainage Co. 51 Ill. 130; Pee- 184 U. S.

ple ex rel. Wilson v. Salomon, 51 Ill. 37; Gage v. Graham, 57 Ill. 144; Hessler v. Drainage Comrs. 53 Ill. 105. It was also held that the power in the legislature was subject to the further limitation that a local burden of taxation or special assessments could not be imposed upon a locality without the consent of the taxpayers to be affected. That section of the Constitution of 1870, upon this subject, provides: "The general assembly may vest the corporate authorities of cities, towns, and villages with power to make local improvements by special assessments, or by special taxation of contiguous property, or otherwise. For all other corporate purposes, all municipal corporations may be vested with authority to assess and collect taxes, but such taxes shall be uniform in respect to persons and property within the jurisdiction of the body imposing the same." The clause in the present Constitution, like that in the Constitution of 1848, must be construed as a limitation on the power of the legislature. Giving it that construction, the general assembly can only vest cities, towns, and villages with power to make local improvements by special assessments or special taxation upon contiguous property benefited by such improvement. By necessary implication, it is inhibited from conferring that power upon other municipal corporations or upon private corporations. Only cities, towns, and villages are within the constitutional provisions; and, although other municipal corporations may be vested with power to assess and collect taxes for corporate purposes, the limitation is absolute, such taxes shall be uniform in respect to persons and property within the jurisdiction imposing the same. With equal propriety, this clause of the present Constitution must be regarded as restricting the general assembly in conferring the power to levy and collect taxes, either general or special, to the mode and manner therein indicated. We do not understand the legislature possesses plenary power, unlimited and unrestricted, to invest whomsoever it may choose with authority to assess and collect either special assessments *or taxes for [465] every conceivable purpose. As we have seen, only cities, towns, and villages may levy special assessments or special taxation for local improvements, and all other municipalities can only be vested with jurisdiction to assess and collect taxes for corporate purposes, and that, too, under the positive inhibition such taxes shall be uniform in respect to persons and property. It would seem, therefore, to follow, as a corollary from the propositions stated, that neither the commissioners nor the juries selected, nor the county court, is such a body as, under the Constitution, may be given power to make local improvements by special assessments or by special taxation upon contiguous property. There is still another consideration that has an important bearing upon the decision of the case. The clause of the Constitution we have been considering, like that in the Constitution of 1848, must be understood, in the light of the decisions of this court, as forbidding the general assembly from imposing a burden by taxation upon any locality, without the consent of the citizens affected. Under this law, the people whose property is subject to taxation or assessments have never given any consent to it, if we exclude those who may have signed the petition addressed to the county court. No opportunity was afforded them to do so, nor does the law make any provision for submitting the question to a vote, to ascertain the will of those whose property is subjected to this local burden. It is imposed upon them under the statute, by the decision of the county court. Obviously, that section of the Constitution that declares "the general assembly may pass laws permitting the owners or occupants of lands to construct drains or ditches, for agricultural and sanitary purposes," implies that the community whose property is to be taxed may have the right of election in the matter. Otherwise, an onerous burden may be imposed upon them, without their consent, and such proceedings might be had as would result in the deprivation of property. How can the land owners be permitted to construct drains and ditches, unless some election is guaranteed to them? The language employed implies voluntary action. Illustration will make the inconsistency of the present law apparent. For example, the privilege is given to [466] any occupant, *as well as the owner of land, of presenting a petition to the county court. Should the construction contended for prevail, a tenant residing upon land adjacent to a river subject to overflow might present a petition, and, under the decision of the court, the work of erecting a levee miles in length, and costing large sums of money, might be entered upon, and the expenses assessed upon the property in proximity to the river that might in any degree be deemed benefited. An intention to confer such unwarranted power upon one man, who would himself be subject to none of the burdens imposed, ought not to be imputed to the legislature. Any laws not permitting an election as to the propriety of undertaking the work are vicious, and within the inhibition of the Constitution. It does not militate against this construction that the landowner may appear before the county court when the petition is presented, and resist the application, or may contest the assessment upon his property when made. Whether the contemplated work shall be undertaken, and his property subjected to taxation, is not made to depend upon his election, but upon the decision of the court. It would be a solecism to call that privilege an "election."

"At the same term of the court, the case of Webster v. People (unreported) was decided. That case related to the above work undertaken under the authority of the county court of Pike county. The efforts of the commissioners to collect instalments of interest on the assessments were resisted by certain landowners. The supreme court of Illinois said: 'The principal questions raised and discussed in this case are the same as in Udike v. Wright, decided at the present term, and for an expression of our views reference is made to the opinion in that case. For the reasons there given, the judgment in this case will be reversed, and the cause remanded.'

"It may be well to state in this connection that the Supreme Court of the United States, in Harter Trcp. v. Kernochan, 103 U. S. 562, 570, 26 L. ed. 411, 413, referring to § 5, article 9, of the Illinois Constitution, declaring that the corporate authorities of counties, townships, school districts, cities, towns, and villages may be vested with power to assess and collect taxes for corporate purposes, *has said: 'It is the settled law of the state, [467] as heretofore recognized by this court, that this constitutional provision was intended to define the class of persons to whom the right of taxation might be granted, and the purposes for which it might be exercised, and that the legislature could not constitutionally confer that power upon any other than corporate authorities of counties, townships, school districts, cities, towns, and villages, or for any other than corporate purposes.' See also Livingston County v. Darlington, 101 U. S. 411, 25 L. ed. 1017; Weightman v. Clark, 103 U. S. 256, 259, 26 L. ed. 392, 393. "After the above decision in Webster v. People, certain landowners undertook to provide for the protection of their lands from overflow by the execution of deeds of trust to the commissioners. Under these deeds as much, perhaps, as $30,000 was raised and expended by the commissioners.

"In May, 1878, while those deeds were in force, Palms, on behalf of himself and others, instituted a suit in equity in the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of Illinois against the levee commissioners. The bill in that case recited the above legislation, and the proceedings resulting in the appointment of the commissioners, the assessments by the jury, and the issuing of bonds by the commissioners, and charged that the expense of the work was paid by the commissioners with money furnished by Palms and others, of which, it was alleged, the owners and occupants of the lands benefited and assessed were at the time well aware. Referring to the 29th section of the act of 1871, prescribing the duties of the commissioners, and also to the above act of 1872, that bill alleged that the commissioners made efforts 'to collect the amount of some of the instalments of said assessments, and the interest thereon, but the courts of the state of Illinois, before whom the question of the collection of such assessments and the instalments thereof under said statutes was brought, refused to give effect to the provisions of said acts, so far as they purported to authorize the collection of the same by the collectors of taxes under extensions on the tax books; and no means are left for the collection of such assessments and interest, except such as may be supplied by the general authority of *the [468] courts that have jurisdiction of such questions. And your orator would further show unto your honors: That the whole amount of the moneys advanced by him, and by other purchasers of the bonds, with interest thereon, remains unpaid, and that said commissioners remain and continue in the actual use and possession of the said levee and other works constructed with the moneys borrowed of your orator and others, by the said commissioners, under the proceedings aforesaid; and they do also, by and under the direction of the owners of said lands, keep and use the said works to protect their own lands, and the lands of the other owners and occupants, from overflow from said river. And your orator further shows unto your honors: That the said commissioners refuse to pay to your orator and the other holders of said bonds, the whole or any portion of their principal—money loaned to them for the purposes aforesaid,—or interest, and they also refuse to enforce the collection of said assessments on the several tracts of land described in said Exhibit A, or the interest thereon, as it is their duty to do, and the owners and occupants of said lands refuse to pay said assessments, or the interest thereon, so that the moneys loaned by your orator for the construction of said works is wholly lost, together with the interest thereon. And your orator would further show unto your honors: That the owners and occupants of said lands are very numerous, as will appear by the lists of land and the names of the owners thereof, as stated and set forth in the said Exhibit A, and the names of many of them are unknown to your orator, but all of them reside in other of the states of the United States than the state of Michigan; the greater number of them are residents and citizens of the states of Illinois and Missouri; and that the said commissioners, John G. Wheelock, George W. Jones, and Benjamin F. Westlake are citizens of the state of Illinois, and of the southern district aforesaid.

[469] "The relief asked was a decree directing an account to be taken of 'the moneys loaned and advanced' by Palms to the commissioners, 'to be used by them in the purchase and acquisition of the lands required for the location and construction of the said levee and other works, and for the construction [469] and *the completion of the said levee and all the works and improvements connected therewith, together with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum, according to the terms of said bonds and the coupons thereto attached;' the amount due Palms being ascertained, then that such amount be adjudged a lien in favor of Palms 'upon the said levee and other works, and the lands acquired, owned, and held by the said commissioners for the site of said levee, and all other improvements, and upon the said assessments upon all of the said lands described in the said Exhibit A, for the benefits to said lands afforded by the said levee and other works, and the interest thereon;' and that 'the said commissioners proceed at once, under the order and direction of your honors, to collect such assessments upon all and every of said tracts of land and the interest that has, or that may hereafter, accrue thereon, or so much thereof, from time to time, as will be sufficient to pay the interest money or the principal, payable to your orators as the same falls due; or that it may please your honors to appoint one or more competent persons, as receiver or receivers, to take possession and charge of the said levee and other works, and manage and control the same, together with all the books, papers, and properties of said commissioners, and with authority to collect, under the order and direction of this honorable court, the said assessments and interest thereon, as often and in such sums as may be sufficient to meet and satisfy the claims of your orators as aforesaid.'

"The commissioners answered in that case, insisting, among other things, that the bonds in question having been registered with the auditor of public accounts under the act of 1872, they were not responsible for the failure to collect the money to pay interest, and were without any duty in respect to the said assessments. They referred to the fact that certain landowners had at all times opposed the proceedings instituted to assess their lands for benefits on account of the said levee, and refused to pay interest on assessments, in consequence whereof the township collector had returned nearly all the landowners involved in the proceedings as delinquents; that thereupon the county collector made application to the Pike county court to "enforce said assess- [470] ments against the delinquent lands; that some of the landowners opposing the assessments filed objections to judgment for such assessments, setting up that the law under which the assessments were imposed was unconstitutional; that the commissioners employed counsel to prosecute the application for judgment and for the collection of said assessments, and the county court gave judgment against the lands; that the landowners appealed to the circuit court, which affirmed the judgment of the county court; that thereupon the landowners carried the case by appeal to the supreme court of the state, stipulating that one appeal should be decisive of all the assessments; that the commissioners themselves employed counsel in the argument of the case in the supreme court of the state, and said court decided adversely to the right to collect said assessments; and that such decision of the highest court of the state was decisive of any question of right on their part to enforce assessments. The case referred to by the commissioners in their answer was the above case of Webster v. People. The commissioners also averred that 'as such commissioners they are not now, and never have been, in any actual possession of any part of said levee or other work, except for the purpose of constructing, maintaining, and repairing the same; that they have never had title to any portion of the said levee, as they are likewise advised and believe on account of the unconstitutionality of the law under which said work was done; and that since said law was declared unconstitutional these respondents, as commissioners, have only exercised authority over said levee in warning parties against injuring said levee, but this was in their private capacity, at the request of a portion of the landowners, who supplied them with funds for that purpose, in whose behalf they have, in like private capacity, tried to keep said levee in repair.'

"On the 13th day of March, 1879, that cause was heard upon bill and answer in the circuit court of the United States. By that court it was adjudged and decreed 'that the said defendants [the commissioners] take, retain, and hold the right of way, levee, and other works and property in question, and described in the pleadings, and keep, take [471] care of, preserve, *and protect the same, under the order and control of this court, for the benefit and on behalf of the complainant and all other parties interested therein, or who may hereafter be found to be interested in the same, in whole or in part.'

"It was further decreed 'that the complainants and all other persons who may have loaned or advanced money to the defendants for the acquisition by those of the said right of way, or for the construction of the said levee and other works and property connected therewith, or who may be the holder of any of the bonds issued by said defendants to raise money for the purposes aforesaid, or to pay for such right of way or the construction of such levee and other works, or to pay any of the proper expenses connected therewith, who may come into this suit, contributing their proper proportion to the expenses thereof, have liberty to go before the master and produce these said bonds and coupons for interest thereon, and make proof of the amount due them of principal and interest on account of such loans, advances, and bonds; and the cause is referred to John A. Jones, master in chancery, for the purposes aforesaid, who will, upon the application of the complainants, or other persons who may come into the cause as complainants upon the terms hereinbefore prescribed, and reasonable notice to the defendants or their solicitors, proceed to take the proofs of the amounts due to the complainants, and allow parties who may have before that time come into the cause, and, after such proofs are taken, make a report to the court of the amounts found by him to be due each and any party who may appear before him, and the grounds and facts of his several findings and conclusion;' and that after the coming in of the master's report of the amount or amounts found by him to be due to the complainant or other persons who may come into the cause as aforesaid, and the approval of said report, and the determination and adjustment by the court of the amount or amounts due to the complainant or other persons who may come into the cause for moneys advanced or loaned on bonds held as aforesaid, the said complainants or other persons have the liberty to exhibit and file their supplemental bill or bills against any or all the present or [472] former *owners of the said lands alleged in said bill to be benefited by the said levee and other works, or who have heretofore or who may now be in any way interested in the said levee and other works, or the lands benefited thereby, to compel them to contribute to the payment of the amount or amounts which may be found due to the said complainant or other persons as aforesaid, and for such other and further relief as they may be advised they are entitled to; and the court reserves all other questions of relief to the parties, and of the costs, to be considered hereafter. And the said complainant is at liberty to use the names of the defendants in any such proceeding by way of supplemental bill, if they are advised it is necessary to do so, upon rendering them a sufficient indemnity against all costs and expenses.'

"The master to whom the cause was referred to ascertain the amount of the several bonds and coupons made his report, showing the names of various persons, and the amount of bonds held by them, respectively. The amount reported as due to Francis Palms on the bonds held by him was $221,228.26. The total amount found due to him and certain parties who became coplaintiffs with him in the cause was $304,908.26. In the decree confirming the master's report it was declared: 'And it is further ordered, adjudged, and decreed by the court that the said several sums of money so found to be due to the said complainants as aforesaid are a lien upon the assessments made under the order of the county court of Pike county, in the state of Illinois, upon the lands described in the bound book, Exhibit A with complainant's bill, and upon the said lands, as provided in the 27th and 37th sections of an act of the general assembly of the state of Illinois entitled "An Act to Provide for the Construction and Protection of Drains, Ditches, Levees, and Other Works," approved April 24, 1871. And it further appearing to the court that the defendants, commissioners under the several orders of the county court of Pike county, aforesaid, have no money in their hands for the payment of the amounts so found and adjudged to be due to the said several complainants, and it also appearing to the court from the allegations of the complainant's bill, and not denied by the said *defendants in their [473] answer thereto, that they have taken no steps for the collection of the assessments made upon said lands for the repayment of the moneys borrowed by them, and the bonds and coupons issued by them, it was ordered by the court that the complainants have the right and liberty to proceed in this court, in the name of the said defendants as complainants as such commissioners, or in their own names as complainants, against the lands described in the said Exhibit A, and the owners thereof, or such of such lands and the owners thereof, or other persons, and said commissioners, as they may be advised, are liable for or bound to pay the sums found to be due to the complainants as aforesaid, jointly or severally, by a bill or bills, original, supplemental, or otherwise, as they may be advised, for the recovery of the amounts found due them as aforesaid, and also for the costs of this suit.'

"It should be here stated that after the decision in Webster v. People, and after the institution by Palms of the suit in the circuit court of the United States, the following amendment to the Constitution of Illinois was adopted: 'The general assembly of Illinois may pass laws permitting the owners of lands to construct drains, ditches, and levees for agricultural, sanitary, or mining purposes across the lands of others, and provide for the organization of drainage districts, and vest the corporate authority thereof with power to construct and maintain levees, drains, and ditches, and to keep in repair all drains, ditches, and levees heretofore constructed under the laws of this state by a special assessment upon the property benefited thereby.' 1 Starr & C. Anno. Stat. (Ill.) p. 122.

"Subsequently the legislature of Illinois passed an act which took effect May 29, 1879, entitled 'An Act to Provide for the Construction, Reparation, and Protection of Drains, Ditches, and Levees Across the Lands of Others for Agricultural, Sanitary, and Mining Purposes, and to Provide for the Organization of Drainage Districts.' 1 Starr & C. Anno. Stat. (Ill.) p. 919.

[174 "Some of the defendants in the present case made efforts to secure the passage of the act last referred to. That act provided for the formation of drainage districts with authority not only to construct drains, ditches and levees for agricultural, "sanitary, and mining purposes, but also to maintain and keep in repair any such drains, ditches or levees 'heretofore constructed under any law of this state;' and, in cases where a levee had been theretofore built 'under any law of this state,' the annual assessment for keeping the same in repair was made due and payable on the 1st of September annually.

"Subsequently, on the 26th of January, 1880, some of the landowners whose lands were described and included in the original assessments and in the original bill filed by Palms instituted proceedings under the act of 1879. In their petition they described the route and terminus of the levee, alleging that the levee 'was constructed, under the laws of Illinois then in force, in the counties of Adams, Pike, and Calhoun, for the years 1872, 1873, and 1874.' They further alleged that, by proper repair and maintenance of the levee, the lands aforesaid (which are alleged to be part of the lands described in the original bill and in the present bill, amounting in the aggregate to about 90,000 acres) would be reclaimed and brought into cultivation; that, in addition, it would greatly improve the sanitary condition of the locality through which the levee passed; and that it was absolutely necessary for the health and proper drainage and protection of the said land that the levee be repaired as speedily as possible. They prayed that a drainage district, to be known as 'Sny Island Levee Drainage District,' be formed out of the lands subject to periodical overflow by the Mississippi river in the townships named, for the repair and maintenance of such levee, according to the statute; that commissioners be appointed under the act of 1879, with directions to do all acts provided in the law for repairing levees, ditches, and drains, through assessments to be ordered; and for other and further relief.

"Such proceedings were had that the county court of Pike county duly created the Sny Island Drainage District, and in 1880 it received the surrender of the levee from the original Sny Levee commissioners, and now retains possession and control of the same.

"Palms died on the 24th day of November, 1886, more than six years after the last order made in the suit brought by him in the Federal court.

"*The present suit was brought by his ex-[475] eutors; the defendants herein being the surviving commissioners, Wheelock and Jones, and numerous individuals who own lands within the territory described in the proceedings instituted in the county court of Pike county under the act of 1871.

"The bill proceeded upon the general ground that each tract of land in question was chargeable in equity with the amounts assessed against it under the act of 1871, with interest, and that the plaintiffs had a lien on each tract for such sums as had fallen due and might become due under such assessments. It alleged that each defendant owned or claimed one or more tracts (Exhibit A showing a description of the various tracts, and the names of the persons against whom the assessments were made); that each defendant who acquired title to any of the lands after the assessments of 1872 and 1873 did so with full knowledge of such assessments and the above issue of bonds, as well as of the fact that the plaintiffs had purchased the bonds, and that the levee was constructed with the proceeds thereof; that, with like notice and knowledge, each of the defendants had appropriated and used the levee for the protection of their lands, and continued so to do; that all the defendants named in Exhibit A participated in causing said bonds to be issued and sold, and the proceeds expended by actively soliciting the passage of the act of 1871; that before and at the passage of the act of 1871 the reclamation and protection of the lands described in that exhibit had been a subject of consideration and discussion among the owners and occupants of the same, as well as others, and it was understood by all parties interested in such lands that in order to reclaim and protect the same a statute was absolutely necessary, under the provisions of which the persons interested in the lands could be united and organized, and a common agency created, with authority to make all necessary plans, estimates, and contracts for the location of the levee, and to borrow money upon bonds or otherwise, to be secured by assessments or pledges of the lands benefited; that the defendants, through the agency of their codefendant Charles M.

Clark, had procured the passage of that statute, and caused its provisions to be made known to the *people interested, and thereupon devised a plan for the organization of a corporation composed of persons interested in the lands, for the purpose of raising money to put the act into effect; that a large number of the defendants subscribed to the capital of that corporation in order to effect the objects of its creation; that the other defendants purchased lands through such last-named landowners, with full notice of the equities of the plaintiffs; that all of the defendants who purchased after May 4, 1878, did so with full notice of said assessments, and that the same were unpaid, and also that said original suit in the Federal court was pending; that certain other defendants participated in causing the said bonds to be issued and sold to the plaintiffs' testator, and the proceeds thereof to be expended in the construction of the levee, and in causing the said assessments to be made by signing the original petition to the Pike county court in the year 1872; that certain other defendants purchased lands from other landowners who had joined in the petition, with full knowledge of what had previously taken place; that other defendants participated in procuring the bonds to be sold, and the proceeds to be expended as stated, and in causing said assessments, by signing on the 20th day of November, 1874, a petition for a second assessment under the act of 1871; and that other defendants purchased from or through persons of the class last mentioned, with full knowledge of all the facts.

"The plaintiffs also alleged that certain named defendants, after the above decision by the supreme court of Illinois, knowing the levee to be constructed with the plaintiffs' money, and having full notice of all the facts, executed to Jones, Wheelock, and Westlake deeds of trust; that said deeds were made for the purpose of defeating the claims of the plaintiffs, and it was stipulated between the trustees and the last-named defendants that no part of the funds collected by the former should ever be applied to the payment of any indebtedness created by or on account of the original levee; that said deeds of trust continued in force until 1887, when the same were canceled, said Jones, Wheelock, and Westlake having, it is alleged, devised another scheme for defeating the claim of *the plaintiffs; and that certain other defendants purchased from defendants of the class last mentioned, with full notice of all the facts.

"It was further alleged that after the decree of March 13, 1879, namely, on January 26, 1880, certain defendants named filed a petition in the county court of Pike county setting forth that they owned certain lands, and alleging that a certain levee (the one heretofore described) had been constructed under the laws of the state of Illinois; that said petition set forth the purposes for which the levee had been constructed; that the same was in bad repair; that, in the faith that the same would be properly constructed and repaired, they had expended large sums of money, had improved farms, and that all such improvements would be washed away, unless the levee should be repaired and kept up; and that the lands subject to overflow amounted to an aggregate of 90,000 acres. The bill set forth the substance of the petition, and the various steps taken, as already stated, for the formation of a new drainage district, to be known as the 'Sny Island Levee Drainage District,' and alleged that all the defendants so joining had full notice of all the facts and of the making of the assessments aforesaid; that certain other defendants purchased lands from the defendants of the class last mentioned, with notice of all the facts; that certain other named defendants, pursuant to the statute of Illinois approved May 29, 1879, were severally made parties to, and had notice of, all the proceedings for the organization of the Sny Island Levee Drainage District, as well as of the contents of the petition therefor, and were bound by such proceedings and the appropriation of the levee aforesaid; that certain other named defendants acquired title to said lands, or interests therein, after July 26, 1880, and were bound by said proceedings and the appropriation of said levee; that certain other defendants named were heirs at law and took title to portions of said lands from ancestors who took part in some or all of the aforesaid proceedings; that certain other defendants had acquired title to some of said lands by accepting deeds of conveyance expressly recognizing the lien of plaintiffs on said tracts; and that every one of the present defendants had full *notice [478] of the claims of plaintiffs and of the facts aforesaid; and that all of the defendants now appropriated said levee and other works and refuse to contribute anything to the payment of the plaintiffs.

"The bill alleged that the Sny Island Levee Drainage District had every year made large assessments, and, contriving and intending to defeat the plaintiffs, had caused many of the tracts of land to be sold for nonpayment of such assessments (such sales, it was alleged, being merely colorable, as against the rights of the plaintiffs, and mere clouds on the title to said land); that before the construction of said levee the lands were wet, and not worth exceeding 50 cents per acre; that the average amount assessed against the lands for the cost of the levee was greatly in excess of the then value of the lands, but it was expected that the work would, when constructed, drain every tract, and so enhance the value of the same as to make the lands ample security for the money borrowed; that the plaintiffs, relying on this and on the assurances of the landowners and commissioners, purchased the bonds in question; and that the lands were enhanced in value by said expenditures until they became worth $25 per acre.

"It was also alleged that, if the levee had been kept up, it would have afforded full protection, and would have caused the lands to have continued to be good security; that defendants had spent some money in repairing said work, but made such improvements and repairs so unskilfully that they were insufficient; and that by neglect of the defendants the lands had again become wet and overflowed, and were not now good security for the plaintiffs.

"After stating that the defendants were, by reason of the matters and things set forth in the bill, bound to preserve, protect, improve, and repair the said levee and other works described, by sufficient contribution in money, ratably or otherwise, and by further assessments upon the lands, in order to protect and keep the security of the plaintiffs adequate and sufficient, the plaintiffs prayed that by the appointment of a receiver with ample powers, and by other appropriate order, the defendants should be compelled to preserve, protect, repair, improve, *and make said levee and other works protective of said lands, 'or to give and confer upon such receiver the power to make needful assessments upon said lands in proportion to benefits and the relative value of each tract thereof, and with the money arising therefrom, or by the mortgage of such assessments and the lands upon which they are made, raise the money necessary for the repair and improvement of the said levee and other works, and with the money so raised proceed to repair and improve said levee until it is made adequate for the drainage and protection of all of the said lands; that each and every of said defendants herein may be enjoined by this honorable court from selling, transferring, or assigning, the title to said lands owned by them, or any part thereof, upon which any of said assessments may rest, except subject to the lien of said assessments, as the same shall be determined by this honorable court, or in any manner whatsoever changing, altering, or affecting the title thereto so as to in anywise impair, diminish, hinder, or prejudice the lien of said assessments thereon, or on any portion thereof, and that the Sny Island Levee Drainage District, its officers and agents, be enjoined from selling or offering for sale any lands covered by any of the assessments herein in question, for any pretended assessments or alleged liens by said district attempted to be assessed, except subject to the lien of all assessments and liability on said lands, respectively, as the same shall be determined by this honorable court.'

"It was further asked in the bill that the court order, determine, and declare the amounts due to the plaintiffs and all other holders of bonds and coupons who would come in and contribute to the expenses of this suit, 'and the amount due for principal and interest on the several assessments made against and upon each tract of land described in the pleadings and exhibits, and the proportion of the amount of such assessments upon each tract of land necessary to the payment of the amount of the principal and interest now due upon the bonds and coupons of your orators and others who may come into the cause and contribute as before mentioned, and that each of the said tracts of land be sold under the order and decree of this court for the amount chargeable upon and against the same, unless the *owner of the same, or some other person for [480] him, shall, within a day limited, pay said amount, with a just proportion of the costs of this suit;' and also that the court would 'appoint one or more commissioners or receivers in the place and stead of the said John G. Wheelock and George W. Jones, or appoint a commissioner in the place of the said Benjamin F. Westlake, deceased; and, if one or more commissioners or a receiver or receivers are appointed in the place and stead of the said John G. Wheelock and George W. Jones, the said Wheelock and Jones may be ordered and directed to turn over and deliver to such commissioners or receivers so appointed all books, papers, documents, and property now in their possession or under their control.'

184 U. S.

"The defendants demurred to the bill, and the demurrers were overruled. They subsequently filed answers, which put the plaintiffs upon proof of many essential allegations of their bill, without proof of which independently of the question of law arising upon the face of the bill, no part of the relief asked could have been granted. In the view which is taken of the case by this court it is unnecessary to extend this opinion by setting forth the averments and denials of the several answers.

"Upon final hearing the circuit court dismissed the bill."

Mr. Henry M. Duffield argued the cause and filed a brief for petitioners:

The Federal courts can enforce liens created by state laws, and have repeatedly done so.

Fitch v. Creighton, 24 How. 159, 16 L. ed. 596; Idaho & O. Land Improv. Co. v. Bradbury, 132 U. S. 509, 33 L. ed. 433, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177; Jones v. Great Southern Fireproof Hotel Co. 30 C. C. A. 108, 58 U. S. App. 397, 86 Fed. 370; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; New Orleans v. Warner, 175 U. S. 120, 44 L. ed. 96, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44.

The legislative power of the general assembly of Illinois "extends to everything within the sphere of that power, except as it is restricted by the Federal Constitution, or that of the state."

Pine Grove Twp. v. Talcott, 19 Wall. 666, 22 L. ed. 227.

Ill. Const. art. 9, § 9, is not such a limitation.

People ex rel. McCagg v. Chicago, 51 Ill. 30, 2 Am. Rep. 278.

The validity of statutes of this character, and the power of the legislature to provide for the payment of the cost of the common benefit by special assessments, are treated as settled law.

6 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 12, 14; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Cooley, Taxn. pp. 101, 402, 403; Cooley, Const. Lim.

636, 637; Tide-Water Co. v. Coster, 18 N. J. Eq. 518, 90 Am. Dec. 634; Reeves v. Wood County, 3 Ohio St. 333; Ross v. Davis, 97 Ind. 79; Sessions v. Crunkilton, 20 Ohio St. 349; Meranda v. Spurlin, 100 Ind. 380.

An express grant of power to do a certain thing without any words of limitation or restriction carries with it all necessary and proper means to make the power effectual, and the body to whom such power is given is in such case the sole judge of the means to be employed to give it practical effect,—especially where that body, except so far as limited and restricted, has plenary power.

Huston v. Clark, 112 Ill. 344.

An equitable estoppel arises when one person has induced another to act upon the supposition that a state of facts exists which does not exist in fact, or has pursued a course of conduct in respect to his own property or rights which has led another into expenditures which are to be lost if the party so misleading is afterwards allowed to assert rights inconsistent with such course of conduct.

Morrill v. Mackman, 24 Mich. 279, 9 Am. Rep. 124; Dickerson v. Colgrove, 100 U. S. 578, 25 L. ed. 618; Dann v. Cudney, 13 Mich. 239, 87 Am. Dec. 755; Truesdail v. Ward, 24 Mich. 117; Heyn v. O'Hagen, 60 Mich. 150, 26 N. W. 861.

This general principle of estoppel has been frequently applied in cases of invalid acts of the legislature, similar to the one at bar.

Blake v. People use of Caldwell, 109 Ill. 504; Daniels v. Tearney, 102 U. S. 415, 26 L. ed. 187; Ferguson v. Landram, 1 Bush, 548, 5 Bush, 230, 96 Am. Dec. 350; Moran v. Miami County, 2 Black, 722, 17 L. ed. 342; Burlington v. Gilbert, 31 Iowa, 356, 7 Am. Rep. 143; People ex rel. Bodine v. Goodwin, 5 N. Y. 573; Kellogg v. Ely, 15 Ohio St. 66; People v. Murray, 5 Hill, 468; Van Hook v. Whitlock, 26 Wend. 43, 37 Am. Dec. 246; Mots v. Detroit, 18 Mich. 495; Jackson v. Detroit, 10 Mich. 248; Wiggin v. New York, 9 Paige, 16; Chapman v. Mad River & L. E. R. Co. 6 Ohio St. 119; Re Cooper, 93 N. Y. 507; Bidwell v. Pittsburgh, 85 Pa. 412, 27 Am. Rep. 662; Dewhurst v. Allegheny, 95 Pa. 437; Ricketts v. Spraker, 77 Ind. 371; Taber v. Ferguson, 109 Ind. 227, 9 N. E. 723; State ex rel. Columbus v. Mitchell, 31 Ohio St. 592; Columbus v. Sohl, 44 Ohio St. 479, 8 N. E. 299; Columbus v. Slyh, 44 Ohio St. 484, 8 N. E. 302; Muncey v. Joest, 74 Ind. 409; Nevins & O. C. Twp. Draining Co. v. Alkire, 36 Ind. 189; Flora v. Cline, 89 Ind. 208; State ex rel. Garrett v. Van Horne, 7 Ohio St. 327.

These decisions are not confined in their reasoning to the rule that equity will not relieve a complainant whose conduct has estopped him to ask relief in a court of equity, for in a number of cases the estoppel was enforced against defendants, in actions to recover assessments from them.

Dewhurst v. Allegheny, 95 Pa. 437; Taber v. Ferguson, 109 Ind. 227, 9 N. E. 723; State ex rel. Columbus v. Mitchell, 31 Ohio St. 592; Columbus v. Sohl, 44 Ohio St. 479, 8 N. E. 299; Columbus v. Slyh, 44 Ohio St.

484, 8 N. E. 302; Muncey v. Joest, 74 Ind. 409; Nevins & O. C. Twp. Draining Co. v. Alkire, 36 Ind. 189; Flora v. Cline, 89 Ind. 208; Daniels v. Tearney, 102 U. S. 415, 26 L. ed. 187; People v. Murray, 5 Hill, 468.

The object of the bill is to enforce specific assessments on specific lands for specific benefits. Assessments are not taxes.

Ottawa v. Free Church, 20 Ill. 423; McBride v. Chicago, 22 Ill. 574; Peoria v. Kidder, 26 Ill. 351; Illinois & M. Canal v. Chicago, 12 Ill. 405; Re New York, 11 Johns. 77; Bleecker v. Ballou, 3 Wend. 263; Northern Liberties v. St. John's Church, 13 Pa. 104; Reeves v. Wood County, 3 Ohio St. 333.

The remedy is in equity.

Fitch v. Creighton, 24 How. 159, 16 L. ed. 596; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663.

There is no analogy between the assessments in question and ordinary taxes.

Lowell v. Boston, 111 Mass. 454, 15 Am. Rep. 39.

Liens for ordinary taxes for municipal purposes and assessments for municipal local improvements are not given for the benefit of the creditors of the municipality, but are created for the benefit of the public authorities to enable them with greater certainty and facility to collect the tax without the embarrassment of other claims against the property taxed.

Barkley v. Levee Comrs. 93 U. S. 258, 23 L. ed. 893.

In cases at law, where the equities were not so strong as in this case, this court has implied an equitable assumpsit on the part of municipalities to repay the moneys which they had raised by unauthorized bonds and expended for the benefit, and upon the property, of the municipalities.

Louisiana v. Wood, 102 U. S. 294, 26 L. ed. 153; Read v. Plattsburgh, 107 U. S. 568, 27 L. ed. 414, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208.

Mr. Thomas Worthington argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Benjamin Harrison, Asa C. Matthews, Harry Higbee, and J. Otis Humphrey, filed a brief for respondents:

In cases affecting real estate, and involving the construction of the statutes and Constitution of a state, the courts of the United States will follow the decisions of the highest court of the state.

Elmwood Twp. v. Marcy, 92 U. S. 289, 23 L. ed. 710; Fairfield v. Gallatin County, 100 U. S. 47, 25 L. ed. 544; Post v. Kendall County, 105 U. S. 667, 26 L. ed. 1204.

Ill. Const. 1870, art. 9, § 9, authorizing the general assembly to vest the corporate authority of cities, towns, and villages with the power to make local improvements by special assessment, or by special taxation of contiguous property, or otherwise, is a limitation of the power of the legislature, and the general assembly can only vest such power to make local improvements by special assessments or special taxation upon the municipalities therein named, and has no power to confer such authority upon any other bodies.

Udike v. Wright, 81 Ill. 49.

A somewhat similar provision in the Constitution of 1848, art. 9, § 5, has been similarly construed.

Harward v. St. Clair & M. Levee & Drainage Co. 51 Ill. 130; Hessler v. Drainage Comrs. 53 Ill. 105; Lovington v. Wider, 53 Ill. 302; Wider v. East St. Louis, 55 Ill. 133; Decker v. Hughes, 68 Ill. 44; People ex rel. McCagg v. Chicago, 51 Ill. 17, 2 Am. Rep. 278; People ex rel. Wilson v. Salomon, 51 Ill. 37; East St. Louis v. Witts, 59 Ill. 156; School Trustees v. People ex rel. Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. 63 Ill. 299; People v. McAdams, 82 Ill. 356; Madison County Ct. v. People ex rel. Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. 58 Ill. 456; Elmwood Twp. v. Marey, 92 U. S. 289, 23 L. ed. 710; Livingston County v. Darlington, 101 U. S. 407, 25 L. ed. 1015; Harter Twp. v. Kernochan, 103 U. S. 562, 26 L. ed. 411; Wrightman v. Clark, 103 U. S. 256, 26 L. ed. 392.

A court of equity has no power to assume the functions of a tax collector.

Walkley v. Muscatine, 6 Wall. 481, 18 L. ed. 930; Lee County v. Rogers, 7 Wall. 175, sub nom. Lee County v. United States ex rel. Rogers, 19 L. ed. 162; Thompson v. Allen County, 115 U. S. 550, 29 L. ed. 472, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140.

While the Federal courts will, in proper cases, compel the collection of taxes and assessments, by officers who are invested with the necessary power, and whose duty it is to exercise such power, yet such courts will not, and absolutely cannot, supply authority to persons not so empowered.

Rees v. Watertown, 19 Wall. 107, 22 L. ed. 72; Heine v. Levee Comrs. 1 Woods, 246, Fed. Cas. No. 6,325; State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 23 L. ed. 663; Barkley v. Levee Comrs. 93 U. S. 265, 23 L. ed. 896.

Complainants cannot ask to be placed in any better position than they would occupy if there were no question whatever as to the constitutionality of the act of 1871. Granting, then, that such law is valid in all respects except as to the collection of the assessments, still the court will not, and cannot, give the relief prayed.

Barkley v. Levee Comrs. 93 U. S. 264, 23 L. ed. 896.

Where a lien is given by statute, and a legal mode provided for collecting the money payable thereunder, such mode must be pursued, and equity has no jurisdiction.

People v. Biggins, 96 Ill. 481.

Notice by lis pendens can only be kept alive by the diligent prosecution of the cause.

Herrington v. McCollum, 73 Ill. 483; Durand v. Lord, 115 Ill. 621, 4 N. E. 483.

It is not sufficient to convey notice by lis pendens to file a bill in court against persons who do not own the title to the property to be affected.

Norris v. Ile, 152 Ill. 202, 38 N. E. 762; Bennett, Lis Pendens, p. 153; Allison v. Drake, 145 Ill. 500, 32 N. E. 537.

The rule lis pendens only binds claimants 184 U. S.

to the property who are impleaded, and their pendente lite purchasers. If they are not impleaded, they are at liberty to dispose of the res, and the purchaser will take it unaffected by the suit, although it may be pending against parties other than the real owners.

13 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 882b, note 2, p. 902, note 4; Games v. Stiles ex rel. Dunn, 14 Pet. 322, 10 L. ed. 476; Miller v. Sherry, 2 Wall. 237, 17 L. ed. 827; Grant v. Bennett, 96 Ill. 513; Hallorn v. Trum, 125 Ill. 247, 17 N. E. 823; Franklin Sav. Bank v. Taylor, 131 Ill. 376, 23 N. E. 397; Story, Eq. Jur. § 406.

Where a bill originally so defective as not to create a lis pendens is subsequently cured by amendment, lis pendens will commence from the time of filing the amendment, where the defendant has been served with process.

Norris v. Ile, 152 Ill. 202, 38 N. E. 762; Miller v. Sherry, 2 Wall. 250, 17 L. ed. 830; Clarkson v. Morgan, 6 B. Mon. 441.

So it is with an amendment that sets up a new equity.

Miller v. Sherry, 2 Wall. 250, 17 L. ed. 830; Clarkson v. Morgan, 6 B. Mon. 441.

In order to create an estoppel, whether by words, or acts, or silence, the party demanding relief must show that he had a right to rely, and actually did rely, on the assurances given by the other party.

Holcomb v. Boynton, 151 Ill. 299, 37 N. E. 1031; Story, Eq. Jur. 1534; Davidson v. Young, 38 Ill. 152; First Nat. Bank v. Rieker, 71 Ill. 439, 22 Am. Rep. 104; Dinet v. Ellert, 13 Ill. App. 99; Herman, Estoppel, 969; South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 267, 24 L. ed. 157.

There can be no estoppel in the way of ascertaining the existence of a law.

South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 267, 24 L. ed. 157.

Where there is a total want of power to issue the bonds originally, under any circumstances, and not a mere failure to comply with prescribed requirements or conditions, the case is not one for applying to the city under any state of facts, any doctrine of estoppel or ratification, by reason of its having paid some instalments of interest on the bonds, or by reason of any of the acts of its officers or agents in dealing with the property covered by the deed of trust.

Parkersburg v. Brown, 106 U. S. 487, 27 L. ed. 238, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 442; Marsh v. Fulton County, 10 Wall. 676, 19 L. ed. 1040; Citizens' Sav. & L. Asso. v. Topcka, 20 Wall. 655, 22 L. ed. 455.

That which is not a law can give no validity to bonds purporting to be issued under it, even in the hands of those who take them for value, and in the belief that they have been lawfully issued.

Post v. Kendall County, 105 U. S. 667, 26 L. ed. 1204.

An unconstitutional act is not a law. It confers no rights; it imposes no duties; it affords no protection; it creates no office; it is in legal contemplation as inoperative as if it had never been passed.

Norton v. Shelby County, 118 U. S. 425, 30 L. ed. 178, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1121.

The mere institution of a suit does not in itself relieve a person from the charge of laches, and if he fails in the diligent prosecution of the action the consequences are the same as though no action had been begun.

Johnston v. Standard Min. Co. 148 U. S. 360, 37 L. ed. 480, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585.

When adverse possession was continued for seven years, either under tax deed or any other deed, regular on its face, accompanied by the payment of taxes, the bar of the statute is complete. It has been frequently decided that a tax deed is sufficient "color of title" in this state, if regular on its face.

Stubblefield v. Borders, 92 Ill. 279; Thomas v. Eckard, 88 Ill. 593.

If the present bill is to be treated as a bill of review, as it states on its face, then it could be brought only within the time allowed for the bringing of a writ of error, to wit, five years.

Bell v. Johnson, 111 Ill. 374; Allison v. Drake, 145 Ill. 511, 32 N. E. 537.

A court of chancery follows the law in applying the statute of limitations.

Walker v. Ray, 111 Ill. 319.

But equity goes further than the law, and refuses relief on the ground of laches in many cases where there would be no bar to an action at law, usually founded upon some change in the conditions or relations of the parties or the subject-matter of the suit.

Walker v. Ray, 111 Ill. 322.

Laches is not like limitations, a mere matter of time, but principally a question of the inequity of permitting the claim to be enforced,—an inequity founded upon some change of the conditions of the property or the parties.

Gallagher v. Cadwell, 145 U. S. 368, 36 L. ed. 738, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 873; Penn Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Austin, 168 U. S. 696, 42 L. ed. 626, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 223; Johnson v. Atlantic, G. & W. I. Transit Co. 156 U. S. 618, 39 L. ed. 556, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 520; Twin-Lick Oil Co. v. Marbury, 91 U. S. 587, 23 L. ed. 328; Williams v. Rhodes, 81 Ill. 571; Walker v. Warner, 179 Ill. 16, 53 N. E. 594.

Where the question of laches is an issue, the plaintiff is charged with such knowledge as he might have obtained upon inquiry, provided the facts known by him were such as to put upon a man of ordinary intelligence the duty of inquiry.

Johnston v. Standard Min. Co. 148 U. S. 370, 37 L. ed. 480, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585.

The bonds being unconstitutional, the right of action accrued for the original consideration when the money was parted with, and the suit was barred by the five years' statute of limitations.

Etna L. Ins. Co. v. Middleport, 31 Fed. 374.

Mr. W. H. H. Miller also argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Asa C. Matthews,

Thomas Worthington, and Harry Higbee, filed an additional brief for appellees:

These assessments, even if valid, are not collectible in the United States courts, but, being liens purely statutory, must be taken on the terms prescribed by the statute, and can be collected only by the statutory method.

People v. Biggins, 96 Ill. 481; Cooley, Taxn. 2d ed. pp. 449, 450.

A lien for taxes cannot be collected by suit in a court of chancery.

People v. Biggins, 96 Ill. 481.

Law cannot be made by estoppel.

Norton v. Shelby County, 118 U. S. 425, 30 L. ed. 178, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1121; South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 267, 24 L. ed. 157; Wilkes County v. Coler, 180 U. S. 506, 45 L. ed. 642, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458; Holcomb v. Boynton, 151 Ill. 299, 37 N. E. 1031.

Complainants, having attempted to obtain a lien by statute, cannot now rely on a contract or equitable lien.

Vane v. Newcombe, 132 U. S. 220, 33 L. ed. 310, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 60.

Where two parties are in pari delicto, as where a corporation has made a contract ultra vires, merely, there being no moral wrong, the courts will not help either party to assert any right under the contract, and either party may raise the question.

Holman v. Johnson, 1 Cowp. 341; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Central Transp. Co. 171 U. S. 150, 43 L. ed. 108, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808; St. Louis, V. & T. H. R. Co. v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co. 145 U. S. 393, 36 L. ed. 738, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 953.

There can be no estoppel as to any property owners because benefit is only indirect and common to all.

Cincinnati, S. & C. R. Co. v. Bensley, 19 L. R. A. 796, 2 C. C. A. 480, 6 U. S. App. 115, 51 Fed. 738; Memphis, K. & C. R. Co. v. Thompson, 24 Kan. 170; Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Johnson City, 49 L. R. A. 123, 40 C. C. A. 58, 99 Fed. 663; Hedges v. Dixon County, 150 U. S. 182, 37 L. ed. 1044, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71; Louisiana v. Wood, 102 U. S. 294, 26 L. ed. 153; Read v. Platts-mouth, 107 U. S. 568, 27 L. ed. 414, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Galesburg, 133 U. S. 156, 33 L. ed. 573, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 316.

The right of action to enforce repayment of money invested in the bonds issued under the act of 1871 was immediate, either upon the original advancement of the money, or, at any rate, upon the adjudication that the statute and the bonds were void.

Merrill v. Monticello, 18 C. C. A. 636, 34 U. S. App. 615, 72 Fed. 462; Logan County Nat. Bank v. Townsend, 139 U. S. 67, 35 L. ed. 107, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496; Parkersburg v. Brown, 106 U. S. 487, 27 L. ed. 238, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 442; Louisiana v. Wood, 102 U. S. 294, 26 L. ed. 153.

If it were an action at law, there would be no question that it was squarely within the terms of § 15 of the act of April, 1872 (2 Starr & C. Anno. Stat. p. 2624). It is none the less so because it is a proceeding in equity to reach the same end.

Junker v. Rush, 136 Ill. 179, 11 L. R. A. 183, 26 N. E. 499.

So it is adjudged, in Illinois, that money advanced upon a forged note and mortgage can only be recovered back by a suit within five years from the time the same is advanced.

Lunt v. Wrenn, 113 Ill. 168; Wilson v. Williams, 42 Ill. App. 612.

And it has been expressly adjudged, and is the settled law of Illinois, that courts of equity do not merely follow the analogy of the statute of limitations, but that they are bound thereby the same as the courts of law.

Bonney v. Stoughton, 122 Ill. 536, 13 N. E. 833; Story, Eq. Jur. § 529.

Such being the law of Illinois, it is also the law for the Federal courts.

Amy v. Dubuque, 98 U. S. 470, 25 L. ed. 229; Ewell v. Daggs, 108 U. S. 143, 27 L. ed. 682, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 408.

The lien is a mere incident to the debt or charge.

Carpenter v. Longan, 16 Wall. 271, 21 L. ed. 313; Chicago R. Equipment Co. v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 136 U. S. 268, 34 L. ed. 349, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 999.

And a tax is a debt in such a sense as to be barred by the statute of limitations.

Bristol v. Washington County, 177 U. S. 133, 44 L. ed. 701, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585.

This court has held that where a bank pays money upon a forged check, with a forged indorsement, both parties supposing the signatures to be genuine, the right of action to recover back the money accrues at the date of the payment, and the statute of limitations begins to run from that date.

Leather Mfrs. Bank v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 128 U. S. 26, 32 L. ed. 342, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3.

Messrs. A. G. Crawford and Jefferson Orr also filed a brief for appellees.

480] *Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

The circuit court held in substance, among other things, that the decretal order of that court on the bill first filed adjudging the amounts reported by the master to be due the several complainants and giving them liberty to file a supplemental bill against the owners of the lands benefited to compel them to contribute to the payment of the amounts thus reported, was not an adjudication which precluded the land-
481] owners from denying*their liability; that as it was thirteen years after the act was declared to be unconstitutional and nine years after leave was given to file the supplemental bill, before any step was taken except as against those who were originally commissioners, there had been such laches as precluded complainants from having the relief sought, the conditions of the property and the relations of the parties having in the meantime greatly changed. The circuit court of appeals held that even when exercising an independent judgment a Federal court should give effect to rules of construction previously established by the highest court of a state, and not act upon a different view unless compelled to do so to prevent an absolute denial of justice; that, applying the settled rule of construction of the state to the state Constitution relating to the subject, the act of April 24, 1871, was unconstitutional, and assessments made thereunder were not enforceable; that the fact alone that landowners advocated and used their influence to secure the passage of a law under which bonds were issued, to be paid by special assessments against their lands, which law was subsequently declared unconstitutional, and the assessments void, did not afford ground on which a court of equity should declare a lien on such lands in favor of the bondholders, in the absence of fraud, and where both the landowners and the purchasers of the bonds acted in the mistaken belief that the bonds were valid; and that where bonds issued by commissioners in payment for the construction of a levee to protect lands from overflow, were void, a court of equity had no power to determine that certain lands received the benefit of the expenditure, and on that ground to declare a lien thereon in favor of the bondholders. The decree of the circuit court was not affirmed on the ground of laches, but the circuit court of appeals nevertheless said: "The plaintiffs can take nothing, as against the individual landowners, defendants in this cause, by reason of any order made in the suit instituted by Palms in the circuit court of the United States against the commissioners designated under the act of 1871; for the present defendant landowners were not parties to that suit, and could not be concluded by any order made in it. It is evident from the orders entered in that case that Judge *Drum- [482]mond did not intend to pass upon the rights of the landowners, but was of opinion that if Palms had any ground of action against them, in respect of the lands attempted to be specially assessed under the act of 1871, he must bring them before the court by supplemental bill. He was given leave to file such a bill by an order entered in 1879. But he died in 1886 without availing himself of the privilege so given, although a large amount of interest was unpaid, and although nearly $100,000 of the bonds of the first issue had fallen due. The present bill was not filed until 1889,—about nine years after it could have been filed. If the case depended alone upon the question of laches, there would be strong ground for holding that the plaintiffs and their testator so long delayed the institution of proceedings against the landowners that a court of equity ought to decline giving them any relief. The application of such a principle would be peculiarly appropriate, because it is provided by statute in Illinois that no execution can issue upon a judgment after the expiration of seven years from the time it becomes a lien, except upon the revival of the same by scire facias, and that an action to recover real estate shall be barred by seven years' residence thereon under a title of record, etc.; by seven years' adverse possession under color of title and payment of taxes; or, as to unoccupied land, by seven years' payment of taxes under color of title. 2 Starr & C. Anno. Stat. (Ill.) p. 1386, chap. 77, § 6; Id. pp. 1538, 1539, 1547, chap. 83, §§ 4, 6, 7. In this case most of the defendants made proof of adverse possession. Besides, as said in Johnston v. Standard Min. Co. 148 U. S. 360, 370, 37 L. ed. 480, 485, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 589, 'the mere institution of a suit does not of itself relieve a person from the charge of laches,' and 'if he fail in the diligent prosecution of the action, the consequences are the same as though no action had been begun.'
184 U. S.

The bill is stated by counsel to be a bill to "enforce severally against the lands of certain defendants the lien of separate assessments for the construction of the levee, with the proceeds of which the levee was built, upon the grounds, (1) that such assessments were levied in strict conformity with the terms of the statute of 1871, which was a valid law; and (2) that even if that statute was unconstitutional, many of the [483] defendants *owning such lands are estopped to deny the constitutionality of said act and attack the assessments on that ground. It is not a bill to compel contributions to, or collect proportionate amounts of, a gross sum, but is a bill in the nature of a foreclosure bill to enforce, on the several and separate parcels of land, the liens of several and specific assessments upon the faith of which the moneys which built the levees were advanced."

It is insisted that it is not a bill to collect a tax, or a bill "to hold any municipal corporation or any individual liable, directly or indirectly, at law or in equity."

The bill purports to be an original bill in the nature of a supplemental bill, supplemental to the bill originally filed by Palms, either by way of enforcing the decretal order entered on that bill, treated as a final decree, or, treating that order as interlocutory merely, of obtaining a decree on the whole case as against new parties. Which view is taken is perhaps not material, for "where a party returns to a court of chancery to obtain its aid in executing a former decree, it is at the risk of opening up such decree as respects the relief to be granted on the new bill." Lawrence Mfg. Co. v. Jancsville Cotton Mills, 138 U. S. 561, 34 L. ed. 1008, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 405. And, moreover, the bill is an original bill as to the landowners.

Palms filed that bill, on behalf of himself and others similarly situated, May 4, 1878, against Wheelock, Jones, and Westlake, as commissioners appointed under the act of April 24, 1871, praying that the moneys "loaned and advanced" by complainant to those commissioners be ascertained, and a decree entered that complainant was entitled to a lien on the levee, and other works and lands, acquired by the commissioners, and the assessments for benefits to said lands, which had been made; and further that the commissioners be decreed to proceed at once to collect the assessments, or so much thereof from time to time, as would be sufficient to pay the interest and principal payable to complainant as the same fell due, or that the court appoint a receiver or receivers with authority to collect said assessments.

The commissioners were not impleaded as representing the landowners in the litigation. Their duties were such as the *act of [484] 1871 defined, if that act were valid, and their powers were created and limited thereby, and did not include the power to bind all or any of the landowners of the district in such a suit. The suit was brought to compel the commissioners to discharge the duty, under the act, of enforcing the collection of assessments in the interest of the bondholders, as creditors, and in that sense they occupied an adverse relation to the landowners who were quasi debtors.

The commissioners had filed in the county court of Pike county their assessment roll in 1872, and objections thereto by certain landowners having been decided adversely to them by the county court, and, on appeal, by the circuit court of the county, they took the case to the supreme court of the state, which decided that the act of 1871 was unconstitutional. This judgment was pronounced at January term, 1876. It was after this that, interest being overdue on the bonds held by him, Mr. Palms filed his bill. Some other bondholders became parties complainant, and on March 13, 1879, an order was entered permitting complainants to bring the landowners into court and test the question of their liability, and the cause was referred to a master. July 7, 1880, the report of the master was confirmed and the court adjudged and decreed that there was due to Palms $221,228.66, and to various other complainants some thousands of dollars as specified, the whole aggregate sum found due complainants being $304,908.26, it being added: "The above amounts are found due without prejudice." It was further decreed that the sums of money found due were "a lien upon the assessments made under the order of the county court of Pike county, in the state of Illinois, upon the lands described in the bound book Exhibit A" as provided in the 27th and 37th sections of the act of April 24, 1871. The order proceeded that it appearing that the commissioners had no moneys in their hands for the payment of the amounts so found due, and that they had taken no steps for the collection of the assessments, it was further ordered by the court "that the complainants have the right and liberty to proceed in this court in the name of the said defendants as complainants as such commissioners, or in their own names as *complainants against [485] the lands described in the said Exhibit A and the owners thereof, or such of such lands and the owners thereof, or other persons, and said commissioners as they may be advised are liable for or bound to pay the sums found to be due to the complainants as aforesaid, jointly or severally, by a bill or bills, original, supplemental, or otherwise, as they may be advised, for the recovery of the amounts found due them as aforesaid and also for the costs of this suit." Both these orders show that the circuit judge was of opinion that to subject the lands to the assessments in that suit the landowners must be made parties; and even the amounts found due were in terms so found without prejudice to their rights.

No steps were subsequently taken, and Mr. Palms died November 24, 1886. His executors, on April 22, 1889, filed the present bill against some thousand landowners of the district as well as Wheelock and Jones, two of the alleged levee commissioners, Westlake in the meantime having deceased.

It was an original bill as to these new parties and they were entitled to all the defenses which existed when it was filed, and were unaffected by the principle of lis pendens. The supreme court of Illinois had held in 1876 that the act of April 24, 1871, was in contravention of the Constitution of the state and void. This decision was made after the bonds in question had been issued and purchased by Palms from the contractors, but the judgment was rendered on objections by the landowners to the confirmation of the assessments, the collection of which was relied on for the payment of the principal and interest of the bonds, so that it might well be held to be binding on the Federal courts. But we agree with the circuit court of appeals that even if the circuit court was not obliged to accept that decision, yet that there was so little doubt of its correctness as to require the same conclusion. The rulings of the state supreme court were that the work of constructing a great levee along the bank of a river subject to overflow, and independent of a system of drainage, was not embraced within the act of 1871; that § 31 of article 4 of the Constitution of 1870, that "the general assembly may pass laws permitting the owners [or occupants] of lands to construct drains, [486] ditches, *and levees for agricultural, sanitary, or mining purposes across the lands of others," did not authorize the construction of a levee independent of drainage; that § 9 of article 9 of that Constitution was a limitation on the power of the legislature, which could only vest such power in such municipalities, and not in any other bodies, though other municipalities might be vested with jurisdiction to assess and collect taxes for corporate purposes subject to the rule of uniformity as to persons and property; and that the burden of taxation by special assessment could not be imposed on a locality without the consent of the taxpayers to be affected. And the court held, in respect of the act of 1871, "that neither the commissioners nor the juries selected, nor the county court, is such a body as, under the Constitution, may be given power to make local improvements by special assessments or by special taxation upon contiguous property;" and also that "under this law, the people whose property is subject to taxation or assessments have never given any consent to it, if we exclude those who may have signed the petition addressed to the county court."

Section 5 of article 9 of the state Constitution of 1848 provided: "The corporate authorities of counties, townships, school districts, cities, towns, and villages may be vested with authority to assess and collect for corporate purposes; such taxes to be uniform in respect to persons and property within the jurisdiction of the body imposing the same."

Section 9 of article 9 of the Constitution of 1870 read: "The general assembly may vest the corporate authorities of cities, towns, and villages with power to make local improvements by special assessment, or by special taxation of contiguous property or otherwise. For all other corporate purposes, all municipal corporations may be vested with authority to assess and collect taxes; but such taxes shall be uniform, in respect to persons and property, within the jurisdiction of the body imposing the same."

These provisions of the two Constitutions are substantially identical, and while, prior to the act of 1871, the clause of the Constitution of 1870 had not been construed by the supreme court of the state, the similar provision in the Constitution of 1848 *had been [487] construed in several instances. And it was ruled that the right of taxation could not be granted by the general assembly in any form to private persons, or to private corporations; that the provision limited the power of the general assembly to grant the right to assess and collect taxes to the corporate or local authorities of the municipalities or districts to be taxed; that a local burden of taxation or special assessment could not be imposed upon a locality without the consent of the taxpayers to be affected; and that corporate authorities were municipal officers directly elected by the people of the municipality or appointed in some mode to which they had given their assent. Harward v. St. Clair & M. Levee & Drainage Co. 51 Ill. 130; Hessler v. Drainage Comrs. 53 Ill. 105; Lovington v. Wider, 53 Ill. 302; Wider v. East St. Louis, 55 Ill. 133; People ex rel. Wilson v. Salomon, 51 Ill. 37.

The construction of the state Constitution in Harward's Case and others has been repeatedly recognized by this court as authoritatively established.

And as this was the settled law of the state when these bonds were issued, and the Constitution of 1870 admitted of no other construction, we concur in the opinion that the act of 1871 was repugnant to the Constitution of Illinois; the bonds due under it were void; and the lands intended to be benefited could not be specially assessed by any action taken in conformity with the provisions of that act.

The case of Blake v. People, 109 Ill. 504, conduces to no other result. That case arose under the act of May 29, 1879, which was passed after the amendment of the state Constitution adopted in 1878. That amendment provided that the general assembly might pass laws permitting the owners of lands to construct drains, ditches, and levees across the lands of others, and to organize drainage districts and vest the corporate authorities thereof with power to construct and maintain levees, drains, and ditches, "and to keep in repair all drains, ditches, and levees heretofore constructed under the laws of this state, by special assessment upon the property benefited thereby." The new levee district was organized under this [488] act to repair *the levee which had been built under the invalid law of 1871. The objection was raised by a landowner, on the application of the collector of the county for judgment against his land on an assessment, that the old levee had not been built under a law of the state within the meaning of the act and of the Constitution, because the act of 1871 was no law. The court held that the point should have been raised before the confirmation of the assessment roll, and came too late. The court also held that it could not take judicial notice that the purpose for which the corporation was created was not to keep in repair levees theretofore constructed under a law of the state; but assuming the question to be properly before the court, that while the act of 1871 was unconstitutional as affecting those over whose lands the drains, levees, etc., were to be constructed without the owners' consent, and those against whose property it was proposed to assess the cost of constructing such drains and levees without their consent, yet that there might be some person so situated as to be precluded from raising the question of the validity of the law. And while, strictly speaking, there neither was nor could be any levee in Illinois constructed under a law of the state, yet that the legislature plainly meant to authorize the completion and repair of levees that had been constructed under an act purporting to be a law, though it was not. The court said: "There was no law in force authorizing the construction of levees over the lands of others (save the act of April 24, 1871) at the time Updike v. Wright and Webster v. Levee Comrs. were decided. To obviate the effect of those decisions—allow the construction of levees, as well as drains, upon the lands of others—and to authorize the formation of municipal corporations for the purpose of constructing drains and levees, the amendment to § 31, article 4, was submitted to, and adopted by, the people, at the November election, in 1878. The act of May 29, 1879, but repeats, in this respect, the language of that amendment. The levees, therefore, which must have been referred to, because none other could reasonably have been intended, were the levees which had been constructed, but could not [489] be *kept in repair because of the decisions in Updike v. Wright and Webster v. Levee Comrs."

The act of April 24, 1871, being invalid, the corporate existence of the levee commissioners, and the assessments made at their instance, and the collection of the latter under that act, or under the act of April 9, 1872, entitled "An Act to Provide for the Registration of Drainage and Levee Bonds, and Secure the Payment of the Same," failed with it. But it is contended that while all this may be so as to the general public, yet that appellees, or some of them, have so conducted themselves that they are estopped from asserting such invalidity, and that the circuit court should have enforced the assessments exactly as if the law had been a constitutional enactment. The bill sought to collect not only the assessments already made, but asked to have further assessments made to pay the bonds in full, and to maintain and preserve the security; and the court was also asked to declare that the assessments created valid liens upon the lands, and to decree that the bonds sued on were a lien on the assessments and to enforce their collection. In other words, that the court execute the act, either as in itself wholly valid or valid as to these defendants. We are unwilling to assent to the doctrine of legislation by estoppel. The courts cannot by the execution of an unconstitutional law as a law, supply the want of power in the legislative department.

In South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 267, 24 L. ed. 157, this court said: "There can be no estoppel in the way of ascertaining the existence of a law. That which purports to be a law of a state is a law, or it is not a law, according as the truth of the fact may be, and not according to the shifting circumstances of parties. It would be an intolerable state of things if a document purporting to be an act of the legislature could thus be a law in one case and for one party, and not a law in another case and for another party; a law to-day, and not a law to-morrow; a law in one place, and not a law in another in the same state. And whether it be a law, or not a law, is a judicial question, to be settled and determined by the courts and judges. The doctrine of estoppel is totally inadmissible in the case."

In that case the invalidity of the law grew out of the fact*that the journals of the [490] senate and house did not show the passage of the bill as the Constitution required it to be shown. Bonds had been issued, bought innocently, and the town had paid one instalment of interest, but it was held that the bonds could not be sustained on the doctrine of estoppel. In this case the bonds were signed, issued, and sold by the commissioners, and the interest which was paid was paid by the commissioners. The landowners had no control of the question whether bonds should be issued, and were not in privity of contract with the purchasers of the bonds. As the act, the assessments, and the bonds were void, the landowners, when it was sought to subject their property to those assessments for the payment of the void bonds, could not be estopped on the ground that the law itself, though void, was valid as to them.

Even in the instance of contracts of a corporation beyond the scope of its corporate powers, the law is well settled in this court that nothing which has been done under them or the action of the courts can infuse any vitality into them. Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 35 L. ed. 55, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478.

Daniels v. Tearney, 102 U. S. 415, 26 L. ed. 187, though not precisely in point, is illustrative of the distinction between enforcing an invalid law in an executory way, and awarding relief in respect of things accomplished under it. In that case, the secession convention of the state of Virginia had passed an ordinance providing that any person whose property had been taken on execution might, by giving a bond for the payment of the judgment, have his goods released so long as the law should remain in force. Porter recovered a judgment against Daniels in the circuit court of Jefferson county, and Daniels availed himself of the ordinance by filing the required bond. To a suit brought on the bond by Tearney et al., executors of Porter, after the close of the civil war, the defense was made that the law under which the bond was given was unconstitutional, and so that the bond was void. There was a difference of opinion in the court as to whether the bond was good as a voluntary bond or not, but it was held that, conceding the bond to have been wholly void, the judgment upon it ought not to be reversed, on the principle that where a party [491] has availed himself for his benefit *of an unconstitutional law he is estopped as between himself and others not occupying that position from setting up its unconstitutionality as a defense. The obligee of the bond sued on had not availed himself of the void ordinance, but was deprived of his rights by it. He had not in any way expressly or impliedly, made himself a party to the illegal proceeding, or affirmatively agreed to take any advantage from it, while the consideration of the bond had been fully received by the obligor, who could not, under such circumstances, be permitted to deny a liability put upon the obligee in invitum.

It follows that this bill cannot be maintained on the theory of the validity of the act of 1871, even though some other equity might have been asserted if in the exercise of reasonable diligence. The result is not inconsistent with the cases that hold that, although a law is found to be unconstitutional, a party who has received the full benefit under it, may be compelled to pay for that benefit according to the terms of the law. This is upon the theory of an implied contract, the terms of which may be sought in the invalid law, and which arises when the full consideration has been received by the party against whom the contract is sought to be enforced.

In the case before us, the landowners did not and could not receive the benefits which it was contemplated would accrue to them from the proceedings if they had been valid. As the circuit court of appeals pointed out what the landowners, who promoted the passage of and proceeded under the act of 1871, had in view "was not simply to have a levee constructed, but to have a sufficient levee, which could be repaired from time to 184 U. S.

time and permanently maintained under legal authority." The scheme embraced not only the construction, but the maintenance of the levee, and must be looked at in its entirety. "If it be said that the plaintiffs' testator would never have purchased the bonds except in the belief that the act of 1871 was valid, with equal truth it may be said that the landowners never would have sought or desired such legislation except in the belief that the levee would be maintained by the same authority that constructed it." When the law fell, the method of maintaining it by compulsory process also failed, and if it be said that there *was [492] only a partial failure of consideration, it is plain that the consideration was indivisible, and not susceptible of apportionment, while the evidence demonstrates that the losses suffered by the landowners by reason of the breaking of the levee exceeded the amount of the bonds in question.

The grounds of estoppel claimed in this case seem to be, that one or more of the defendants secured the passage of the act of 1871; that others actively participated as petitioners and otherwise in the organization of the levee district before the bonds were issued; that others who took no part whatever in any of the proceedings, after the bonds were issued and the law was held to be unconstitutional, united in an attempt to maintain and repair the levee by voluntary contributions; that others, who neither said nor did anything, knowing that the proceedings were pending and that the levee was in course of construction, remained quiescent; that others paid interest on their assessments for the years 1873 and 1874; that others participated in the organization of the new and legal levee district after the Constitution of Illinois had been amended and a law passed authorizing the formation of levee districts; and that others purchased lands after the Webster Case was decided, and their deeds contained certain references to the act of 1871.

We think that the evidence fails to show that Palms relied, or had the right to rely, on the acts, or assurances, or silence, of any of these different classes of landowners, and was thereby misled. He purchased the bonds, not of the landowners, or any of them, nor from the levee commissioners, but in the open market, and on the advice of counsel as to the legality of the proceedings. The landowners who participated in any way in the creation of the drainage district were as vitally interested in the matter as any purchaser of bonds could be, and they acted equally in the mistaken belief that the law was valid. It would be a novel idea, as the supreme court of Illinois remarked in Holcomb v. Boynton, 151 Ill. 300, 37 N. E. 1033, "in the law of estoppel that the doctrine should be applied to a person who has been guilty of no fraud, simply because, under a misapprehension of the law, he has treated as legal and valid an act void and open to the inspection of all." But we need not pursue the discussion, *for, in view of [493] the invalidity of the proceedings, if complainants had a cause of action, that cause of action arose before May 4, 1878, when Palms filed his bill, yet the landowners were not proceeded against until the 22d of April, 1889.

The statute of limitations of Illinois provided that actions on unwritten contracts, express or implied, and all civil actions not otherwise provided for, should be commenced within five years next after the cause of action accrued. Courts of equity usually consider themselves bound by the statutes of limitation which govern courts of law in like cases. In the second aspect of their bill appellants did not rely on their bonds as legal instruments, but they sought the aid of a court of equity for the enforcement of a lien in payment of the bonds by reason of an estoppel in pais, and the cause of action so created would seem to have been barred by that statute. But courts of equity go farther in the promotion of justice, and where laches exist, deny the relief sought, even though the statutory period may not have run under the applicable statute.

The doctrine of courts of equity to withhold relief from those who have delayed the assertion of their claims for an unreasonable length of time is thoroughly settled. Its application depends on the circumstances of the particular case. It is not a mere matter of lapse of time, but of change of situation during neglectful repose, rendering it inequitable to afford relief.

Palms purchased these bonds of the contractors to whom they had been delivered by the commissioners, who assumed a right to issue and make that disposition of them by virtue of the power to borrow money granted by the act of 1871. The enterprise of erecting such a barrier to the incursions of the river was, in its nature, hazardous, and the levee required not only the utmost skill in construction, but the utmost effort and vigilance in its repair and maintenance. The transaction was in its nature speculative as the value of the reclaimed lands depended on the permanency of the structure.

The enforcement of the assessments for benefits on which the payment of the cost of the work depended was resisted from the first by certain landowners, who had opposed the scheme as attempted to be authorized, [494] and their legality was brought *to the test as soon as in the orderly progress of judicial proceedings it could be done. The result was that in 1876 the act of 1871 was held void and the assessments illegal. In that same year the levee broke and the lands were devastated. In 1877 some of the landowners raised some thousands of dollars, giving trust deeds as security, for the repair of the levee, the money to be devoted to that purpose exclusively: and repairs were made.

May 4, 1878, Mr. Palms filed his bill, to which the landowners were not made parties. The principal of the first and largest assessment was payable one tenth annually beginning with 1882, but the interest, at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from October 1, 1872, was collectible annually, and the interest on the bonds was also payable yearly. The instalments of interest for 1875, 1876, and 1877 had not been paid, and those succeeding remained unpaid.

In 1880 the circuit court entered the order permitting Palms to bring in the landowners by filing a supplemental or an original bill; and in that same year there were numerous breaks in the levee.

During the same year a new drainage district was organized under the provisions of the act of 1879, which had been passed in accordance with the constitutional amendment of 1878. Large assessments were levied upon the lands, aggregating hundreds of thousand of dollars, and the money was put into the property. In 1881 the levee broke again, but the new drainage corporation went on with its work. The levee broke again in 1888, and additional assessments were levied.

Palms did not avail himself of the order, in the original cause, of July 7, 1880. He took no further steps, and died November 24, 1886. His executors filed this bill April 22, 1889. The record affords no explanation of the delay, and it seems to us that this was such laches as forbids relief. To enforce these bonds against those by whose courage, energy, and expenditure the lands have attained whatever value they now possess, would in our judgment be too inequitable to be permitted.

Mr. Palms knew of the decisions of the supreme court of Illinois in the Webster and Udike Cases; of the breaks in the *levee; of the efforts of the landowner to re-[495] build and maintain it by large expenditures of money; and he could not lie by until after such expenditures, and with the condition of the district and the personnel of its people constantly changing, and then insist that during all this time the parties were under a liability to him which, in equity, they were estopped to deny.

So far as part of the old levee became part of the new levee, the new drainage corporation used it because they could not do otherwise, and besides Palms, as a purchaser of bonds in the open market, was a stranger to the work. Even if the contractors could have claimed an equitable lien on the structure itself, Palms could not, and, indeed, any resort to subrogation is disclaimed by appellant's counsel. Such a claim could not have been successfully maintained under our decision in Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. Middleport, 124 U. S. 534. 31 L. ed. 537, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625. There the town of Middleport had issued certain bonds to aid in the construction of a railroad; the road was constructed and the bonds delivered to the railroad company in payment of the work, and were afterwards sold to the complainant. The supreme court of the state of Illinois held the bonds void, and a bill was filed in the circuit court of the United States to enforce their collection on the theory of subrogation to the right of the railroad company to enforce the contract evidenced by a vote of the town appropriating the amount involved to pay for the railroad, and the acceptance and fulfilment of the contract by the railroad company. But it was decided that complainant having bought the bonds as negotiable securities from the railroad company could not be substituted to any rights which it might have had against the defendants; that no right of subrogation existed; that subrogation was applicable only in cases where a junior encumbrancer was forced to pay off a superior lien for the protection of his rights, or in some similar case; and that a mere volunteer was not entitled to claim the right.

It is worthy of remark that the decree of the circuit court in that case was placed on the ground that the right of action of the railroad company, resting only in parol, was barred by the statute applicable to contracts not in writing. Blodgett, J., 31 Fed. 874.

[496] *Here no bonds were ever sold by the commissioners to Palms or anyone representing him. They were delivered to the contractors and were taken in payment at 90 cents on the dollar of their face value. If the acts of any of the landowners created any equities against them it was in favor of the contractors, and these equities could not be asserted by Mr. Palms, unless by subrogation, which could not be availed of. And if it could be held that the money of Mr. Palms did enter into the construction of the levee, yet it was inextricably intermingled with that furnished by private individuals, by the new levee and drainage district, by three railroad companies, and by the United States government, the total aggregating half a million dollars, from 1877 to 1893.

In Litchfield v. Ballou, 114 U. S. 190, 29 L. ed. 132, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820, it was held that a creditor who had loaned to a municipal corporation, in excess of the amount of the indebtedness authorized by the Constitution, money which had been used in part for the construction of public works, was not entitled to a decree in equity for the return of his money, because the municipality had parted with the specific money and it could not be identified; that a bill in equity praying for the return of specific and identical moneys borrowed by a municipal corporation from complainant in violation of law would not support a general decree that there was due from the municipality to him a sum named, which was equal to the amount borrowed; and further, that a constitutional provision forbidding the municipality from borrowing money operated equally to prevent moneys loaned to it in violation of this provision and used in the construction of a public work, from becoming a lien upon the works constructed with it.

And if in this case any ground of relief on the theory of implied contract ever existed, the want of diligence presented an insuperable bar to its assertion.

Decree affirmed.

Mr. Justice Brown did not hear the argument and took no part in the decision of this case.

184 U. S.

*A. J. TULLOCK, Plff. in Err., [497]

v.

JOAB MULVANE.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 497-524.)

Appeal—error to state court—Federal question—liability on injunction bond—effect of pending appeal—right to attorney's fees.

1. The question whether there can be any liability on an Injunction bond given in the course of proceedings in a Federal court, because of the alleged effect of certain stipulations dismissing a portion of the case, and of an appeal from the decree that was afterward rendered, involves a claim of an immunity from liability depending on an authority exercised under the United States, such as will constitute a Federal question for review by the Supreme Court on writ of error to a state court.
2. The withdrawal by stipulation of the only part of a case which can sustain an Injunction is the equivalent of a final determination against the right to an injunction, for the purpose of creating a right of action on the Injunction bond, notwithstanding the fact that an appeal may be taken from the decree rendered in that part of the case which is not dismissed.
3. A claim of immunity from liability for attorney's fees as one of the elements of damages under an injunction bond given in a Federal court presents a Federal question for review on writ of error to the state court from the Supreme Court of the United States.
4. The attorney's fees for procuring the dissolution of the injunction cannot be allowed as an element of damages on an injunction bond given in a Federal court, notwithstanding the fact that by the local law of the state in which the bond was executed such fees could be recovered in a suit on the bond.

[No. 59.]

Argued October 25, 28, 1901. Decided March 3, 1902.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of Kansas to review a decision affirming a judgment for plaintiff in an action on an injunction bond given in a Federal court. Reversed.

See same case below, 61 Kan. 650, 60 Pac. 749.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

George P. Wescott and Samuel Hanson were complainants in a bill in equity which was filed, on January 13, 1893, in the circuit court of the United States for the district of Kansas. Joab Mulvane and various other persons and corporations were made defendants to the bill. The principal relief sought was to compel the specific performance of a contract alleged to have been entered into between the complainants and Mulvane for the sale by the latter and purchase by the former of all the capital stock of the Topeka Water Supply Company, a [498] Kansas corporation,*also a defendant to the suit. Incidentally it was sought to annul a purported sale of the waterworks plant to another of the defendants, the Topeka Water Company, a Kansas corporation, which it was asserted had been organized by Mulvane. The bill also sought to prevent the Topeka Water Company from encumbering the plant with a mortgage which, it was averred, was about to be executed, and to restrain the issuing and negotiation of bonds proposed to be secured by such mortgage and the sale or disposition of stock of both the Topeka Water Supply Company and the Topeka Water Company. The members of a copartnership, styled Coffin & Stanton, doing business in the city of New York, whom it was charged were offering to the public for sale the bonds so proposed to be issued, were likewise joined as defendants in the bill.

NOTE.—On Federal jurisdiction over state courts; necessity of Federal question—see notes to Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267, and Kipley v. Illinois ex rel. Akin, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

As to what is a Federal question; when considered—see note to Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884.

As to damages recoverable on injunction bonds—see Hubble v. Cole (Va.) 13 L. R. A. 311, and note.

On February 13, 1890, the court ordered a temporary injunction to issue, as prayed, upon the giving of an approved bond. Two days later, however, it was ordered that instead of a bond the complainants "may deposit with the clerk of this court the sum of $75,000 in cash, and that said deposit shall stand for a bond for all damages from the commencement of this suit until the further order of the court, whereby said complainants will be obligated and bound to pay to the defendants all costs and damages aforesaid, if it shall be finally held that said injunction or restraining order was improvidently granted."

On April 4, 1890, upon a hearing, the court sustained a motion which had been filed on behalf of Coffin & Stanton to dissolve the temporary injunction. The dissolution was predicated upon the ruling that an indispensable party had not been made a defendant, and could not be made without ousting the jurisdiction of the court, because such party defendant and the plaintiffs were citizens of the same state.

Thereafter, on June 3, 1890, by leave of court, a formal bond was substituted for the cash deposit which had been made under the order of the court previously stated. A. J. Tullock and W. M. D. Lee were the sureties. The bond recited the order for an injunction, the subsequent permission to deposit cash in lieu of a bond, the making of such cash deposit, the withdrawal of the deposit with the [499] sanction of the court on *the condition that a bond be executed. The fact that the injunction had been in the meanwhile dissolved by the court was also recited. The condition of the bond is reproduced in the margin.†

In October, 1890, pursuant to a stipulation made between complainants and certain of the defendants, filed in the cause, the bill was dismissed as to all the defendants except Mulvane, and so much of the bill as sought a specific performance of the alleged contract between complainants and Mulvane was withdrawn. By the stipulation the defendants who were dismissed from the cause expressly waived all right of action upon the injunction bond or otherwise, by reason of the allowance of the temporary injunction.

On September 26, 1892, upon the hearing of the cause as between complainants and Mulvane, the bill was dismissed. The case was then appealed to the circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit. [7 C. C. A. 242, 19 U. S. App. 125, 58 Fed. 305.] That court decided the appeal on the assumption that the question for decision was whether, in view of all the circumstances attending the making of the agreement between complainants and Mulvane, it was one which a court of equity could specifically enforce. The court observed that the cause had evidently been argued and disposed of in the court below on the theory that under the stipulation, even though the right to have specific performance had been waived, nevertheless damages might be assessed by a court of equity as for a breach of the contract, if the court was of opinion that the appellants *were, at the [500] time the bill was filed, entitled to specific performance. Assuming, then, the regularity of this procedure, and its power as an equity court to execute the agreement, the court reviewed the evidence, and held that the complainants were not at the time the bill was filed entitled to the specific performance of the contract, for the reason that they had never put the defendant Mulvane in default by tendering him the sum which he was entitled to receive under the contract of sale, to enforce which the bill had been filed. The court further observed:

"It is assigned for error that the circuit court erred in dissolving the temporary injunction as well as in dismissing the bill on the ground heretofore stated. As the first of these assignments was somewhat pressed on the argument, it becomes necessary to say, and we think it is all sufficient to say, that the appellants cannot be heard to complain in this court of the order dissolving the temporary injunction after voluntarily withdrawing so much of their bill as sought a specific performance of the alleged contract. An injunction could only be awarded as an incident to that species of equitable relief, and when the allegations and the prayer of the bill looking to that form of relief were withdrawn, the injunction necessarily shared the same fate."

Intermediate the dismissal of the bill by the circuit court and the affirmance of the decree of dismissal by the circuit court of

†"Now, therefore, if the said George P. Westcott and Samuel Hanson shall pay, or cause to be paid, to the said Joab Mulvane, the Topeka Water Supply Company, the Topeka Water Company, William Edward Coffin, Walter Stanton,

Charles H. Jackson, and Charles F. Street, partners doing business under the firm name and style of Coffin & Stanton, and the Atlantic Trust Company, and to each of them, all damages which they, or either of them, have already appeals, Mulvane, on November 5, 1892, instituted the present action in the state district court of Shawnee county, Kansas, against A. J. Tullock and W. M. D. Lee, the sureties upon the injunction bond above referred to. In this action recovery was sought for the sum of $75,000 as damages sustained by reason of the injunction. Service was not made upon Lee, however, and the action was prosecuted solely against Tullock. An answer was filed, which consisted of a general denial and a plea that the action was prematurely brought because of the pendency of the appeal in the circuit court of appeals.

[501] The action in the state court was tried to a jury. Because of the ruling by the trial judge, in excluding evidence as to expenditures for attorneys' fees in procuring the dissolution of the injunction, Mulvane prosecuted error, and the judgment entered by the trial court was held by the supreme court of Kansas to be erroneous because of such ruling. 58 Kan. 622, 50 Pac. 897.

A new trial was thereupon had in the lower court. At this trial, on the offer by Mulvane, the plaintiff, of evidence tending to show payments made by him for attorneys' fees, such evidence was objected to as follows:

"The defendant further objects because it appears that this bond was given in a proceeding in the Federal court, and under the law of the United States governing the liability of parties for damages on bonds or in such proceeding in Federal courts attorneys' fees are not included."

At the close of all the evidence, the court allowed the respective parties to amend their pleadings. The petition was amended, among other particulars, by setting out specifically the sum of asserted damage resulting from the payments alleged to have been made by Mulvane to various attorneys in resisting the allowance and procuring the dissolution of the injunction. In the amendment of the answer it was specifically pleaded that the sums paid to the attorneys by Mulvane were not elements of damage embraced within the terms of the injunction bond, if such bond was construed and enforced according to the rules applicable in the courts of the United States, as expounded by the Supreme Court of the United States. It was asserted that the bond must be measured by the principles controlling in the court where it was given, and that to hold otherwise would deprive the surety of the protection of the law of the United States, in contemplation of which he had contracted.

After the amendments and in negation of requests for instructions to the jury made by the plaintiff, the defendant asked the court to charge in substance as follows: 1. That as by the condition of the bond liability could not arise until it had been finally determined by the United States court that the injunction ought not to have been granted, the sureties upon the bond were discharged from liability by the effect of the stipulation filed in the cause in which the injunction had been granted, whereby it resulted that a final determination by the court *whether the injunction ought not to [502] have been granted was by consent of parties prevented. 2. If the stipulation had not the effect thus claimed, then at the time the action on the bond was commenced an appeal was pending in the circuit court of appeals of the United States from the judgment rendered in the cause, wherein the injunction had been allowed and the bond given, and that the action upon the bond was premature. In addition, the immunity which had been previously asserted, arising from the rule governing in the courts of the United States on the subject of attorneys' fees, was, in view of the pleadings and the prior proceedings in the case, reiterated by a request for an instruction that no attorneys' fees could be recovered on the bonds. All the requests of the defendant having been denied and the court having charged the jury to the contrary, a verdict was returned in the sum of $25,000, of which it may be inferred that about the sum of $20,000 was for payments which Mulvane asserted he had made on his own behalf to the attorneys who had represented his interest in resisting the allowance of and procuring the dissolution of the injunction, albeit that most of the attorneys to whom the payments in question were made were likewise attorneys of record for the other defendants who had specifically in the stipulation waived all claims of damages growing out of the injunction. From the judgment rendered on the verdict of the jury the cause was carried to the supreme court of Kansas, and in that court it was affirmed. 61 Kan. 650, 60 Pac. 749. The opinion of the court in effect considered and disposed of the claims of alleged Federal right which have been previously referred to, and held them to be untenable. To this judgment of affirmance error was prosecuted and the cause is here for review.

Mr. W. H. Rossington argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Charles Blood Smith and Clifford Histed, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The case at bar, being upon an injunction bond given under order of the United States circuit court for Kansas in an equity case pending before said court, is, as to all of its elements, a case involving Federal questions, finally cognizable and determinable in this court.

sustained or may at any time sustain by reason of the granting or issuing of said restraining order, or the granting and issuing of said temporary injunction, if it shall be finally decided that said restraining order or said temporary injunction ought not to have been granted, 184 U. S.

or the withdrawing from the hands of the clerk the said sum of $75,000 deposited in lieu of the bond as required by the court to be given, then the above obligation shall be null and void; otherwise shall be and remain in full force and effect."

Bein v. Heath, 12 How. 168, 13 L. ed. 939; Russell v. Farley, 105 U. S. 433, 26 L. ed. 1060; Meyers v. Block, 120 U. S. 206, 30 L. ed. 642, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525; Arnold v. Frost, 9 Ben. 267, Fed. Cas. No. 558; Seymour v. Phillips & Co. Constr. Co. 7 Biss. 460, Fed. Cas. No. 12,689; Leslie v. Brown, 32 C. C. A. 556, 61 U. S. App. 727, 90 Fed. 171; Tyler Min. Co. v. Last Chance Min. Co. 32 C. C. A. 498, 61 U. S. App. 193, 90 Fed. 15; Walker v. Windsor Nat. Bank, 5 C. C. A. 421, 5 U. S. App. 423, 56 Fed. 76; Coosaw Min. Co. v. Farmers' Min. Co. 51 Fed. 107; Lea v. Deakin, 13 Fed. 514; Lehman v. McQuowin, 31 Fed. 138; Crane v. Buckley, 38 C. C. A. 688, 105 Fed. 401; 2 Beach, Modern Eq. Pr. § 770.

Inasmuch as this suit was subject to writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States, it was the duty of the state supreme court to adopt, follow, and enforce the rules and decisions of this court upon the questions therein involved.

Belcker v. Chambers, 53 Cal. 635; San Benito County v. Southern P. R. Co. 77 Cal. 518, 19 Pac. 827.

The power to impose a bond as a condition for the injunction carried with it the power to relieve or mitigate the liability thereunder in the exercise of a sound discretion by the Federal court.

Russell v. Farley, 105 U. S. 442, 26 L. ed. 1060; Leslie v. Brown, 32 C. C. A. 556, 61 U. S. App. 727, 90 Fed. 171; Tyler Min. Co. v. Last Chance Min. Co. 32 C. C. A. 498, 61 U. S. App. 193, 90 Fed. 15.

Counsel fees are not recoverable as an element of damage for breach of injunction bonds exacted by Federal courts.

Arcambel v. Wiseman, 3 Dall. 306, 1 L. ed. 613; Bein v. Heath, 12 How. 168, 13 L. ed. 939; Oelrichs v. Spain, 15 Wall. 230, sub nom. Oelrichs v. Williams, 21 L. ed. 15; Browning v. Porter, 2 McCrary, 581, 12 Fed. 460; The Alice, 12 Fed. 502; Jacobus v. Monongahela Nat. Bank, 35 Fed. 396; Fidelity Ins. Trust & S. D. Co. v. Roanoke Iron Co. 91 Fed. 21.

That this is the rule of the Federal court has been recognized in numerous state decisions.

Whiphint v. Mansfield, 36 Ark. 195; Dorris v. Miller, 105 Iowa, 569, 75 N. W. 483; Thurston v. Haskell, 81 Me. 306, 17 Atl. 71; Wood v. State use of White, 66 Md. 68, 5 Atl. 479; Frost v. Jordan, 37 Minn. 546, 36 N. W. 714; Hill v. Thomas, 19 S. C. 236; Loeb v. Mann, 39 S. C. 470, 18 S. E. 2; Stringfield v. Hirsch, 91 Tenn. 432, 29 S. W. 611; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Ware, 74 Tex. 50, 11 S. W. 920; Jones v. Rescald Street R. Co. 75 Tex. 383, 12 S. W. 998.

By the voluntary act of the parties the condition upon which the liability depended, namely, a final decision that the injunction ought not to have been granted, was rendered impossible, and except upon such condition no liability could attach to the surety.

Palmer v. Foley, 71 N. Y. 106; Johnson v. Elwood, 82 N. Y. 362; Tyler Min. Co. v. Last Chance Min. Co. 32 C. C. A. 498, 61 U. S. App. 193, 90 Fed. 15; Large v. Steer, 121 Pa. 30, 15 Atl. 490; 2 High, Inj. 3d ed. §§ 1638-1641; Beach, Inj. § 227; Apollinaris Co. v. Venable, 136 N. Y. 46, 32 N. E. 555; Columbus, H. V. & T. R. Co. v. Burke, 54 Ohio St. 98, 32 L. R. A. 329, 43 N. E. 282; Cassem v. Ernst, 84 Ill. App. 70.

A cause in chancery cannot be said to be finally decided and determined when appealed until the record in the case has been finally examined by the appellate tribunal and the whole matter reviewed and decided.

Sibbald v. United States, 12 Pet. 488, 9 L. ed. 1167; Stewart v. Salamon, 97 U. S. 361, 24 L. ed. 1044; Southard v. Russell, 16 How. 547, 14 L. ed. 1052; Durant v. Essex Co. 101 U. S. 555, sub nom. Durant v. Storrow, 25 L. ed. 961; Kingsbury v. Buckner, 134 U. S. 650, 33 L. ed. 1047, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; Aspen Min. & Smelting Co. v. Billings, 150 U. S. 31, 37 L. ed. 986, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Gaines v. Rugg, 148 U. S. 228, sub nom. Gaines v. Caldwell, 37 L. ed. 432, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611; Bissell Carpet-Sweeper Co. v. Goshen Sweeper Co. 19 C. C. A. 25, 43 U. S. App. 47, 72 Fed. 545. See also Metcalf v. Watertown, 16 C. C. A. 37, 34 U. S. App. 107, 68 Fed. 859; Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. S. Co. v. Texas C. R. Co. 32 Fed. 525; Morrin v. Lawler, 91 Fed. 693.

No action accrued on the bonds pending appeal.

Cohn v. Lehman, 93 Mo. 574, 6 S. W. 267; Hamilton v. State use of Hardesty, 32 Md. 348; Howard v. Park, 59 How. Pr. 344; Musgrave v. Sherwood, 76 N. Y. 194; Gray v. Veirs, 33 Md. 159; Penny v. Holberg, 53 Miss. 567; Murfree, Official Bonds, § 391; High, Inj. §§ 1648 et seq.

And until the appeal from the decree of the court on the question of damages was determined, no action accrued.

Thompson v. McNair, 64 N. C. 448; Cohn v. Lehman, 93 Mo. 574, 6 S. W. 267; Howard v. Park, 59 How. Pr. 344; Musgrave v. Sherwood, 76 N. Y. 194; Gray v. Veirs, 33 Md. 159; Penny v. Holberg, 53 Miss. 567; Murfree, Official Bonds, § 391; High, Inj. §§ 1648 et seq.

The suit, being founded upon a bond exacted by the Federal court, necessarily involves a Federal question.

Bein v. Heath, 12 How. 168, 13 L. ed. 939; Meyers v. Block, 120 U. S. 206, 30 L. ed. 642, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525.

The jurisdiction of the United States circuit courts to entertain original suits upon such obligations irrespective of the citizenship of the parties has been recognized in a large number of cases, and has never been questioned.

Leslie v. Brown, 32 C. C. A. 556, 61 U. S. App. 727, 90 Fed. 171.

In that class of cases in which a Federal question is involved, and on which jurisdiction of the courts of the United States depends, the character of the question is the same whether the jurisdiction exercised is appellate, original, or by removal; the jurisdiction in either form depending upon the constitutional grant of power.

Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Taylor,
184 U. S.

86 Fed. 168. See also Clements v. Berry, 11 How. 398, 13 L. ed. 745; Buck v. Colbath, 3 Wall. 334, 18 L. ed. 257; Factors' & T. Ins. Co. v. Murphy, 111 U. S. 738, 28 L. ed. 582, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679; New Orleans, S. F. & L. R. Co. v. Delamore, 114 U. S. 501, 29 L. ed. 244, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1009; Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. v. Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. 120 U. S. 141, 30 L. ed. 614, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472; Etheridge v. Sperry, 139 U. S. 266, 35 L. ed. 171, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Cox, 145 U. S. 593, 36 L. ed. 829, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; Sonnen- theil v. Christian Mocrlein Brewing Co. 172 U. S. 401, 43 L. ed. 492, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 233; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Long Island Loan & T. Co. 172 U. S. 493, 43 L. ed. 528, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 238.

The test of a Federal question is not the ruling of the court. The significance of an adverse ruling lies solely in the fact that thereby the aggrieved party is entitled to present the Federal question for review by this court.

Furman v. Nichol, 8 Wall. 44, 19 L. ed. 370.

The jurisdiction of this court to review on writ of error the judgments of the state courts in this class of cases is broader than the original jurisdiction of the circuit courts of the United States.

Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Taylor, 86 Fed. 175.

The rights of the parties in this case are not to be determined by principles of general law, but are governed and controlled by the decisions of this court.

Russell v. Farley, 105 U. S. 433, 26 L. ed. 1060; Olcott v. Fond du Lac County, 16 Wall. 690, 21 L. ed. 387; Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 27 L. ed. 359, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10.

The opinion itself is to be treated as a part of the record in this case, and it may be examined in order to ascertain the fact whether these questions were so presented.

Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed. 680, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300.

It need not appear that the state court erred in its judgment. It is sufficient to confer jurisdiction that the question was in the case, was decided adversely to the plaintiff in error, and that the court was induced by it to make the judgment which it did.

Green Bay & M. Canal Co. v. Patten Paper Co. 172 U. S. 58, 43 L. ed. 364, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 97; Dewey v. Des Moines, 173 U. S. 199, 43 L. ed. 667, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379. See also Kaukauna Water Power Co. v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 142 U. S. 254, 35 L. ed. 1004, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 193; Hagar v. California, 154 U. S. 639, 24 L. ed. 1044, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1186; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 39 L. ed. 941, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 42 L. ed. 878, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 483; Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. v. Iowa Homestead Co. 123 U. S. 552, 31 L. ed. 202, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 217; Proprietors of Bridges v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 1 Wall. 116, 17 L. ed. 571; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 184 U. S. U. S., Book 46.

ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Furman v. Nichol, 8 Wall. 44, 19 L. ed. 370; Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Taylor, 86 Fed. 168.

Mr. N. H. Loomis argued the cause, and, with Mr. A. L. Williams and Messrs. Overmyer, Mulvane, & Gault, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The measure of damages upon an injunction bond is, in the absence of a statute governing the matter, a question of general law; and this court has decided, time and again, that it will not review the decisions of a state court upon questions of that sort.

Bethell v. Demaret, 10 Wall. 537, 19 L. ed. 1007; Delmas v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. 14 Wall. 661, 20 L. ed. 757; United States v. Thompson, 93 U. S. 586, 23 L. ed. 982; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Hendren, 92 U. S. 286, 23 L. ed. 709. See also Marrow v. Brinkley, 129 U. S. 178, 32 L. ed. 654, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267; Sherman v. Grinnell, 144 U. S. 198, 36 L. ed. 403, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 574; New Orleans v. New Orleans Water- works Co. 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. ed. 943, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142.

A question does not necessarily arise under the laws of the United States in a suit because it was brought upon a judgment rendered by a Federal court.

Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. Ford, 114 U. S. 635, 29 L. ed. 261, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1104.

A judgment of a state court cannot be reviewed in the United States Supreme Court simply because the parties are claiming rights under a Federal statute.

Blackburn v. Portland Gold Min. Co. 175 U. S. 571, 44 L. ed. 276, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Bell, 176 U. S. 321, 44 L. ed. 486, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; De Lamar's Nevada Gold Min. Co. v. Nesbitt, 177 U. S. 523, 44 L. ed. 872, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715. See also Shoshone Min. Co. v. Rutter, 177 U. S. 505, 44 L. ed. 864, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 726; Carothers v. Mayer, 164 U. S. 325, 41 L. ed. 453, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106.

The decision of a state court as to the legality of permitting a suit to be brought upon an official bond of the United States marshal without suing in the name of the United States has been held not to be reviewable in this court.

Montgomery v. Hernandez, 12 Wheat. 129, 6 L. ed. 575.

A final judgment or decree by the highest court of law or equity of a state, that revenue stamps attached to a deed offered in evidence and objected to as not having stamps proportioned to the value of the land conveyed are insufficient, is not a subject for review by this court under the 25th section of the judiciary act of 1789.

Lewis v. Campan, 3 Wall. 106, 18 L. ed. 211.

So, no Federal question is presented by a decision whether a chattel mortgage of cattle, which does not identify the particular animals covered by it, is good as against the purchaser of the entire lot at a marshal's sale on execution issued out of a Federal court.

Avery v. Popper, 179 U. S. 305, 45 L. ed. 203, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94.

That attorneys' fees can be recovered upon an injunction bond given in a Federal court has been decided in several cases.

Mitchell v. Hawley, 79 Cal. 301, 21 Pac. 833; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Shepley, 1 Mo. App. 254. To the same effect are Wash v. Lackland, 8 Mo. App. 122; Elliott v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 77 Mo. App. 652; Aiken v. Leathers, 40 La. Ann. 23, 3 So. 357.

A writ of error to a state court brings before the Supreme Court only the Federal questions in the case. None other will be considered.

Ashley v. Ryan, 153 U. S. 436, 38 L. ed. 773, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 664, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Watson v. Mercer, 8 Pet. 88, 8 L. ed. 876.

When the case was decided on an independent ground broad enough to maintain the judgment, and not involving a Federal question, this court will dismiss the writ of error without considering the Federal question.

Beatty v. Benton, 135 U. S. 244, 34 L. ed. 124, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Marrow v. Brinkley, 129 U. S. 178, 32 L. ed. 654, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 160 U. S. 556, 40 L. ed. 536, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Bacon v. Texas, 163 U. S. 207, 41 L. ed. 132, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1023; Seneca Nation of Indians v. Christy, 162 U. S. 283, 40 L. ed. 970, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 828; Hammond v. Johnston, 142 U. S. 73, 35 L. ed. 941, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141.

The constitutional provision, or the law relied upon, must be specified by the party claiming under it in the state court, in order to warrant a review of the decision in such court by the Supreme Court of the United States.

Chappell v. Bradshaw, 128 U. S. 132, 32 L. ed. 369, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462, 35 L. ed. 225, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577; Morrison v. Watson, 154 U. S. 111, 38 L. ed. 927, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 995; Winona & St. P. Land Co. v. Minnesota, 159 U. S. 540, 40 L. ed. 252, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 88; Zadig v. Baldwin, 166 U. S. 485, 41 L. ed. 1087, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 639; F. G. Oxley Stave Co. v. Butler County, 166 U. S. 648, 41 L. ed. 1149, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709; Maxwell v. Newbold, 18 How. 511, 15 L. ed. 506; Messenger v. Mason, 10 Wall. 507, 19 L. ed. 1028; Proprietors of Bridges v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 1 Wall. 116, 17 L. ed. 571. See also Chapin v. Fye, 179 U. S. 127, 45 L. ed. 119, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71.

Counsel fees are a proper element of damages in an action on an injunction bond.

2 Sutherland, Damages, § 7, p. 64; Robertson v. Smith, 129 Ind. 422, 15 L. R. A. 273, 28 N. E. 857; Swan v. Timmons, 81 Ind. 243; Miles v. Edwards, 6 Mont. 180, 9 Pac. 814; Ah Thae v. Quan Wan, 3 Cal. 219; Tyler v. Safford, 31 Kan. 610, 3 Pac. 333.

The question as to whether a surety upon an injunction bond given in a Federal court can escape liability by the dismissal of the injunction proceedings after a dissolution of the temporary injunction is a question of general law with which this court will not interfere upon writ of error directed to a state court.

Gyger v. Courtney, 59 Neb. 555, 81 N. W. 437; Richardson v. Allen, 74 Ga. 719; Swan v. Timmons, 81 Ind. 243; Asevado v. Orr, 100 Cal. 293, 34 Pac. 777; Dowling v. Polack, 18 Cal. 625; Pugh v. White, 78 Ky. 210; Hibbard v. McKindley, 28 Ill. 255; Nansemond Timber Co. v. Rountree, 122 N. C. 45, 29 S. E. 61; De Berard v. Prial, 34 App. Div. 502, 54 N. Y. Supp. 534.

The dismissal of that part of the case calling for equitable relief amounted to a final determination of the question as to whether the injunction had been properly granted.

Mitchell v. Sullivan, 30 Kan. 231, 1 Pac. 518. See also Bell v. Matthews, 37 Kan. 686, 16 Pac. 97; Marbourg v. Smith, 11 Kan. 562; Kelley v. Sage, 12 Kan. 109; Pugh v. White, 78 Ky. 210; Richardson v. Allen, 74 Ga. 719; Hibbard v. McKindley, 28 Ill. 255; De Berard v. Prial, 34 App. Div. 502, 54 N. Y. Supp. 534; Nansemond Timber Co. v. Rountree, 122 N. C. 45, 29 S. E. 61; Dowling v. Polack, 18 Cal. 627; Wescott v. Mulvane, 7 C. C. A. 242, 19 U. S. App. 125, 58 Fed. 308.

When a surety goes upon an injunction bond conditioned for the payment of all damages which the defendant may sustain if it is finally determined that the injunction was improperly granted, he is liable for the damages sustained by the defendant if the injunction proceedings are dismissed.

Mitchell v. Sullivan, 30 Kan. 231, 1 Pac. 518.

*Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court: [502]

*The assignments of error, though four- [503] teen in number, are reducible to three propositions.

1. A contention that as the bond provided for a liability only in case it was finally decided that the injunction was wrongfully granted, no recovery could be had upon the bond, because the stipulation between the complainants and certain of the defendants had the effect of rendering it impossible to have a final determination in the courts of the United States whether the injunction ought originally to have been granted.

2. A claim on the part of the defendant that as the bond for injunction was executed under the order of a court of equity of the United States, and therefore by an authority exercised under the United States, and as liability was only to arise when it had been finally decided that the injunction ought not to have been granted, action on the bond could not be brought pending an appeal to the circuit court of appeals of the United States, and the final determination by that court of the controversy.

3. An assertion that as, by the settled rule of the courts of equity of the United States, attorneys' fees were not an element of damage covered by the terms of an injunction bond given in such court, recovery of such fees on such bond was not within the purview of the bond when construed with reference to and by the light of the authority under which the bond was given.

It is urged by the defendant in error that these contentions involve no Federal question, and that if they do they were not sufficiently set up in the lower courts, and therefore this court has no jurisdiction to review them. We dispose at once of the contention that if the propositions involve Federal questions they were not duly raised below, by referring to the statement which we have made of the case, whereby it appears that the contentions were raised below by the pleadings, by the objections to evidence, and by the requests for instructions, and indeed as so raised were expressly considered and directly passed upon by both the trial court and the supreme court of the state of Kansas, which latter fact in and of itself suffices to present the Federal question, even if it had [504] been otherwise *ambiguously raised on the record, which is not the case. F. G. Oxley Stave Co. v. Butler County, 166 U. S. 648, 41 L. ed. 1149, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709.

In determining whether these Federal questions are involved we shall for the moment take it for granted that the premises upon which such asserted questions rest are well founded, and if under such hypothesis we find that there is jurisdiction it will then be our duty to put such assumption out of view and determine the merits of the contentions.

Whilst apparently the propositions involve several distinct assertions of Federal right, in their ultimate analysis they reduce themselves to one and the same contention, that is, that a bond given for an injunction in an equity cause in a court of the United States is to be construed with reference to the liability administered in the courts of the United States on that subject as settled by this court. That this fundamental proposition embraces all the contentions would seem to be clear, when it is borne in mind that the controversies as to the stipulation and as to the pendency of the cause in the circuit court of appeals both assert the generic right of the defendant to have the obligations under the bond measured and determined by the law prevailing in the courts of the United States, and the claim as to the attorneys' fees propounds but the same right as to one of the elements of damage which it was asserted the bond embraced. Whilst the unity of the propositions is thus demonstrable, as in the court below and in argument they have been separately treated and different considerations have been assumed to apply to them, we shall consider the propositions separately.

We embrace the first two contentions under one heading, as follows:

First. Did the claim that there had been no breach of the condition of the bond because of the stipulation filed in the cause in which the bond was given and because of the pendency of the appeal in the circuit court of appeals present Federal questions, and, if yes, were they well founded?
184 U. S.

It may not, we think, be doubted that a bond for injunction in an equity court of the United States given under the order of such court is a bond executed in and by virtue "of an authority *exercised under the [505] United States." Rev. Stat. § 709. Certainly, the courts of the United States derive all their powers from the Constitution and laws of the United States, and their authority is therefore exercised thereunder. Being, then, an obligation entered into by virtue of such authority, the conclusion cannot be escaped that the defense specially set up, that no liability on the bond could arise until the court of the United States in which the controversy was pending had finally determined that the injunction should not have been granted, was the assertion of an immunity from liability depending on an authority exercised under the United States, and therefore necessarily involved the decision of a Federal question. To state the result which must necessarily flow from a contrary deduction is sufficient of itself to demonstrate the unsoundness of the reasoning by which the non-Federal nature of the question can alone be upheld. For it is clear that if it be true that the bond given in a Federal court of equity on the granting of an injunction is not to be construed with reference to the rules of law applicable to such bonds in such court, then there can be no certain general rule by which to determine the liability of the obligors upon the bond. Their responsibility would be one thing in a court of the United States and a different thing in the courts of the various states, which would imply that the parties did not contract with reference to any definite rule of liability. Indeed, the argument conduces to a conclusion which necessarily cripples the power of the court under whose order an injunction bond is executed. It is settled that such court has the inherent right to set the bond aside and to determine in its discretion whether recovery could be had upon it. Russell v. Farley, 105 U. S. 433, 26 L. ed. 1060. And yet if the liability upon the bond when given can be measured in courts other than the court requiring the execution of the bond, by a wholly different rule of liability from that which obtained in the court which had ordered the giving of the bond, it must follow that, although the latter court had decreed that the injunction had rightfully issued, yet in an action upon the injunction bond in another forum the sureties might be made to respond in damages without hope of redress.

A reference to some of the decided cases concerning what *constitutes a claim of im-[506] munity arising from an authority exercised under the United States will serve at once to refute the contention that no Federal question is here presented.

In Dupasseur v. Rochereau, 21 Wall. 130, 22 L. ed. 588, the question for decision was whether a state court had given due effect to a decree of a court of the United States, and it was asserted that the contention that it had not presented no Federal question. Speaking through Mr. Justice Bradley, the court said (p. 134, L. ed. p. 590):

"Where a state court refuses to give effect to the judgment of a court of the United States rendered upon the point indispute, and with jurisdiction of the case and the parties, a question is undoubtedly raised which, under the act of 1867, may be brought to this court for revision. The case would be one in which a title or right is claimed under an authority exercised under the United States, and the decision is against the title or right so set up. It would thus be a case arising under the laws of the United States, establishing the circuit court and vesting it with jurisdiction; and hence it would be within the judicial power of the United States, as defined by the Constitution; and it is clearly within the chart of appellate power given to this court, over cases arising in and decided by the state courts."

In Factors' & P. Ins. Co. v. Murphy, 111 U. S. 738, 28 L. ed. 582, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679, a court of the United States sitting in bankruptcy had ordered a sale of real property of the bankrupt free from encumbrances. The property was purchased at the sale on behalf of lienholders. Subsequently one who possessed a lien on the property at the time the order was entered and sale made brought suit in a state court of Louisiana to foreclose such lien, claiming that she had not been a party to the bankruptcy proceedings, and that her lien was unaffected by the sale. The defendant, in whose name title had been taken, while averring that the plaintiff was interested in the purchase at the sale made under the order of the United States court, insisted that the lien of the mortgage of plaintiff had been extinguished by such sale. The state court having decreed in favor of plaintiff, a writ of error was prosecuted from this court. In reversing the judgment of the state court, it was said (p. 741, L. ed. p. 583, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 680):

[507] "Counsel for defendant in error deny the jurisdiction of this court and move to dismiss the writ. But it is apparent that the only controversy in the case relates to the effect to be given to the sale under the order of the district court of the United States to sell the mortgaged property free from encumbrance. Both parties assert rights under this order and sale. Plaintiffs in error assert that the sale as made was valid, and, being sold free from encumbrances, extinguished Mrs. Murphy's lien as well as others. Defendant asserts that it had the effect of discharging all other liens but hers, and thus gave her the exclusive, paramount lien on all the property so sold. Both the parties, therefore, rely upon rights under Federal authority, and as the right of plaintiff in error was denied by the court the writ of error lies."

In Avery v. Popper, 179 U. S. 305, 45 L. ed. 203, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94, the two cases last above referred to were approvingly cited, and the rule was declared to be that where a controversy in the state court presented a contention as to the validity or proper construction of an order or decree rendered by a court of the United States, a Federal question was presented reviewable by this court. P. 314, L. ed. p. 206, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 97.

In Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. v. Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. 120 U. S. 141, 30 L. ed. 614, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472. the facts were briefly these: Under a bill filed in a circuit court of the United States, a temporary injunction had been allowed after hearing, and a bond had been given under an order of the court; the injunction was perpetuated by the circuit court on the final hearing. The case was appealed to this court, and the decree of the circuit court was reversed. Suit was brought in a court of the state of Louisiana upon the injunction bond given in the Federal court, against the principal and surety in solido and against the principal alone, to recover damages for the malicious prosecution of the injunction suit in the Federal court. It was claimed by the defendants that the final decree of the circuit court of the United States, although subsequently reversed by this court, constituted probable cause, and therefore there could be no recovery on the alleged cause of action for malicious prosecution. Both the state trial court by way of instructions to the jury and the supreme court of Louisiana decided that the decree of the circuit court of the *United States did [508] not constitute probable cause, because prior to the decision of the circuit court of the United States a contrary view to that which the circuit court adopted had been announced by the highest court of the state of Louisiana. The jurisdiction of this court to review the controversy was challenged upon the very grounds now relied upon, and the court said (p. 146, L. ed. p. 617, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 475):

"It is argued by counsel for the defendant in error that this does not embrace any Federal question; that the effect to be given to a judgment or decree of the circuit court of the United States sitting in Louisiana, by the courts of that state, is to be determined by the law of Louisiana, or by some principle of general law as to which the decision of the state court is final; and that the ruling in question did not deprive the plaintiffs in error of 'any privilege or immunity specially set up or claimed under the Constitution or laws of the United States.' But this is an error. The question whether a state court has given due effect to the judgment of a court of the United States is a question arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States."

In Myers v. Block, 120 U. S. 206, 30 L. ed. 642, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525, the case came to this court on error to a state court, and involved the correctness of the construction by that court of the terms of an injunction bond given in a court of the United States. This court treated the matter of jurisdiction as one of course, held that the parties signing the bond must be presumed to have been cognizant of the order under which the bond was given, and to have contracted in reference thereto, and that the bond should be read in the light of the order; and the court applied to the interpretation of the bond its own views of the applicable principles of law.

The cases of New York L. Ins. Co. v. Hendren, 92 U. S. 286, 23 L. ed. 709; Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. Ford, 114 U. S. 635, 29 L. ed. 261, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1104; Blackburn v. Portland Gold Min. Co. 175 U. S. 571, 44 L. ed. 276, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222, and others of like character, do not conflict with the rule which we apply in this cause, and which was expounded in the cases to which we have previously referred. This results when it is observed that none of the cases [509] just above referred to involved *the construction or effect of a law of the United States or a judgment, decree, or order or other act done under and by virtue of the authority of a court of the United States or a claim of immunity thereunder.

The contention as to the prematurity of the suit presenting then a Federal controversy, the question is, Was the claim of prematurity well founded?

Previous to the bringing of the suit in the state court upon the bond, by stipulation filed in the equity cause in the United States court, upon which an order of the court was entered, the bill of complaint had been dismissed as to all the defendants but Mulvane, and it was expressly agreed that all demand for relief by way of specific performance should be withdrawn. We think that the circuit court of appeals correctly decided that the necessary effect of this agreement was to withdraw from the case all controversy on the subject of the injunction. As by the stipulation Mulvane had not waived any rights of action by reason of damages caused by the injunction, if any, but, on the contrary, his rights were expressly saved, and as the stipulation was made the basis of an order of the court which had the necessary effect to dismiss from the cause all the grounds upon which alone the rightfulness of the injunction could have been asserted, we think there was a final decision, within the import of the condition of the bond, that the injunction ought not to have been granted. As respects the argument that, by reason of the execution of the stipulation, the sureties upon the injunction bond were absolutely discharged, because thereby a final determination of the rightfulness of the allowance of the injunction was prevented, we think it obvious that the sureties when executing the bond did so subject to the right of the complainants in good faith to dismiss their bill, or to make a stipulation such as that we have referred to, which was in effect the equivalent of the dismissal of the bill in so far as all equitable relief was concerned. We are thus brought to consider the second contention, which is,

Second. *Did the claim of immunity from liability for attorneys' fees, as one of the elements of damage under the injunction bond, present a Federal question; and, if yes, [510] was it correctly decided by the court below that it was proper to award the amount of such fees in enforcing the bond?
184 U. S.

The first branch of this question has already been disposed of by the reasons given and authorities cited in the consideration of the proposition previously passed upon. It is insisted, however, that such is not the case, because, whilst it is true the courts of the United States exercise their authority under the Constitution and laws of the United States, that, as there is no express statutory authority regulating injunction bonds, therefore in determining the measure of liability on them no claim of immunity arising from an authority exercised under the United States can arise. But this is a mere form of restating the contention we have already disposed of. The test is not the particular source or form by which the authority of the United States has been conferred or is exerted, but whether such authority existed and was exercised and an immunity is claimed under it.

Besides, by express provision of the Revised Statutes (§ 617) proceedings of the courts of the United States in equity causes are subject to regulation by this court, with power to modify and change such rules. And rule No. 90, promulgated under the authority thus conferred, provides as follows:

"In all cases where the rules prescribed by this court or by the circuit court do not apply, the practice of the circuit court shall be regulated by the present practice of the High Court of Chancery in England, so far as the same may reasonably be applied consistently with the local circumstances and local conveniences of the district where the court is held, not as positive rules, but as furnishing just analogies to regulate the practice."

And it is by the force and effect of this rule that the equity courts of the United States exercise their power with respect to the exaction of security when granting writs of injunction. Russell v. Farley, 105 U. S. 433, 26 L. ed. 1060.

It follows that proceedings in courts of equity of the United States are regulated by rules promulgated by this court deriving their force from statutory authority, and the argument which we have just considered, even if it were not erroneous, *would be in- [511] apposite. The jurisdiction to review being then established, it remains only to consider whether the attorneys' fees were properly allowed by the court below as an element of damages on the bond. That they were not is settled.

In Oelrichs v. Spain, 15 Wall. 211, sub nom. Oelrichs v. Williams, 21 L. ed. 43, this court, speaking through Mr. Justice Swayne, said (p. 230, L. ed. p. 45):

"The decree of the court below was preceded by the report of a master, which the decree affirmed and followed. Upon looking into the report we find it clear and able, and we are entirely satisfied with it, except in one particular. We think that both the master and the court erred in allowing counsel fees as a part of the damages covered by the bonds.

"In Arcambel v. Wiseman, 3 Dall. 306, 1 L. ed. 613, decided by this court in 1796, it appeared 'by an estimate of the damages upon which the decree was founded, and which was annexed to the record, that a charge of $1,600 for counsel fees in the courts below had been allowed.' This court held that it 'ought not to have been allowed.' The report is very brief. The nature of the case does not appear. It is the settled rule that counsel fees cannot be included in the damages to be recovered for the infringement of a patent. Teese v. Huntingdon, 23 How. 2, 16 L. ed. 479; Whittmore v. Cutter, 1 Gall. 429, Fed. Cas. No. 17,600; Stimpson v. The Railroads, 1 Wall. Jr. 164, Fed. Cas. No. 13,456. They cannot be allowed to the gaining side in admiralty as incident to the judgment beyond the costs and fees allowed by the statute. The Baltimore, 8 Wall. 378, sub nom. The Baltimore v. Rowland, 19 L. ed. 463.

"In actions of trespass where there are no circumstances of aggravation, only compensatory damages can be recovered, and they do not include the fees of counsel. The plaintiff is no more entitled to them, if he succeed, than is the defendant if the plaintiff be defeated. Why should a distinction be made between them? In certain actions ex delicto vindictive damages may be given by the jury. In regard to that class of cases this court has said: 'It is true that damages assessed by way of example may indirectly compensate the plaintiff for money expended in counsel fees, but the amount of these fees cannot be taken as the measure of punishment or a necessary element in its infliction.' Day v. Woodworth, 13 How. 370, 371, 14 L. ed. 185.

[512] "The point here in question has never been expressly decided by this court, but it is clearly within the reasoning of the case last referred to, and we think is substantially determined by that adjudication. In debt, covenant, and assumpsit damages are recovered, but counsel fees are never included. So in equity cases, where there is no injunction bond, only the taxable costs are allowed to the complainants. The same rule is applied to the defendant, however unjust the litigation on the other side, and however large the expensa litis to which he may have been subjected. The parties in this respect are upon a footing of equality. There is no fixed standard by which the honorarium can be measured. Some counsel demand much more than others. Some clients are willing to pay more than others. More counsel may be employed than are necessary. When both client and counsel know that the fees are to be paid by the other party there is danger of abuse. A reference to a master, or an issue to a jury, might be necessary to ascertain the proper amount, and this grafted litigation might possibly be more animated and protracted than that in the original cause. It would be an office of some delicacy on the part of the court to scale down the charges, as might sometimes be necessary.

"We think the principle of disallowance rests on a solid foundation, and that the opposite rule is forbidden by the analogies of the law and sound public policy."

It is strenuously urged, however, and this was in effect the view taken by the court below, that although the rule against allowing attorneys' fees in actions on injunction bonds was thus settled by this court adversely to the right to recover such fees, as the local law was to the contrary, the injunction bond given in the Federal court must be enforced, not by the law of the forum in which it was given, but according to the rule of the local law. This proposition, again, however, but embodies the contention that the question of the allowance of attorneys' fees involved no Federal question, which has already been disposed of. For if it be true, and it undoubtedly is, that the giving of such a bond was an act done pursuant to an authority exercised under the Constitution and laws of the United States, it must follow that the bond so taken is to be interpreted with *reference to the author-[513] ity under which it was given and the principles of jurisprudence controlling such authority, and not by the local law. To hold the contrary, as we have previously pointed out, would be but to declare that although the power conferred by Congress upon this court to adopt equity rules is controlling, nevertheless the interpretations of the rules and the limitations which arise from a proper construction of them, as expounded by this court and enunciated in its decisions, are without avail. And this yet further points out the fallacy involved in the contention that the lower court, in passing upon the issues, decided merely a question of general law involving no Federal controversy. Now it is at once conceded that the decision by a state court of a question of local or of general law involving no Federal element does not as a matter of course present a Federal question. But where, on the contrary, a Federal element is specially averred and essentially involved, the duty of this court to apply to such Federal question its own conceptions of the general law we think is incontrovertible. Avery v. Popper, 179 U. S. 305, 315, 45 L. ed. 203, 207, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94.

Whilst, in the absence of authority, the foregoing considerations suffice to dispose of the case, it is also effectually concluded by authority. Bein v. Heath, 12 How. 168, 13 L. ed. 939. In that case, as in this, it was insisted that the local law should have been applied in construing and enforcing an injunction bond given in a court of the United States. But the court, in negating the contention, speaking through Mr. Chief Justice Taney, said (p. 178, L. ed. p. 944):

"Now, there is manifest error in subjecting the parties to an injunction bond, given in a proceeding in equity in a court of the United States, to the laws of the state. The proceeding in a circuit court of the United States in equity is regulated by the laws of Congress and the rules of this court made under the authority of an act of Congress. And the 90th rule declares that, when not otherwise directed, the prac-

514] tice of the High Court of Chancery in England shall be followed. The 8th rule authorizes the circuit court, both judges concurring, to modify the process and practice in their respective districts. But this applies only to forms of proceeding and *mode of practice, and certainly would not authorize the adoption of the Louisiana law, defining the rights and obligations of parties to an injunction bond. Nor do we suppose any such rule has been adopted by the court. And if it has, it is unauthorized by law, and cannot regulate the rights or obligations of the parties.

"And when an injunction is applied for in the circuit court of the United States sitting in Louisiana, the court [may] grant it or not, according to the established principles of equity, and not according to the laws and practice of the state in which there is no court of chancery, as contradistinguished from a court of common law. And they require a bond, or not, from the complainant, with sureties, before the injunction issues, as the court, in the exercise of a sound discretion, may deem it proper for the purposes of justice. And if, in the judgment of the court, the principles of equity require that a bond should be given, it prescribes the penalty and the condition also. And the condition prescribed by the court in this case, but which was not followed, is the one usually directed by the court.

"In proceeding upon such a bond, the court would have no authority to apply to it the legislative provisions of the state."

Indeed, the principles announced in Bein v. Heath were in effect but the reiteration of the doctrine previously established by this court, that a bond given in pursuance of a law of the United States was governed, as to its construction, not by the local law of a particular state, but by the principles of law as determined by this court, and operative throughout the courts of the United States. Cox v. United States, 6 Pet. 172, 8 L. ed. 359; Duncan v. United States, 7 Pet. 435, 8 L. ed. 739.

It follows from what we have stated that there was error committed in allowing the recovery of attorneys' fees as an element of damage upon the bond in question. The judgment of the Supreme Court of Kansas must be reversed, and the case remanded to that court for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion, and it is so ordered.

[515] *Mr. Justice Harlan dissenting:

This was an action in one of the courts of the state of Kansas upon an injunction bond executed in a suit in equity in the circuit court of the United States for the district of Kansas—the condition of the bond being that the obligors would pay, or cause to be paid, to the obligees, and to each of them, "all damages which they, or either of them, have already sustained, or may at any time sustain, by reason of the granting and issuing of said restraining order, or the granting and issuing of said temporary injunction, if it shall be finally decided that said restraining order or said temporary injunction ought not to have been granted."

There was a verdict and judgment against Tullock, one of the sureties in the bond. Mulvane, the plaintiff, being dissatisfied with the amount of the verdict and the rulings of the trial court, prosecuted a writ of error to the supreme court of Kansas, where the judgment was reversed and the cause remanded for another trial. Mulvane v. Tullock, 58 Kan. 622, 50 Pac. 897. That court said:

"That counsel fees are recoverable as damages upon an injunction bond has been the uniform holding of this court from the beginning, and this appears to be the view taken by most of the courts of the country. Underhill v. Spencer, 25 Kan. 71; Loofborow v. Shaffer, 28 Kan. 71; Loofborow v. Shaffer, 29 Kan. 415; Nimocks v. Welles, 42 Kan. 39, 21 Pac. 787; 10 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 999, and cases cited. It appears, however, that there are some decisions of the Federal courts to the contrary, holding that the obligation of an injunction bond imposes no duty upon the obligor to pay the attorney's fees if the injunction is wrongfully obtained. Arcambel v. Wiseman, 3 Dall. 306, 1 L. ed. 613; Oelrichs v. Spain, 15 Wall. 211, sub nom. Oelrichs v. Williams, 21 L. ed. 43. It is contended that, as the bond was given in a case in one of the Federal courts, the obligation must be interpreted in accordance with the decisions of those courts. The claim is that the rules and decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States have the force of legislative declarations; that they enter into, and become a part of, the *contract of the sureties, [516] who can only be held liable for such consequences as are the direct result of the breach and were within their contemplation at the time the bond was executed. No statute, however, prescribed the conditions of the bond nor limited the extent of liability thereon. It is true that it was within the general equitable power of the Federal court to prescribe the conditions upon which the injunction should issue. It could have granted an injunction without requiring a bond, or it might, in its discretion, have imposed such terms as it saw fit as a condition of granting the injunction. It did require the giving of a bond, and the bond was executed in accordance with the order of the court. The bond executed is in the ordinary form; is in the nature of a contract; and the liability of the obligors depends, not on the Federal Constitution or a congressional act, but on the proper interpretation of the bond itself. In the absence of a statute fixing the measure of damages or limiting the recovery, we think the bond should be viewed in the light of an independent contract, and is to be interpreted by the general principles of the common law. It is not a mere incident of the injunction proceeding, nor can this, which is an ordinary action at law, be regarded as auxiliary to the proceeding in the Federal court. Being an independent contract, actionable in any state court where service upon the sureties can be obtained, the interpretation of the forum applies. As the action on the bond could be brought in the state court,—and, indeed, the present action could not have been brought in any other,—it cannot be said that the sureties contracted with reference to the view of the law taken by the Federal courts. They knew that the obligation was enforceable in the courts of the state of which the plaintiff and defendants were all residents, and that the highest court of that state had consistently held that counsel fees were recoverable upon an injunction bond. That the bond was given in a Federal court, where a different rule of interpretation obtains, has not been deemed to affect the state court in determining the liability upon such bond when suit was brought thereon. Mitchell v. Hawley, 79 Cal. 301, 21 Pac. 833; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Shepley, 1 Mo. App. 254; Wash v. Lackland*, 8 Mo. App. 122; Aiken v. Leathers, 40 La. Ann. 23, 3 So. 357; Corcoran v. Judson, 24 N. Y. 106.” In addition to Corcoran v. Judson, 24 N. Y. 106, cited by the state court, see Coates v. Coates, 1 Duer, 664; Edwards v. Bodine, 11 Paige, 224, and Sedgw. Damages, 177; also Barton v. Fisk, 30 N. Y. 171; Behrens v. McKenzie, 23 Iowa, 342, 92 Am. Dec. 428; Ford v. Loomis, 62 Iowa, 588, 16 N. W. 193, 17 N. W. 910; Cook v. Chapman, 41 N. J. Eq. 154, 2 Atl. 286; Noble v. Arnold, 23 Ohio St. 270; Morris v. Price, 2 Blackf. 457; Derby Bank v. Heath, 45 N. H. 524; Ryan v. Anderson, 25 Ill. 372; Garrett v. Logan, 19 Ala. 344.

[517] At the second trial Mulvane obtained a verdict and judgment which embraced his counsel fees in the injunction suit, and that judgment having been affirmed by the supreme court of Kansas (61 Kan. 650, 60 Pac. 749), it is sought to have it reviewed by this court under § 709 of the Revised Statutes, upon the ground that by the action of the supreme court of Kansas the plaintiff in error, Tullock, was denied an “immunity” belonging to him under an “authority exercised under the United States.” The immunity so claimed is that he, Tullock, was erroneously held to be liable for the attorneys’ fees which the obligee in such bond paid or became bound to pay in or about obtaining or dissolving the injunction in the suit in the Federal court.

Can this court review the action of the state court upon any such a question? Is it true that the alleged “immunity” arises from an “authority exercised under the United States?”

In Avery v. Popper, 179 U. S. 305, 314, 315, 45 L. ed. 203, 207, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94, 97, 98, this court, speaking by Mr. Justice Brown, said: “With respect to writs of error from this court to judgments of state courts in actions between purchasers under judicial proceedings in the Federal courts and parties making adverse claims to the property sold, the true rule to be deduced from these authorities is this: That the writ will lie, if the validity or construction of the judgment of the Federal court, or the regularity of the proceedings under the execution, are assailed; but if it be admitted that the judgment was valid, and those proceedings were regular, that the purchaser took the title of the defendant in the execution, and the issue relates to the title to the property, as between the defendant *in the execution or the purchaser under it, and the party making the adverse claim, no Federal question is presented—in other words, it must appear that the decision was made against a right claimed under Federal authority, in the language of Rev. Stat. § 709.” Again: “This was a question either of local law or of general law. If of local law, of course the decision of the supreme court of Texas is binding upon us. If of general law, as it involves no Federal element, it is equally binding in this proceeding, since only Federal rights are capable of being raised upon writs of error to state courts. Conceding that, if the question had arisen on appeal from a circuit court of the United States, we might have come to a different conclusion, it by no means follows that we can do so upon a writ of error to a state court, whose opinion upon a question of general law is not reviewable here.”

Surely this case does not involve a Federal immunity simply because the bond in suit was taken under the authority of the circuit court of the United States. If it does, then this court erred in its decision in Provident Sav. L. Assur. Soc. v. Ford, 114 U. S. 635, 29 L. ed. 261, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1104 (reaffirmed in many subsequent cases), in which it was contended that a suit upon a judgment rendered by a Federal court necessarily involved questions arising under the laws of the United States. That contention was overruled. This court, speaking by Mr. Justice Bradley, said: “What is a judgment but a security of record showing a debt due from one person to another? It is as much a mere security as a treasury note, or a bond of the United States. If A brings an action against B, trover or otherwise, for the withholding of such securities, it is not, therefore, a case arising under the laws of the United States, although the whole value of the securities depends upon the fact of their being the obligations of the United States. So if A have title to land by patent of the United States and brings an action against B for trespass or waste, committed by cutting timber, or by mining and carrying away precious ores, or the like, it is not, therefore, a case arising under the laws of the United States. It is simply the case of an ordinary right of property sought to be enforced. A suit on a judgment is nothing more, unless some question is raised in the case (as might *be raised in any of the cases specified), distinctly involving the laws of the United States—such a question, for example, as was ineffectually attempted to be raised by the defendant in this case. If such a question were raised, then it is conceded it would be a case arising under the laws of the United States.”

In Blackburn v. Portland Gold Min. Co. 175 U. S. 571, 44 L. ed. 276, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222, it was held that the judgment of the supreme court of a state could not be reviewed simply because the case involved a contest between rival claimants of a mine under certain sections of the Revised Statutes. To the same effect are Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Bell, 176 U. S. 321, 44 L. ed. 486, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; De Lamar's Nevada Gold Min. Co. v. Nesbitt, 177 U. S. 523, 44 L. ed. 872, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715; Shoshone Min. Co. v. Rutter, 177 U. S. 505, 44 L. ed. 864, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 726.

There is no question in this case as to the validity of any authority exercised under the United States. The only question is as to the rights of one party and the liabilities of the other party under an ordinary injunction bond. What those rights and liabilities are cannot be determined by reference to the Constitution or any statute of the United States. Nor has any rule been adopted by the circuit court of the United States limiting the legal effect of the words of the bond or declaring what damages should be covered by it. Of course, if Congress had enacted a statute prescribing the form of injunction bonds, and directing what liabilities should arise thereon against the obligors, that statute would control. But no such statute has been passed, and the question is left to be determined by the principles of general law.

Reference has been made to Oelrichs v. Spain, 15 Wall. 211, sub nom. Oelrichs v. Williams, 21 L. ed. 43, in support of the proposition that the question presents an "immunity" which exists under Federal authority. That case was brought in a circuit court of the United States. It does decide that attorneys' fees should not be allowed in a suit on injunction bonds. But there is in the opinion no hint even that the decision as to what damages can be allowed in such a suit rests upon a Federal ground. On the contrary, the court, after citing some authorities, says that "the principle of disallowance rests on a solid foundation, and that the opposite view is forbidden by the analogies of the law and sound policy."

[520] *We have been referred also to equity rule 90 of this court, which declares that "the practice of the circuit court shall be regulated by the present practice of the High Court of Chancery in England, so far as the same may reasonably be applied consistently with the local circumstances and local convenience of the district where the court is held, not as positive rules, but as furnishing just analogies to regulate the practice." I cannot perceive that this rule has any pertinency, as it relates merely to practice, and not to the principles of law by which the rights and obligations of parties to injunction bonds are determinable.

Bein v. Heath, 12 How. 168, 179, 13 L. ed. 939, 943, has been cited as showing that in allowing attorneys' fees the state court invaded a Federal right. That was a suit in the circuit court of the United States on an injunction bond taken in the same court. The trial court determined the case according to a statute of Louisiana defining the rights and obligations of the parties. This 184 U. S.

court held that "in proceeding upon such a bond, the court would have no authority to apply to it the legislative provisions of the state. The obligors would be answerable for any damage or cost which the adverse party sustained, by reason of the injunction, from the time it was issued until it was dissolved, but to nothing more. They would certainly not be liable for any aggravated interest on the debt, nor for the debt itself, unless it was lost by the delay, nor for the fees paid to the counsel for conducting the suit." Absolutely nothing is to be found in the opinion of the court sustaining the proposition that the rights and obligations of the parties to an injunction bond are determinable upon any principle of a Federal nature. The court referred to the 90th and 8th equity rules, as furnishing authority for the taking of injunction bonds, but took care to say that those rules relate only to "forms of proceeding and mode of practice," and not to "the rights and obligations of parties to injunction bonds." And what was said in that case touching the rights and obligations of parties to injunction bonds was an expression of the views of the state court as to the general principles of law applicable in such cases. This is apparent from the extract given in the opinion of the court *from the opinion in Bein v. Heath. [521] In Meyers v. Block, cited in the opinion in this case, 120 U. S. 206, 214, 30 L. ed. 642, 644, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525, 529, the court said that there was no question "as to the power of a court of equity to impose any terms, in its discretion, as a condition of granting or continuing an injunction." Russell v. Parley, 105 U. S. 433, 26 L. ed. 1060. Consequently, the terms being prescribed, their meaning, in the absence of a statute, depends upon general, not Federal, law.

Cases have been cited which show that this court can re-examine the final judgment of the highest court of a state which fails to give due effect to a judgment, decree, or order of a court of the United States. But such cases have no pertinency to the present discussion; for in the present case the state court did not disregard any judgment, decree, or order of the Federal court. It did nothing more than enforce its view as to the rights and obligations of parties under a bond theretofore taken in a suit in a Federal court.

Meyers v. Block, cited in the opinion, shows that our jurisdiction in that case was maintained solely because the case involved the question whether the injunction bonds there in suit were in conformity with the order of the Federal court in which they were taken.

In New York L. Ins. Co. v. Hendren, 92 U. S. 287, 23 L. ed. 709, which was brought here from the highest court of Virginia, it was said: "The case, therefore, having been presented to the court below for decision upon principles of general law alone, and it nowhere appearing that the Constitution, laws, treaties, or executive proclamations of the United States were necessarily involved in the decision, we have no jurisdiction."

tion." In United States v. Thompson, 93 U. S. 586, 23 L. ed. 982, which came here from the highest court of Maryland, and in which suit the United States was a party, seeking payment of a debt it held against an insolvent partnership, the court said: "It is not contended that this decision is repugnant to the Constitution, or any law or treaty of the United States; but the argument is that, as the check of McFreely & Hopper was not paid, it did not pay their debt. Whether this is so or not does not depend upon any statute of the United States, but upon the principles of general law alone. We have *many times held that we have no power to review the decisions of the state courts upon such questions. Bethell v. Demarct, 10 Wall. 537, 19 L. ed. 1007; Delmas v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. 14 Wall. 666, 20 L. ed. 757; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Hendren, 92 U. S. 287, 23 L. ed. 709; Rockhold v. Rockhold, 92 U. S. 130, 23 L. ed. 507." In San Francisco v. Scott, 111 U. S. 768, 28 L. ed. 593, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 688, referring to the question as to the effect of an alcalde grant of the pueblo title, and which was decided by the supreme court of California, it was said: "This does not depend on any legislation of Congress, or on the terms of the treaty, but on the effect of the conquest upon the powers of local government in the pueblo under the Mexican laws. That is a question of general public law, as to which the decisions of the state court are not reviewable here. This has been many times decided."

Let it be observed that the jurisdiction of the state court, as between the parties and as to the subject-matter, is not disputed. The question before it was as to the extent of the liability of the sureties in the injunction bond. The decision of that question did not depend, in any degree, upon the Constitution or statutes of the United States. It depended entirely upon the meaning of the words of the bond, and the principles of law applicable to such an instrument. It was manifestly, therefore, a question of general law as distinguished from Federal law. Upon such a question the state court was entitled to give effect to its own views. The question could not become a question of Federal law by reason alone of the fact that the bond was executed under the authority of the circuit court; for, as already said, neither the order under which the bond was taken, the validity of the bond, nor the authority of the court was disputed. Nor could it become a Federal question because of any decision by this court in cases therefore decided between other parties. Suppose this court had not, prior to the trial of this case, expressed any opinion upon that question of general law. Could it then have been contended that the judgment complained of denied any Federal immunity? If not, then the Federal immunity now claimed arises entirely from the failure of the state court to take the same view of a question of general law which this court took in prior cases between other parties. There has been a wide difference of opinion between this court and some of the state *courts upon certain questions of general law. [523] But it has never been supposed that anyone has such a vested interest in the views of this court upon questions of general law that he may complain of the refusal of a state court to accept those views as denying him an "immunity" existing or belonging to him, in virtue of an "authority exercised under the United States." In Winona & St. P. R. Co. v. Plainview, 143 U. S. 371, 390, 36 L. ed. 193, 199, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 530, 536, which came to this court from the highest court of Minnesota, it was said: "The fact that the supreme court of Minnesota, in the present cases, did not acquiesce in the correctness of the decision of the circuit court of the United States, did not constitute a Federal question. Neither the Constitution of the United States nor any act of Congress guarantees to a suitor that the same rule of law shall be applied to him by a state court which would be applied if his citizenship were such that his suit might be brought in a Federal court."

Or, suppose two actions were brought in the Federal court (there being diversity of citizenship in each case), one on an injunction bond, executed in a circuit court of the United States, and the other upon a like bond executed in a state court. What would be the ruling as to the measure of damages? Would the court disallow counsel fees in the first case and allow them in the second case where the highest court of the state had established the principle that counsel fees could be recovered? Each branch of the latter question must, upon the principles of the opinion just delivered, be answered in the affirmative. But they cannot be so answered without placing the decisions of the courts upon a question of general law on the same basis as a legislative enactment prescribing the measure of damages in suits on injunction bonds.

Being unable to assent to the principle that a Federal immunity arises when a state court, in determining a question not involving the Constitution or laws of the United States nor the validity of an authority exercised under the United States, reaches a conclusion upon a question of general law different from that announced in prior cases by this court, and denying our authority to compel a state court to disregard its own views *upon a question of general law, I am [524] constrained to dissent from the opinion and judgment.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller and Mr. Justice Brown concur in this opinion.

SAMUEL MONROE and David M. Richardson, Late Copartners Trading as Monroe & Richardson, Appts.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 524-530.)

Public contracts—approval of chief engineer of army.

The approval of the chief of engineers of the United States army, required by a contract for constructing a canal, which contains an express provision that the contract "shall be subject to the approval" of such engineer, is a future approval of the contract as written, and cannot be satisfied by the engineer's previous acts, such as his authorization of the acceptance of the contractor's bid, and the furnishing of a blank on which to make the contract.

[No. 98.]

Submitted January 14, 1902. Decided March 10, 1902.

APPEAL from a judgment of the Court of Claims dismissing a petition by contractors against the United States. Affirmed.

See same case below, 35 Ct. Cl. 199.

Statement by Mr. Justice McKenna:

The appellees brought suit against the United States in the court of claims for the sum of $25,485.89, for expenses incurred and for damages. The latter consisted of losses suffered by them by the breach of a contract entered into by the United States through W. S. Marshall, captain in the corps of engineers. The contract was made in pursuance of an advertisement made by the United States, inviting proposals for constructing a canal to be known as the Illinois & Mississippi Canal, upon the terms, conditions, and specifications set forth in an exhibit which was attached to and made a part of the petition.

The contract contained the following clause: "This contract shall be subject to approval of the chief of engineers, United States army." There was no averment that the contract had been so approved, and the United States demurred. The demurrer stated: "Not only does the contract itself, a copy of which is attached as above, fail to show that the same was ever approved by the chief of engineers, U. S. A., but the [525] testimony in the case fully and conclusively shows, and the same is not denied by the claimant, that said contract has never been approved by the said chief of engineers, U. S. A., in any manner whatsoever."

It was prayed that the petition "be quashed and the action be dismissed accordingly."

The action of the court is expressed in the following order: "Allowed in part and judgment for defendants on findings of fact filed."

As a conclusion of law from the findings the court ordered the petition dismissed and a formal judgment was entered accordingly. 35 Ct. Cl. 199. This appeal was then taken.

The findings of fact are as follows:

On or about the 25th of May, 1892, the United States through W. S. Marshall, a captain in its corps of engineers, advertised for proposals for constructing a canal to be known as the Illinois & Mississippi Canal. The claimants submitted a bid to do certain parts of the work. The bid was accepted by
184 U. S.

Captain Marshall, acting under an authority contained in a letter from the chief of engineers of the United States army.

"On the 20th day of July, 1892, Captain Marshall forwarded to claimants the formal contract annexed to and forming part of the petition, and bonds to be executed within ten days thereafter, all which claimants fully executed and returned to the said engineer on the 28th day of July, 1892, which formal contract was duly signed by Captain Marshall. The form of the contract had been prepared by the chief of engineers and forwarded to Captain Marshall for use in such cases.

"Immediately upon receiving notice of the acceptance of their said bid, claimants began preparation for the commencement of said work. They shipped their plant from Portsmouth, Ohio, to Rock Island, Illinois; rented and furnished a boat and had the same taken to Rock river, in the vicinity of the work, to be used as a boarding house for men employed on the work; built stables for their teams; hired men and teams; purchased a large amount of plant, consisting of shovels, plows, scrapers, and the like; and generally equipped themselves in a proper manner to expeditiously perform the [526] work; and commenced the work with men and teams about the 1st day of August, 1892.

"On the 6th day of August, 1892, without fault on their part and while the work was progressing, claimants were stopped by the United States and their contract abrogated against their consent, and the work that they had contracted to do readvertised, for the alleged reason that by the act of August 1, 1892, no work could be prosecuted by the United States without a stipulation in the contract binding the contractor not to permit his workmen to labor more than eight hours per day, and the United States refused to permit claimants to continue the work either under the terms of the contract or under the terms of the law of August 1, 1892, but immediately, and against the protest of claimants, readvertised and let the said work to other parties.

"In the prosecution of said work under said contract, prior to the abrogation thereof on August 6, 1892, claimants expended the sum of $678.21, which has not been paid to them.

"By reason of the abrogation of said contract claimants lost the following sums expended and were deprived of the following profits which they would have made in the execution of said work:

Expenses incurred	$678 21
Profits if they had been permitted to perform	7,150 00"

Mr. John C. Fay submitted the cause for appellants.

Assistant Attorney General Pradt and Mr. Franklin W. Collins submitted the cause for appellee.

Contentions of counsel sufficiently appear in the opinion.

[526] *Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

We agree with counsel that the question in the case is a narrow one. It is not denied that the approval of the chief of engineers was necessary to the legal consummation of the contract. It is, however, insisted that the approval was not required to be formally expressed, but could and did [527] consist of *acts preceding the written instrument, though the latter contained the terms and covenants of the parties. In other words, it is contended that the advertisement, claimant's bid made under competition, which was submitted to the chief of engineers, who, after some correspondence with the engineer in Chicago in relation thereto, had in writing directed it to be accepted, the preparation of the formal contract on a blank furnished by the chief of engineers, its execution by both the officer in charge and the claimants, in due form and in strict accordance with the provision of § 3744 of the Revised Statutes, constituted an approval.

We are unable to assent to this view. It is the final written instrument that the statute contemplates shall be executed and signed by the parties, and which shall contain and be the proof of their obligations and rights. And it was such written instrument that was to be approved by the chief of engineers. The approval was to be a future act. The provision of the contract was: "This contract" (that is, the instrument to which the contracting officer and the claimants attached their signatures and seals) "shall be subject to approval of the chief of engineers of the United States army." The approval, therefore, did not consist of something precedent, but was to consist of something subsequent. That which preceded was inducement only, and contemplated an instrument of binding and remedial form, and hence to contain covenants imposing obligations and giving rights and remedies, containing provisions for the time of performance and the manner of it; provisions for changes and for extra work—indeed, of the provisions which prudence and necessity require and those which the statutes of the United States might require. And the final right to see that this was done, the parties agreed, should be devolved on the chief of engineers, and it was not satisfied by prior instructions. In other words, a final reviewing and approving judgment was given to the chief of engineers, and was given by a covenant so expressed as to constitute a condition precedent to the taking effect of the contract. If the covenant did not mean that, it was idle. Construed as prospective, it had a natural purpose. The engagement of the [528] parties *did not end with the bid and its acceptance. The performance of the work was to be secured, and the final judgment of what was necessary for that, as we have already said, was to be given by the chief of engineers.

The case of United States v. Speed, 8 Wall. 78, 19 L. ed. 449, cited by appellant, is not apposite. In that case the facts were that the Secretary of War, through the Commissary General, "authorized Major Simonds, at Louisville, in October, 1864, and during the late Rebellion, to buy hogs and enter into contracts for slaughtering and packing them to furnish pork for the army. On the 27th of October, Simonds, for the United States, and Speed, made a contract by which the live hogs, the cooperage, salt, and other necessary materials, were to be delivered to Speed by the United States, and he was to do the work of slaughtering and packing. The contract was agreed to be subject to the approval of the Commissary General of Subsistence. No advertisements for bids or proposals were put out before making the contract, nor did the contract contain a provision that it should terminate at such times as the Commissary General should direct. After the contract was made, Simonds wrote—as the facts were found under the rules, by the court of claims, to be—to the Commissary General, informing him substantially of its terms; but no copy of it nor the contract itself was presented to the Commissary General for formal approval. The Commissary General thereupon wrote to Simonds, expressing his satisfaction at the progress made, and adding: "The whole subject of porkpacking at Louisville is placed subject to your direction under the advice of Colonel Kilburn."'

After reciting those facts this court said by Mr. Justice Miller: "We are of the opinion that, taking all this together, it is a finding by the court as a question of fact that the contract was approved by that officer; and inasmuch as neither the instrument itself nor any rule of law prescribes the mode in which this approval shall be evidenced, that a jury would have been justified in finding as the court did."

In United States v. Speed, therefore, the acts which were held to constitute an approval of the contract relied upon were *subsequent to the contract, and referred to it. [529] In the case at bar it is stated in the opinion of the court of claims that after the contract was signed it was mailed "to the chief of engineers in Washington for his approval," and that "it was immediately disapproved and returned to the officer (engineer in charge at Chicago) with instructions to readvertise the work."

The declaration, in the opinion of the court of claims, that the contract was disapproved, is asserted to be incorrect by claimants, and the findings are quoted to show that the contract was abrogated, not disapproved. That is undoubtedly the expression of the finding, but its meaning is manifest. An order to the officer in charge to abrogate the contract was certainly a very definite and unmistakable disapproval of it. At any rate, there was no approval of it, and that was a necessary condition to its final effect and obligation.

It is further urged that the terms of the contract were not disapproved, and that the action of the chief of engineers was "for the alleged reason that by the act of August 1, 1892, no work could be prosecuted by the United States without a stipulation in the contract binding the contractor not to permit his workmen to labor more than eight hours per day." It may be assumed that the chief of engineers considered that the contract took effect by his approval, and that if he approved it he would incur the penalties of the statute. But, however that may be, the reasons for his action is not open to our inquiry. The contract was not approved, and how can the legal consequence of that be escaped? We could not have compelled the approval of the contract, and we cannot treat it as approved, and adjudge rights as upon the performance of a condition which was not performed.

This case has some features of hardship. They are, however, explained and somewhat lessened by the facts stated in the opinion of the court of claims. It is there stated:

"The contract bears date the 19th July, 1892. It provides in terms that the contractors 'shall commence work on or before the 1st day of August, 1892,' but it appears by evidence aliunde that the instrument was not mailed to the contractors for signature until the 20th July, 1892; that it was [530] returned for corrections; *that it was not finally mailed for signature until the 27th of July, 1892, and that it was not signed by the contractors until some day between the 27th of July and the 1st of August, 1892. On the faith of the agreement executed by the contracting officer, but without his knowledge or direction, the contractors proceeded to make ready for their work and, indeed, performed, to some extent, incurring thereby a loss of $678.21."

And, further, that "the work was done without the knowledge or direction of the officer in charge, and no benefit resulted thereby to the defendants" (United States).

Judgment affirmed.

MISSOURI, KANSAS, & TEXAS RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

JOHN S. ELLIOTT.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 530-540.)

Appeal—highest state court to which writ of error may issue—injunction bond—allowance of attorneys' fees—rule of Federal courts.

1. The actual decision of a Federal question in denying a rehearing is sufficient to give jurisdiction on writ of error to a state court from the Supreme Court of the United States, although an attempt to raise that question

NOTE.—On Federal jurisdiction over state courts; necessity of Federal question—see notes to Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267, and Kipley v. Illinois ex rel. Akin, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

As to what is a Federal question; when considered—see note to Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884.

184 U. S.

for the first time on motion for rehearing is usually too late.

2. The fact that a state court, in deciding a Federal question, erroneously declares that no Federal question exists, does not preclude a review of its decision on writ of error from the United States Supreme Court.
3. The Kansas city court of appeals is the court to which a writ of error will be issued by the Supreme Court of the United States to review a Federal question decided by it, when the supreme court of the state has decided that it cannot review the decision.
4. Attorneys' fees cannot be allowed as damages on an injunction bond given in a Federal court.
5. The rule of the Federal courts must govern as to the allowance of attorneys' fees on an injunction bond given in a Federal court, though the action on the bond is brought in a state court.

[No. 148.]

Argued and Submitted January 29, 30, 1902. Decided March 10, 1902.

IN ERROR to the Kansas City Court of Appeals for the State of Missouri to review a decision in favor of the plaintiff in an action on an injunction bond. Reversed. See same case below, 77 Mo. App. 652.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

The action below was brought by Elliott in the state circuit court of Cooper county, Missouri, against the railway company, plaintiff in error herein. Recovery was sought upon an injunction bond given in an equity cause in a suit in the circuit court of *the United States for the central division [531] of the western district of Missouri. The railway company was complainant in the equity cause, and Elliott was defendant. The circuit court of the United States, as the result of a mandate of the circuit court of appeals, entered an order dissolving the injunction, and thereupon this action was commenced. The damages which it was alleged were embraced in the condition of the bond were averred to consist of payments made for attorneys' fees, traveling and other similar expenses of the plaintiff, asserted to have been disbursed during the course of the litigation in the United States court.

The answer consisted of a general denial, and alleged that the equity suit in which the bond was given was made necessary to enable the defendant to make its defense to an action at law, which had prior to the equity suit been brought against the railway company by Elliott. The cause was tried by the court without a jury. It appeared on the trial that in dismissing the bill in the equity cause the statutory allowance to attorneys and other costs had been taxed, and paid by the complainants in the equity cause in the United States circuit court. No objection was interposed at the trial to evidence introduced for the plaintiff as to the value of attorneys' services and the other sums disbursed for the expenses alleged in the petition. At the close of the trial the court, over the objection of the defendant, declared the law to be that the plaintiff was entitled to recover his reasonable personal expenses and reasonable attorneys' fees incurred for the services of attorneys in procuring the dissolution of the injunction. The following, among other prayers asked by the defendant, were refused:

"2. The court declares the law to be that the plaintiff is not entitled to recover as damages on the injunction bond sued on any sum which he may have paid out or become liable for as attorneys' fees."

"5. The court declares the law to be that the plaintiff, having received the amount taxed in his favor as attorneys' fees as part of the costs in the equity suit mentioned in the pleadings and evidence in this case, he cannot now recover anything on account of attorneys' fees in this case."

532] *Judgment having been entered in favor of plaintiff and a motion for a new trial having been overruled, an appeal was taken to the Kansas City court of appeals, and the judgment was affirmed. In the course of its opinion the court recited the contentions of the defendant, and held each of them to be untenable. These contentions were thus stated by the court:

"1. Defendant's objections to the judgment below may be thus stated: First, that there was no breach of the conditions of the bond in that it was not alleged or proved that any damages had been previously adjudged against the defendant, whereas the condition of the bond is that defendant 'should pay all sums of money damages and costs that shall be adjudged against it,' etc.; and, secondly, it is contended that as the injunction bond was given in a proceeding pending in the United States court, the damages must be fixed and determined according to the rules and practice of the Federal courts; that attorneys' fees are not there considered elements of damage in suits on injunction bonds, and that therefore our state courts should apply the same rule in suits on bonds given in the Federal courts; and thirdly, it is insisted that the trial court erroneously allowed as damages attorneys' fees for defending the entire case—that the injunction was merely incidental to the principal case, and no attorneys' fees were paid to secure its dissolution." [77 Mo. App. 659.]

A motion for a rehearing was thereafter filed, in which, among other things, it was contended that the cause involved a Federal question, "for the reason that the controversy in this suit arises under the authority of the United States, and under the laws of the United States governing and applicable to United States courts," and the court was asked in the event that it should refuse to grant a rehearing, to transfer the case to the supreme court of the state of Missouri. "for the reason that a Federal question is involved, and because the subject of the controversy of this suit arises under the authority of the United States and under the exercise of such authority, and under the laws of the United States governing and controlling the courts of the United States and the proceedings therein." The motion for a rehearing having been overruled, it appears *from a stipulation contained in the record that an application was made to the supreme court of the state of Missouri for a writ of prohibition against the judges of the said Kansas City court of appeals to restrain the further exercise of jurisdiction in the cause, and to require the record and proceedings to be certified to the supreme court. This application was denied. 154 Mo. 300, 55 S. W. 470.

Thereupon the present writ of error was allowed, and the record of the cause was brought here from the Kansas City court of appeals.

Mr. George P. B. Jackson argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The case involves a Federal question, because the construction of the contract evidenced by the injunction bond draws in question an authority exercised under the United States, and because the measure of liability upon that bond depends upon the laws of the United States, and rules of court made by authority of such laws.

Bein v. Heath, 12 How. 168, 13 L. ed. 939; Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 817, 6 L. ed. 223; Meyers v. Block, 120 U. S. 206, 30 L. ed. 642, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525; Aiken v. Leathers, 40 La. Ann. 23, 3 So. 357; Leslie v. Brown, 32 C. C. A. 556, 61 U. S. App. 277, 90 Fed. 171; Johnson v. Christian, 125 U. S. 642, 31 L. ed. 820, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 989, 1135; Lacassagne v. Chapuis, 144 U. S. 119, 36 L. ed. 368, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 659; Southern Kansas R. Co. v. Briscoe, 144 U. S. 133, 36 L. ed. 377, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; Northern P. R. Co. v. Anato, 144 U. S. 465, 36 L. ed. 506, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 740; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Cox, 145 U. S. 593, 36 L. ed. 829, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; Carey v. Houston & T. C. R. Co., 161 U. S. 115, 40 L. ed. 638, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 537; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 42 L. ed. 878, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; Wood v. Drake, 70 Fed. 881; Walker v. Windsor Nat. Bank, 5 C. C. A. 421, 5 U. S. App. 423, 56 Fed. 76; Houser v. Clayton, 3 Woods, 273, Fed. Cas. No. 6,739; Johnson v. New Orleans Nat. Bkg. Asso., 33 La. Ann. 479; Boek v. Perkins, 139 U. S. 628, 35 L. ed. 314, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 677; Feibelman v. Packard, 109 U. S. 421, 27 L. ed. 984, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 319; Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. v. Butchers' Union S. II. & L. S. L. Co., 120 U. S. 141, 30 L. ed. 614, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472.

It is not necessary to deny the validity of the authority invoked as a protection.

Clements v. Berry, 11 How. 398, 13 L. ed. 745; Factors' & T. Ins. Co. v. Murphy, 111 U. S. 738, 28 L. ed. 582, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679; Dupasseeur v. Rohercau, 21 Wall. 130, 22 L. ed. 588; Embry v. Palmer, 107 U. S. 3, 27 L. ed. 346, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; Palmer v. Hussey, 119 U. S. 96, 30 L. ed. 362, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158; Etheridge v. Sperry, 139 U. S. 266, 35 L. ed. 171, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep.

565; Buck v. Colbath, 3 Wall. 334, 18 L. ed. 257; Central Nat. Bank v. Stevens, 169 U. S. 432, 42 L. ed. 807, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403.

Attorneys' fees are not recoverable on injunction bonds given in the United States courts.

Oelrichs v. Spain, 15 Wall. 211, sub nom. Oelrichs v. Williams, 21 L. ed. 43; Bein v. Leath, 12 How. 168, 13 L. ed. 939.

There can be no recovery of damages in an injunction suit except on the injunction bond. The right of recovery depends entirely upon the bond.

St. Louis v. St. Louis Gaslight Co. 82 Mo. 349; Teasdale v. Jones, 40 Mo. App. 243; Campbell v. Carroll, 35 Mo. App. 640; Keber v. Mercantile Bank, 4 Mo. App. 195.

The law in force at the time the bond is made is to be considered as incorporated in it, and a part of the contract.

Mix v. Vail, 86 Ill. 40; 2 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 466g, 466i.

The law and the rules of procedure existing and controlling in a Federal court, where an injunction bond is given, afford the proper guide for any court in which a suit upon that bond may be brought.

Schuster v. Weiss, 114 Mo. 158, 19 L. R. A. 182, 21 S. W. 438; Olcutt v. Fond du Lac County, 16 Wall. 690, 21 L. ed. 387; Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 27 L. ed. 359, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Cox v. United States, 6 Pet. 172, 8 L. ed. 359; Duncan v. United States, 7 Pet. 435, 8 L. ed. 739; Bank of United States v. Donnally, 8 Pet. 361, 8 L. ed. 974; Andrews v. Pond, 13 Pet. 65, 10 L. ed. 61; Scudder v. Union Nat. Bank, 91 U. S. 406, 23 L. ed. 245; Liverpool & G. W. Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co. 129 U. S. 397, 32 L. ed. 788, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469; Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Clements, 140 U. S. 226, sub nom. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Pettus, 35 L. ed. 497, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822.

Where there is no statute prescribing the conditions of the bond, they are determined by the rules of the court and the discretion of the chancellor.

Murfree, Official Bonds, § 401; Newell v. Partee, 10 Humph. 325; Nolan v. Johns, 27 Mo. App. 502; Rubelman Hardware Co. v. Greve, 18 Mo. App. 6; Teasdale v. Jones, 40 Mo. App. 243; Kincaly v. Staed, 55 Mo. App. 176.

The bond is a part of the record in the case and of the court in which it is given.

Pickett v. Boyd, 11 Lea, 498; Murfree, Official Bonds, § 401.

The Federal question was so necessarily involved in the case stated in the petition and in the defense relied upon that the court could not render judgment without passing upon the effect of the authority exercised by the United States circuit court in which the bond sued on was given.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; F. G. Oxley Stave Co. v. Butler County, 166 U. S. 648, 41 L. ed. 1149, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709; Kipley v. Illinois, 170 U. S. 182, 42 L. ed. 998, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 550; 184 U. S.

Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. v. Iowa Homestead Co. 123 U. S. 552, 31 L. ed. 202, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 217; Proprietors of Bridges v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 1 Wall. 116, 17 L. ed. 571; Furman v. Nichol, 8 Wall. 44, 19 L. ed. 370.

Since the Federal question was presented to the court of appeals, and since that court entertained the question, considered it, and decided it, and since that was the highest court of the state in which a decision could be had, under the rulings of both that court and the supreme court of the state, it is sufficient for the purpose of having the case reviewed in this court.

Davis v. Packard, 6 Pet. 41, 8 L. ed. 312; Armstrong v. Athens County Treasurer, 16 Pet. 281, 10 L. ed. 965; Kaukauna Water Power Co. v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 142 U. S. 254, 35 L. ed. 1004, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 173; Morrison v. Watson, 154 U. S. 111, 38 L. ed. 927, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 995; Tregoe v. Modesto Irrig. Dist. 164 U. S. 179, 41 L. ed. 395, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 952; Central Nat. Bank v. Stevens, 169 U. S. 432, 42 L. ed. 807, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Marehant v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 153 U. S. 380, 38 L. ed. 751, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 894; Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 38 L. ed. 896, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108.

By virtue of the statutory provisions of the state governing the practice of the appellate courts, and of the reasoning of this court with reference to the opinions of the state courts, the briefs of counsel become part of the record for the purpose of ascertaining what questions were presented in the state court.

Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590, 22 L. ed. 429; Gross v. United States Mortg. Co. 108 U. S. 477, 27 L. ed. 795, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 940; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 39 L. ed. 941, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777.

The opinion of the state court is a part of the record for the purpose of ascertaining what points were presented to and decided by that court.

Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed. 680, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300.

The Kansas city court of appeals is the highest court in the state of Missouri in which a decision could be had. That court denied the motion to transfer the case to the supreme court, while the supreme court refused to cause the case to be certified from the court of appeals upon a petition for that purpose.

Gregory v. McVeigh, 23 Wall. 294, 23 L. ed. 156; Stanley v. Schwalby, 162 U. S. 255, 40 L. ed. 960, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 754; Bacon v. Texas, 163 U. S. 207, 41 L. ed. 132, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1023.

Mr. William M. Williams submitted the cause for defendant in error:

A constitutional question cannot be injected into a case by the briefs and argument of counsel.

Kirkwood v. Johnson, 148 Mo. 632, 50 S. W. 433; Parlin & O. Co. v. Hord, 145 Mo. 119, 46 S. W. 753.

The record must show that the point was raised in the trial court, and the protection of the Constitution claimed by the losing party was denied him.

Parlin & O. Co. v. Hord, 145 Mo. 119, 46 S. W. 753; Hulett v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 145 Mo. 35, 46 S. W. 951; James v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Assn. 148 Mo. 18, 49 S. W. 978.

And this same is true as to Federal questions.

Shewalter v. Missouri P. R. Co. 152 Mo. 544, 54 S. W. 224.

Cases must be tried in the appellate courts on the issues raised and decided in the trial courts.

Clark v. Porter, 162 Mo. 523, 63 S. W. 89.

The exemption claimed from liability for counsel fees, on the ground that the bond sued upon was given in an equity proceeding in the Federal courts, and that in those courts such fees are not allowed as damages on injunction bonds, and therefore cannot be allowed in a suit upon the bond in any other court, is not available, even if well founded, unless "specially set up or claimed."

Columbia Water Power Co. v. Columbia Electric Street R. Light & P. Co. 172 U. S. 475, 43 L. ed. 521, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; Eastern Bldg. & L. Assn. v. Welling, 181 U. S. 49, 45 L. ed. 739, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 39 L. ed. 941, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; F. G. Oxley Slave Co. v. Butler County, 166 U. S. 648, 41 L. ed. 1149, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709.

Attorneys' fees as damages upon an injunction bond given in the Federal courts have been allowed.

Corcoran v. Judson, 24 N. Y. 106.

If the question was properly presented by this record, the judgment nevertheless was right. The state court had jurisdiction of the suit upon the bond, notwithstanding the bond was given in a proceeding in a Federal court. This is not an open question.

Meyers v. Block, 120 U. S. 206, 30 L. ed. 642, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525.

The correct measure of damages was a matter of general law to be determined by the court where the case was tried. Reasonable attorneys' fees, necessarily incurred in the dissolution of the injunction, are allowed under the rule in Missouri, and the trial court had the right to include the same in the assessment of damages on the bond.

Ibid.; 1 Spelling, Extraordinary Legal Rem. 2d ed. § 954; Mitchell v. Hawley, 79 Cal. 301, 21 Pac. 833; Eastern Kentucky R. Co. v. Brown, 99 Ky. 540, 36 S. W. 555; Aiken v. Leathers, 40 La. Ann. 23, 3 So. 357; Corcoran v. Judson, 24 N. Y. 106; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Shepley, 1 Mo. App. 254; Wash v. Lackland, 8 Mo. App. 122; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Smith, 154 Mo. 300, 55 S. W. 470.

[533] *Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The proposition relied upon to secure the reversal of the judgment below is that the state court erroneously allowed, as an element of damage upon an injunction bond given in a court of the United States, the sum of alleged counsel fees for procuring a dissolution of the injunction, and that as such fees under the rule prevailing in the equity courts of the United States are not properly allowable, therefore the state court denied an immunity asserted in favor of the defendant below and arising from an authority exercised under the United States.

We are at the outset met by an objection that there is no jurisdiction to review the judgment of the Kansas City court of appeals. It is contended on behalf of the defendant in error that the Federal question relied upon was not raised below, and therefore is not reviewable here.

The general rule undoubtedly is that those Federal questions which are required to be specially set up and claimed must be so distinctly asserted below as to place it beyond question that the party bringing the case here from the state court intended to and did assert such a Federal right in the state court. But *it is equally true that [534] even although the allegations of Federal right made in the state court were so general and ambiguous in their character that they would not in and of themselves necessitate the conclusion that a right of a Federal nature was brought to the attention of the state court, yet if the state court in deciding the case has actually considered and determined a Federal question, although arising on ambiguous averments, then, a Federal controversy having been actually decided, the right of this court to review obtains. F. G. Oxley Slave Co. v. Butler County, 166 U. S. 648, 660, 41 L. ed. 1149, 1153, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709. All that is essential is that the Federal questions must be presented in the state court in such a manner as to bring them to the attention of that tribunal. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581. And of course where it is shown by the record that the state court considered and decided the Federal question, the purpose of the statute is subserved. And so controlling as to the existence of the Federal question is the fact that it was actually considered and decided by the state court, that it has been held, although the general rule is that the raising of a Federal question in a petition for rehearing in the highest court of the state is too late, yet when a question is thus raised, and it is actually considered and decided by the state court, the right to review exists. Mollett v. North Carolina, 181 U. S. 589, 592, 45 L. ed. 1015, 1017, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730.

Now, it plainly appears that the Kansas City court of appeals considered that there was presented to it for decision the question whether, in an action brought in a state court on an injunction bond given in a court of the United States, the state court was bound to apply to such a bond the rule prevailing in the courts of equity of the United States, viz., that attorneys' fees are [535] not a proper element of damage. We say this is undoubted, since the opinion of the Kansas City court of appeals recites that such was the contention, and the court proceeded to consider and decide it. That this contention involved a claim of immunity under an authority exercised under the United States, reviewable in this court, we have recently decided in Tullock v. Mulvane, 184 U.S. 497, ante, 657, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372. True it is that the Kansas City court of appeals held, contrary to the rule announced in the Tullock Case, that the state court was not bound to apply the rule of damages prevailing *in the courts of the United States, and in effect while so concluding decided that the claim that the bond should be enforced according to the rule prevailing in the courts of the United States involved no Federal question, but the fact that the state court, whilst deciding the Federal question, erroneously held that it was not a Federal one, does not take the case out of the rule that, where a Federal question has been decided below, jurisdiction exists to review. The result of the contrary doctrine would be this, that no case where the question of Federal right had been actually decided could be reviewed here if the state court, in passing upon the question, had also decided that it was non-Federal in its character. The assertion that a Federal right was not raised below is therefore without merit.

It is, however, insisted that as the writ of error in this case was directed to the Kansas City court of appeals there is no jurisdiction, because if there was a Federal question presented that court was not, under the Constitution of the state of Missouri, the highest court of the state in which a decision on such question could have been had.

The Kansas City court of appeals was created by an amendment to the Constitution of Missouri adopted in 1884. 1 Mo. Rev. Stat. 1899, p. 92. By § 4 of the amendment the said court was given the same jurisdiction over lower courts within certain territory—embraced within which was Cooper county—as was possessed by the St. Louis court of appeals. As provided by a prior Constitution, that of 1865, and continued by the Constitution of 1875, the St. Louis court of appeals was a court of general appellate jurisdiction, but its judgments were not final in certain cases, among which were: a, cases where the amount in dispute, exclusive of costs, exceeded the sum of $2,500; b, cases involving the construction of the Constitution of the United States or of the state of Missouri; c, cases where “the validity of a treaty or statute of or authority exercised under the United States is drawn in question;” as well as in other enumerated cases, not necessary to be particularly referred to. In such cases, where the jurisdiction of the St. Louis court [536] of appeals was not final, the judgment *of the St. Louis court of appeals was reviewable by the supreme court of Missouri. Ibid. art. 6, § 12, p. 87.

184 U. S. U. S. Book 46.

By the amendment to the Constitution of 1884, by which the Kansas City court of appeals was created, in cases where the action of the St. Louis court of appeals had been theretofore reviewable by the supreme court of Missouri, it was provided that the St. Louis court of appeals should no longer have appellate jurisdiction, but that writs of error, in such cases, should run directly from the supreme court to the trial courts, and this provision was made applicable to the Kansas City court of appeals which the amendment created. By the amendment in question superintending control over the trial courts in such cases was conferred upon the supreme court. Ibid. § 5, p. 93. It thus resulted that the Kansas City court of appeals, within the area of territory over which its jurisdiction extended, had no appellate jurisdiction in cases where the amount in dispute, exclusive of costs, exceeded $2,500, and where the cases involved the construction of the Constitution of the United States or of the state, and cases where was drawn in question the validity of a treaty or statute of or authority exercised under the United States, and in other cases not necessary to be mentioned.

By the amendment to the Constitution of 1884, the supreme court of Missouri was expressly, moreover, given general superintending control over the courts of appeal, by mandamus, prohibition, and certiorari. Ibid. § 8, p. 94.

After the Kansas City court of appeals had affirmed the judgment of the Cooper county circuit court, the railway company filed a motion for a rehearing, and prayed therein that in the event a rehearing was not granted the case should be transferred to the supreme court of Missouri. The motion for the transfer of the case to the supreme court was pressed upon two grounds, the second of which was, in substance, that the decision of the cause involved a Federal question, of which the supreme court of Missouri should take exclusive cognizance, because of its appellate jurisdiction, “in cases where the validity of a treaty or statute of or authority exercised under the United States is drawn in question.”

The court, in overruling this motion, necessarily decided that *the case came within [537] its appellate jurisdiction, and not within the exclusive appellate power conferred by the Constitution on the supreme court of the state. This doubtless rested upon the predicate upon which the court had based its opinion, which was not that the issue whether attorneys’ fees could be allowed upon the bond given in the Federal court had not been raised, but because, although that question had been raised and been decided, it was not one of the class of questions within the purview of the exclusive jurisdiction of the supreme court of the state. And this seems to us to be the view held by the supreme court of Missouri, when, in consequence of the refusal to transfer the cause to it, its superintending power over the Kansas City court of appeals was invoked through the medium of the application for writs of prohibition and certiorari. We so conclude, because, although in its elaborate opinion overruling the application for the writs named, the supreme court declared that the question of the power of the state court to award attorneys' fees on the injunction bond given in a court of the United States, contrary to the rule of damages prevailing in the courts of the United States, had been raised in the case and had been decided by the Kansas City court of appeals, the writs of prohibition and certiorari would not be allowed, because such a question was not within the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court of Missouri, but was within the jurisdiction of the lower appellate court. After fully stating the contention below and its decision by the Kansas City court of appeals, the supreme court of Missouri said:

"We fail to discover from the record, anywhere, how 'the validity of a treaty or statute of, or authority exercised under, the United States, is drawn in question,' or that a Federal question may be said to have been involved in the case."

In other words, as the exclusive appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court of Missouri over cases which, by the amount involved, would otherwise have gone to the Kansas City court of appeals, was conferred only in special cases, among other cases involving the construction of the Constitution of the United States and cases where "the validity of a treaty or statute of or authority exercised under the United States is drawn in question," the court held that as the validity of the bond given in the circuit court of the United States was not questioned, no claim made by the defendant of immunity under an authority exercised under the United States was embraced within the exclusive appellate jurisdiction conferred by the Constitution upon the supreme court of Missouri, and therefore such question had been properly determined by the Kansas City court of appeals. We are constrained to this construction of the opinion of the learned court from the fact that it elaborately discusses and demonstrates that the defense of immunity from liability for attorneys' fees under the bond given in a court of the United States was not an attack on the validity of the bond, and therefore not within the cognizance of the supreme court of Missouri, and from the further fact that in the course of the opinion the court said:

"Neither the rules, the practice or procedure, nor the mode and manner of administering the law in the United States court, applicable to the liability of bondsmen on an injunction bond given in that court, can in anywise be drawn in question, so as to present a Federal question, in a suit in a state court on the bond, when its validity, as in the case of Elliott v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co., begun in the Cooper county circuit court, and now pending on appeal in the Kansas City court of appeals, is admitted, and where no question as to the court's authority to order the bond as given is or was made by the relator."

It results, therefore, under the view we take of the opinion of the supreme court of Missouri, the court decided that as the case presented merely a claim of immunity under an authority exercised under the United States, and did not involve, to quote the language of the Missouri Constitution, the drawing in question "the validity of an authority" so exercised, therefore, the Kansas City court of appeals was vested under the Constitution and laws of Missouri with final jurisdiction. But if, however, we were to give to the opinion of the supreme court of Missouri the contrary construction, the finality of the judgment of the Kansas City court of appeals in this case would be none the less apparent. It is manifest, we conceive, *from the opinion of the supreme court of Missouri, that if it had been deemed that a Federal question not within the cognizance of the Kansas City court of appeals had been decided by that court, the superintending power of control conferred by the state Constitution on the supreme court of Missouri would have been exerted for the purpose of preventing the Kansas City court of appeals retaining jurisdiction of the cause. If, then, the action of the supreme court of Missouri can be held not to have been rested on the phraseology of the Missouri Constitution, including within the exclusive appellate power of the Supreme Court of Missouri not claims of immunity arising from an authority exercised under the United States, but only cases where was drawn in question the validity of an authority exercised under the United States, then the necessary effect of the action of the supreme court of Missouri was this, that because it held to the opinion that it was impossible for a Federal question ever to arise from a claim of immunity resulting from the exercise of an authority under the United States in the giving of an injunction bond in the courts of the United States, therefore, under the Constitution and laws of Missouri, the action of the Kansas City court of appeals was final. [539]

It being then demonstrated that whatever view may be taken of the opinion of the supreme court of Missouri, that court necessarily decided that the Kansas City court of appeals, in passing upon the claim of immunity, was the final court in Missouri where such question could be decided, it follows that the writ of error properly ran to the Kansas City court of appeals, and the claim of the absence of jurisdiction is without foundation.

Having thus disposed of the question of jurisdiction, we come to the merits of the case. It suffices to say, for the reasons given in the opinion in Tullock v. Mulvane, before referred to, 184 U. S. 497, ante, 657, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372, that there was error committed by the Kansas City court of appeals in affirming the action of the trial court in allowing, in the judgment by it rendered, attorneys' fees as an element of [540] damage upon the injunction bond contrary to the controlling rule on this subject enunciated by this court, by which the courts of the United States are governed in requiring the execution of such instruments.

The judgment of the Kansas City Court of Appeals must be reversed, and the cause remanded to that court, with directions for further proceedings in conformity with this opinion.

And it is so ordered.

THOMAS CONNOLLY and William E. Dee, Plffs. in Err.,
v.

UNION SEWER PIPE COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 540-571.)

Appeal—contracts—illegal combinations—anti-trust laws—set-off—constitutional law—invalid portion of statute.

1. The jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States on writ of error to a circuit court, under the circuit court of appeals act, when the constitutionality of a state statute is in question, extends to all cases in which such a question is decided against the claim of either party, and therefore includes a case in which the writ of error is taken by a defendant who set up in defense of the action a statute which the court held unconstitutional.
2. The illegality, at common law, of a combination formed by corporations and persons in restraint of trade, does not preclude it from recovering the purchase price of goods sold in the course of business.
3. A violation of the Sherman anti-trust act of July 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 647), by the formation of a combination in restraint of trade, by which a penalty is incurred under the statute, does not preclude the company thus illegally formed from recovering on collateral contracts for the purchase price of goods.
4. A recovery of the treble damages authorized by the Sherman anti-trust act of July 2, 1890, § 7 (26 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 647), in case of injury sustained by violation of the act, can be had only by direct action, and not by way of set-off in an action brought for the price of goods by a company illegally formed in violation of the act,—especially when the state practice does not permit the set-off of unliquidated damages.
5. A discrimination in favor of agricultural products or live stock in the hands of the producer or raiser, made by the Illinois trust act of June 20, 1893, exempting them from the provisions which prohibit a recovery of the price of articles sold by any trust or combination formed in restraint of trade or competition in violation of that act, renders the act repugnant to the provisions of U. S. Const. 14th Amend., in respect to equal protection of the laws.

6. An elimination of the unconstitutional portion of the Illinois trust act of June 20, 1893, which exempts agriculturists and live-stock dealers from the provisions which prohibit combinations in restraint of trade, cannot be made without bringing these classes of persons within the prohibitions of the statute, in contravention of the legislative intent, and therefore the entire act must be held invalid.

[No. 46.]

Argued April 22, 23, 1901. Decided March 10, 1902.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois to review a decision in favor of the plaintiff in an action for the purchase price of goods bought of an illegal trust combination. Affirmed.

. See same case below, 99 Fed. 354.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Henry D. Coghlan argued the cause, and, with Mr. Joseph A. O'Donnell, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The defendant in error is a pool, trust, and combine directly and expressly contrary to and prohibited by the Illinois statutes, also the Federal statutes and the common law.

People v. Sheldon, 139 N. Y. 251, 23 L. R. A. 221, 34 N. E. 785; Judd v. Harrington, 139 N. Y. 105, 34 N. E. 790; Leonard v. Poole, 114 N. Y. 371, 4 L. R. A. 728, 21 N. E. 707; De Witt Wire Cloth Co. v. New Jersey Wire-Cloth Co. 16 Daly, 529, 14 N. Y. Supp. 277; Morris Run Coal Co. v. Barclay Coal Co. 68 Pa. 173, 8 Am. Rep. 159; Nester v. Continental Brewing Co. 161 Pa. 473, 24 L. R. A. 247, 29 Atl. 102; Central Ohio Salt Co. v. Guthrie, 35 Ohio St. 666; Emery v. Ohio Candle Co. 47 Ohio St. 320, 24 N. E. 660; Hoffman v. Brooks, 11 Ohio L. J. 258; Anderson v. Jett, 89 Ky. 375, 6 L. R. A. 390, 12 S. W. 670; Chapin v. Brown Bros. 83 Iowa, 156, 12 L. R. A. 428, 48 N. W. 1074; Craft v. McConoughy, 79 Ill. 346, 22 Am. Rep. 171; More v. Bennett, 140 Ill. 69, 15 L. R. A. 361, 29 N. E. 888; Ford v. Chicago

NOTE.—On contracts in restraint of trade—see notes to Leslie v. Lorillard (N. Y.) 1 L. R. A. 458; People v. North River Sugar Ref. Co. (N. Y.) 2 L. R. A. 33; Bowman v. Phillips (Kan.) 3 L. R. A. 632; Richardson v. Buhl (Mich.) 6 L. R. A. 457; People ex rel. Peabody v. Chicago Gas Trust Co. (Ill.) 8 L. R. A. 500; National Benefit Co. v. Union Hospital Co. (Minn.) 11 L. R. A. 437; Western Wooden Ware Asso. v. Starkey (Mich.) 11 L. R. A. 503; Lovejoy v. Michaels (Mich.) 13 L. R. A. 770; People v. North River Sugar Ref. Co. (N. Y.) 9 L. R. A. 39; Oregon Steam Nav. Co. v. Winsor, 22 L. ed. U. S. 315; Fowie v. Park, 33 L. ed. U. S. 67; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 41 L. ed. U. S. 1008; Chicago, 184 U. S.

M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 9 C. C. A. 663, and Cravens v. Carter-Crume Co. 34 C. C. A. 486.

On set-off of unliquidated demands—see notes to Memphis & C. R. Co. v. Greer (Tenn.) 4 L. R. A. 858, and Helwig v. Laschowski (Mich.) 10 L. R. A. 378.

As to the validity of class legislation—see State v. Goodwill (W. Va.) 6 L. R. A. 621, and note, and State v. Loomis (Mo.) 21 L. R. A. 789, and note.

On statutes part valid and part invalid—see notes to Titusville Iron Works v. Keystone Oil Co. (Pa.) 1 L. R. A. 363, and Fayette County v. People's & D. Bank (Ohio) 10 L. R. A. 196.

Milk Shippers' Asso. 155 Ill. 166, 27 L. R. A. 298, 39 N. E. 651; Bishop v. American Preservers' Co. 157 Ill. 284, 41 N. E. 765; People ex rel. Melhany v. Chicago Live Stock Exchange, 170 Ill. 556, 39 L. R. A. 373, 48 N. E. 1062; Milwaukee Masons' & Builders' Asso. v. Niczerowski, 95 Wis. 129, 37 L. R. A. 127, 70 N. W. 166; Vulcan Powder Co. v. Hercules Powder Co. 96 Cal. 510, 31 Pac. 581; Texas Standard Oil Co. v. Adoue, 83 Tex. 650, 15 L. R. A. 598, 19 S. W. 274; India Bagging Asso. v. Kock, 14 La. Ann. 164; Hilton v. Eckersley, 6 El. & Bl. 47; Urmston v. Whitelegg Bros. 63 L. T. N. S. 455; Richardson v. Buhl, 77 Mich. 632, 6 L. R. A. 457, 43 N. W. 1102; Arnot v. Pittston & E. Coal Co. 68 N. Y. 558, 23 Am. Rep. 190; People v. Milk Exchange, 145 N. Y. 267, 27 L. R. A. 437, 39 N. E. 1062; People v. North River Sugar Ref. Co. 54 Hun, 366, 5 L. R. A. 386, 7 N. Y. Supp. 406; State v. Nebraska Distilling Co. 29 Neb. 700, 46 N. W. 155; State ex rel. Watson v. Standard Oil Co. 49 Ohio St. 137, 15 L. R. A. 145, 30 N. E. 279; American Biscuit & Mfg. Co. v. Klotz, 44 Fed. 721; Distilling & Cattle Feeding Co. v. People ex rel. Moloney, 156 Ill. 448, 41 N. E. 188; Pittsburg Carbon Co. v. McMillin, 119 N. Y. 46, 7 L. R. A. 46, 23 N. E. 530; National Harrow Co. v. Hench, 39 L. R. A. 299, 27 C. C. A. 349, 55 U. S. App. 53, 83 Fed. 36; Pacific Factor Co. v. Adler, 90 Cal. 110, 27 Pac. 36; Santa Clara Valley Mill & Lumber Co. v. Hayes, 76 Cal. 387, 18 Pac. 391; Davies v. Davies, L. R. 36 Ch. Div. 359; Egerton v. Brownlow, 4 H. L. Cas. 1; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. ed. 1007, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 549; United States v. Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. 46 L. R. A. 122, 29 C. C. A. 141, 54 U. S. App. 723, 85 Fed. 271; Cook, Corp. §§ 503a-503d, and notes. See also Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co. 130 U. S. 396, 32 L. ed. 979, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553; People ex rel. Peabody v. Chicago Gas Trust Co. 130 Ill. 268, 8 L. R. A. 497, 22 N. E. 798; Stockton v. Central R. Co. 50 N. J. Eq. 52, 17 L. R. A. 97, 24 Atl. 964; West Virginia Transp. Co. v. Ohio River Pipe Line Co. 22 W. Va. 600, 46 Am. Rep. 527; Hooker v. Vandewater, 4 Denio, 349, 47 Am. Dec. 258; Stanton v. Allen, 5 Denio, 434, 49 Am. Dec. 282; Central R. Co. v. Collins, 40 Ga. 582; Hazlehurst v. Savannah. G. & N. A. R. Co. 43 Ga. 13.

The defendant in error is a foreign corporation doing business in Illinois and amenable to the laws of the state.

1 Starr & C. (Ill.) Stat. p. 1017; Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Lake Street Elev. R. Co. 173 Ill. 439, 51 N. E. 55; Stevens v. Pratt, 101 Ill. 206; Pennsylvania Co. for Ins. on Lives & G. A. v. Bauerle, 143 Ill. 459, 33 N. E. 166; Rhodes v. Missouri Sav. & L. Co. 173 Ill. 621, 42 L. R. A. 93, 50 N. E. 998; Pope v. Hanke, 155 Ill. 617, 28 L. R. A. 568, 40 N. E. 839; Walter v. Whitlock, 9 Fla. 86, 76 Am. Dec. 607; Story, Conf. L. § 527; Faulkner v. Hyman, 142 Mass. 53, 6 N. E. 846; Hill v. Spear, 50 N. H. 253, 9 Am. Rep. 205; Fisher v. Lord, 63

N. H. 514, 3 Atl. 927; Phinney v. Baldwin, 16 Ill. 108, 61 Am. Rep. 62; Mumford v. Canty, 50 Ill. 370, 99 Am. Dec. 525; Evans v. Anderson, 78 Ill. 558; Anstedt v. Sutter, 30 Ill. 164; Yeatman v. Cullen, 5 Blackf. 240; Woodruff v. Hill, 116 Mass. 310.

By a long series of decisions it has been fully established that, through an exercise of comity, foreign corporations will be recognized and allowed to enforce their rights in a state, except so far as state statutes or clear public policy of the state prohibit it.

Clarke v. Central R. & Bkg. Co. 15 L. R. A. 683, 50 Fed. 338; Beveridge v. Hewitt, 8 Ill. App. 467; Cothran v. Ellis, 125 Ill. 496, 16 N. E. 646; Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 499, 28 L. ed. 225, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 160; Phinney v. Baldwin, 16 Ill. 108, 61 Am. Dec. 62; Chewning v. Johnson, 5 La. Ann. 678, 52 Am. Dec. 610; Greenwood v. Curtis, 6 Mass. 358, 4 Am. Dec. 145; Mumford v. Canty, 50 Ill. 375, 99 Am. Dec. 525; Mandel v. Swan Land & Cattle Co. 154 Ill. 177, 27 L. R. A. 313, 40 N. E. 462; Warren v. First Nat. Bank, 149 Ill. 9, 25 L. R. A. 746, 38 N. E. 122; Granite State Provident Asso. v. Lloyd, 48 Ill. App. 429; Santa Clara Female Academy v. Sullivan, 116 Ill. 375, 56 Am. Rep. 776, 6 N. E. 183; Barnes v. Suddard, 117 Ill. 237, 7 N. E. 477; 2 Story, Conf. L. 7th ed. pp. 567-571.

A corporation is a person within the constitutional guaranty of equal protection of the laws, but is not a citizen within the guaranty of equal privileges and immunities.

See note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (Ky.) 14 L. R. A. 580; Guthrie, 14th Amend. to U. S. Const. p. 53; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Bloomington, 76 Ill. 477.

Corporations created within the state are amenable to the police power of the state to the same extent as natural persons.

Ruggles v. People, 91 Ill. 256.

A citizen of one state, going into another, is entitled, under the Federal Constitution, to no greater privileges and immunities than are possessed by the citizens of that state.

Detroit v. Osborne, 135 U. S. 492, 34 L. ed. 260, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1012.

The Illinois anti-trust laws of 1891, and the amendatory act of 1893, are constitutional, and not class and special legislation in contravention of the Federal and state Constitutions.

Ford v. Chicago Milk Shippers' Asso. 155 Ill. 166, 27 L. R. A. 298, 39 N. E. 651; Harding v. American Glucose Co. 182 Ill. 551, 55 N. E. 577; Re Oberg, 21 Or. 406, 14 L. R. A. 577, 28 Pac. 130; State ex rel. Chandler v. Main, 16 Wis. 399; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Herriek, 127 U. S. 210, 32 L. ed. 109, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1176; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Humes, 115 U. S. 512, 29 L. ed. 463, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Wurts v. Hoagland, 114 U. S. 606, 29 L. ed. 229, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1086; Dow v. Beidelman, 125 U. S. 680, 31 L. ed. 841, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 56, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1028; Missouri v. Lewis, 101 U. S. 22, sub nom. Bowman v. Lewis, 25 L. ed. 989; Sullivan v. Haug, 82 Mich. 548, 10 L. R. A. 263, 46 N. W. 795; Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 560, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. New York, 165 U. S. 628, 41 L. ed. 853, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Bristol, 151 U. S. 556, 38 L. ed. 269, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Ames v. Union P. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 835, 64 Fed. 165; Brass v. North Dakota ex rel. Stoesser, 153 U. S. 391, 38 L. ed. 757, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 670, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857; Lowe v. Kansas, 163 U. S. 81, 41 L. ed. 78, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1031; Duncan v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 377, 38 L. ed. 485, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77, 69 Ill. 80.

Equal protection cannot be said to be denied whenever the law operates alike upon all persons' and property similarly situated.

Walston v. Nevin, 128 U. S. 578, 32 L. ed. 544, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; State v. Schlemmer, 42 La. Ann. 1166, 10 L. R. A. 135, 8 So. 307; State v. Moore, 104 N. C. 714, 10 S. E. 143; Ex parte Swann, 96 Mo. 44, 9 S. W. 10; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 32, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Soon Hing v. Crowley, 113 U. S. 709, 28 L. ed. 1147, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730.

Legislation limited as to objects or territory does not infringe on the constitutional right of equal protection where all persons subject to it are treated alike, under like circumstances and conditions.

Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 30 L. ed. 578, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Beckwith, 129 U. S. 26, 32 L. ed. 585, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207.

The sale of goods by a foreign corporation within the state, and sent from another state, is an act of interstate commerce.

Cook v. Rome Brick Co. 98 Ala. 409, 12 So. 918.

Because one section of an act is unconstitutional it does not follow that the other sections of the same act, which are within the power given by the Constitution, should not be enforced.

Nelson v. People, 33 Ill. 390; Donnersberger v. Prendergast, 128 Ill. 229, 21 N. E. 1; People ex rel. Bradley v. Illinois State Reformatory, 148 Ill. 426, 23 L. R. A. 139, 36 N. E. 76; Belleville v. Citizens' Horse R. Co. 152 Ill. 188, 26 L. R. A. 681, 38 N. E. 584; Keokuk N. L. Packet Co. v. Keokuk, 95 U. S. 80, 24 L. ed. 377; Unity v. Burrage, 103 U. S. 459, 26 L. ed. 409; Presser v. Illinois, 116 U. S. 252, 29 L. ed. 615, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 580; 6 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 1088. See Penniman's Case, 103 U. S. 714, sub nom. Vial v. Penniman, 26 L. ed. 602; Hills v. National Albany Exch. Bank, 105 U. S. 319, 26 L. ed. 1052; Florida C. R. Co. v. Schutte, 103 U. S. 118, 26 L. ed. 327; Edwards v. Pope, 4 Ill. 465; People ex rel. Miller v. Cooper, 83 Ill. 585; Hinze v. People ex rel. Halbert, 92 Ill. 406; Van Horne v. Dorrance, 2 Dall. 309, 1 L. ed. 393; Caldar v. Bull, 3 Dall. 386, 1 L. ed. 648; Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 87, 3 L. ed. 162; Cooly, Const. Lim. 182; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 184 U. S.

Wheat, 270, 6 L. ed. 625; Clarke v. Rochester, 24 Barb. 471.

State laws as rules of decision are binding on the Federal courts.

Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 33, 27 L. ed. 365, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10.

The power of annulment of a statute is exercised only in cases where it is impossible to dispose of a cause on its merits.

Ex parte Randolph, 2 Brock. 447, Fed. Cas. No. 11,558; 6 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 1084. notes.

Where defendant in an action seeks to recoup damages from plaintiff for breach of contract, it is immaterial that the damages alleged are unliquidated.

Harlan v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 31 Minn. 427, 18 N. W. 147; Ward v. Fellers, 3 Mich. 281; Batterman v. Pierce, 3 Hill, 172.

On the trial of such a case it stands as though two separate suits were brought to determine rights of parties. In reality two suits are pending to be tried at the same time.

Merchants' Bank v. Schulenberg, 54 Mich. 49, 19 N. W. 741; Francis v. Edwards, 77 N. C. 271.

Where a counterclaim is pleaded, and raises issues of fact, the issues should be tried by a jury, and a motion by plaintiff for judgment on the pleadings should be refused.

Wilson v. Hughes, 94 N. C. 182.

An amendment of pleadings when necessary to present an issue on the merits is not discretionary, but a legal right.

Ill. Rev. Stat. p. 144; Fontaine v. Baxley, 90 Ga. 416, 17 S. E. 1015; Davis v. Bean, 114 Mass. 358; Powell v. Love, 36 W. Va. 97, 14 S. E. 405; M'Hardy v. Wadsworth, 8 Mich. 349; Drake v. Drake, 83 Ill. 526; Shufeldt v. Fidelity Sav. Bank, 93 Ill. 597; Kirkpatrick v. Cooper, 77 Ill. 565; Empire F. Ins. Co. v. Real Estate Trust Co. 1 Ill. App. 391.

Messrs. Herbert Hamlin and Edwin Walker argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

To maintain the jurisdiction of this court, by direct appeal or writ of error, it must appear that the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States must be involved, and, necessarily, controlling.

Carey v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 150 U. S. 170, 37 L. ed. 1041, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 63; Cook County v. Calumet & C. Canal & Dock Co. 138 U. S. 653, 34 L. ed. 1116, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435; Green v. Mills, 30 L. R. A. 90, 16 C. C. A. 516, 25 U. S. App. 383, 69 Fed. 857; Loeb v. Columbia Twp. 179 U. S. 472, 45 L. ed. 280, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174.

Defendants' claim for treble damages under the Federal statute of July 2, 1890, and for damages by reason of plaintiff's alleged violation of the statute of the state of Illinois of July 1, 1893, defining trusts and conspiracies, is not permissible, either as a defense, or set-off, to the plaintiff's demand.

Robison v. Hibbs, 48 Ill. 408; Hubbard

v. Rogers, 64 Ill. 434; Evans v. Hughey, 76 Ill. 115; Clause v. Bullock Printing Press Co. 118 Ill. 612, 9 N. E. 201; United States v. Buchanan, 8 How. 83, 12 L. ed. 997; Dushane v. Benedict, 120 U. S. 630, 30 L. ed. 810, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 696; Scammon v. Kimball, 5 Biss. 431, Fed. Cas. No. 12,435.

It does not appear that any agreements or contracts made by the defendant in error, and relating to the conduct of its business, are in restraint of interstate commerce.

United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 325, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed. 136, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 578, 43 L. ed. 290, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Re Greene, 52 Fed. 113.

Defendant in error is a corporation, organized under the laws, and is a citizen of the state of Ohio. The contract for the sale of the sewer pipe was made in the state of Ohio, and the property was delivered to plaintiffs in error free on board of cars at Akron, Ohio, and therefore the statutes of the state of Illinois cannot be pleaded as a defense. The title to the property passed from the vendor to the vendee on delivery.

Parsons, Contr. p. 754; Adams v. Coul-liard, 102 Mass. 167; Roundtree v. Baker, 52 Ill. 241, 4 Am. Rep. 597; Schlee v. Guckenheimer, 179 Ill. 593, 54 N. E. 302; Liverpool & G. W. Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co. 129 U. S. 397, 32 L. ed. 788, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469.

The state statute of 1893 is void as being in contravention of art. 2, § 2, of the Constitution of the state of Illinois.

Ritchie v. People, 155 Ill. 98, 29 L. R. A. 79, 40 N. E. 454; Harding v. People, 160 Ill. 459, 32 L. R. A. 445, 43 N. E. 624; Braceville Coal Co. v. People, 147 Ill. 66, 22 L. R. A. 340, 35 N. E. 62; Millett v. People, 117 Ill. 294, 57 Am. Rep. 869, 7 N. E. 631; Frorer v. People use of School Fund, 141 Ill. 171, 16 L. R. A. 492, 31 N. E. 395; Cooley, Const. Lim. § 393.

State legislation of this character is also inhibited by the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 522, 42 L. ed. 840, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Duncan v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 377, 38 L. ed. 485, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 25 L. ed. 676; Re Grice, 79 Fed. 627.

It is no defense to an action for goods sold and delivered that plaintiff is a member of an illegal trust or combination to interfere with the freedom of trade and commerce, since the illegality of the combination is collateral to the contract of sale, and cannot taint it with illegality, or make it contrary to public policy.

National Distilling Co. v. Cream City Importing Co. 86 Wis. 352, 56 N. W. 864; Brooks v. Martin, 2 Wall. 70, 17 L. ed. 732; Planters' Bank v. Union Bank, 16 Wall.

483, 21 L. ed. 473; Dennehy v. McNulta, 41 L. R. A. 609, 30 C. C. A. 422, 59 U. S. App. 264, 86 Fed. 825; Jackson v. Akron Brick Asso. 53 Ohio St. 303, 35 L. R. A. 287, 41 N. E. 257; Greenhood, Pub. Pol. Rules 108, 109; Norton v. Blinn, 39 Ohio St. 145; Bishop v. American Preservers' Co. 157 Ill. 284, 41 N. E. 765.

The contracts between the defendant in error and the manufacturers within the "Akron district," did not operate either in restraint, or partial restraint, of trade, nor did they amount to a conspiracy between the parties, to control prices, by creating a monopoly.

Oregon Steam Nav. Co. v. Winsor, 20 Wall. 64, 22 L. ed. 315; Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co. 130 U. S. 396, 32 L. ed. 979, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553; Dolph v. Troy Laundry Mach. Co. 28 Fed. 553; Re Greene, 52 Fed. 104; Coquard v. National Linsced Oil Co. 171 Ill. 484, 49 N. E. 563; Brown v. Rounsavell, 78 Ill. 589; Linn v. Sigsbee, 67 Ill. 80; Hursen v. Garin, 162 Ill. 377, 44 N. E. 735; Cook v. Meyers, 166 Ill. 289, 46 N. E. 765; Hudson v. Green Hill Seminary Corp. 113 Ill. 618.

*Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court: [541]

The Union Sewer Pipe Company—a corporation organized under the laws of Ohio and doing business in Illinois—brought its action against Thomas Connolly, a citizen of Illinois, in the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of Illinois, on two negotiable promissory notes both executed at Chicago by the defendant; one, dated December 15th, 1894, the other dated January 15th, 1895, and each payable to the order of the plaintiff corporation ninety days after date at the First National Bank of Chicago.

These notes were given on account of the purchase by the defendant from the plaintiff of sewer pipe commonly known as standard Akron pipe, at prices agreed upon between the parties.

The pipe company also brought an action in the same court against William E. Dee, a citizen of Illinois, upon an open account for $2,389.26, the value at agreed prices of certain pipe purchased by him from the plaintiff in June, 1896. The plaintiff supplied the pipe under a written contract executed between it and the defendant in Illinois under date of August, 1895.

Each of the defendants filed a plea of the general issue, with notice of special defenses and of set-off.

The special defenses in each case were substantially the same. The notice in the Connolly Case was that the defendant on the trial of the action would rely on these special matters:

"First. That the plaintiff is, and at all times since about the 1st day of January, 1893, has been, a trust or combination of the capital, skill, and acts of divers persons and corporations carrying on a commercial business in the states of Ohio and Illinois and between said states and elsewhere in the United States of America, and organized for the express purpose of unlawfully and contrary to the common law creating and carrying out restrictions in trade, to wit, in the trade of buying, selling, and otherwise dealing in certain articles of merchandise, to wit, sewer, and drainage pipes, [542] and also for the express purpose of *unlawfully and contrary to the common law limiting the production of said articles of merchandise and increasing the market price thereof; and also for the express purpose of unlawfully and contrary to the common law preventing competition in the manufacture, making, transportation, sale, or purchase of said articles of commerce; also for the express purpose of unlawfully and contrary to the common law fixing standards or figures whereby the prices of said articles of merchandise intended for sale, use, and consumption in this state should be controlled and established; and also for the express purpose of unlawfully and contrary to the common law being a pretended agency whereby the sale of said articles of commerce should and might be covered up and made to appear to be for the original vendors thereof, and so as to enable the original vendors or manufacturers thereof to control the wholesale and retail price of such articles of commerce after the title thereto had passed from such vendors or manufacturers; and for the further express purpose of unlawfully and contrary to the common law making and entering into and carrying out a certain contract or certain contracts by which the several persons or corporations forming the plaintiff, or being the pretended stockholders thereof, to wit, have bound themselves not to sell, dispose of, or transport said articles of commerce below certain common standard figures or card or list prices in excess of the true market values thereof, and by which they have agreed to keep the prices of said articles of commerce at certain fixed or graduated figures, and by which they have established certain settled prices of said articles of commerce between themselves and others, so as to preclude a free and unrestricted competition among themselves and others in the sale and transportation of said articles of commerce, and by which they have agreed to pool, combine, and unite any interests they may have in connection with the sale and transportation of said articles of commerce so that the prices thereof may effect advantageously to themselves; that all of the claims of the plaintiff against the defendant in this action arise wholly out of, and are in respect of, sales of said articles of merchandise made between the 1st day of January, A. D. 1893, and the 1st day of March, 1896, to this defendant by *the plaintiff in the ordinary [543] course of its business as such a trust or combination acting as aforesaid, and that this action is brought to recover the alleged price thereof and for no other purpose.

"Secondly. That the plaintiff is, and at all times since the 1st day of January, 1893, 184 U. S.

was, a combination in the form of a trust, in restraint of trade and commerce among the several states, and doing business as such throughout the United States and between the states of Ohio and Illinois, contrary to the provisions of an act of Congress of date of July 2d, 1890, and entitled 'An Act to Protect Trade and Commerce against Unlawful Restraints and Monopolies,' and that this action is brought solely to recover the price of articles of merchandise, to wit, sewer and drainage pipes, sold to the defendant by the plaintiff, then and there acting and doing business as such a combination, as aforesaid, in violation of the provisions of said act.

"Thirdly. That the plaintiff is, and at all times since the 1st of January, 1893, was, a trust doing business as such in the state of Illinois and elsewhere, contrary to the provisions of an act of the legislature of the state of Illinois entitled 'An Act to Define Trusts and Conspiracies against Trade, Declaring Contracts in Violation of This Provision Void, and Making Certain Acts and Violations Thereof Misdemeanors, and Prescribing Punishment Thereof and Matters Connected Therewith, Approved June 20th, 1893, in Force July 1st, 1893;' that this action is brought solely to recover the price of articles of merchandise, to wit, sewer and drainage pipes, sold to the defendant by the plaintiff, then and there acting and doing business in violation of the provisions of said act, and that the defendant hereby pleads said act in defense to this action and the whole thereof."

The set-offs claimed by Connolly were: Treble the amount of the actual damages sustained and allowed by the act of Congress of July 2d, 1890, chap. 647, known as the Sherman anti-trust act, $56,970.44; actual damages sustained by reason of the violation by the plaintiff of the provisions of the Illinois statute of July 1st, 1893, $17,323.48; and for money had and received by plaintiff of defendant contrary to law, $17,323.48.

The set-offs claimed by Dee were of like character, but of larger amounts.

*Both cases were, by agreement, submitted [544] to the same jury, and were treated as one consolidated case. At the trial the defendants respectively asked leave to amend their notices of special defenses, but leave was denied.

The circuit court disallowed both the first and second of the above special defenses, and in respect of the third its decision was that the Illinois trust statute of 1893 was in violation of the Constitution of the United States. It consequently directed the jury to find a verdict for the plaintiff in each case: in the Connolly Case, for the amount of the two notes sued on; in the Dee Case, for the amount of the plaintiff's open accounts against him. Verdicts having been returned as directed, and a motion for new trial in one case, and motions for new trial and in arrest of judgment in the other, having been overruled, judgments were entered on the verdicts.

1. The defendant in error insists that these cases should have gone to the circuit court of appeals, and has moved on that ground that the writ of error be dismissed. The defense in each case was based in part on the Illinois statute of 1893. The plaintiff insisted at the trial that that statute was in violation of the Constitution of the United States, and its position was sustained by the circuit court. There have been suits in which the circuit court upon the claim of the defendant has applied the Constitution of the United States to the case before it, and put the plaintiff out of court. Here, the plaintiff claimed that the state enactment upon which defendants relied was unconstitutional, and its position upon that point was sustained. In Loeb v. Columbia Twp. 179 U. S. 472, 477, 45 L. ed. 280, 285, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174, 177, this court said: "The circuit court of appeals act does not declare that the final judgment of a circuit court in a case in which there was a claim of the repugnancy of a state statute to the Constitution of the United States may be reviewed here only upon writ of error sued out by the party making the claim. In other words, if a claim is made in the circuit court, no matter by which party, that a state enactment is invalid under the Constitution of the United States, and that claim is sustained or rejected, then it is consistent with the words of the act, and, we think, in harmony [545] with its object, that this court *review the judgment at the instance of the unsuccessful party, whether plaintiff or defendant. It was the purpose of Congress to give opportunity to an unsuccessful litigant to come to this court directly from the circuit court in every case in which a claim is made that a state law is in contravention of the Constitution of the United States." Upon the authority of that case, the motion to dismiss is denied.

2. The defendant Connolly purchased Akron sewer pipe from the plaintiff, and for the agreed price thereof gave the two promissory notes upon which he was sued. The defendant Dee also purchased Akron sewer pipe at an agreed price as shown by the account upon which he was sued. Each defendant disputed his liability to the plaintiff upon the ground that prior to the making of the contracts with the defendants respectively for pipe, the plaintiff corporation entered into a combination with certain firms, corporations, and companies engaged in Ohio in the manufacture of Akron pipe; which combination, it is alleged, was in illegal restraint of trade, and therefore forbidden by the principles of the common law as recognized and enforced both in Ohio and Illinois.

This defense cannot be maintained. Assuming, as defendants contend, that the alleged combination was illegal if tested by the principles of the common law, still it would not follow that they could, at common law, refuse to pay for pipe bought by them under special contracts with the plaintiff. The illegality of such combination did not prevent the plaintiff corporation from selling pipe that it obtained from its constituent companies or either of them. It could pass a title by a sale to anyone desiring to buy, and the buyer could not justify a refusal to pay for what he bought and received by proving that the seller had previously, in the prosecution of its business, entered into an illegal combination with others in reference generally to the sale of Akron pipe.

In Strait v. National Harrow Co. 51 Fed. 819, a suit in which the plaintiffs sought a permanent injunction restraining the defendant from instituting or prosecuting any action against the plaintiffs for the infringement of letters patent owned by the defendant covering certain improvements in spring-tooth harrows, *or from instituting [546] or prosecuting any such suits against any person using the spring-tooth harrows manufactured by the plaintiffs, the court said: "In substance, the complaint shows that the defendant has entered into a combination with various other manufacturers of spring-tooth harrows for the purpose of acquiring a monopoly in this country in the manufacture and sale of the same, and, as an incident thereto, has acquired all the rights of the other manufacturers for the exclusive sale and manufacture of such harrows under patents, or interests in patents, owned by them respectively. Such a combination may be an odious and wicked one, but the proposition that the plaintiffs, while infringing the rights vested in the defendant under letters patent of the United States, is entitled to stop the defendant from bringing or prosecuting any suit therefor because the defendant is an obnoxious corporation, and is seeking to perpetuate the monopoly which is conferred upon it by its title to the letters patent, is a novel one, and entirely unwarranted. The party having such a patent has a right to bring suit on it, not only against a manufacturer who infringes, but against dealers and users of the patented article, if he believes the patent is being infringed; and the motive which prompts him to sue is not open to judicial inquiry, because, having a legal right to sue, it is immaterial whether his motives are good or bad, and he is not required to give his reasons for the attempt to assert his legal rights. 'The exercise of the legal right cannot be affected by the motive which controls it.' Kiff v. Youmans, 86 N. Y. 329, 40 Am. Rep. 543."

In National Distilling Co. v. Cream City Importing Co. 86 Wis. 352, 355, 56 N. W. 864, 865, which was an action to recover the price of goods sold and delivered, one of the defenses was the plaintiff was a member of an illegal trust or combination to interfere with the freedom of trade and commerce. The supreme court of Wisconsin said: "The first defense does not deny any allegation of the complaint, but the substance of it is that the sale and delivery of the goods in question to the defendant was void as against public policy, because the vendor was at the time a member of an unlawful trust or combination, formed to unlawfully interfere with the freedom of [547] trade and commerce *and in restraint thereof and to accomplish the ends therein set forth. . . . Conceding, for the purposes of this case, that the trust or combination in question may be illegal, and its members may be restrained from carrying out the purposes for which it was created by a court of equity in a suit on behalf of the public, or may be subject to indictment and punishment, there is, nevertheless, no allegation showing or tending to show that the contract of sale between the plaintiff and defendant was tainted with any illegality, or was contrary to public policy. The argument, if any the case admits of, is that, as the plaintiff was a member of the so-called 'trust,' or 'combination,' the defendant might voluntarily purchase the goods in question of it at any agreed price, and convert them to its own use, and be justified in a court of justice in its refusal to pay the plaintiff for them, because of the connection of the vendor with such trust or combination. The plaintiff's cause of action is in no legal sense dependent upon, or affected by, the alleged illegality of the trust or combination, because the illegality, if any, is entirely collateral to the transaction in question, and the court is not called upon in this action to enforce any contract tainted with illegality, or contrary to public policy. The mere fact that the plaintiff is a member of a trust or combination, created with the intent and purposes set forth in the answer, will not disable or prevent it in law from selling goods within or affected by the provisions of such trust or combination, and recovering their price or value. It does not appear that it had stipulated to refrain from such transactions. A contrary doctrine would lead to most startling and dangerous consequences."

That case was cited with approval by the circuit court of appeals for the seventh circuit in Dennehy v. McNulta, 41 L. R. A. 609, 611, 612, 30 C. C. A. 422, 424, 427, 59 U. S. App. 264, 270, 273, 86 Fed. 825, 827, 829. In that case the court said: "The mere fact that the corporation, as one of the contracting parties, may constitute an unjust monopoly, and that its general business is illegal—a status apparently held in Distilling & Cattle Feeding Co. v. People ex rel. Moloney, 156 Ill. 448, 41 N. E. 188, cannot serve, ipso facto, to create default or liability on its contracts generally; nor can such fact be invoked collaterally to affect in any *manner its independent contract obligations." Again: "In the case of an injurious combination of the nature asserted here, the remedy is by well-recognized and direct proceedings; but one who voluntarily and knowingly deals with the parties so combined cannot, on the one hand, take the benefit of his bargain, and, on the other, have a right of action against the seller for the money paid, or any part of it, either upon the ground that the combination is illegal, or that its prices were unreasonable." [548] nation is illegal, or that its prices were unreasonable."

184 U. S.

It is undoubtedly the general rule that a contract made in violation of a statute is void, and no recovery can be had upon it, as in Embrey v. Jenison, 131 U. S. 336, 348, 33 L. ed. 172, 177, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 776. That was an action upon a promissory note given in execution of a contract for the purchase of "future delivery" cotton, neither the purchase nor delivery of actual cotton being contemplated by the parties, but the settlement in respect to which was to be on the basis of the "difference" between the contract price and the market price of cotton futures, according to the fluctuations in the markets. The contract was held to be a wagering contract, and therefore illegal and void. As there could be no recovery upon the original agreement without disclosing the fact that it was illegal and one that could not, for that reason, be enforced or made the basis of a judgment, it was held that attention could not be withdrawn from the illegality of the contract by the device of taking notes for the amount claimed under that contract. So, in Miller v. Ammon, 145 U. S. 421, 427, 36 L. ed. 759, 762, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 884, 887. That was an action to recover the value of 1,125 gallons of wines sold in Chicago by one who had not obtained a license to sell liquors at all,—an ordinance of that city expressly declaring that no person, firm, or corporation should sell or offer for sale "any spirituous or vinous liquors in quantities of 1 gallon or more at a time, within the city, without having first obtained a license therefor," under a penalty of not less than $50 or more than $200 for each offense. It was held that the action could not be maintained, because "an act done in disobedience to the law creates no right of action which a court of justice will enforce." In that case the sale from which it was attempted to imply the promise of the buyer to pay for what *he received was itself expressly [549] forbidden by law under a penalty. The action there was upon the sale, and there was a direct connection between it and the purchase of the wines. So, again, in McMullen v. Hoffman, 174 U. S. 639, 654, 43 L. ed. 1117, 1123, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 839, 845, after an extended review of the cases, American and English, the court said: "The authorities from the earliest time to the present unanimously held that no court will lend its assistance in any way toward carrying out the terms of an illegal contract."

In the present case other considerations must control. This is not an action to enforce or which involves the enforcement of the alleged arrangement or combination between the plaintiff corporation and other corporations, firms, and companies in relation to the sale of Akron pipe. As already suggested, the plaintiff, even if part of a combination illegal at common law, was not for that reason forbidden to sell property it acquired or held for sale. The purchases by the defendants had no necessary or direct connection with the alleged illegal combination; for the contracts between the defendants and the plaintiff could have been proved without any reference to the arrangement whereby the latter became an illegal combination. If, according to the principles of the common law, the Union Sewer Pipe Company could not have sold or passed title to any pipe it received and held for sale, because of an illegal arrangement previously made with other corporations, firms, or companies, a different question would be presented. But we are aware of no decision to the effect that a sale similar to that made by the present plaintiff to the defendants respectively would in itself be illegal or void under the principles of the common law. The contracts between the plaintiff and the respective defendants were, in every sense, collateral to the alleged agreement between the plaintiff and other corporations, firms, or associations whereby an illegal combination was formed for the sale of sewer pipe.

We are of opinion that the first special defense, based alone upon the principles of the common law, was properly overruled.

3. The special defense based upon the act of Congress of July 2d, 1890, chap. 647, 26 Stat. at L. 209, was also properly rejected.

[550] *That act declares illegal "every contract, combination in form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states, or with foreign nations,"—every person making any such contract or engaging in any such conspiracy being subject to a fine not exceeding $5,000, or to imprisonment not exceeding one year, or to both punishments in the discretion of the court. § 1. So, every person monopolizing or attempting to monopolize, or combining or conspiring with any other person or persons to monopolize, any part of the trade or commerce among the several states or with foreign nations, is liable by that act to the like penalties in the discretion of the court. § 2. The several circuit courts of the United States are invested with jurisdiction to prevent and restrain violations of its provisions. § 4. Any property owned under any contract or by any combination or pursuant to any conspiracy (and being the subject thereof), and being in the course of transportation from one state to another, or to a foreign country, is subject to be forfeited, seized, and condemned. § 6. By another section it is declared: "Any person who shall be injured in his business or property by any other person or corporation by reason of anything forbidden or declared to be unlawful by this act, may sue therefor in any circuit court of the United States in the district in which the defendant resides, or is found, without respect to the amount in controversy, and shall recover threefold the damages by him sustained, and the costs of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee." § 7.

Much of what has just been said in reference to the first special defense, based on the common law, is applicable to this part of the case. If the contract between the plaintiff corporation and the other named corporations, persons, and companies, or the combination thereby formed, was illegal under the act of Congress, then all those, whether persons, corporations, or associations, directly connected therewith, became subject to the penalties prescribed by Congress. But the act does not declare illegal or void any sale made by such combination, or by its agents, of property it acquired or which came into its possession for the purpose of being sold,—such property not being at the *time in the course of transportation [551] from one state to another or to a foreign country. The buyer could not refuse to comply with his contract of purchase upon the ground that the seller was an illegal combination which might be restrained or suppressed in the mode prescribed by the act of Congress; for Congress did not declare that a combination illegally formed under the act of 1890 should not, in the conduct of its business, become the owner of property which it might sell to whomsoever wished to buy it. So that there is no necessary legal connection here between the sale of pipe to the defendants by the plaintiff corporation and the alleged arrangement made by it with other corporations, companies, and firms. The contracts under which the pipe in question was sold were, as already said, collateral to the arrangement for the combination referred to, and this is not an action to enforce the terms of such arrangement. That combination may have been illegal, and yet the sale to the defendants was valid.

In the case of The Charles E. Wisewall, 74 Fed. 802, which was a libel in rem by certain tug owners against a steam dredge to recover the value of certain services rendered by the tug in towing the dredges, it was sought to avoid payment for the services thus rendered upon the ground that the tug owners were members of an association which was illegal and void under the Sherman act. The court, assuming that the agreement by which the tugs acted in unison was prohibited by that act, said: He [the claimant] should not be permitted to repudiate his just debts to the individual tugs because their association was illegal. Having asked for their services, and having accepted the benefit thereof, he should pay. . . . An agreement by the tug Mayflower to tow the dredge Wisewall, for a reasonable sum, from Albany to Troy, is not void because the Mayflower is associated with other tugs to regulate the price of towing at Albany. Should the claimant purchase a pair of trousers at an Albany clothing shop, he would find it difficult to avoid paying their actual market value because the vendor and other tailors of that city had combined to keep up prices."

Nor can the defendants refuse to pay for what they bought, upon the ground that the 7th section of the Sherman act *gives the [552] right to any person "injured in his business or property by any other person or corporation by reason of anything forbidden or declared to be unlawful" by the act, to sue and recover treble the damages sustained by him. We shall not now attempt to declare the full scope and meaning of that section of the act of Congress. It is sufficient to say that the action which it authorizes must be a direct one, and the damages claimed cannot be set off in these actions based upon special contracts for the sale of pipe that have no direct connection with the alleged arrangement or combination between the plaintiff and other corporations, firms, or companies. Such damages cannot be said, as matter of law, to have directly grown out of that arrangement or combination, and are, besides, unliquidated. Besides, it is well settled in Illinois that "unliquidated damages arising out of covenants, contracts, or torts disconnected with plaintiff's claim cannot be set off under the statute." Robison v. Hibbs, 48 Ill. 408, 409, 410; Hawks v. Lands, 8 Ill. 227, 232; Hubbard v. Rogers, 64 Ill. 434, 437; Evans v. Hughey, 76 Ill. 115, 120; Clause v. Bullock Printing Press Co. 118 Ill. 612, 617, 9 N. E. 201; Dushane v. Benedict, 120 U. S. 630, 648, 30 L. ed. 810, 814, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 696. If the act of Congress expressly authorized one who purchased property from a combination organized in violation of its provisions to plead, in defense of a suit for the price, the illegal character of the combination, that would present an entirely different question. But the act contains no such provision.

4. We come now to the consideration of the defense based upon the trust statute of Illinois of 1893.

As that statute is alleged to be repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, and that its full scope may be seen, it is here given in full:

"§ 1. That a trust is a combination of capital, skill, or acts by two or more persons, firms, corporations, or associations of persons, or of two or more of them for either, any, or all of the following purposes: First, to create or carry out restrictions in trade. Second, to limit or reduce the production, or increase or reduce the price of merchandise or commodities. Third, to prevent competition in manufacture, making, transportation, sale, or purchase of merchandise, produce, or commodities. [553] Fourth, to fix at any standard or figure whereby its price to the public shall be in any manner controlled or established upon any article or commodity of merchandise, produce, or manufacture intended for sale, use, or consumption in this state; or to establish any pretended agency whereby the sale of any such article or commodity shall be covered up and made to appear to be for the original vendor, for a like purpose or purposes, and to enable such original vendor or manufacturer to control the wholesale or retail price of any such article or commodity after the title to such article or commodity shall have passed from such vendor or manufacturer. Fifth, to make or enter into, or examine or carry out, any contract, obligation or agreement of any kind or description by which they shall bind or have bound themselves not to sell, dispose of, or transport any article or commodity, or article of trade, use, merchandise, commerce, or consumption below a common standard figure, or card or list price, or by which they shall agree in any manner to keep the price of such article, commodity, or transportation at a fixed or graduated figure, or by which they shall in any manner establish or settle the price of any article or commodity or transportation between them or themselves and others to preclude a free and unrestricted competition among themselves or others in the sale or transportation of any such article or commodity, or by which they shall agree to pool, combine, or unite any interest they may have in connection with the sale or transportation of any such article or commodity that its price might in any manner be affected.

"§ 2. That any corporation holding a charter under the laws of this state which shall violate any of the provisions of this act shall thereby forfeit its charter and franchise, and its corporate existence shall cease and determine.

"§ 3. For a violation of any of the provisions of this act by any corporation mentioned herein it shall be the duty of the attorney general or prosecuting attorney, upon his own motion, to institute suit or quo warranto proceedings, at any county in this state in which such corporation exists, does business, or may have a domicile, for the forfeiture of its charter rights and franchise, and the dissolution of its corporate existence.

"*§ 4. Every foreign corporation violating [554] any of the provisions of this act is hereby denied the right and prohibited from doing any business within this state, and it shall be the duty of the attorney general to enforce this provision by injunction or other proper proceedings, in any county in which such foreign corporation does business, in the name of the state on his relation.

"§ 5. Any violation of either or all of the provisions of § 1 of this act shall be and is hereby declared to be a conspiracy against trade, and a misdemeanor; and any person who may be or may become engaged in any such conspiracy, or take part therein, or aid or advise in its commission, or who shall, as principal, manager, director, agent, servant, or employee, or in any other capacity, knowingly carry out any of the stipulations, purposes, prices, rates, orders thereunder, or in pursuance thereof, shall be punished by fine not less than $2,000 or more than $5,000.

"§ 6. In any indictment or information for any offense named in this act, it is sufficient to state the purposes and effects of the trust or combination, and that the accused was a member of, acted with or in pursuance of it, without giving its name or description, or how or where it was created.

"§ 7. In prosecutions under this act it shall be sufficient to prove that a trust or combination as defined herein exists, and that the defendant belonged to it or acted for or in connection with it, without proving all the members belonging to it, or proving or producing any article of agreement or any written instrument on which it may have been based, or that it was evidenced by any written instrument at all.

"§ 8. That any contract or agreement in violation of the provisions of this act shall be absolutely void and not enforceable either in law or equity.

"§ 9. The provisions of this act shall not apply to agricultural products or live stock while in the hands of the producer or raiser.

"§ 10. Any purchaser of any article or commodity, from any person, firm, corporation, or association of persons, or of two or more of them, transacting business contrary to any provision of the preceding sections of this act, shall not be liable for the [555] price *or payment of such article or commodity, and may plead this act as a defense to any suit for such price or payment." Ill. Laws 1893, p. 188; Hurd's Rev. Stat. (Ill.) 1899, p. 618, title Criminal Code. [Starr & C. Anno. Stat. (Ill.) p. 1256, chap. 38, ¶¶ 109-118.]

Some reference was made to the act of the legislature of Illinois approved June 10th, 1897, amending an act approved June 11th, 1891, in force July 1st, 1891, relating to the punishment of persons, partnerships, or corporations forming pools, trusts, and combines, and prescribing the mode of procedure and rules of evidence in such cases. The act of 1897 amended § 1 of the act of 1891 so as to read: "If any corporation organized under the laws of this or any other state or country for transacting or conducting any kind of business in this state, or any partnership or individual or other association of persons whosoever, shall create, enter into, become a member of or a party to any pool, trust, agreement, combination, confederation, or understanding with any other corporation, partnership, individual, or any other person or association of persons, to regulate or fix the price of any article of merchandise or commodity, or shall enter into, become a member of, or party to any pool, agreement, contract, combination, or confederation to fix or limit the amount or quantity of any article, commodity, or merchandise to be manufactured, mined, produced, or sold in this state, such corporation, partnership, or individual or other association of persons shall be deemed and adjudicated guilty of a conspiracy to defraud, and be subject to indictment and punishment as provided in this act: provided, however, that in the mining, manufacture, or production of articles of merchandise, the cost of which is mainly made up of wages, it shall not be unlawful for persons, firms, or corporations doing business in this state to enter into joint arrangements of any sort, the principal object or effect of which is to maintain or increase wages." As this act of 1897 was passed after the date of the transactions here involved, it has nothing to do with the present case. Besides, the special defense was based on the act of 1893. The act of 1897 is referred to only as showing the exemption of another class from the operation of the general law relating to pools, trusts, combinations, and confederations organized *to regulate prices of articles, commodities, [556] and merchandise. Ill. Laws 1897, p. 153; Hurd's Rev. Stat. (Ill.) pp. 615, 639.

That the arrangement or combination made between the Union Sewer Pipe Company and other companies, corporations, and firms created such a trust as the Illinois statute forbids is manifest from the evidence in the record. It is equally clear that if the plaintiff was an Illinois corporation, its charter could be forfeited and an end put to its corporate existence by proceedings instituted by the attorney general of the state. §§ 1, 2, and 3. It is also clear that, if the statute is not altogether invalid, the defendants could plead nonliability for the pipe purchased by them upon the ground that the plaintiff was, under the statute of Illinois, an illegal combination, and the contracts which it made with the defendants were void. §§ 8, 10. The statute expressly authorizes such a defense. In that particular, the defense based upon the statute of Illinois differs from the other special defenses.

The vital question, however, is whether the statute of Illinois of 1893 is not inconsistent with the Constitution of the United States, by reason of the fact that by the 9th section it declares that "the provisions of this act shall not apply to agricultural products or live stock while in the hands of producer or raiser." The circuit court held this section to be repugnant to the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, and to be so connected and interwoven with other sections that its invalidity affected the entire act.

Looking specially at its provisions, it will be seen that, so far as the statute is concerned, two or more agriculturalists or two or more live-stock raisers may, in respect of their products or live stock in hand, combine their capital, skill, or acts for the purpose of creating or carrying out restrictions in the sale of such products or live stock: or limiting, increasing, or reducing their price; or preventing competition in their sale or purchase; or fixing a standard or figure whereby the price thereof to the public may be controlled; or making contracts whereby they would become bound not to sell or dispose of such agricultural products or live stock below a common standard figure *or card or list price; [557] or establishing the price of such products or stock in hand, so as to preclude free and unrestricted competition among themselves or others; or by agreeing to pool, combine, or unite any interest they may have in connection with the sale or transportation of their products or live stock that the price might be affected. All this, so far as the statute is concerned, may be done by agriculturalists or live-stock raisers in Illinois without subjecting them to the fine imposed by the statute. But exactly the same things, if done by two or more persons, firms, corporations, or associations of persons who shall have combined their capital, skill, or acts, in respect of their property, merchandise, or commodities held for sale or exchange, is made by the statute a public offense, and every principal, manager, director, agent, servant, or employee knowingly carrying out the purposes, stipulations, and orders of such combination is punishable by a fine of not less than $2,000 nor more than $5,000. Is not this such discrimination against those engaged in business (other than the sale of agricultural products and live stock in the hands of producers and raisers) as is forbidden by that clause of the 14th Amendment which declares that "no state shall . . . deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws?"

By § 26 of a statute of Illinois it is provided: "Foreign corporations, and the officers and agents thereof, doing business in this state shall be subjected to all the liabilities, restrictions, and duties that are or may be imposed upon corporations of like character organized under the general laws of this state, and shall have no other or greater powers." 1 Starr & C. Anno. Stat. (111.) 619. The contracts upon which these suits are based were made in Illinois. The purpose of the above statute was "to produce uniformity in the powers, liabilities, duties, and restrictions of foreign and domestic corporations of like character, and bring them all under the influence of the same law." Stevens v. Pratt, 101 Ill. 206; Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Lake Street Elev. R. Co. 173 Ill. 439, 51 N. E. 55. These matters are called to our attention as showing—as they undoubtedly do—that the Union Sewer Pipe Company, while doing [558] business in Illinois, was subject to *the statute of Illinois concerning trusts or combinations, and which, in terms, applies to both domestic and foreign corporations. But the question remains to be decided whether the statute is repugnant to the Constitution of the United States. If it be, then it is not law and cannot be applied for the purpose of defeating the plaintiff's claims in these actions.

The question of constitutional law to which we have referred cannot be disposed of by saying that the statute in question may be referred to what are called the police powers of the state, which, as often stated by this court, were not included in the grants of power to the general government, and therefore were reserved to the states when the Constitution was ordained. But as the Constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land, anything in the Constitution or statutes of the states to the contrary notwithstanding, a statute of a state, even when avowedly enacted in the exercise of its police powers, must yield to that law. No right granted or secured by the Constitution of the United States can be impaired or destroyed by a state enactment, whatever may be the source from which the power to pass such enactment may have been derived. "The nullity of any act inconsistent with the Constitution is produced by the declaration that the Constitution is the supreme law." The state has undoubtedly the power, by appropriate legislation, to protect the public morals, the public health, and the public safety; but if, by their necessary operation, its regulations looking to either of those ends amount to a denial to persons within its jurisdiction of the equal protection of the laws, they must be deemed unconstitutional and void. Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 210, 6 L. ed. 23, 73; Sinnot v. Davenport, 22 How. 227, 243, 16 L. ed. 243, 247; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 626, 42 L. ed. 878, 883, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488.

What may be regarded as a denial of the equal protection of the laws is a question not always easily determined, as the decisions of this court and of the highest courts of the states will show. It is sometimes difficult to show that a state enactment, having its source in a power not controverted, infringes rights protected by the national Constitution. No rule can be formulated that will cover every case. But upon this general question *we have said that the guaranty of [559] the equal protection of the laws means "that no person or class of persons shall be denied the same protection of the laws which is enjoyed by other persons or other classes in the same place and under like circumstances." Missouri v. Lewis, 101 U. S. 22, 31, sub nom. Bowman v. Lewis, 25 L. ed. 989, 992. We have also said: "The 14th Amendment, in declaring that no state 'shall deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws,' undoubtedly intended, not only that there should be no arbitrary deprivation of life or liberty, or arbitrary spoliation of property, but that equal protection and security should be given to all under like circumstances in the enjoyment of their personal and civil rights; that all persons should be equally entitled to pursue their happiness and acquire and enjoy property; that they should have like access to the courts of the country for the protection of their persons and property, the prevention and redress of wrongs, and the enforcement of contracts; that no impediment should be interposed to the pursuits of anyone except as applied to the same pursuits by others under like circumstances; that no greater burdens should be laid upon one than are laid upon others in the same calling and condition, and that in the administration of criminal justice no different or higher punishment should be imposed upon one than such as is prescribed to all for like offenses." Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 31, 28 L. ed. 923, 924, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357, 359. This language was cited with approval in Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 369, 30 L. ed. 220, 226, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064, 1070, in which it was also said that "the equal protection of the laws is a pledge of the protection of equal laws." In Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 71, 30 L. ed. 578, 580, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 352, we said that the 14th Amendment required that all persons subject to legislation limited as to the objects to which it is directed, or by the territory within which it is to operate, "shall be treated alike, under like circumstances and conditions both in the privileges conferred, and in the liabilities imposed." "Due process of law and the equal protection of the laws," this court has said, "are secured, if the laws operate on all alike, and do not subject the individual to an arbitrary exercise of the *powers of government." Duncan v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 377, 382, 38 L. ed. 485, 487, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570, 572. Many other cases in this court are to the like effect.

These principles, applied to the case before us, condemn the statute of Illinois. We have seen that under that statute all except producers of agricultural commodities and raisers of live stock, who combine their capital, skill, or acts for any of the purposes named in the act, may be punished as criminals, while agriculturalists and live-stock raisers, in respect of their products or live stock in hand, are exempted from the operation of the statute, and may combine and do that which, if done by others, would be a crime against the state. The statute so provides notwithstanding persons engaged in trade or in the sale of merchandise and commodities, within the limits of a state, and agriculturalists and raisers of live stock, are all in the same general class, that is, they are all alike engaged in domestic trade, which is, of right open to all, subject to such regulations, applicable alike to all in like conditions, as the state may legally prescribe.

The difficulty is not met by saying that, generally speaking, the state when enacting laws may, in its discretion, make a classification of persons, firms, corporations, and associations, in order to subserve public objects. For this court has held that classification "must always rest upon some difference which bears a reasonable and just relation to the act in respect to which the classification is proposed, and can never be made arbitrarily and without any such basis. . . . But arbitrary selection can never be justified by calling it classification. The equal protection demanded by the 14th Amendment forbids this. . . . No duty rests more imperatively upon the courts than the enforcement of those constitutional provisions intended to secure that equality of rights which is the foundation of free government. . . . It is apparent that the mere fact of classification is not sufficient to relieve a statute from the reach of the equality clause of the 14th Amendment, and that in all cases it must appear, not only that a classification has been made, but also that it is one based upon some reasonable ground,—some difference which bears a just and proper relation to the attempted classification,—and is not a mere arbitrary *selection." Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 155, 159, 160, 165, 41 L. ed. 666, 668, 670, 671, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255, 257-259, 261. These principles were recognized and applied in Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. 183 U. S. 79, sub nom. Cotting v. Godard, ante, 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30, in which it was unanimously agreed that a statute of Kansas regulating the charges of a particular stock-yards company in the state, but which exempted certain stock yards from its operation, was repugnant to the 14th Amendment in that it denied to that company the equal protection of the laws.

Attention has been called to the cases of Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594, and American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Louisiana, 179 U. S. 89, 45 L. ed. 102, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; and it is supposed that the grounds upon which the decision of the present case is placed are inconsistent with the principles announced in those cases. We do not think so.

In Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank we held that the progressive inheritance tax law of Illinois of June 15th, 1895, was not in conflict with the Constitution of the United States by reason of the fact that the amount of the tax was determinable by valuation so that every person and corporation should pay in proportion to the value of his, her, or its property inherited. The classification made by the statute was held not to be arbitrary by reason of the fact that inheritances were classified according to amount, and each class taxed at a different rate; for it was based upon principles of equality between the members of each distinct class. Such classification was held not to be inconsistent with the 14th Amendment.

In American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Louisiana, we held that a statute of Louisiana exempting from its operation planters and farmers grinding and refining their own sugar and molasses, but which imposed a license tax upon persons and corporations carrying on the business of refining sugar and molasses, did not deny the equal protection of the laws to such persons and corporations as were thus taxed. It was as if the statute had imposed a tax upon the business of refining sugar and molasses, and had declared, as reasonably it might have done, that those who only refined their own sugar and molasses should not be regarded as belonging to that class. We said in that case: "The power of taxation under this provision was fully considered in Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 392, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533, in which it was said not to have been intended to prevent a state from changing its system of taxation in all proper and reasonable ways. It may, if it chooses, exempt certain classes of property altogether; may impose different specific taxes upon different trades or professions; may vary the rates of excise upon various products; may tax real and personal estate in a different manner; may tax visible property only, and not securities; may allow or not allow deductions for indebtedness. 'All such regulations, and those of like character, so long as they proceed within reasonable limits and general usage, are within the discretion of the state legislature or the people of the state in framing their Constitution.' Again: "The discrimination is obviously intended as an encouragement to agriculture, and does not deny to persons and corporations engaged in a general refining business the equal protection of the laws."

The decision now rendered is not at all in conflict with the views expressed in the two cases just cited. It is sufficient to say that those cases had reference to the taxing power of the state, and involved considerations that could not, in the nature of things, apply to a state enactment like the one involved in the present case. The power to tax persons and property is an incident of sovereignty, and the extent to which it may be exerted has been indicated in numerous cases. Taxing laws, it has been well said, furnish the measure of every man's duty in support of the public burdens and the means of enforcing it. A tax may be imposed only upon certain callings and trades, for when the state exerts its power to tax, it is not bound to tax all pursuits or all property that may be legitimately taxed for governmental purposes. It would be an intolerable burden if a state could not tax any property or calling unless, at the same time, it taxed all property or all callings. Its discretion in such matters is very great, and should be exercised solely with reference to the general welfare as involved in the necessity of taxation for the support of the state. A state may, in its wisdom, classify property for purposes of taxation, and the exercise of its discretion is not to be questioned in a [563] court of the *United States, so long as the classification does not invade rights secured by the Constitution of the United States. But different considerations control when the state, by legislation, seeks to regulate the enjoyment of rights and the pursuit of callings connected with domestic trade. In prescribing regulations for the conduct of trade, it cannot divide those engaged in trade into classes and make criminals of one class if they do certain forbidden things, while allowing another and favored class engaged in the same domestic trade to do the same things with impunity. It is one thing to exert the power of taxation so as to meet the expenses of government, and at the same time, indirectly, to build up or protect particular interests or industries. It is quite a different thing for the state, under its general police power, to enter the domain of trade or commerce, and discriminate against some by declaring that particular classes within its jurisdiction shall be exempt from the operation of a general statute making it criminal to do certain things connected with domestic trade or commerce. Such a statute is not 184 U. S.

a legitimate exertion of the power of classification, rests upon no reasonable basis, is purely arbitrary, and plainly denies the equal protection of the laws to those against whom it discriminates.

We must not be understood by what has been said as conceding that the question of a denial of the equal protection of the laws can never arise under the taxing statutes of a state. On the contrary, the power to tax is so far limited that it cannot be used to impair or destroy rights that are given or secured by the supreme law of the land. We only need to say, in this connection, that the constitutional validity of the statute of Illinois now before us is not necessarily to be determined by the same principles that apply to taxing laws.

Other cases have been cited, but they are equally inapplicable in the present discussion, and only serve to show the extent to which the police powers of the states may be exerted without infringing the Federal Constitution.

Returning to the particular case before us, and repeating or summarizing some thoughts already expressed, it may be observed that if combinations of capital, skill, or acts, in respect *of the sale or purchase of [564] goods, merchandise, or commodities, whereby such combinations may, for their benefit exclusively, control or establish prices, are hurtful to the public interests and should be suppressed, it is impossible to perceive why like combinations in respect of agricultural products and live stock are not also hurtful. Two or more engaged in selling dry goods, or groceries, or meats, or fuel, or clothing, or medicines, are, under the statute, criminals, and subject to a fine, if they combine their capital, skill, or acts for the purpose of establishing, controlling, increasing, or reducing prices, or of preventing free and unrestrained competition amongst themselves or others in the sale of their goods or merchandise; but their neighbors, who happen to be agriculturists and live-stock raisers, may make combinations of that character in reference to their grain or live stock without incurring the prescribed penalty. Under what rule of permissible classification can such legislation be sustained as consistent with the equal protection of the laws? It cannot be said that the exemption made by the 9th section of the statute was of slight consequence, as affecting the general public interested in domestic trade and entitled to be protected against combinations formed to control prices for their own benefit; for it cannot be disputed that agricultural products and live stock in Illinois constitute a very large part of the wealth and property of that state.

We conclude this part of the discussion by saying that to declare that some of the class engaged in domestic trade or commerce shall be deemed criminals if they violate the regulations prescribed by the state for the purpose of protecting the public against illegal combinations formed to destroy competition and to control prices, and that others of the same class shall not be bound to regard those regulations, but may combine their capital, skill, or acts to destroy competition and to control prices for their special benefit, is so manifestly a denial of the equal protection of the laws that further or extended argument to establish that position would seem to be unnecessary.

We therefore hold that the act of 1893 is repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, unless its 9th section can be eliminated, leaving the rest of the act in operation.

[565] *The principles applicable to such a question are well settled by the adjudications of this court. If different sections of a statute are independent of each other, that which is unconstitutional may be disregarded, and valid sections may stand and be enforced. But if an obnoxious section is of such import that the other sections without it would cause results not contemplated or desired by the legislature, then the entire statute must be held inoperative. The 1st section of the act here in question embraces by its terms all persons, firms, corporations, or associations of persons who combine their capital, skill, or acts for any of the purposes specified, while the 9th section declares that the statute shall not apply to agriculturalists or live-stock dealers in respect of their products or stock in hand. If the latter section be eliminated as unconstitutional, then the act, if it stands, will apply to agriculturalists and live-stock dealers. Those classes would in that way be reached and fined, when, evidently, the legislature intended that they should not be regarded as offending against the law even if they did combine their capital, skill, or acts in respect of their products or stock in hand. Looking, then, at all the sections together, we must hold that the legislature would not have entered upon or continued the policy indicated by the statute unless agriculturalists and live-stock dealers were excluded from its operation, and thereby protected from prosecution. The result is that the statute must be regarded as an entirety, and in that view it must be adjudged to be unconstitutional as denying the equal protection of the laws to those within its jurisdiction who are not embraced by the 9th section. Whether it is also within the prohibition against the deprivation of property without due process of law is a question which it is unnecessary to consider at this time.

Percceiving no error in the record, the judgment in each case must be affirmed. It is so ordered.

Mr. Justice Gray did not participate in the decision of this case.

Mr. Justice McKenna dissenting:

The trust statute of Illinois of 1893 is directed against combinations *in trade made to affect prices of commodities. The court holds that the statute is repugnant to the Constitution of the United States because of the 9th section, which excludes from the operation of the statute "agricultural products or live stock while in the hands of the producer or raiser." In other words, and to present the discriminations of the statute in its application to persons, it punishes as a criminal conspiracy the acts enumerated in § 1, except when they are done by producers and raisers of agricultural products and live stock in respect thereto. The statute also takes away a right of action for the price of the commodities sold. One of the defenses of the plaintiffs in error was based on that provision.

The view of the court is that the legislation is purely discriminative, and is not justified by any legal principle of classification. To sustain the view the rule expressed in Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255, is quoted. It was there said: "It is apparent that the mere fact of classification is not sufficient to relieve a statute from the reach of the equality clause of the 14th Amendment, and that in all cases it must appear, not only that a classification has been made, but also that it is one based upon some reasonable ground,—some difference which bears a just and proper relation to the attempted classification,—and is not a mere arbitrary selection." Undoubtedly. Without the observance of that principle, there can be no classification at all in any proper sense. There will be arbitrary grouping—not association of persons or things on account of common properties or characters or relations. But differences are recognized in classification as well as resemblances, and this court has found it necessary to so state. In Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 43 L. ed. 909, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609, we said: "Indeed, the very idea of classification is that of inequality, so that it goes without saying that the fact of inequality in no manner determines the matter of constitutionality."

It seems like a contradiction to say that a law having inequality of operation may yet give equality of protection. Viewed rightly, however, the contradiction disappears; indeed, need not even be expressed. There are very few exertions of *government [567] which can be made applicable to all persons as such. Government is not a simple thing. It encounters and must deal with the problems which come from persons in an infinite variety of relations. Classification is the recognition of those relations, and in making it a legislature must be allowed a wide latitude of discretion and judgment. This has been decided many times against contentions based on a variety of facts. I will content myself by citing the later cases and commenting upon them very briefly. The cases are Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Clark v. Kansas City, 176 U. S. 114, 44 L. ed. 392, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 284; Gundling v. Chicago, 177 U. S. 183, 44 L. ed. 725, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; 184 U. S.

Petit v. Minnesota, 177 U. S. 164, 44 L. ed. 716, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Williams v. Fears, 179 U. S. 270, 45 L. ed. 186, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Louisiana, 179 U. S. 89, 45 L. ed. 102, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43.

In these cases and the cases cited in them classifications were sustained which depended upon differences in the amounts of legacies; on differences between corporations; on differences between land dependent on its use for agriculture and other purposes in regard to the power of a city to annex it; on differences between fire insurance and other insurance; on the right of a legislature to declare, as a matter of law, that the work of a barber was not a work of necessity, while as to all other kinds of labor the fact was to be determined by a jury; on the difference between hiring persons to labor in the state and hiring persons to labor out of the state; on differences between sugar refiners based entirely and only on the fact of the production or purchase of the sugar refined.

In American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Louisiana a license tax was imposed on those engaged in carrying on the business of refining sugar and molasses. It was provided, however, that the law should not apply to "planters and farmers grinding and refining their own sugar."

Wherein did the Louisiana statute, which was held constitutional, differ from the Illinois statute, which is held to be unconstitutional? In the former case the distinction (in the opinion in the case it is called "discrimination") was between manufacturers of sugar and growers of it. In the case at bar the distinction is between traders in products and growers of them. Is not a parallel obvious? Can the cases be [568] distinguished because *in one a tax was imposed and in the other conduct is regulated or penalized? Indeed, is not the distinction verbal, each being means to an end? Besides, what justification for the distinction is there under the Constitution? None, I submit, can be found in the words of that instrument. Any state legislation which denies the equal protection of the laws is prohibited. The prohibition is independent of form or means. It would be strange, indeed, if the power of a state is limited and confined by the Constitution of the United States, when the state attempts by law to regulate conduct, and is unbounded in its discretion when it imposes taxes; that in one case it may see a difference between manufacturers and planters, and in the other case may not see a difference between traders in commodities acquired for the purposes of sale and such property when held by farmers by whose labor they were produced.

The reasoning of the cases is as strong and demonstrative as their instances. We have declared that we could not investigate or condemn the impolicy of a state law, and that this court is not a refuge from the mere injustice and oppression of state legislation. Many of the exercises of government, it has been pointed out, were addressed to persons, not absolutely or abstractly, but according to their relations, and that classification based on those relations need not be constituted by an exact or scientific exclusion or inclusion of persons or things. Therefore it has been repeatedly declared that classification is justified, if it is not palpably arbitrary.

The cases afford, not only affirmative examples, but also by a negative deduction illustrate what is legal classification. Mr. Justice Bradley said in Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533: "Clear and hostile demonstrations against particular persons and classes, especially such as are of unusual character, unknown to the practice of our governments, might be obnoxious to the constitutional prohibition,"—that is, the prohibition upon the states to deny to any citizen the equal protection of the laws. The thought of Mr. Justice Bradley was developed and illustrated by Mr. Justice Brown, speaking for this court in American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Louisiana, and tests of the unconstitutionality of the discriminations of a state law *were expressed, which were as ready as they were significant. Speaking of the Louisiana act, which discriminated between refiners of sugar, Mr. Justice Brown said: "The act in question does undoubtedly discriminate in favor of a certain class of refiners, but this discrimination, if founded upon a reasonable distinction in principle, is valid. Of course, if such discrimination were purely arbitrary, oppressive, or capricious [the italics are mine], and made to depend upon differences of color, race, nativity, religious opinions, political affiliations, or other considerations having no possible connection with the duties of citizens as taxpayers, such exemption would be pure favoritism, and a denial of the equal protection of the laws to the less favored classes."

Of course, the enumeration of some tests does not exclude others, but why the enumeration of the special kind? Did not the case require it? What ingenuity can find a difference in the act and process of sugar refining when done by a purchaser of raw sugar and a raiser (planter) of it; what difference in the product after it shall be refined, or in any element, thing, or circumstance, which can affect its use or sale. The whole and only distinction in the classes which the statute made was between the grower of sugar and the buyer of it—the exact and only distinction of the Illinois law now held to be void, and yet the Louisiana law was sustained as constitutional.

I have already adverted to the distinction which may be claimed to exist between taxing laws and regulating laws, but a few words more may be justified. The opinion of the court makes a great deal of the penal provisions of the trust law, and its discriminations are displayed and intensified more by the recitation and effect of those provisions than by the provision upon which the defense of plaintiffs in error was based, that is, the provision (§ 10) which precludes recovery of the price of "any article or commodity sold" by an offender against the statute.

[570] The penal provisions of the statute are not before us for judgment. If they were, and the unconstitutionality of the statute could be attributed to them, they might be construed as separable and be discarded. But, not insisting on that, and considering the comments on those provisions to be more than incidental illustration of the character of the statute, it is very clear to me that they do not in any way affect the power of the state. In other words, the power of the state cannot be impugned or affected by the sanctions which the state may impose to secure obedience to its commands or prohibitions. It may be through a tax or it may be through penalties, and the question will always be, Is the thing which is directed or forbidden within the power of the state? And when a statute is assailed as denying the equal protection of the laws, its equal operation is only involved.

The principle of classification, therefore, is not different in tax laws than in other laws. That principle, as I have said, necessarily implies discrimination between the persons composing the class and other persons. The equality prescribed by the Constitution is fulfilled if equality be observed between the members of the class. It is violated if such equality be not observed, and the latter was the case in Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. 183 U. S. 79, sub nom. Cotting v. Godard, ante, 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30. That case, therefore, does not sustain the ruling now made.

Any further remarks may be only repetition, but the application of the cases to the statute now before us should be pointed out.

The equality of operation which the Constitution requires in state legislation cannot be construed, as we have seen, as demanding an absolute universality of operation, having no regard to the different capabilities, conditions, and relations of men. Classification, therefore, is necessary, but what are its limits? They are not easily defined, but the purview of the legislation should be regarded. A line must not be drawn which includes arbitrarily some persons who do and some persons who do not stand in the same relation to the purpose of the legislation. But a wide latitude of selection must be left to the legislature. It is only a palpable abuse of the power of selection which can be judicially reviewed, and the right of review is so delicate that even in its best exercises it may lead to challenge. At times, indeed, it must be exercised, but should always be exercised in view of the function and necessarily large powers of a legislature.

[571] *What was the purpose of the Illinois statute, and what were the relations of its classes to that purpose? The statute was the expression of the purpose of the state to suppress combinations to control the prices of commodities, not, however, in the hands of the producers, but in the hands of traders, persons, or corporations. Shall we say that such suppression must be universal or not at all? How can we? What knowledge have we of the condition in Illinois which invoked the legislation, or in what form and extent the evil of combinations to control prices appeared in that state? Indeed, whether such combinations are evils or blessings, or to what extent either, is not a judicial inquiry. If we can assume them to be evil because the statute does so, can we go beyond the statute and determine for ourselves the local conditions and condemn the legislation dependent thereon? But are there not, between the classes which the statute makes, distinctions which the legislature had a right to consider? Of whom are the classes composed? The excluded class is composed of farmers and stockraisers while holding the products or live stock produced or raised by them. The included class is composed of merchants, traders, manufacturers, all engaged in commercial transactions. That is, one class is composed of persons who are scattered on farms; the other class is composed of persons congregated in cities and towns, not only of natural persons, but of corporate organizations. In the difference of these situations, and in other differences which will occur to any reflection, might not the legislature see difference in opportunities and powers between the classes in regard to the prohibited acts? That differences exist cannot be denied. To describe and contrast them might be invidious. To consider their effect would take us from legal problems to economic ones, and this demonstrates to my mind how essentially any judgment or action based upon those differences is legislative and cannot be reviewed by the judiciary.

I am therefore constrained to dissent from the judgment of the court.

*UNITED STATES, Appt.,

v.

JUAN PEDRO CAMOU.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 572-577.)

[572]

Conclusiveness of prior decision on subsequent appeal—Mexican land grants—definite location.

1. An appeal from a decree entered in proceedings taken in pursuance of the mandate of the Supreme Court of the United States on a prior appeal brings up for review no other question than whether such decree was reached in due pursuance of the previous opinion and mandate of the appellate court.
2. A definite location and possession of a Mexican land grant of 4 sitios is shown with reasonable certainty by evidence that the grantee took and continued in possession of a segregated tract of that area, laid off by the original survey in the proceedings to obtain the grant, and that the subsequent surveys, though, like the original, not made with the care and precision that characterize surveys made in the long-settled portions of the country, were made to verify and renew the original survey, and not with a purpose to locate a floating grant of uncertain boundaries and extent.

NOTE.—On the conclusiveness of prior decisions on subsequent appeals—see note to Hastings v. Foxworthy (Neb.) 34 L. R. A. 321.

184 U. S.

[No. 35.]

Submitted March 22, 1901. Decided March 17, 1902.

A PPEAL from the Court of Private Land Claims to review a decree confirming a title under a Mexican land grant. Affirmed.

See same case on former appeal, 171 U. S. 277, 43 L. ed. 163, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 855.

Statement by Mr. Justice Shiras:

In December, 1891, Juan Pedro Camou filed a petition in the court of private land claims, praying to have confirmed to him a certain tract of land situated in the county of Cochise, territory of Arizona, known and designated as the San Rafael del Valle grant. Subsequent proceedings resulted in a trial and a decree in favor of the government, adjudging petitioner's claim and title invalid, and dismissing the petition. The case was then brought by appeal to this court, where the decree of the court of private land claims was reversed and the case remanded for further proceedings. 171 U. S. 277, 43 L. ed. 163, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 855.

Subsequently further proceedings were had in the court of private land claims in pursuance of the mandate of this court, resulting, on June 2, 1899, in a decree confirming the petitioner's title to 17,474.93 acres. From this decree of confirmation an appeal was allowed to this court.

Solicitor General Richards and Messrs. Matthew G. Reynolds and William H. Pope submitted the cause for appellant.

Messrs. William Herring and Rochester Ford submitted the cause for appellee.

Contentions of counsel sufficiently appear in the opinion.

[572] *Mr. Justice Shiras delivered the opinion of the court:

When this cause was before us, in 171 U. S. 277, 43 L. ed. 163, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 855, the validity of the claim was, upon full consideration, upheld. It was, however, held that the recovery should be restricted to the [573] land *claimed in the petition and paid for, and as it was shown that the survey was in excess of the land granted and paid for, the cause was remanded to the court of private land claims for further proceedings which resulted, as shown by this record, in a final decree of confirmation establishing the boundaries of the grant, and finding it to contain 4 sitios, or 17,474.93 acres.

The contention made on behalf of the government in this appeal is that this grant of 4 sitios was a mere float within exterior boundaries containing a larger tract; that there were no means afforded of identifying where, within those exterior boundaries, such 4 sitios were located; that accordingly, as matter of law, prescribed in the 6th section of the Gadsden treaty, the tract cannot be said to have been located, and hence the grant must be held to be invalid.

It may well be doubted whether, even if this contention were well founded, it can be urged at this stage of the controversy.

When the case was originally tried in the court of private land claims, and subsequently was heard on appeal in this court, the principal contention on the part of the government was that the state of Sonora had no power to make a grant of public lands, and hence that the grant in question, although made in the name and by the proper officers of that state, was invalid. The subject was fully considered by this court, and it was held that the several states of the Republic of Mexico, of which Sonora was one, had, at the time when the transaction in question took place, authority to make sales of vacant public lands within their limits.

The government further contended that this and similar grants by the separate states had been annulled by certain decrees of Santa Anna, when acting as dictator of Mexico, and that, as the government of the United States had recognized Santa Anna, in purchasing the territory covered by the Gadsden treaty, the courts of the United States must recognize, when dealing with personal rights existing in the ceded territory, his declarations or decrees in respect to titles, as authoritative. But this view of the legal effect of the decrees of Santa Anna *upon the private rights of residents [574] within the ceded territory was not accepted by this court, and, for reasons given in the opinion of Mr. Justice Brewer, it was held that, as the grant made by the state of Sonora was valid when made, it was not destroyed by the arbitrary decree of a temporary dictator.

As, however, it appeared that the survey of the land claimed in the petition was in excess of the 4 sitios granted and paid for, the court applied the rule laid down in Ely v. United States, 171 U. S. 220, 43 L. ed. 142, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 840, that where there is a valid grant for a certain number of acres within the outboundaries of a larger tract, the court of private land claims may inquire, and, if it finds sufficient reasons for determining the true boundaries of the tract that was granted, it can so prescribe them, and sustain the claim to that extent.

Upon this second appeal we have only to consider whether the court of private land claims reached its final decree in due pursuance of the previous opinion and mandate of this court. The decision there made is the law of the case, and is not open for reconsideration in the subsequent appeal. This subject was recently considered in Illinois ex rel. Hunt v. Illinois C. R. Co. 184 U. S. 77, ante, 440, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300, and it was there shown that it is the settled law of this court that, after a case has been brought here and decided, and a mandate issued to the court below, if a second writ of error is sued out, it brings up for revision nothing but the proceedings subsequent to the mandate. None of the questions which were before the court on the first writ of error can be reheard or examined on the second. To allow a second writ of error or appeal to a court of last resort on the same questions which were open to dispute on the first would lead to endless litigation. In chancery a bill of review is sometimes allowed on petition to the court; but there would be no end to a suit if every obstinate litigant could, by repeated appeals, compel a court to listen to criticisms on their opinions, or speculate on chances from changes in its members.

Accordingly, in the present case, everything involved in the question of the validity of the grant might be deemed to have been determined on the first appeal, as well its alleged invalidity for want of definite location, as for the want of power in the state [575] of Sonora to make the grant. However, even if this view were waived, and it were conceded that our former mandate left it open to the government to urge the invalidity of the grant by reason of alleged want of definite location, our examination of the record has satisfied us that the final decree of the court of private land claims defining the boundaries of the grant was justified by the evidence.

It is clearly shown that on March 12, 1827, Rafael Elias presented his petition to the treasurer general of the state of Sonora, asking for a grant of public lands adjacent to the ranch of San Pedro, within the jurisdiction of Santa Cruz; that on July 1, 1827, the treasurer general issued an order directed to the alcalde of the police of Santa Cruz, empowering him to proceed to survey, appraise, and offer at public sale for thirty consecutive days the lands indicated in the petition; that on August 20, 1827, in obedience to said order, the alcalde executed what is called an act of obedience, wherein he stated that he would go to the ranch of San Pedro in order to proceed with the survey of the lands petitioned for; that he appointed four citizens to act as counters, tallymen and chainmen, who were duly qualified; that the survey was so proceeded in that there resulted a segregated tract of land containing 4 sitios, of which Rafael Elias took possession; that, at the conclusion of the survey, the testimonio states the alcalde proceeded to the appraisement of the land through experts, who adjudged the value of the 4 sitios to be $240, at the rate of $60 each, and that upon this appraisement the alcalde put them up at auction, asking for bidders, for thirty consecutive days, from August 30 to September 30, 1827. On September 30, 1827, after summoning the interested party, the alcalde remitted the proceedings to the treasurer general, who transmitted them to the fiscal attorney, who on February 7, 1828, reported his opinion that "the proceedings be continued to adjudication, according to the forms and requisites in use." The testimonio then states that the treasurer general, being satisfied with the report of the fiscal attorney, by order of April 16 proceeded, asking for bidders, and none appearing, the 4 sitios were auctioned off in favor of Rafael Elias. The testimonio further discloses that *the [576] purchase money was duly paid into the treasury, and a certificate of the treasurer general, of April 21, 1828, concluded the proceedings; that, on December 25, 1832, followed the grant or patent by the treasurer general of the state of Sonora, stating that the proceedings had been concluded with all the requisites and formalities provided by law, and remained in the custody of the treasurer general as a perpetual muniment of title; that therefore, in the exercise of the faculties conferred on him by law, and in the name of the sovereign state of Sonora, he granted in due form of law the 4 sitios of land for the raising of cattle and horses, comprised in the locality of San Rafael del Valle, situated in the jurisdiction of the presidio of Santa Cruz, in favor of the citizen Rafael Elias, to whom he conceded, gave, and adjudged the said land by way of sale, with the condition and permanency established by the law, for himself and his successors, with the injunction and condition that he must keep said sitios occupied and settled, without letting them be abandoned or deserted at any time, with the understanding that if they be abandoned for the period of three consecutive years, and there should be any person to petition for them, in such event, with previous proof of the fact, they would be declared public lands and granted anew to the highest bidder, excepting in such cases where the abandonment was caused by the notorious invasion of the public enemies; and admonishing said Elias and his successors that they must keep and confine themselves to the land and limits as marked precisely in the foregoing proceedings of survey, and comply exactly with the law which imposed obligations to mark the metes and boundaries with monuments of stone and mortar. It is admitted by the government that the expediente of this grant is on file in the archives of Hermosillo, and is in the usual form, and that on folio 11 and on the back of it, of the book of "Toma de Razon," is recorded an entry of the delivery of the title deed to Rafael Elias for 4 sitios of land, comprised in the place called Rafael del Valle, situate in the jurisdiction of the presidio of Santa Cruz. This was followed by evidence showing the continuous possession of the tract by Rafael Elias until forced to leave it by hostile incursions of the Apache Indians. *There was also proof of a regular deraign- [577] ment of title from the original grantee to Camou, the appellee in the present case.

Taking together the evidence adduced by the claimant on the first trial before the court of private land claims, and that introduced after our mandate had gone to that court, we think it is satisfactorily shown that the land described in the final decree is that described in the original survey and of which Rafael Elias was put in possession. The principal witnesses in this part of the case were George J. Roskrue, a surveyor of more than twenty years' experience in that part of the country, and who made the survey and map of the San Rafael del Valle land grant, which was used upon the trial. Douglass Snyder and Max Marks, who assisted in making that survey, were also examined. These witnesses were subjected to a rigorous cross-examination by the attorney of the government, and their testimony has been minutely criticised in his brief.

But we are not able to perceive that the statements of these witnesses have been materially shaken. Some discrepancies indeed appear, but they are not important, and are naturally to be expected from the nature of the case. Neither the original nor the subsequent surveys were made with the care and precision that characterize surveys made in the long-settled parts of the country. But it is evident—and this is the important point—that the latter surveys were made to verify and renew the original survey, and not with a purpose to locate a floating grant of uncertain boundaries and extent. In this particular this case is plainly distinguishable from the case of Ainsa v. United States, 161 U. S. 208, 40 L. ed. 673, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 544, where the claimant's case failed because there had been no actual location of the grant prior to the Gadsden treaty, and because there was no satisfactory evidence that the act of juridical possession had ever taken place.

From our examination of the evidence we concur in the view of the court of private land claims, that a definite location and possession of the grant in question, prior to the date of the Gadsden treaty, are shown with reasonable certainty, and accordingly the decree of that court, confirming the claim to the extent of the 4 sitios granted and paid for, is affirmed.

[578]*FERDINAND EIDMAN, Collector, etc.,
v.

MIGUEL R. MARTINEZ, Administrator, etc.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 578-592.)

Inheritance tax—personal property of non-resident alien—will executed abroad.

American securities passing partly under a

NOTE.—On collateral-inheritance taxes—see notes to Re Howe (N. Y.) 2 L. R. A. 825; Wallace v. Myers (C. C. S. D. N. Y.) 4 L. R. A. 171; Com. v. Ferguson (Pa.) 10 L. R. A. 240; Re Romaine (N. Y.) 12 L. R. A. 401, and Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 42 L. ed. U. S. 1037.

On collateral-inheritance tax on property passing by intestate laws of another state—see State v. Dalrymple (Md.) 3 L. R. A. 372, and note.

184 U. S.

will executed abroad by a nonresident alien, and partly under the intestate laws of Spain, are not subject to the inheritance tax imposed by the war revenue act of June 13, 1898, § 29, upon personal property passing "either by will or by the intestate laws of any state or territory," since the words "passing by will" are limited by the subsequent words "or by the intestate laws of any state or territory," as is evident from the provision of § 30 for the payment of such tax to the collector of the district of which the deceased person was a resident.

[No. 287.]

Argued November 21, 1901. Decided March 17, 1902.

UPON CERTIFICATE from the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit on a question as to the inheritance tax imposed by the war revenue act. Answered in the negative.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This case came up upon certain questions of law arising in an action brought in the circuit court for the southern district of New York by Martinez, as ancillary administrator with the will annexed of the estate of Salvador Elizalde, against the collector of internal revenue, for the refund of an inheritance tax paid to the defendant upon certain personal property in the city of New York.

The facts out of which the questions arose are as follows:

Salvador Elizalde, a nonresident alien, a subject of the King of Spain, who had never resided within the United States, died in Paris, France, on April 27, 1899, leaving a will in the Spanish language, executed in Paris, in the year 1891, pursuant to the laws of Spain. This will was filed and protocolized in the office of the Spanish consul in Paris, and thereby under the laws of Spain and the consular convention or treaty between Spain and France, Arturo Elizalde, the sole legatee under said will, became entitled to the possession and administration of all the "personal property of [579] the decedent. Said Arturo Elizalde is the only son and sole next of kin of the decedent, and is a nonresident alien and a Spanish subject. He has resided all his life in Spain and France, and has never resided in the United States. Said will purports to give all of the personal property of the decedent to his said son, but, by the laws of Spain, only one third of the property passed by the will, and the remaining two thirds passed to said son by and under the Spanish intestate law.

The decedent left certain Federal, municipal, and corporate bonds, of the par value of $225,400, in the custody of his agents in the city of New York, and they were within the third collection district of New York at the date of his death.

After the filing of said will in Paris, Arturo Elizalde entered upon the administration of the decedent's personal estate, and appointed the defendant in error, Miguel R. Martinez, his attorney for the purpose of receiving ancillary letters of administration with the will annexed in the state of New York, and such letters were issued to him by the surrogate of New York county. After receiving such letters, said Martinez took possession of said bonds.

The United States Commissioner of Internal Revenue, under the alleged authority of the 29th and 30th sections of the act of Congress of June 13, 1898, entitled "An Act to Provide Ways and Means to Meet War Expenditures and for Other Purposes," assessed an internal revenue tax of $4,293.76 upon a legacy and distributive share arising from personal property in the hands of the administrator, defendant in error, who paid said tax to the United States collector of internal revenue for the third district of New York, plaintiff in error, under protest and upon compulsion of the collector's threat of distraint and sale, and made the statutory application for its refund to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, who rejected the application. The administrator then brought this action in the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of New York against the collector to recover the amount of the tax.

[580] The collector demurred; the demurrer was overruled, and a final judgment entered against the collector for the amount claimed, with interest and costs. The collector then brought the action into the circuit court of appeals, which certified to this court the following questions of law arising out of the foregoing facts:

"1. Is any tax or duty imposed by the 29th and 30th sections of the act of Congress of June 13, 1898, entitled 'An Act to Provide Ways and Means to Meet War Expenditures and for Other Purposes,' upon the passing of any legacy arising out of the personal property of a nonresident alien who has never resided or had a domicile within the United States, and who dies without the United States in the year 1899, leaving a will made and executed at his foreign domicile, pursuant to the laws thereof, by which he gives all his property to a nonresident alien legatee, and who leaves certain personal property within the state of New York exceeding $10,000 in value?"

"2. Is any tax or duty imposed by the 29th and 30th sections of the act of Congress of June 13, 1898, entitled 'An Act to Provide Ways and Means to Meet War Expenditures and for Other Purposes,' upon the passing of any distributive share arising out of the personal property of a nonresident alien who has never resided or had a domicile within the United States, and who dies without the United States, in the year 1899, intestate, and by the law of his foreign domicile all of his personal property passes to his son, also a nonresident alien, and who leaves certain personal property within the state of New York, exceeding $10,000 in value?"

Solicitor General Richards argued the cause and filed a brief for collector:

For the purposes of taxation, personal property may be separated from its owner, and he may be taxed, on its account, at the place where it is, although not the place of his own domicile, and even if he is not a citizen or a resident of the state which imposes the tax.

Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. ed. 613, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; Lane County v. Oregon, 7 Wall. 71, 19 L. ed. 101; State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds, 15 Wall. 300, sub nom. Cleveland, P. & A. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 21 L. ed. 179; Union P. R. Co. v. Peniston, 18 Wall. 5, 21 L. ed. 787; Tappan v. Merchants Nat. Bank, 19 Wall. 490, 22 L. ed. 189; State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 23 L. ed. 669; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 29 L. ed. 257, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091; Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 29 L. ed. 715, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; Marye v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 127 U. S. 117, 32 L. ed. 94, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1037; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 166 U. S. 185, 41 L. ed. 935, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 604; Bristol v. Washington County, 177 U. S. 133, 44 L. ed. 701, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585.

The same disregard of the old maxim, Mobilia sequuntur personam obtains in the levying of inheritance taxes by the various states of the Union.

Dos Passos, Inheritance Tax Law, 2d ed. § 47, p. 167; Re Romaine, 127 N. Y. 80, 12 L. R. A. 401, 27 N. E. 759; State v. Dalrymple, 70 Md. 294, 3 L. R. A. 372, 17 Atl. 82; Alvany v. Powell, 55 N. C. (2 Jones, Eq.) 51.

The war-revenue act of 1898 was passed after the enactment by many of the states of the Union of inheritance-tax laws, all of which were made applicable to the personal property within the state of nonresident as well as resident decedents.

Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594.

The theory on which such laws are based is that in the transmission or receipt of such property a privilege is enjoyed under the law of the state.

United States v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 625, 41 L. ed. 287, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Plummer v. Coler, 178 U. S. 115, 44 L. ed. 998, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 774.

That Congress intended by the language in § 29 to reach every personal estate within the United States, whether of a resident or a nonresident decedent, is shown conclusively by the amendments made to § 30 by the act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. at L. 948).

Treasury Annual Report, 1900, p. 617.

The English courts, while adhering to Thomson v. Advocate General, 12 Clark & F. 1, where the nonresident dies leaving a foreign will, have held, in a number of cases, that a succession created by a gift of property in England intended to take effect after death is subject to the tax.

Hanson, Death Duties, p. 531.

No property within a state can pass to legatees or distributees except by virtue of and in compliance with the law of the state. This applies to all property, the property of aliens as well as the property of residents.

Mager v. Grima, 8 How. 490, 12 L. ed. 1168.

As taxation is the rule, and exemption the exception, the intention to make an exemption ought to be expressed in clear and unambiguous terms; and it cannot be taken to have been intended when the language of the statute on which it depends is doubtful or uncertain.

Cooley, Taxn. 2d ed. p. 204.

Where a particular construction of a statute will occasion great inconvenience or produce inequality and injustice, that view is to be avoided if another and more reasonable interpretation is present in the statute.

Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747.

For nearly fifty years after the passage of the English legacy act of 1796, the English courts never adopted or applied the maxim, Mobilia, etc., in its construction. When they did finally adopt it, they did so out of considerations of public policy.

See Atty. Gen. v. Cockerell, 1 Price, 165; Atty. Gen. v. Beatson, 7 Price, 560; Thomson v. Advocate General, 12 Clark & F. 1; Albany v. Powell, 55 N. C. (2 Jones, Eq.) 51.

The courts of this country have often explicitly refused to adopt and apply this maxim in the construction of a legacy tax, although the language of the acts permitted it.

Alvany v. Powell, 55 N. C. (2 Jones, Eq.) 51; State v. Dalrymple, 70 Md. 295, 3 L. R. A. 372, 17 Atl. 82; Small's Estate, 151 Pa. 1, 25 Atl. 23, 28; Re Romaine, 127 N. Y. 80, 12 L. R. A. 401, 27 N. E. 759; Re Whiting, 150 N. Y. 27, 34 L. R. A. 232, 44 N. E. 715; Re Bronson, 150 N. Y. 1, 34 L. R. A. 238, 44 N. E. 707; Re Houdayer, 150 N. Y. 37, 34 L. R. A. 235, 44 N. E. 718; Re Fitch, 160 N. Y. 87, 54 N. E. 701; Weaver v. State, 110 Iowa, 323, 81 N. W. 603.

Personal property of a nonresident decedent, dying without a will, is regarded as passing by the intestate laws of the state wherein it is situated for the purpose of levying legacy taxes.

Billings v. People, 189 Ill. 472, 59 N. E. 798; Callahan v. Woodbridge, 171 Mass. 595, 51 N. E. 176.

The essential thing is the presence of the property within the jurisdiction of the United States. The remedy is against the property or the person in custody of it, not against the legatee.

United States v. Allen, 9 Ben. 154, Fed. Cas. No. 14,430.

Messrs. Wheeler H. Peckham and John G. Carlisle argued the cause, and, with Messrs. William Edmond Curtis and Henry M. Ward, filed a brief for Martinez:

The law in question must be strictly construed in favor of the exemption or noninclusion of this property.

Warrington v. Furber, 8 East, 242; Williams v. Sanger, 10 East, 66; Denn ex dem. 184 U. S.

Manifold v. Diamond, 4 Barn. & C. 243; Tomkins v. Ashby, 6 Barn. & C. 541; Doe ex dem. Scruton v. Snaith, 8 Bing. 152; Wroughton v. Turtle, 11 Mees. & W. 561. See Chandos v. Inland Revenue Comrs. 6 Exch. 464; Gurr v. Seudds, 11 Exch. 190; Dwarris, Stat. 749.

It is the law of England that where a legacy-taxing statute is phrased in general terms and does not directly state that personal property of one domiciled abroad, found in England, shall be subject to the tax, such personal property of one domiciled abroad is not subject to the tax.

Thomson v. Advocate General, 12 Clark & F. 1; Re Lovelace, 4 De G. & J. 340; Re Wallop, 1 De G. J. & S. 656; Jeves v. Shadwell, L. R. 1 Ch. 1; Atty. Gen. v. Campbell, L. R. 5 H. L. 524; Lyall v. Lyall, L. R. 15 Eq. 1, 42 L. J. Ch. N. S. 195; Cigala Settlement Trusts, L. R. 7 Ch. Div. 351; Atty. Gen. v. Jewish Colonization Asso. [1900] 2 Q. B. 556.

Statutes similar to the one in question have always been held not to cover a legacy given in a will of a foreign domiciled testator, or a distributive share passing by the laws of a foreign country wherein the deceased was domiciled at the time of his death.

United States v. Hunnewell, 13 Fed. 617; United States v. Morris, 27 Fed. 341; Re Enston, 113 N. Y. 174, sub nom. People v. Sherwood, 3 L. R. A. 464, 21 N. E. 87; Ruckgaber v. Moore, 104 Fed. 947.

Congress, by enacting the law of 1898, in the precise words of the law of 1864, meant and intended to adopt the construction which the courts had given to the law of 1864, and which the English courts had given to a similar English law.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. ed. 699, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844; McDonald v. Hovey, 110 U. S. 619, 28 L. ed. 269, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; Ryalls v. Mechanics' Mills, 5 L. R. A. 667 and note, 150 Mass. 190, 22 N. E. 766.

Personal property which had belonged to one deceased is actually situated in the place where the deceased was domiciled at the time of his decease.

Re Enston, 113 N. Y. 181, sub nom. People v. Sherwood, 3 L. R. A. 464, 21 N. E. 87.

Where a succession tax has been intended to act in opposition to this fiction the fact should be stated in plain and unmistakable language.

Ibid.; Cross v. United States Trust Co. 131 N. Y. 330, 15 L. R. A. 606, 30 N. E. 125.

Many states have provided in plain terms for taxing property found within their borders, whether that of residents or nonresidents.

1 Dos Passos, Inheritance Tax Law, 2d ed. pp. 426-443, 459, 467, 477, 484, 489, 493, 498, 503, 510, 518.

This is a legacy tax as distinguished from a probate or estate or succession duty.

Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747.

This duty, therefore, is imposed upon the right or privilege of the legatee or distributee of succession to the legacy or share by virtue of a will or of the intestate laws of a state or territory, as distinguished from the right or privilege of the owner of the estate to dispose of it by will or to have it pass under the intestate laws.

Ibid.; 3 Dowell, History of Taxation (London, 1884), p. 138.

The statute should be construed strictly in favor of the taxpayer.

Treat v. White, 181 U. S. 264, 45 L. ed. 853, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611.

The 29th and 30th sections of the war revenue law of 1898 are a substantial re-enactment of the corresponding sections of the Acts of 1862 and 1864, and they were based upon the English legacy duty act of 1796.

Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 51, 44 L. ed. 973, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747.

Under the administrative and judicial construction of the legacy duty act of 1864 no tax accrued on the passing of the property of nonresident decedents.

6 Int. Rev. Rec. p. 179, 1st column; United States v. Hunnewell, 13 Fed. 617; United States v. Morris, 27 Fed. 341.

Congress, in re-enacting the act of 1864, must be deemed to have adopted the administrative and judicial construction of that act and the construction of the English legacy duty act by the English courts.

Minor v. Mechanics' Bank, 1 Pet. 46, 7 L. ed. 47; The Abbotsford, 98 U. S. 440, sub nom. The Abbotsford v. Johnson, 25 L. ed. 168.

Congress, by adopting the language of the act of 1864 instead of the language of the state inheritance-tax laws, declared its intention not to include the passing of the property of nonresidents.

The legacy and distributive share do not pass under the testate or intestate laws of New York, and are not subject to the payment of the duty imposed by the act of Congress.

Re Enston, 113 N. Y. 181, sub nom. People v. Sherwood, 3 L. R. A. 464, 21 N. E. 87; Cross v. United States Trust Co. 131 N. Y. 339, 15 L. R. A. 606, 30 N. E. 125; Dammert v. Osborn, 141 N. Y. 564, 35 N. E. 1088; Parsons v. Lyman, 20 N. Y. 103; Re Fitch, 160 N. Y. 92, 54 N. E. 701; Re Prout, 128 N. Y. 74, 13 L. R. A. 104, 27 N. E. 948; Schluter v. Bowers Sav. Bank, 117 N. Y. 125, 5 L. R. A. 541, 22 N. E. 572; Re Romaine, 127 N. Y. 80, 12 L. R. A. 401, 27 N. E. 759.

The rule or maxim, Mobilia, etc., is based on the fiction that personal property and securities have their situs at the domicile of their owner, and not where they may actually be found.

2 Kent, Com. *429, bottom paging 572, 12th ed. 1873; Story, Conf. L. § 37 and notes, §§ 376-381, p. 312, note to §§ 379, 473; Re Ewin, 1 Cromp. & J. 156; Ennis v. Smith, 14 How. 400, 14 L. ed. 472. See also Dicey, Conf. L. 683, 684; 1 Wms. Exrs. 300, 310; Wharton, Conf. L. 576; 2 Wms. Exrs. 1387.

700

*Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court: [580]

This case raises the question whether the inheritance-tax law of the *United States [581] applied, in 1899, to the intangible personal property of a nonresident alien who never had a domicile in the United States and died abroad,—such personal property being within the United States and having passed to his son, also an alien domiciled abroad, as sole legatee and next of kin of the deceased, partly under a will executed abroad and partly under the intestate laws of Spain.

By the 29th section of the war tax law of June 13, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 448, 464, chap. 448), "any person or persons having in charge or trust, as administrators, executors, or trustees, any legacies or distributive shares arising from personal property . . . passing . . . from any person possessed of such property, either by will or by the intestate laws of any state or territory, . . . shall be, and hereby are, made subject to a duty or tax," etc.

The ancient maxim of the law, Mobilia sequuntur personam, was the outgrowth of conditions which have largely ceased to exist, and of an age when personal property consisted principally of articles appertaining, as the name indicates, to the person of the owner, such as gold and silver, jewels, apparel, and less immediately to horses, cattle, and other animals, and to the products of the farm and the shop. As this property was, in primitive times, usually kept under the personal supervision of the owner, and was often carried about by him on his journeys (as it often still is in Oriental countries), the principle became incorporated in the law that its locality was determined by the domicile of the owner, and that his rights with respect to such property were fixed by the law of that domicile.

While the enormous increase in the amount and variety of personal property during the past century has necessitated certain limitations of the maxim, particularly in matters of taxation, it is by no means obsolete. It is still the law that personal property is sold, transmitted, bequeathed by will, and is descendible by inheritance according to the law of the domicile; and not by that of its situs. Cross v. United States Trust Co. 131 N. Y. 330, 15 L. R. A. 606, 30 N. E. 125; Ennis v. Smith, 14 How. 424, 14 L. ed. 483; Dammert v. Osborn, 141 N. Y. 564, 35 N. E. 1088. In matters of taxation, however, and of subjecting the personal property of nonresidents to the *claims of local creditors of the owner, seri- [582]ous encroachments have been made upon the ancient maxim, and a rule has grown up in modern times that legislatures may deal with the personal as well as with the real property of nonresidents within their jurisdiction, and that such property, while enjoying the protection and benefits of the local law, may be taxed for the expenses of the local government. These doctrines have found expression in a large number of cases in this court. Green v. Van Buskirk, 5 Wall. 307, 18 L. ed. 599, 7 Wall. 139, 19 L.

184 U. S.

ed. 109; Hervey v. Rhode Island Locomotive Works, 93 U. S. 664, 23 L. ed. 1003; Walworth v. Harris, 129 U. S. 355, 32 L. ed. 712, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; Security Trust Co. v. Dodd, 173 U. S. 624, 43 L. ed. 835, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 545, and cases there cited.

Recent cases in this court have affirmed very broadly the right of the legislature to tax the local property of nonresidents, and particularly of corporations who are permitted by comity to do business within the state. Delaware Railroad Tax, 18 Wall. 206, sub nom. Minot v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. 21 L. ed. 888; Erie R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 21 Wall. 492, 22 L. ed. 595; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. ed. 790, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961; Marye v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 127 U. S. 117, 32 L. ed. 94, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1037; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. ed. 613, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 166 U. S. 185, 41 L. ed. 965, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 604. The same principle has been applied not only to tangible property but to credits and effects. Tappan v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 19 Wall. 490, 22 L. ed. 189; Savings & L. Soc. v. Multnomah County, 169 U. S. 421, 42 L. ed. 803, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392; New Orleans v. Stempel, 175 U. S. 309, 44 L. ed. 174, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Bristol v. Washington County, 177 U. S. 133, 44 L. ed. 701, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585.

The question in each case is not of the power of the legislature to tax the personal property of nonresidents, both tangible and intangible, since that is well established both in England and America (Mager v. Grima, 8 How. 498, 12 L. ed. 1172), but of its intent to do so by the particular act in question. The inheritance-tax law of the United States above cited applies to property "passing by will or by the intestate laws of any state or territory." As the property in this case did not pass under any will executed in any state or territory of the United States, or by the intestate laws of any such state or territory, the case is not within the literalism of the act, unless we are to use the word "state" in a sense broad enough to include a foreign state or territory. [583] As *matter of fact, the decedent was a Spanish subject, who had never resided in the United States, had executed a will at Paris in the Spanish language, pursuant to the laws of Spain, under which will one third of his property passed to his son and two thirds to the same person under the intestate laws of Spain. The property left by the will consisted of Federal, municipal, and corporation bonds, in custody of the agents of the deceased in New York. It is the locality of the property within the jurisdiction of the United States which subjects it, if at all, to the legacy or succession tax.

It is an old and familiar rule of the English courts, applicable to all forms of taxation, and particularly special taxes, that the sovereign is bound to express its intention to tax in clear and unambiguous language, and that a liberal construction be given to words of exception confining the operation of duty (Warrington v. Furber, 8 East, 242, 247; Williams v. Sanger, 10 East, 66, 69; Denn ex dem. Manifold v. Diamond, 4 Barn. & C. 243, 245; Tomkins v. Ashby, 6 Barn. & C. 541; Doc ex dem. Scruton v. Smith, 8 Bing. 146, 152; Wroughton v. Turtle, 11 Mees. & W. 561, 567; Gurr v. Seudds, 11 Exch. 190), though the rule regarding exemptions from general laws imposing taxes may be different. Cooley, Taxn. 146; Re Enston, 113 N. Y. 174, 177, sub nom. People v. Sherwood, 3 L. R. A. 464, 21 N. E. 87.

We have ourselves had repeated occasion to hold that the customs revenue laws should be liberally interpreted in favor of the importer, and that the intent of Congress to impose or increase a tax upon imports should be expressed in clear and unambiguous language. Hartranft v. Wiegmann, 121 U. S. 609, 30 L. ed. 1012, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1240; American Net & Twine Co. v. Worthington, 141 U. S. 468, 35 L. ed. 821, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55; United States v. Wigglesworth, 2 Story, 369, Fed. Cas. No. 16,690; Powers v. Barney, 5 Blatchf. 202, Fed. Cas. No. 11,361.

It is pertinent in this connection to examine similar statutes passed in other countries and in the several states of this Union, and to inquire what construction is given to them. By the English tax legacy act of 1796 a tax was imposed on every legacy "given by any will or testamentary instrument to any person who shall die after the passing of this act." In Atty. Gen. v. Cockrell (1814) 1 Price, 165, this was held by the court of exchequer to apply to a legacy bequeathed by a *British subject residing in [584] the East Indies to persons living in England, if the executor proved the will in England, and paid the legacy there, though the testator held his property in India, and resided and made his will and died there. The case was put upon the ground that the will was proved in England, that the executors had received the property there, and that the legatees resided there and were to be paid there. But the case is further distinguishable from the one under consideration in the fact that the testator was a British subject and domiciled in a British possession, although the stress of the case was laid upon the residence of the legatees in England. Atty. Gen. v. Beatson (1819) 7 Price, 560, differs from the last one only in the fact that the property bequeathed was in India, and was remitted to England and paid to legatees residing in Scotland. But it was held in Re Erwin (1830) 1 Comp. & J. 151, that foreign stocks, the property of a testator domiciled in England, were liable to the legacy duty, although the stocks were transferable and the dividends were payable in the foreign countries. In this case the law of the domicile was held to be controlling and the domicile to be the situs of the personal property. The two cases from Price were not cited.

In Jackson v. Forbes, 2 Crompt. & J. 382, a testator born in Scotland, who resided and died in India, leaving property there, but none in England, left his property to his four natural children. The property was collected by his executors, sent to England, and invested in their own names. The court held the property exempt from legacy duties, apparently upon the ground that the property was administered by the executors without necessarily invoking the aid of the court of chancery, although no reasons were given in the opinion. Up to this time it had been thought that, if the legacy were paid from assets administered in England, the duty was payable. The two cases from Price were cited, but not discussed. This case was subsequently affirmed by the House of Lords under the name of Atty. Gen. v. Jackson, 8 Bligh. N. R. 15. The case of Logan v. Fairlie, 1 Myl. & C. 59, was a similar case, and the legacy was held to be exempt upon its authority.

[585] But in Arnold v. Arnold, 2 Myl. & C. 256, a similar *case of a testator residing and dying in India, leaving property there which was remitted to England and administered there, the legacy tax was held not to be payable, and the question was regarded as finally settled by Atty. Gen. v. Jackson. The two cases from Price were overruled.

Finally, in Thomson v. Advocate General, 12 Clark & F. 1, a British-born subject died, domiciled in a British colony. At the time of his death he was possessed of personal property in Scotland. Probate of his will was taken out in Scotland for the purpose of administering that property, and legacies were paid to legatees residing there. It was held by the House of Lords that no legacy duty was payable. The two cases from Price were flatly overruled, the other cases cited and discussed at length, and the doctrine of domicile applied. This case must be regarded as settling the law of England upon the subject.

It will be observed in these cases that the testator was a British subject, but in the Case of Bruce, 2 Crompt. & J. 436, the testator was an American who lived and died abroad, having appointed an English executor and bequeathed property in England to legatees residing there. The case is exactly in point, and the court had no difficulty in reaching the conclusion that the property was not liable to legacy duty.

There are some later cases in England, but none that seem to qualify the rule laid down in Thomson v. Advocate General. In some of them a distinction is drawn between the legacy tax act and the succession duty act, which came into operation May 19, 1853; and in Re Lovelace, 4 De G. & J. 340, it was said that the latter act applied to a succession inter vivos under a British settlement to British property vested in British trustees, and falling under the jurisdiction of a British court, although the persons entitled were aliens domiciled abroad. This case arose under an English marriage settlement made in England on the marriage of two English subjects, and affected English personalty only. In Wallop's Trust, 1 De G. J. & S. 656, a distinction was drawn between the legacy act of George III. and the succession duty act, and a broader construction given to the latter. In Wallace v. Atty. Gen. L. R. 1 Ch. App. 1, it was held that a succession duty was *not payable on legacies given by the will [586] of a person domiciled in a foreign country. The law was treated as settled by Thomson v. Advocate General, 12 Clark & F. 1, and the question discussed on principle in a vigorous opinion. The converse of this case is that of Atty. Gen. v. Napier, 6 Exch. 217, in which a British-born subject died in India, though he had never acquired a domicile there, and it was held that the whole of his property, though chiefly situate abroad, was liable to a legacy duty. This case is similar to that of Ewin, 1 Crompt. & J. 151, above cited, though decided twenty years later. See also Atty. Gen. v. Campbell, L. R. 5 H. L. 524; Lyall v. Lyall, L. R. 15 Eq. 1.

From this analysis of the English cases it clearly appears that, under a general act imposing a duty upon legacies, the law of the domicile of the testator controls, and if he be domiciled abroad, whether an alien or a British subject, his legacies are exempt, whether the property be in England at the time of his death, or be subsequently remitted there by his executors for local administration and distribution.

We proceed now to an examination of the state decisions upon the same subject, which, with one or two exceptions, tend in the same direction. The Massachusetts collateral-inheritance law of 1891 imposes a tax upon "all property within the jurisdiction of the commonwealth, . . . whether belonging to inhabitants of the commonwealth or not, and whether tangible or intangible, which shall pass by will or by the laws of the commonwealth regulating intestate succession," etc. In Callahan v. Woodbridge, 171 Mass. 595, 51 N. E. 176, it was held that under this act the succession to property of nonresidents was expressly taxed as if the property belonged to inhabitants of the commonwealth, and that the language, "which shall pass by will or by the laws of the commonwealth regulating intestate succession," taken in connection with the clauses immediately preceding it, applies to foreign wills, and to property that passes under the statute of this commonwealth which regulates the succession to the property of a nonresident owner after his death." The testator in that case lived in the state of New York, but the property was within the jurisdiction of Massachusetts. *The statute was held to [587] apply to property tangible or intangible. We make no criticism of this case, which was placed expressly upon the language of the statute.

The inheritance-tax law of New York of 1885 imposed a tax upon "all property which shall pass by will or by the intestate laws of this state, from any person who may die seised or possessed of the same while being a resident of the state, or which property shall be within this state, or any part of such property . . . transferred by deed, grant, sale, or gift made or intended to take effect . . . after the death of the grantor," etc. [N. Y. Laws 1885, chap. 483, § 1.] In Re Enston, 113 N. Y. 174, sub nom. People v. Sherwood, 3 L. R. A. 464, 21 N. E. 87, this was held not to apply to property within the state which passed by will or intestacy from a nonresident decedent to collateral relatives or strangers, legatees domiciled in the state, and the latter clause, "or which property shall be within the state," was held to be limited to such as was transferred by deed, grant, sale, or gift inter vivos. The act was amended in 1887 so as to include "all property which shall pass by will or by the intestate laws of this state, from any person who may die seised or possessed of the same while a resident of this state, or if such decedent was not a resident of this state at the time of his death, which property or any part thereof shall be within this state." [N. Y. Laws 1887, chap. 713, § 1.] And in Romaine's Case, 127 N. Y. 80, 12 L. R. A. 401, 27 N. E. 759, it was held to apply to personal property in New York, owned by a nonresident intestate at the time of his death, which was habitually kept or invested by him there. There can be but little doubt of the propriety of this ruling. In Whiting's Case, 150 N. Y. 27, 34 L. R. A. 232, 44 N. E. 715, the same rule was extended to bonds of foreign as well as domestic corporations, and certificates of stock of domestic corporations (but not of foreign), owned by a nonresident decedent, but deposited by him in a safe deposit vault in New York. See also Bronson's Case, 150 N. Y. 1, 34 L. R. A. 238, 44 N. E. 707, and Houdayer's Case, 150 N. Y. 37, 34 L. R. A. 235, 44 N. E. 718. These cases seem rather to accentuate the general principle that general statutes imposing taxes upon legacies do not apply to the personal property of nonresident testators, and that a special inclusion of such is necessary to subject it to taxation.

[588] The inheritance-tax law of Maryland subjects to taxation all "property "passing from any person who may die seised or possessed thereof, being in this state," and it was held in State v. Dalrymple, 70 Md. 294, 3 L. R. A. 372, 17 Atl. 82, that the words "being in this state" referred, not to the decedent himself, but to his property. The testator was a resident of California, and his property was also bequeathed to residents of the same state. The property which was in Maryland consisted of an undivided quarter of the personal estate of the brother of the testator, who died in Maryland. The act was held to apply, though the testator's domicile was in California. The English cases were cited and held to be distinguishable by reason of the peculiar language of the Maryland act. The language was evidently ambiguous, but the court having held that the words "being in this state" applied to the property, and not to the person, of course its liability followed. A like construction was given to the same words in Com. v. Smith, 5 Pa. 142; Re Short, 16 Pa. 63. The case of Billings v. People, 189 Ill. 472, 59 N. E. 798, is of no value, as the testator, as well as his legatees, were domiciled in Illinois, and the question was as to the liability of the widow's dower.

The case of Alvany v. Powell, 55 N. C. (2 Jones Eq.) 51, is directly in point, and undoubtedly sustains the positions of the government in this case. The North Carolina inheritance act imposed a tax upon "all personal property or goods bequeathed to strangers or collateral kindred, or which shall be distributed to or amongst the next of kin, of any intestate, when such next of kin are collateral relations of such intestate." The act was held to apply to property in North Carolina descending to a brother from an intestate domiciled in Canada. The court was satisfied that the true principle, both in regard to real and personal property, was the situs of the property. The English case of Thomson v. Advocate General, 12 Clark & F. 1, decided by the House of Lords, was considered at length, and thus criticised: "No one can read the opinion delivered before the Lords in the case of Thomson v. Advocate General, which is the case in which the principle of the domicile is finally settled, without being struck with the fact that there is throughout a marked paucity of reasoning." The North Carolina case was decided in 1854, and, so far as we *know, has not been fol-[589] lowed in any other state, and it is the only one to which our attention has been called that seems to be in point in favor of the construction contended for by the government.

There are a number of other cases in the state courts, but they either involve questions of taxation under general laws imposing taxes upon real and personal property, not being special inheritance taxes, or the language of the particular statute is such as to create little doubt as to the intention of the legislature to tax or not to tax the particular inheritance in question. Small's Estate, 151 Pa. 1, 25 Atl. 23, 28; Weaver v. State, 110 Iowa, 328, 81 N. W. 603; State ex rel. Taylor v. St. Louis County Ct. 47 Mo. 594; Catlin v. Hull, 21 Vt. 152; People v. Home Ins. Co. 29 Cal. 533; People ex rel. Hoyt v. New York City & County Tax & A. Comrs. 23 N. Y. 224; People ex rel. Jefferson v. Gardner, 51 Barb. 352. In some jurisdictions a distinction has been made between tangible and intangible property which does not arise in this case. Orcutt's Appeal, 97 Pa. 179.

The tax in question in this case is not upon the property itself, but upon the succession. United States v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 625, 41 L. ed. 287, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747. Laws imposing general taxes upon real and personal property are not controlling when applied to taxes upon the succession, when such succession takes place and is governed by the laws of a foreign country. The actual situs of the property in such cases cuts but a small figure, while in the case of general taxes upon such property it is now considered determinative of the whole question.

The question involved in this case, however, arose under the act of June 30, 1864 [13 Stat. at L. 285, chap. 173], before Mr. Justice Gray of this court, while holding the circuit court for Massachusetts, in United States v. Hunnewell, 13 Fed. 617. Section 124 of that act imposed a duty on legacies or distributive shares arising from personal property passing from any person possessed of such property, either by will, or by the intestate laws of any state or territory. The action was brought to recover the tax upon American securities bequeathed by a French citizen domiciled in France to a son who was also domiciled there. The will was executed in conformity with the French law [590] and was *duly proved there, though a local executor was appointed by the probate court in Boston to transfer to the legatee the securities in question. It was held that § 124 did not make the duty payable when the person possessed of such property died testate if it would not be payable if such person died intestate; and as if the deceased had died intestate her son would not have taken a distributive share by the intestate laws of any state or territory, his rights were the same if he took by will. In other words, that the words "either by will or by the intestate laws of any state or territory" must be construed together, and would apply only to wills executed within any state or territory of the United States. The case is precisely in point.

We regard this case as a correct exposition of the law. It is not necessary to rely exclusively upon the English cases, or upon those in the state courts, which hold that a general law imposing an inheritance tax upon property passing by will or descent does not apply to intangible personal property within the jurisdiction of the taxing power, but owned by persons domiciled abroad, under the laws of which domicile the property passes, since the statute in question here applies only to property passing "either by will or by the intestate laws of any state or territory." Now, as the finding in this case is that the property passed partly under a Spanish will and partly under the intestate laws of Spain, the only question is whether the words "passing by will" are limited by the subsequent words "or the intestate laws of any state or territory." We are clearly of opinion that they are, and that the words "passing by will" are limited to wills executed in "any state or territory" under whose laws the property would pass, if the owner had died intestate. The whole scheme of the act evidently contemplates the application of the tax only to the property of a person domiciled in a state or territory of the United States whose property is transmitted under our laws. This is evident not only from the language of § 29, above quoted, but from the provision of § 30, "that every executor, etc., . . . shall pay to the collector or deputy collector of the district⁴ of which the deceased person was a resident the amount of the duty or tax assessed upon such legacy or distributive *share," etc. It would be difficult to find language more expressive of an intent to confine the tax to persons domiciled in this country. It need only be added that while the words "state or territory" are used in treaties, and perhaps also in some acts of Congress regulating our international relations, as including foreign states, they are used in the Constitution and in ordinary acts of Congress as applying only to states or territories of the United States.

704

If, as in several of the states, the words "passing by will or by the intestate laws of this state," or similar words, are connected with words declaring that the tax was intended to be imposed upon the estates of persons domiciled abroad, the latter provision is held to apply, and the words "passing by will or the intestate laws of this state" are held to include the estates of persons domiciled abroad. Such is the case in Illinois: Billings v. Illinois, 189 Ill. 472, 59 N. E. 798; Massachusetts: Callahan v. Woodbridge, 171 Mass. 595, 51 N. E. 176; Greves v. Shaw, 173 Mass. 205, 53 N. E. 372; Maine: State v. Hamlin, 86 Me. 495, 25 L. R. A. 632, 30 Atl. 76; Ohio: Laws of 1894, p. 166; Connecticut: Laws of 1889, p. 106; Tennessee: State v. Alston, 94 Tenn. 674, 28 L. R. A. 178, 30 S. W. 750. But it is hardly necessary to say that the construction given to these statutes would have no application to cases where words expressly providing for the estates of non-residents are omitted.

To say that we recognize by comity the law of a foreign domicile as controlling the transmission or succession of personal property because it thereby becomes our law (and the property therefore taxable), as is indicated in some cases, notably in Alvany v. Powell, 55 N. C. (2 Jones Eq.) 51, is misleading, and little more than a play upon words. When we speak of our laws we mean to be understood as referring to our own statutory laws, or the common law we inherited from the mother country, and when we apply the laws of a foreign domicile we do so, not because they are our laws, but because upon principles of comity we recognize those laws as applicable to the particular case. But to speak of such foreign laws as thereby becoming "the intestate laws of any state or territory" wherein they are enforced is practically to confound the whole distinction between the law of the situs and the law of the domicile. We do not *enforce the law of Spain in this case be- [592] cause it is our law, but because the practice of all civilized nations is to recognize the law of the domicile as governing the transmission and inheritance of personal property, and to prevent the confusion that would follow if estates, situated possibly in half a dozen countries, were administered and distributed according to the laws of each country in which any portion of such estate happened to be located. We decline to hold the tax involved in this case applicable to this estate because the words of the statute do not require it, and because the thing taxed, that is, the transmission of the property to the legatees or next of kin, takes place in a foreign country. It is true that Congress may, and in certain cases has seen fit to, adopt the laws of a particular state, and apply them within a territory, as was done when Congress applied the laws of Oregon to Alaska (23 Stat. at L. 25, chap. 53), and certain statutes of Nebraska to Oklahoma (26 Stat. at L. 87, chap. 182). They thereby became the laws of those territories as much as if enacted by a territorial legislature, and were universally applicable. But that result follows expressly from the statute, and not from the recognition of the foreign law as applicable to a particular case. Section 2694 of the New York Code [Civil Proc.] recognizes this distinction, in its requirement that "except where special provision is otherwise made by law, the validity and effect of the testamentary disposition of any other [than real] property situated within the state, and the ownership and disposition of such property where it is not disposed of by will, are regulated by the laws of the state or country of which decedent was a resident at the time of his death."

Conceding it to be within the power of Congress to impose an inheritance tax upon property in this country, no matter where owned or transmitted, it has not done so in this case, and the questions propounded by the Court of Appeals must be answered in the negative.

Mr. Justice White and Mr. Justice McKenna concurred in the result.

[593]

*FRANK R. MOORE

v.

MAX RUCKGABER, Executor, etc.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 593-598.)

Inheritance tax—personal property of non-resident alien—will executed in United States.

Personal property in the United States, passing under the will of a nonresident alien executed in New York during a temporary sojourn there, is not subject to the inheritance tax imposed by the war revenue act of June 13, 1898.

[No. 295.]

Argued November 21, 1901. Decided March 17, 1902.

NOTE.—On collateral inheritance taxes—see notes to Re Howe (N. Y.) 2 L. R. A. 825; Wallace v. Myers (C. C. S. D. N. Y.) 4 L. R. A. 171; Com. v. Ferguson (Pa.) 10 L. R. A. 240; Re Romaine (N. Y.) 12 L. R. A. 401, and Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 42 L. ed. U. S. 1037.

184 U. S.

UPON CERTIFICATE from the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit on a question as to the inheritance tax imposed by the war revenue act. Answered in the negative.

See same case in circuit court, 104 Fed. 947.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was also an action brought in the circuit court for the southern district of New York by Ruckgaber, as executor of the last will and testament of Louisa Augusta Ripley-Pinède, against the collector of internal revenue, to recover an inheritance tax paid to the defendant upon certain personal property in the city of New York.

The material facts, as set forth in the certificate, are briefly as follows:

The testatrix, Louisa Augusta Ripley-Pinède, died at Zürich, Switzerland, on September 25, 1898, being at that time a nonresident of the United States, and having, for at least eight years immediately preceding her death, been domiciled in, and a permanent resident of, the Republic of France. She left a will dated November 6, 1890, which was made in New York and in conformity to the laws of that state, where the testatrix was then sojourning, whereby she bequeathed all her personal property in the United States to her daughter, Carmelia von Groll, who was then, and is now, also a nonresident of the United States, domiciled in Germany. Said will was probated *in the [594] surrogate's court of Kings county, New York, on February 17, 1899, and letters testamentary were thereupon issued to the defendant in error, a resident of said county and state, who alone qualified as executor.

At the time of her death the testatrix owned a claim in account current against one Carl Goepel and one Max Ruckgaber, Jr., constituting the firm of Schulz & Ruckgaber, both of whom resided in the county of Kings and state of New York. She was also the owner of a share of stock in the Tribune Association, a New York corporation. The testatrix was also the owner of bonds and coupons of divers American corporations hereinafter particularly described. Said chose in action, stock, bonds, and certificate constituted all the personal property of every kind in the United States of America referred to in the said will. The value of the said property of the testatrix at the date of her death, September 25, 1898, as fixed and determined by appraisers duly appointed, was $105,670.70. On or about the 15th day of June, 1899, upon the written demand of the collector of internal revenue for the first district of New York, and under protest, the executor did make and render in duplicate to the said collector a return of legacies arising from personal property of every kind whatsoever, being in charge or trust of said executor, passing from Louisa Augusta Ripley-Pinède to her said daughter by her will, as aforesaid.

The following questions of law which arose out of the foregoing facts were certified to this court:

"1. Can the said personal property of the nonresident testatrix, Louisa Augusta Ripley-Pinède, actually located within the United States at the time of her death, September 25, 1898, be deemed to have a situs in the United States for the purpose of levying a tax or duty upon the transmission or receipt thereof under §§ 29, 30, and 31 of the act of Congress entitled 'An Act to Provide Ways and Means to Meet War Expenditures, and for Other Purposes,' approved June 13, 1898?"

"2. Was the transmission or receipt of the said personal property of the nonresident testatrix, Louisa Augusta Ripley-Pinède, which was actually located in the United States at the time of her death, September 25, 1898, subject to taxation under [595] §§ 29, 30, *and 31 of the act of Congress entitled 'An Act to Provide Ways and Means to Meet War Expenditures, and for Other Purposes,' approved June 13, 1898?"

Solicitor General Richards argued the cause and filed a brief for Moore:

For his contentions see his brief as reported in Eidman v. Martinez, 184 U. S. 578, ante, 697, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 515.

Mr. Alfred E. Hinrichs argued the cause, and, with Mr. Frederic W. Hinrichs filed a brief for Ruckgaber:

In order that this estate should escape the tax it is not necessary that an intention should be found in the statute to exempt the legacy; but on the contrary, in order that it may be subjected to the tax, there must be found in the statute, either in express words or by necessary implication, an intention to include the legacy.

United States v. Wigglesworth, 2 Story, 373, Fed. Cas. No. 16,690; Re Enston, 113 N. Y. 177, sub nom. People v. Sherwood, 3 L. R. A. 464, 21 N. E. 87. See Thomson v. Advocate General, 12 Clark & F. 1.

An amendment must be regarded as a legislative declaration that the law did not, as originally passed, embrace the provisions which the later act supplies.

Re Harbeck, 161 N. Y. 218, 55 N. E. 850.

The reported cases support the executor's contention.

United States v. Hunnewell, 13 Fed. 617; United States v. Morris, 27 Fed. 41.

Where a law will bear a construction which is just and reasonable, it must be so construed rather than in a manner to make it result in injustice and unreasonableness.

Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 77, 44 L. ed. 984, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747.

Not the property, nor the probate, nor the administration, but the passing of the property, is the subject of the tax.

Ibid.

The fact that the laws of the state of New York are to some extent applied to for the purpose of securing control of the estate would afford a basis for a probate tax or the like, but not for a legacy or succession tax.

Thomson v. Advocate General, 12 Clark & F. 1.

706

Foreign law is matter of fact. It must be alleged and proved, in cases where it is to control.

Hanley v. Donoghue, 116 U. S. 1, 29 L. ed. 535, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242.

Mr. Justice Brown* delivered the opinion [595] of the court:

This case differs from the one just decided only in the fact that the will of the nonresident testatrix was executed in New York, November 6, 1890, during a temporary sojourn there, although, as in the preceding case, the testatrix was domiciled abroad, and bequeathed her personal property in New York to a daughter who was married and also lived abroad.

There can be no doubt whatever that, if Madame Pinède had died intestate, the personal property would not have passed by the law "of any state or territory" (using the words of the act), but by the laws of France. The question, then, is whether the condition is changed if the property pass under a will executed in this country. In United States v. Hunnewell, 13 Fed. 617, cited in the preceding case, the will was executed in France, but the decision of Mr. Justice Gray, holding that the tax was not payable, was not put upon the ground that the will was executed in a foreign country, but upon the broader ground that the legacy duty was payable only upon the estate of persons domiciled within the United States. In delivering the opinion he observed: "Section 124 [of the similar act of 1864] imposes a duty on legacies or distributive shares arising from personal property 'passing from any person possessed of such property, either by will or by the intestate laws of any state or territory:' it does not make the duty payable when 'the person possessed of such property' dies testate, if it would not be payable if such person died intestate; and if Madame de la Valette had died intestate, her son would not have taken a distributive share 'by the intestate laws of *any state or territory.' [596] but, if at all, by the law of France, the domicile of his mother at the time of her death. And § 125, by requiring the executor or administrator to pay the amount of this duty 'to the collector or deputy collector of the district of which the deceased person was a resident,' leads to the same conclusion."

The real question, then, is, as said by Mr. Justice Gray, whether the act makes the duty payable when the person possessed of such property dies testate, if it would not be payable if such person died intestate, although the actual question involved in this case differs from the one there involved, in the fact that in the Hunnewell Case the will was executed abroad, while in the present case it was executed in this country.

Bearing in mind the fact that the tax in this case is not upon the property itself, but upon the transmission or devolution of such property, the question again recurs, as it did in the preceding case, whether the succession took effect in France or in New York. We are aided in the solution of this problem by the language of § 2694 of the New York Code of Civil Procedure, also cited in the preceding case, which is as follows: "Except where special provision is otherwise made by law, the validity and effect of the testamentary disposition of any other [than real] property situated within the state, and the ownership and disposition of such property where it is not disposed of by will, are regulated by the laws of the state or country of which the decedent was a resident at the time of his death." Now as, if Madame Pinède had died without leaving a will, her property would have passed under the intestate laws of France and been exempt from this tax, it follows under the Hunnevell Case that it is equally exempt though it passed by will.

The will of Madame Pinède is confined to her personal property in this country, and the record does not show whether she was possessed of other property in France or in any foreign country. If she had, that property would either pass by will executed there or under the intestate laws of her domicile. For reasons stated in the prior opinion, we do not think Congress contemplated by this act that the estates of deceased persons should be split up for the [597] purposes of distribution or taxation, *but that, so far as regards personal property, the law of the domicile should prevail.

A question somewhat to the converse of this arose in Re Romaine, 127 N. Y. 80, 12 L. R. A. 401, 27 N. E. 759, which was a proceeding to compel payment of an inheritance tax by the administrator of the estate of Romaine, who had died intestate in Virginia, leaving a brother and sister resident in New York, as his next of kin. The act of 1887 subjected to an inheritance tax "all property which shall pass by will or by the intestate laws of this state, from any person who may died seised or possessed of the same while a resident of this state, or if such decedent was not a resident of this state at the time of his death, which property or any part thereof shall be within this state." [N. Y. Laws 1887, chap. 713, § 1.] The question was whether the property of Romaine, who died in Virginia intestate, was subject to the tax. After deciding that the tax applied to two classes, namely, resident and nonresident decedents, the court observed: "But does it apply to all persons belonging to these two classes? It is not denied that it applies to all resident decedents, and to all nonresident testators, but it is contended that it does not apply to nonresident intestates, because property 'which shall pass . . . by the intestate laws of this state' is expressly mentioned to the implied exclusion of property passing by the intestate laws of other states. This is the position of the appellant, whose learned counsel claims that the act in its present form was designed to meet cases of succession by will, but not of succession by intestacy, unless the intestate was a resident of this state. It is difficult, however, to see why the legislature should discriminate simply for the purposes of taxation between the property of a nonresident decedent who made a will, and of one who did not. It is not probable that there was an intention to tax the estates of nonresident testators and to exempt those of nonresident intestates, because there is no foundation for such a distinction . . . Property of the same kind, situated in the same place, receiving the same protection from the law, and administered upon in the same way, would naturally be required to contribute toward the expense of government upon the same basis, regardless of whether its last owner died testate or intestate."

*By parity of reasoning, we think it follows that no discrimination was intended to be made between nonresidents who died testate, even though the will were made in this country, and those who died intestate; and as we have held in the preceding case that the law does not apply to nonresidents who died intestate, or testate under a will executed abroad, we think it follows that it does not apply to deceased persons domiciled abroad who left property by will executed in this country.

The questions certified must therefore be answered in the negative.

Mr. Justice White and Mr. Justice McKenna concurred in the result.

CLARENCE M. BUSCH, Appt.,
v.

JOSHUA W. JONES and W. O. Hickok
Manufacturing Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 598-608.)

Equitable jurisdiction—patents — anticipation—process invention.

1. Equitable jurisdiction must be determined by the conditions existing at the time the bill is filed, and not by conditions which come into existence after the commencement of the suit.
2. Jurisdiction of a court of equity over a suit for the infringement of a patent is not defeated on the theory that because the contract between the patentee and his co-complainant conveyed only the patent rights to the machine, and not the process claimed in such patent, the court could not have ordered an injunction against the defendant, who was a mere user of the machine, since, the question as to what the contract provided being an issue in the case, preliminary relief by injunction could have been granted pending the decision of such question.
3. The Jones patent, No. 204,741, for a press for removing type indentations from printed sheets, in which the sheets can be so tied

NOTE.—On anticipation of patents—see notes to Leggett v. Standard Oil Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 737, and Wollensak v. Sargent, 38 L. ed. U. S. 138.

On process inventions—see note to Corning v. Burden, 14 L. ed. U. S. 683.

As to including process and product in same patent; separate patents therefor—see note to Evans v. Eaton, 4 L. ed. U. S. 433.

while under pressure that the subsequent pressure necessary to remove the indentations is continued in the tied-up bundle when removed from the press, was not anticipated by hay, cotton, tobacco, wool, and other presses used for applying pressure to substances placed between compressing heads or followers to compact them into bundles, which afford facilities for tying the bundles while under pressure.

4. The claim of the Jones patent, No. 204,741, for a process for removing type indentations from printed sheets by tying them while under pressure into compact bundles, and allowing them to remain tied when removed from the press to fix and complete the dry pressing, is invalid because it describes nothing but the operation and effect of the press for applying the pressure, which is covered by the other claims of such patent.

[No. 96.]

Argued January 14, 1902. Decided March 17, 1902.

APPPEAL from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which affirmed a decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia in favor of complainants in a suit for the infringement of a patent. Reversed.

See same case below, 16 App. D. C. 23.

Statement by Mr. Justice McKenna:

This suit was brought by appellees against appellant for the infringement of letters patent No. 204,741, and letters patent No. 452,898, issued to Joshua W. Jones, one of the appellees. An accounting was prayed, and also an injunction, pending the suit. The bill contained the usual allegations of invention and utility, and of infringement by the defendant (appellant).

[599] The answer traversed those allegations, and alleged prior use, disclosure of the invention in prior publications, and also anticipation by prior devices and processes. The answer contained a list of the devices. No evidence was given as to, and no judgment passed on, patent No. 452,898. This appeal therefore is only concerned with patent No. 204,741. The patent was issued to Joshua W. Jones, one of the appellees, for a press and process (the relation of the two is disputed) for "dry pressing" and removing type indentations from printed sheets. The validity of the patent was sustained, and its infringement by the defendant (appellant) was found by the supreme court of the district of Columbia, and decree passed adjudging appellees the sum of $3,491.70, with interest and costs. The decree was affirmed by the court of appeals. 16 App. D. C. 23. The case was then brought here. The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George J. Murray argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

At the first hearing upon which the interlocutory decree was entered, it clearly appeared that the court had no jurisdiction because the only patent before the court had expired, no motion for preliminary injunction had been made before its expiration, and the single machine used by defendant had been destroyed by fire, and at the time the decree was entered the defendant had purchased and was using one of the complainant's presses. It was clearly the duty of the court to dismiss the bill before the interlocutory decree was entered.

Way v. Way, 64 Ill. 406; Crandell v. Plano Mfg. Co. 24 Fed. 738; Spring v. Domestic Sewing Mach. Co. 13 Fed. 446; Curry v. McCauley, 11 Fed. 365; Cecil Nat. Bank v. Thurber, 8 C. C. A. 365, 8 U. S. App. 496, 59 Fed. 913; Whitehead v. Entwistle, 27 Fed. 778; Consolidated Middlings Purifier Co. v. Wolf, 28 Fed. 814; Ross v. Ft. Wayne, 58 Fed. 404.

Although the question is not raised by the pleadings or suggested by counsel, and is not apparent upon the face of the bill, or the bill is framed to avoid the point, if, looking at the proofs, it appears that the case is one for which there is a plain and adequate remedy at law, it is the duty of the court to decline jurisdiction and dismiss the bill.

Dumont v. Fry, 12 Fed. 21; Lewis v. Cocks, 23 Wall. 466, 23 L. ed. 70; Campbell v. Ward, 12 Fed. 150; McConnell v. Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. 16 C. C. A. 172, 37 U. S. App. 213, 69 Fed. 113; Root v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 105 U. S. 189, 26 L. ed. 975; Burdell v. Comstock, 15 Fed. 395; Davis v. Smith, 19 Fed. 823; Mershon v. J. F. Pease Furnace Co. 24 Fed. 741; Racine Cedar Co. v. Joliet Wire-Check Rower Co. 27 Fed. 368.

The structure disclosed in this patent involves no invention, in view of the prior state of the art.

King v. Galloway, 109 U. S. 99, 27 L. ed. 870, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 85; Ide v. Ball Engine Co. 149 U. S. 550, 37 L. ed. 843, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 941; Appleton Mfg. Co. v. Star Mfg. Co. 9 C. C. A. 42, 18 U. S. App. 492, 60 Fed. 411; Mast, F. & Co. v. Stover Mfg. Co. 177 U. S. 485, 44 L. ed. 856, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 708; Fuller-Warren Co. v. Michigan Stove Co. 30 C. C. A. 193, 58 U. S. App. 465, 86 Fed. 463; Plumb v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 97 Fed. 645; Craig v. Michigan Lubricator Co. 72 Fed. 173; Blakesley Novelty Co. v. Connecticut Web Co. 78 Fed. 480; Office Specialty Mfg. Co. v. Fenton Metallic Mfg. Co. 174 U. S. 492, 43 L. ed. 1058, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 641; Mowry v. Whitney, 14 Wall. 651, 20 L. ed. 866; Black v. Thorne, 111 U. S. 122, 28 L. ed. 372, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 326; Keystone Mfg. Co. v. Adams, 151 U. S. 139, 38 L. ed. 103, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 295.

The described process is merely a function of the machine, and therefore not a proper process claim.

Risdon Iron & Locomotive Works v. Medart, 158 U. S. 68, 39 L. ed. 899, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 745; Westinghouse v. Boyden Power Brake Co. 170 U. S. 537, 42 L. ed. 1136, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 707.

The burden of proof was on the complainants to show the actual profits made by defendant from the use of the invention covered by the patent in suit.

Garretson v. Clark, 111 U. S. 120, 28 L. ed. 371, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291.

Only nominal damages should have been awarded.

Ibid.; Keystone Mfg. Co. v. Adams, 151 U. S. 139, 38 L. ed. 103, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 295.

Mr. M. W. Jacobs argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees:

If between the date of filing the bill and the expiration of the patent there is not sufficient time for the plaintiff to obtain equitable relief, the court has no jurisdiction.

Davis v. Smith, 19 Fed. 823; American Cable R. Co. v. Citizens' R. Co. 44 Fed. 484; Mershon v. J. F. Pease Furnace Co. 24 Fed. 741; Bragg Mfg. Co. v. Hartford, 56 Fed. 292; Burdell v. Comstock, 15 Fed. 395.

But where, according to the usual course of equity practice in the particular court, there is sufficient time to obtain equitable relief by injunction, either preliminary or final, the court is justified in entertaining jurisdiction of the bill, and, having once properly acquired jurisdiction, will retain it for the purpose of granting complete relief by an accounting or otherwise, even after the expiration of the patent; and this is so, even though no motion for an injunction is actually made during the life of the patent.

Clark v. Wooster, 119 U. S. 322, 30 L. ed. 392, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 217; Beedle v. Bennett, 122 U. S. 71, 30 L. ed. 1074, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1090; Adams v. Howard, 19 Fed. 317; New York Grape Sugar Co. v. Peoria Grape Sugar Co. 21 Fed. 878; Toledo Mower & Reaper Co. v. Johnston Harvester Co. 24 Fed. 739; Adams v. Bridgewater Iron Co. 26 Fed. 324; Brooks v. Miller, 28 Fed. 615; Kittle v. DeGraaf, 30 Fed. 689; Kittle v. Rogers, 33 Fed. 49; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Wilson Sewing Mach. Co. 38 Fed. 586; Ross v. Ft. Wayne, 11 C. C. A. 288, 24 U. S. App. 113, 63 Fed. 466.

The court has power to grant injunction after the expiration of the patent.

American Diamond Rock Boring Co. v. Sheldon, 18 Blatchf. 50, 1 Fed. 870; American Diamond Rock Boring Co. v. Rutland Marble Co. 18 Blatchf. 146, 2 Fed. 357; Reay v. Raynor, 19 Fed. 308; Reay v. Berlin & J. Envelope Co. 19 Fed. 311; Toledo Mower & Reaper Co. v. Johnston Harvester Co. 24 Fed. 739; New York Belting & Pkg. Co. v. Magowan, 27 Fed. 111.

That the defendant was not a manufacturer, but "a mere user of one machine" is no objection to the jurisdiction of the court.

Jonathan Mills Mfg. Co. v. Whitehurst, 56 Fed. 589.

A suit at law to recover damages for past infringement would be neither an adequate nor a complete remedy, and nothing short of an injunction and an accounting of profits as well as damages would be.

Birdsell v. Shaliol, 112 U. S. 485, 28 L. ed. 768, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244; Tilghman v. Proctor, 125 U. S. 136, 31 L. ed. 664, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 894.

A patentee has, as against an infringer, the election either to sue at law for the royalty or to proceed in equity for an injunction and an accounting, not only of damages, but also of profits.
184 U. S. U. S., Book 46.

Tilghman v. Proctor, 125 U. S. 136, 31 L. ed. 664, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 894. See also Bragg v. Stockton, 27 Fed. 509; Brooks v. Miller, 28 Fed. 615; Birdsell v. Shaliol, 112 U. S. 485, 28 L. ed. 768, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244; Penn v. Bibby, L. R. 3 Eq. 308.

A process may be patentable which involves the use of mechanism, and in such cases, the inventor may be entitled to patents upon both his mechanism and his process.

Risdon Iron & Locomotive Works v. Medart, 158 U. S. 68, 39 L. ed. 899, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 745; O'Reilly v. Morse, 15 How. 62, 14 L. ed. 601; Tilghman v. Proctor, 102 U. S. 707, 26 L. ed. 279; Cochrane v. Decner, 94 U. S. 780, 24 L. ed. 139; New Process Fermentation Co. v. Maus, 122 U. S. 413, 30 L. ed. 1193, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1304; Eames v. Andrews, 122 U. S. 40, 30 L. ed. 1064, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073; Lawther v. Hamilton, 124 U. S. 1, 31 L. ed. 325, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342; American Fibre-Chamois Co. v. Buckskin-Fibre Co. 18 C. C. A. 662, 37 U. S. App. 742, 72 Fed. 508; Chicago Sugar-Ref. Co. v. Charles Pope Glucose Co. 28 C. C. A. 594, 56 U. S. App. 158, 84 Fed. 977; Melvin v. Thomas Potter, Sons & Co. 91 Fed. 151; Simonds Rolling-Mach. Co. v. Hathorn Mfg. Co. 36 C. C. A. 24, 93 Fed. 958; Chisholm v. Johnson, 106 Fed. 191; Hake v. Brown, 37 Fed. 783; Clement Mfg. Co. v. Upson & H. Co. 50 Fed. 538; Watson v. Stevens, 2 C. C. A. 500, 5 U. S. App. 101, 51 Fed. 757.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the[599] opinion of the court:

1. A question of jurisdiction is raised. It is contended by appellant that the case was not one of equitable cognizance, the appellees' remedy being, it is claimed, at law. The specification of error upon which the contention is based is expressed as follows:

"Because at the time of the hearing it appeared from the record that the only patent before the court had expired before the hearing, no motion for preliminary injunction having been made prior to the expiration of the patent, and defendant being a mere user of one machine, which machine was destroyed by fire before the case was brought to hearing."

This seeks to determine the jurisdiction of the court by conditions which came into existence after the commencement of the suit, not upon those which existed at the time the bill was filed. It is, however, urged in argument that the contract between Jones and the W. O. Hickok Manufacturing Company *conveyed the patent rights to the[600] press only, and not the process described in the 5th claim of the patent, and that "the court, sitting as a court of equity, had no jurisdiction to order an injunction at the time the bill of complaint was filed." But what the contract provided was an issue to be made in the case, and pending its decision the preliminary relief by injunction could have been granted. Appellees' contention as to the jurisdiction is, therefore, not justified, and a discussion of the reasons for this conclusion is not necessary. They are expressed in Clark v. Wooster, 119 U. S. 322, 30 L. ed. 392, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 217, and Beedle v. Bennett, 122 U. S. 71, 30 L. ed. 1074, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1090.
45

2. The patent is designated an "Improvement in Bookbinders' Dry Press and Sheet Tie." That is, a new press and process for removing type indentations from printed papers or sheets, the latter when folded being designated technically as "signatures."

The type indentations are made in printing, the type displacing somewhat the fiber of the paper, and the removal of the indentations is technically known in the art as "dry pressing," and the device by which it is done is called a "dry press." Such a press the patent is intended to cover, and also a particular process for dry pressing. As a process the validity of the patent is questioned; as a new machine its invention is controverted. An inquiry into the prior art becomes, therefore, important, and a witness, describing it and its imperfections, testified as follows:

"Previous to the invention of Mr. Jones as described in said patent, it was the custom to press printed sheets by inserting them between heavy paper boards, sometimes called 'fuller boards,' but generally now called 'glazed boards,' and putting said boards with the printed papers between them into a powerful press, by which pressure was produced on said boards by various means, sometimes by means of screw pressure, sometimes by hydraulic pressure. After the pressure was produced on the paper it was continued by allowing the press to remain with its pressure on to its fullest extent for ten or twelve hours or more, say from one night to the next morning, when the pressure was removed, the papers and boards taken from the press and separated by removing the boards from the pile of [601] *combined boards and paper, and putting the boards on one side on one pile and making another pile of the printed papers. This was necessarily comparatively a slow process, inasmuch as with one press only as much printed paper as the press would hold when put between the boards could be pressed in about ten or twelve hours, so that where much work had to be done a number of such presses were necessary. It was also costly as to labor, because the sheets had to be placed between the boards and removed therefrom afterwards, which took much time, especially where, as in the case of fine work, only one sheet was placed between two boards; and when this was done comparatively few sheets could be pressed at once, because the boards took up much more room than the paper did, they being quite thick."

It was to meet this condition that the Jones patent was conceived, and its object is stated to be, first, to "furnish a bulk compressor device, to be used to prepare the matter properly before it is inserted in the dry press proper, thus saving time or repeated travel by the latter, before the operation of tying; second, to furnish a dry press proper in which the compressing parts or heads—that is, the base and plunger—are constructed dividedly, or with ways through them, to afford access through them, to readily insert and manipulate the twine, and to tie the bundles of paper while held compressed, thus securing the bundle together by a powerful tie, which, when they are removed from the press, retains its force ad libitum; third, a press frame, having sides peculiarly set and arranged, and provided with longitudinal slots therein corresponding with the ways in the press heads, above referred to, and for the same purpose, as well as to rightly lodge and center the paper with relation to the middle of the press heads; fourth, certain ledges in the said press-frame and guides on the plunger thereof, to properly center different-sized sheets in press to secure the tie at the middle of the bundles both ways; fifth, a new process for treating printed and folded sheets of paper in dry pressing, consisting of subjecting a collection of such sheets to pressure without the use of fuller boards, and while under such pressure tying them into compact bundles, with end boards thereon; *then removing them immediately [602] from the press, and allowing them to remain tied sufficiently long to fix and complete the dry pressing."

The press is described in the patent with particularity, and illustrated by drawings. It may be said, generally, that it is a press in which bundles of signatures (sheets) are placed, at the end of which bundles rigid boards are attached to distribute the pressure which is exerted by the press. The press moves in a "trough formed" bed so mounted as to incline laterally "so that the folded paper may securely lodge and carry therein while being operated on." Rectangular blocks are rigidly secured at both ends of the bed. The lower block is the base of what is called in the specifications "a divided head," constructed with "openings or ways." Opposing this there is a "plunger or follower," to which there is also attached a "divided head" having "openings and ways" between the parts of the head. The "openings and ways" are to enable the operator to pass his hand between the parts of the press and tie the bundles. The operation of the press is as follows: A bundle of signatures (sheets) with rigid boards at its ends is placed in the press, pressure is exerted by means of a screw (other means may be used) which passes through the upper block and operates on the plunger or follower and the "divided head" attached to it, and as the bundle rests on the lower block and its "divided head," it is evident that the pressure on the sheets will be in proportion to the power applied. While under pressure in the press the bundles are tied, access to them being had through the openings in the "divided head." The bundle is then removed from the press and allowed "to remain tied sufficiently long to fix and complete the dry pressing."

The advantage of the new method is that it is not so dilatory as the old and is more economical. In the old method the sheets, coming damp from the printing press, had to be dried before dry pressing, and had also to be subjected to pressure in the press a number of hours to effect the smoothing (dry pressing) of the sheets. The quantity of the work, therefore, was limited by the number of presses. In other words, as expressed by one of the witnesses, "where much work had to be done a number of [603] such presses were necessary." And it was further testified that "it (the old method) was also costly as to labor, because the sheets had to be placed between the boards [fuller boards] and removed therefrom afterwards, which took much time, especially where, as in the case of fine work, only one sheet was placed between two boards, and when this was done comparatively few sheets could be pressed at once, because the boards took up much more room than the paper did, they being quite thick." In the new method there is no such limitations as to time, nor does it require the same expenditure of money. In the new method the initial pressure is applied in the press—the subsequent pressure necessary to remove the type indentations is continued in the tied-up bundle. The operation, therefore, is comparatively rapid. "Putting the paper into the press," a witness testified, "tying it up in a bundle, and removing it therefrom," takes a few minutes. And the longer the sheets remain in the bundles the better the effect. Some time is necessary. Another advantage is claimed. It was testified that in the Jones method the sheets when folded have the convex impression of one half of the sheet brought in contact with the convex side of the other half of the sheet or of the sheet next to it, "and these convex impressions coming in contact with each other tend, when under pressure, to efface each other."

There is, however, no revelation in the specifications of the patent of the operation of opposing "convex impressions," nor a word to indicate that Jones was conscious of the advantage of that assistance to the pressure upon the sheets. The discovery seems to have been made by one of the witnesses, and also seems to have been disclaimed by Jones in the following question and answer:

X-Q. 56. Throughout the testimony a good deal has been said about the advantages derived from your supposed invention from the fact of the type indentations being concaved or convexed, whatever that may mean. Is there anything said in the patent about that?

A. No; neither do I claim that they are produced by my process.

There is a dispute as to the character of [604] the patent. Appellees *contend that it is "a process of 'dry pressing' or removing type indentations from printed sheets" (claim 5 of the patent). Second. "A press of pecu- 184 U. S.

liar construction and adapted to the convenient carrying of this process into effect. The novel features of which press are covered by claims one to four inclusive." The appellees contend that the patent is for a machine (claims 1 to 4) and also for a process (claim 5). And it is asserted the latter claim is but an operation or function of the machine. It is further contended that the machine and process were anticipated.

In discussing these contentions, it is not necessary to minutely observe the distinctions made and disputed by counsel. Even if the patent is primarily for a novel process, there is a claim for a novel press, and, by the consideration of the latter, we think, the validity of the former will be determined.

Was, then, the press anticipated, including broadly in the term the inquiry whether the press exhibited invention, in view of the prior state of the art? Anticipation is a question of fact, and the burden of establishing it is on the appellant. The patent bears a presumption of novelty and invention, and the lower courts, passing on the evidence, found against appellant's contention. Such united judgment this court accepts unless there is a clear showing to the contrary. Brainard v. Buck, 184 U. S. 99, ante, p. 499, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458. That showing appellant claims the record establishes, and even urges that presses of various kinds had become so familiar, before the Jones patent, that judicial knowledge can be invoked for them. Hay presses, cotton presses, tobacco, wool, and other presses are instanced, all of which, it is said, were used for applying pressure to masses of matter to compact them into bundles, and in all of which the pressure was retained by strings, ropes, or bands of some kind. But wherein those presses differed one from the other and received special characterization and utility would be a matter of proof, not of assumption, and wherein the Jones patent differs from either of them and has derived its special applicability is certainly not so clear that it is demonstrated against the judgment of the supreme court and the court of appeals of the District. Nor are we nearer that demonstration by the specific patents *put in evidence by appellant. There [605] is generic sameness we concede, but there are differences. and the Patent Office and both lower courts found novelty and invention in those differences.

The appellant introduced in evidence a patent issued to D. Kellogg, October 12, 1852, for a wool press; one to W. R. Dingham, October 20, 1863, for improvement in paper presses; one to S. Cooley, October, 16, 1866, for a wool press; to Thomas Stibbs, September 19, 1871, for pressing yarn; to W. P. Craig, for a baling press; to Thomas G. Hardesty, for tobacco press; to G. B. Archer, for baling manure and other substances; to C. Brown, for baling short-cut hay, and another for baling short-cut straw; and a patent for a signature press to R. A. Hart. There was also testimony of the existence of a press used in the book-bindery of one John Palmer, in Philadelphia. The press was used in a later stage of bookbinding than "dry pressing," for the purpose of tying printed sheets into bundles for storing. It was an upright press with opposing platens or heads in which there were grooves to receive the cords by which the bundle was tied while under pressure.

There is a certain resemblance between all of the devices. They are all instruments for exerting pressure upon substances placed between compressing heads or followers to compact such substances into bundles and afford facilities for tying the bundles while they are under pressure. The Dingham patent, the one most relied on by appellant, may be selected for illustration.

The Dingham device is an "Improvement in Paper Presses," and the inventor claimed to have "invented a new and useful machine for combining and facilitating the operation of pressing and tying paper into reams or bundles," which he called "the combination paper press and tie engine."

There were defects in the art of pressing and tying paper very similar to the defects in the art of dry pressing "signatures," and Dingham described the former as follows:

[606] "The process of pressing and tying paper now generally employed requires a large and somewhat expensive press, which is located in some corner of the finishing room, and as the paper comes from the machine it is carried to the finishing table, there counted and folded, and when sufficient is obtained to fill the press (usually about 100 reams) it is conveyed to the press and placed therein, and, by means of a large serew and follower, pressed for about twelve hours, or during the night. It is then removed and conveyed to the tie table and there tied into reams. After this (it being, when it comes from the machine, usually double crown, or double the length of the ordinary ream of wrapping paper) it is cut into two reams or single crown. The usual mode of tying paper is by passing a strong cord or twine around the ream, with a noose or loop at the end, through which the other end is passed, and then drawn upon with the hand until the loose ream or bundle is sufficiently compressed. This operation is laborious and tedious, occupying much time, requires strong twine, and unavoidably draws the ream away or the paper out of place."

This language is quite similar to that used by Jones and his witnesses to describe the defects which existed in the bookbinder's art, and the presses of the inventors also have similarity. In both sheets of paper are pressed by being placed between "compressing heads," which "are constructed dividedly," to use the words of the Jones patent, "separate and sufficiently disconnected (to use the language of the Dingham patent) to allow the string or cord for tying the paper to pass between." Each machine, therefore, comprises a compress and tie table. In each there is the same rapidity of operation, the same economy of time and means, and in each the pressure first applied by the machine is retained by cords and continued in the bundle. And it is manifest that this retained and continued pressure, which has for its purpose in the Jones patent to remove type indentations from the sheets, and in the Dingham patent to retain the sheets in the bundle, adds nothing to the operation of the press of the former and detracts nothing from the operation of the press of the latter. But notwithstanding these resemblances we may ascribe invention to the Jones patent if it be confined to the press proper. In other words, the press may be regarded as a form, adapted to the bookbinder's art, and although preceded by the Dingham patent in a general way, may be considered as an invention of that form.

*The 5th claim of the Jones patent—the [607] claim for the process—must be viewed from a different standpoint. The first four claims of the patent, as we have said, describe the elements, "In a printer's and bookbinder's dry press and sheet tie." The 5th claim is as follows:

"5. The process herein described for treating folded printed sheets of paper in dry pressing, the same consisting of subjecting a collection of such sheets to pressure without the use of fuller boards, and while under such pressure tying them into compact bundles with end boards, then removing them immediately from the press, and allowing them to remain tied sufficiently long to fix and complete dry pressing."

The dependence, therefore, is not, as counsel for appellee contends, the press upon the process. It is the other way, the process upon the press; for it is impossible to consider the 5th claim as describing anything but the operation and effect of the press. Indeed, the process is the whole value, the sole purpose of the press. What, indeed, is the process—what is the force at work? And the inquiry is entirely independent of questions as to what constitutes a patentable process discussed by this court in Risdon Iron & Locomotive Works v. Medart, 158 U. S. 68, 39 L. ed. 899, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 745, and in Westinghouse v. Boyden Power Brake Co. 170 U. S. 537, 42 L. ed. 1136, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 707. What, then, is the force at work and how is it applied? It is force (pressure) applied to sheets of paper placed between "compressing heads." In other words, a special application of pressure began in the press and continued in the bundle by means of strings and cords. This, however, is the operation and effect of the machine, and it is none the less so because the pressure is held indefinitely. Its existence in the bundle is not independent of the press. The pressure is as much an effect in the bundle as when first applied. The pressure is applied by the press and so, substantially, are the bands or cords which continue the pressure, and we cannot assent to the view that the continuation of the pressure in the bundles with the consequence of removing type indentations in the printed sheets is anything but the natural and direct effect of the machine.

Infringement was put in issue by the pleadings and passed on by the lower courts.

[608] They found as a fact that all the claims *of the patent had been infringed by appellant. The finding is not absolutely disputed. The assignment of error is "that the patented machine used by defendant, in view of the state of the art preceding Jones's invention, did not infringe any claims of the patent in suit." That is, appellant contends that the evidence exhibits a complete anticipation, or so limits and narrows the Jones invention as to make the differences between the Jones press and that which was used by appellant more than formal. We have decided that the Jones press had not been anticipated, and both of the lower courts have found that the differences between it and appellant's press were not substantial. The evidence sustains the finding. The witnesses on behalf of appellees testified to the differences between the presses. They pointed out the essential resemblances of the presses and the merely formal character of the differences. There was no opposing testimony.

The accounting in the lower court, however, was had upon the basis of the validity of the process (claim 5), and therefore the judgment of the Court of Appeals must be reversed and the cause remanded, with directions to that court to reverse the judgment and decree of the Supreme Court and remand the cause to the latter court for further proceedings, in accordance with this opinion.

So ordered.

JAMES D. PATTON, Trading as J. D. Patton & Co., Plff in Err.,
v.

MAGGIE A. BRADY, Executrix of J. D. Brady, Collector of Internal Revenue for the Second District of Virginia.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 608-624.)

Original jurisdiction of circuit court—case arising under Constitution—survival of actions—war revenue act—increase in excise.

1. A case arises under the Constitution of the United States, of which the circuit court has original jurisdiction without diversity of citizenship, where the plaintiff's right of recovery depends upon the unconstitutionality of an act of Congress.
2. A cause of action to recover from a collector of internal revenue a sum alleged to have been paid him under protest to protect property from unlawful seizure for illegal

NOTE.—As to Federal question as conferring jurisdiction on United States courts—see notes to Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 7, and Bailey v. Mosher, 11 C. C. A. 308.

On abatement of action by death of defendant—see note to Weeks v. Russell (Tenn.) 3 L. R. A. 212; Green v. Watkins, 5 L. ed. U. S. 256.

On recovery back of duties paid under protest—see note to Greely v. Thompson, 13 L. ed. U. S. 398.

184 U. S.

taxes survives the death of the defendant, both under the common law and Va. Code 1887, § 2655, providing that "trespass or trespass on the case may be maintained by or against a personal representative for the taking or carrying away any goods, or for the waste or destruction of or damage to any estate of or by his decedent."

3. The tax levied on tobacco by the war revenue act of June 13, 1898, "in lieu of the tax now imposed by law," is an excise, and not a direct tax upon property, which must be apportioned according to population.
4. It was within the power of Congress to impose by the war revenue act of June 13, 1898, an additional excise upon manufactured tobacco on which the excise theretofore imposed by law had been paid, even though such tobacco had passed from the hands of the manufacturer, where it had not reached the consumer, and was, at the time of the passage of the act, held and intended for sale.

[No. 16.]

Submitted February 1, 1900. Ordered for Oral Argument May 28, 1900. Argued December 6, 1901. Decided. March 17, 1902.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Virginia to review a judgment dismissing a suit to recover from a collector of internal revenue excises paid under protest. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

*On July 14, 1899, plaintiff in error, as [609] plaintiff below, commenced this action in the circuit court for the eastern district of Virginia against J. D. Brady, collector of internal revenue for the second district of Virginia. In his declaration he alleged that in May, 1898, he had purchased in the open market and in the regular course of business 102,076 pounds of manufactured tobacco; that all the requisites of the internal revenue laws of the United States then existing had been fully complied with, stamps placed upon the boxes containing the tobacco, and regularly and duly canceled subsequent to April 14, 1898, and the tobacco removed from the factory; and that when he made his purchase the entire tax due the United States under and by virtue of such laws had been paid. The declaration then proceeded:

"After the act of Congress approved June 13, 1898, entitled 'An Act to Provide Ways and Means to Meet War and Other Expenditures, and for Other Purposes,' had been enacted, the defendant, James D. Brady, who is the collector of internal revenue for the second district of the state of Virginia, in which he and plaintiff reside, and in the month of June, 1898, demanded of plaintiff that he pay the sum of $3,062.28 as an additional tax to be paid upon said tobacco, which he claimed was imposed upon the same by the 2d paragraph of the 3d section of said act. Plaintiff refused to pay the same; whereupon the defendant threatened plaintiff that unless he did *pay it he would [610] treat plaintiff as a delinquent, and would seize his property under the provisions of an act of Congress applicable to such case, and would sell the same. Under the coercion of this demand and threat plaintiff paid the sum of $3,062.28 to the defendant, but he did so under protest, and with notice to the defendant that he would sue him to recover it back.

"Plaintiff avers that said § 3 of said act of June 13, 1898, imposing said additional tax upon his tobacco, is repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, and said acts of Congress authorizing the defendant to seize plaintiff's property and sell it if he did not pay the same are also repugnant to said Constitution, and that his suit therefore arises under the Constitution of the United States.

"On the 17th day of June, 1899, the plaintiff set out all of the foregoing facts in an application to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue of the United States, according to the laws in that regard and the regulations of the Secretary of the United States, established in pursuance thereof, and he appealed to said Commissioner of Internal Revenue to have said money so unlawfully extorted from him returned to him; but said Commissioner of Internal Revenue on the — day of July, 1899, rejected said appeal and refused to direct said money to be returned to plaintiff. The said Commissioner did not reject said appeal because of any informality in the manner in which it was made, but because he was of opinion that said act of Congress imposing said tax was consistent with the Constitution of the United States, and that said tax was lawfully collected; by all of which acts and doings the plaintiff is damaged $6,000, and therefore he sues."

Summons having been served, the case came on for hearing on the motion of the United States attorney for the district to dismiss the action on the ground that the act of Congress set forth in the declaration was not repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, which motion was sustained, and on September 22, 1899, the action was dismissed. To review such ruling plaintiff sued out this writ of error.

Mr. John W. Daniel submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. Fred Harper was with him on the brief:

The tax on personal property, or on the income thereof, is a direct tax.

Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 158 U. S. 601, 39 L. ed. 1108, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 912; Nicol v. Ames, 173 U. S. 516, 43 L. ed. 791, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522.

The Constitution does not say that no direct tax shall be laid by apportionment on any other property than land; on the contrary, it forbids all unapportioned direct tax.

Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 580, 39 L. ed. 819, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673.

A tax on a sale of personal property made at any place is really and practically upon the property.

Nicol v. Ames, 173 U. S. 521, 43 L. ed. 794, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522.

"Uniform" as applied to taxation means "not variant in degree or rate."

Century Dict.

The tax must be uniform on the particular article; and it is uniform within the meaning of the constitutional provision if it is made to bear the same percentage all over the United States.

Justice Miller's Lectures on the Constitution, pp. 240, 241.

Arbitrary selection can never be justified by calling it classification.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 155, 41 L. ed. 668, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255.

To impose upon the owner of goods a criminal punishment or penalty for not paying an additional tax would subject him to the operation of an ex post facto law.

Burgess v. Salmon, 97 U. S. 381, 24 L. ed. 1104; United States v. Burr, 159 U. S. 78, 40 L. ed. 82, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1002; United States v. Iselin, 87 Fed. 194.

The ex post facto effect of a law cannot be evaded by giving a civil form to that which is essentially criminal.

Burgess v. Salmon, 97 U. S. 381, 24 L. ed. 1104; United States v. Burr, 159 U. S. 78, 40 L. ed. 82, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1002; United States v. Iselin, 87 Fed. 194.

The law regards facts, not names.

United States v. Iselin, 87 Fed. 194.

Mr. William L. Royall also submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

Circuit courts have jurisdiction of suits without regard to the citizenship of the parties, if the suit requires a construction of the Constitution of the United States in order to its correct decision.

Cohen v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 378, 5 L. ed. 284; Little York Gold-Washing & Water Co. v. Keyes, 96 U. S. 201, 24 L. ed. 656; New Orleans, M. & T. R. Co. v. Mississippi, 102 U. S. 140, 26 L. ed. 98; Smith v. Greenhow, 109 U. S. 669, 27 L. ed. 1080, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 421; White v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 307, 29 L. ed. 199, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 923, 962; Royall v. Virginia, 116 U. S. 572, 29 L. ed. 735, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510.

Mr. William L. Royall argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error on oral argument:

The question whether the action survives is to be determined by Virginia law.

Bauserman v. Blunt, 147 U. S. 647, 37 L. ed. 316, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466.

Every wrong that relates to property survives against the personal representative.

Lee v. Hill, 87 Va. 497, 12 S. E. 1052; Ferrill v. Brewis, 25 Gratt. 770.

The word "goods" includes money, so that Brady took and carried away "goods."

Bouvier, Law Dict.; Anderson, Law Dict.; Abbott, Law Dict.; The Elizabeth & Jane, 2 Mason, 407, Fed. Cas. No. 4,355.

Patton could certainly have brought indebitatus assumpsit against Brady for money had and received.

Elliott v. Swartwout, 10 Pet. 137, 9 L. ed. 373; Bend v. Hoyt, 13 Pet. 263, 10 L. ed. 154; Philadelphia v. The Collector, 5

Wall. 731, sub nom. Philadelphia v. Diehl, 18 L. ed. 617; State ex rel. McCarty v. Nelson, 4 L. R. A. 300, note, 41 Minn. 25, 42 N. W. 548.

Congress may excise an article as it pleases so that the excise does not amount to spoliation or confiscation. But having excised it, it has excised it, and the power is exhausted. It cannot excise a second time.

The view generally entertained of an excise at the time our Constitution was adopted was that it was a tax that could be made most onerous and oppressive, and was not to be tolerated unless imposed with reason and according to justice.

1 Madison Papers, p. 306.

Whenever an act of Congress amounts to "spoliation" it will be declared void upon general principles, and as against common right.

Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 135, 3 L. ed. 177; Citizens' Sav. & L. Asso. v. Topcka, 20 Wall. 662, 22 L. ed. 461; Parkersburg v. Brown, 106 U. S. 487, 27 L. ed. 238, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 442; Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 536, 28 L. ed. 239, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Legal Tender Cases, 12 Wall. 581, 20 L. ed. 322; Nicol v. Ames, 173 U. S. 509, 43 L. ed. 786, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522.

The tax is imposed upon those only who bought tax-paid tobacco between April 14th, 1898, and June 13th, 1898. This is an unreasonable, unjust, and outrageous discrimination.

Oliver v. Washington Mills, 11 Allen, 268; Portland Bank v. Apthorp, 12 Mass. 252.

Mr. Fred. Harper also argued the cause for plaintiff in error.

Assistant Attorney General Boyd submitted the cause for defendant in error:

The uniformity required under the provision of the Constitution that duties, imposts, and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States, has been held to be geographical or territorial only, and a tax is uniform when it operates with the same force and effect in every place where the subject of it is found.

Loughborough v. Blake, 5 Wheat. 318, 5 L. ed. 98; Head Money Cases, 112 U. S. 580, sub nom. Edye v. Robertson, 28 L. ed. 798, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247.

Under the power to tax property may be classified for taxation at different rates, and it is enough that there is no discrimination in favor of one against another of the same class.

Giozza v. Tiernan, 148 U. S. 657, 37 L. ed. 599, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721.

In pursuance of the principle of classification Congress has the right under the Constitution to provide subjects of taxation by separating an article into classes and basing the distinction among such classes upon any description which can be generally applied and which will identify a particular class wherever it is found.

Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 586, 39 L. ed. 821, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Head Money Cases, 112 U. S. 580, sub nom. Edye v. Robertson, 28 L. ed. 798, 5 Sup. Ct. 184 U. S.

Rep. 247; Justice Miller's Lectures on the Constitution (N. Y. 1891) pp. 240, 241; Cobb v. Durham County, 122 N. C. 307, 30 S. E. 338.

Assistant Attorney General Beck argued the cause, and, with Solicitor General Richards, filed a brief for defendant in error:

No statute of a state which authorized suits on state penal statutes to be prosecuted after the death of the offender can have any effect on a suit for the recovery of penalties under a statute of the United States.

Schreiber v. Sharpless, 110 U. S. 76, sub nom. Ex parte Schreiber, 28 L. ed. 65, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423. See also Martin v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 151 U. S. 673, sub nom. Gerling v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 38 L. ed. 311, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533.

An action to recover damages for official extortion by a tax collector is not an action "for the taking or carrying away of goods, or for waste or destruction of, or damage to any estate of, or by, his decedent."

Anderson v. Hygeia Hotel Co. 92 Va. 687, 24 S. E. 269; Mumpower v. Bristol, 94 Va. 739, 27 S. E. 581; Birmingham v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 98 Va. 548, 37 S. E. 17.

Assistant Attorney General Beck also filed a separate brief for defendant in error on reargument:

The tax in question is not one imposed upon the plaintiff's personal property, invested or otherwise, or the income thereof, but is a duty imposed upon certain merchandise, the privilege to sell which is subjected to an additional tax. That this is an excise seems clear.

Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 429, 39 L. ed. 759, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673, 158 U. S. 601, 39 L. ed. 1108, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 912; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 82, 44 L. ed. 986, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747.

The tax now under consideration is uniform, for wherever throughout the United States tobacco is found in the possession of a person who intends to sell it, and having tax-paid stamps canceled of a certain date, the tax in question will fall upon it. No preference is given to any locality or to any person.

Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 82, 44 L. ed. 986, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Head Money Cases, 112 U. S. 585, sub nom. Edye v. Robertson, 28 L. ed. 798, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247.

The Constitution in no respect forbids double taxation, and therefore there is no limit to the number of times property can be taxed. This rests wholly within the discretion of the taxing power.

License Tax Cases, 5 Wall. 462, 18 L. ed. 497; Pacific Ins. Co. v. Soule, 7 Wall. 433, 19 L. ed. 95.

*Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The first contention of the defendant is that the circuit court did not have jurisdiction. The parties, it is true, were both citizens of Virginia, but the question presented in the declaration was the constitutionality of an act of Congress. The plaintiff's right of recovery was rested upon the unconstitutionality of the act, and that was the vital question. The circuit courts of the United States "have original cognizance, concurrent with the courts of the several states, of all suits of a civil nature at common law or in equity . . . arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States." 25 Stat. at L. 433, chap. 866.

That a case arises under the Constitution of the United States when the right of either party depends on the validity of an act of Congress is clear. It was said by Chief Justice Marshall that "a case in law or equity consists of the right of the one party, as well as of the other, and may truly be said to arise under the Constitution or a law of the United States whenever its correct decision depends on the construction of either" (Cohen v. Virginia, 6 Wheat, 264, 379, 5 L. ed. 257, 285); and again, when "the title or right set up by the party may be defeated by one construction of the Constitution or law of the United States, and sustained by the opposite construction." Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 738, 822, 6 L. ed. 204, 224. See also Little York Gold-Washing & Water Co. v. Keyes, 96 U. S. 199, 201, 24 L. ed. 656, 658; Tennessee v. Davis, 100 U. S. 257, 25 L. ed. 648; White v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 307, 29 L. ed. 199, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 923, 962; New Orleans, M. & T. R. Co. v. Mississippi, 102 U. S. 135, 139, 26 L. ed. 96, 98. In the latter case the following statement of the controversy was given in the opinion: "From this analysis of the pleadings, and of the petition for removal, it will be observed that the contention of the state rests in part upon the ground that the construction and maintenance of the bridge in question is in violation of the condition on which Mississippi was admitted into the Union, and inconsistent with the engagement, on the *part of the United States, as expressed in the act of March 1, 1817. On the other hand, the railroad company, in support of its right to construct and maintain the present bridge across Pearl river, invokes the protection of the act of Congress passed March 2, 1868." And upon these facts it was held that the case was rightfully removed to the Federal court. Within these decisions obviously the circuit court had jurisdiction.

A second contention of the defendant is this: After the case had been brought to this court the defendant, J. D. Brady, died. Whereupon the plaintiff took steps to revive the action, and on November 4, 1901, Maggie A. Brady, the executrix of the deceased, was substituted as party defendant. Now it is insisted that the action was one based upon a tort, and, as such, abated by reason of the death of defendant.

Congress has not, speaking generally, attempted to prescribe the causes which survive the death of either party. Section 955, Rev. Stat., provides that—

"When either of the parties, whether plaintiff, or petitioner, or defendant, in any suit in any court of the United States, dies before final judgment, the executor or administrator of such deceased party may, in case the cause of action survives by law, prosecute or defend any such suit to final judgment."

This does not define the causes which survive. In the absence of some special legislation the question in each case must be settled by the common law or the law of the state in which the cause of action arose. United States v. Daniel, 6 How. 11, 12 L. ed. 323; Henshaw v. Miller, 17 How. 212, 15 L. ed. 222; Schreiber v. Sharpless, 110 U. S. 76, sub nom. Ex parte Schreiber, 28 L. ed. 65, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Martin v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 151 U. S. 673, sub nom. Gerling v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 38 L. ed. 311, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Joy, 173 U. S. 226, 229, 43 L. ed. 677, 678, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387. It matters not whether we consider the common law or the statute law of Virginia as controlling. By either the cause of action stated in the complaint survived the death of defendant.

Section 2655 of the Code of Virginia (Code of 1887) reads as follows:

"An action of trespass or trespass on the case may be maintained by or against a personal representative for the taking or *car- [613] rying away any goods, or for the waste or destruction of or damage to any estate of or by his decedent."

The term "goods" is broad enough to include money, and as used in this statute must be held to be so inclusive, for it would be strange that a cause of action for taking and carrying away a thousand pieces of silver should survive the death of the defendant, while a like action for taking and carrying away a thousand dollars in money should not. In The Elizabeth & Jane, 2 Mason, 407, 408, Fed. Cas. No. 4,355, Mr. Justice Story said: "It cannot be doubted that money, and, of course, foreign coin, falls within the description of 'goods' at common law." But more than that, the estate of plaintiff was reduced to the amount of $3,000 and over by the action of decedent, and such reduction was a direct damage and comes within the rule laid down by the supreme court of appeals in Mumpoiver v. Bristol, 94 Va. 737, 739, 27 S. E. 581, 582, in which the court held that: "The damages allowed to be recovered by or against a personal representative by § 2655 of the Code are direct damages to property, and not those which are merely consequent upon a wrongful act to the person only," and in which the presiding judge of the court, delivering the opinion and showing that the act sued for was not within the scope of the statute, said:

"The wrongful act which the defendant is alleged to have committed, and for the injury resulting from which the plaintiff sues, consisted in maliciously and without probable cause suing out an injunction against the plaintiff, whereby the operation of his mill was suspended. It is quite obvious that this injunction did not operate to take or carry away the goods of the plaintiff. nor cause the waste or destruction of, or inflict any damage upon, the estate of the plaintiff. It is true that the language of the statute is comprehensive, and embraces damage of any kind or degree to the estate, real or personal, of the person aggrieved; but the damage must be direct, and not the consequential injury or loss to the estate which flows from a wrongful act directly affecting the person only. No part of the defendant's property was taken or carried away; no part of it was wasted or destroyed. The plaintiff's use of his property, and not the property itself, was affected by the act of which he complains."

[614] *See also Ferrill v. Brewis, 25 Gratt. 765, 770, and Lee v. Hill, 87 Va. 497, 12 S. E. 1052.

If we turn to the common law, there the rule was that if a party increased his own estate by wrongfully taking another's property an action against him would survive his death, and might be revived against his personal representative. In the case of United States v. Daniel, 6 How. 11, 12 L. ed. 323, which was an action against one who had in his lifetime been marshal of a district, to recover damages which the plaintiffs had sustained by reason of false returns made on certain executions by one of defendant's deputies, it was held that the action did not survive, because the decedent had received no benefit and had not increased his estate by means of the wrongful act. The court, referring to the common law, said:

"If the person charged has secured no benefit to himself at the expense of the sufferer, the cause of action is said not to survive; but where, by means of the offense, property is acquired, which benefits the testator, there an action for the value of the property shall survive against the executor. . . . If the deputy marshal, in the misfeasance complained of, received money or property, the marshal being responsible for such acts, the cause of action survived against his executors. But this is not the case made in the present action."

Now the gravamen of the plaintiff's complaint is that he was compelled to pay to the defendant the sum of $3,062.28 to protect his property from unlawful seizure for illegal taxes. In such cases, having paid under protest, he can recover in an action of assumpsit the amount thus wrongfully taken from him.

"Appropriate remedy to recover back money paid under protest on account of duties or taxes erroneously or illegally assessed is an action of assumpsit for money had and received. Where the party voluntarily pays the money he is without remedy; but if he pays it by compulsion of law, or under protest, or with notice that he intends to bring suit to test the validity of the claim, he may recover it back, if the assessment was erroneous or illegal, in an action of assumpsit for money had and received." Philadelphia v. The Collector, 5 Wall. 720, 731, sub nom. Philadelphia v. Diehl, 18 L. ed. 614, 616. See also Dooley 184 U. S.

v. United States, 182 U. S. 222, 45 L. ed. 1074, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762.

*It is true there are one or two sentences[615] in the declaration appropriate to an action sounding in tort, such as the one last quoted, in which the pleader alleges that "by all of which acts and doings the plaintiff is damaged $6,000, and therefore he sues." But nevertheless the substance of the charge is that the defendant wrongfully took from plaintiff the sum of $3,062.28. By virtue thereof there was an implied promise on the part of the defendant to repay the same, and that implied promise lies at the foundation of the action.

In Schreiber v. Sharpless, 110 U. S. 76, 80, sub nom. Ex parte Schreiber, 28 L. ed. 65, 66, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423, 424, it was said:

"The right to proceed against the representatives of a deceased person depends, not on forms and modes of proceeding in a suit, but on the nature of the cause of action for which the suit is brought. . . . Whether an action survives depends on the substance of the cause of action, not on the forms of proceeding to enforce it."

And in Lee v. Hill, 87 Va. 497, 12 S. E. 1052, the court observed (p. 500, S. E. p. 1052):

"The true test is, not so much the form of the action, as the nature of the cause of action. Where the latter is a tort unconnected with contract, and which affects the person only, and not the estate, such as assault, libel, slander, and the like, there the rule actio personalis, etc., applies. But where, as in the present case, the action is founded on a contract, it is virtually ex contractu, although nominally in tort, and there it survives."

And also quoted the following from Booth v. Northrop, 27 Conn. 325:

"In determining whether a cause of action survives to the personal representative, the real nature of the injury or claim ought to be regarded, and not the form of the remedy by which it is sought to be redressed or enforced."

For these reasons, and under these authorities, we are of opinion that this cause of action survived the death of the defendant, and was rightfully revived in the name of his executrix.

We pass, therefore, to consider the merits of the case, and here the first question is, What is the nature of the tax? Obviously it was intended by Congress as an excise.

In the chapter in the Revised Statutes on internal revenue, § 3368, *it was provided[616] that "upon tobacco and snuff manufactured and sold, or removed for consumption or use, there shall be levied and collected the following taxes:" Then followed statements of the amounts of the prescribed taxes. Section 30 of the tariff act of 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 619, chap. 1244) reads:

"That on and after the first day of January, eighteen hundred and ninety-one, the internal taxes on smoking and manufactured tobacco shall be six cents per pound, and on snuff six cents per pound."

On June 13, 1898, Congress passed an act to provide ways and means to meet the expenditures of the Spanish-American War. 30 Stat. at L. 448, chap. 448. Section 3, so far as is applicable, is as follows:

"Sec. 3. That there shall, in lieu of the tax now imposed by law, be levied and collected a tax of twelve cents per pound upon all tobacco and snuff, however prepared, manufactured, and sold, or removed for consumption or sale. . . .

"And there shall also be assessed and collected, with the exceptions hereinafter in this section provided for, upon all the articles enumerated in this section which were manufactured, imported, and removed from factory or customhouse before the passage of this act bearing tax stamps affixed to such articles for the payment of the taxes thereon, and canceled subsequent to April fourteenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, and which articles were at the time of the passage of this act held and intended for sale by any person, a tax equal to one half the difference between the tax already paid on such articles at the time of removal from the factory or customhouse and the tax levied in this act upon such articles.

"Every person having on the day succeeding the date of the passage of this act any of the above-described articles on hand for sale in excess of one thousand pounds of manufactured tobacco and twenty thousand cigars or cigarettes, and which have been removed from the factory where produced or the customhouse through which imported bearing the rate of tax payable thereon at the time of such removal, shall make a full and true return, under oath, in duplicate, of the quantity thereof, in pounds as to the tobacco and snuff and in thousands as to [617]the *cigars and cigarettes so held on that day, in such form and under such regulations as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, may prescribe. . . ."

Ever since the early part of the Civil War there has been a body of legislation, gathered in the statutes under the title Internal Revenue, by which, upon goods intended for consumption, excises have been imposed in different forms at some time intermediate the beginning of manufacture or production and the act of consumption. Among the articles thus subjected to those excises have been liquors and tobacco, appropriately selected therefor on the ground that they are not a part of the essential food supply of the nation, but are among its comforts and luxuries. The first of these acts, passed on July 1, 1862 (12 Stat. at L. 432, chap. 119), in terms provided for "the collection of internal duties, stamp duties, licenses, or taxes imposed by this act," and included manufactured tobacco of all descriptions. Subsequent statutes changed the amount of the charge, the act of 1890 reducing it to 6 cents a pound. Then came the act in question, which, for the purpose of providing means for the expenditures of the Spanish

718

War, increased the charge to 12 cents a pound, specifying distinctly that it was to be "in lieu of the tax now imposed by law." Nothing can be clearer than that in these various statutes, the last included among the number, Congress was intending to keep alive a body of excise charges on tobacco, spirits, etc. It may be that all the taxes enumerated in these various statutes were not excises, but the great body of them, including the tax on tobacco, were plainly excises within any accepted definition of the term.

Turning to Blackstone, vol. 1, p. 318, we find an excise defined: "An inland imposition, paid sometimes upon the consumption of the commodity, or frequently upon the retail sale, which is the last stage before the consumption." This definition is accepted by Story in his Constitution of the United States, § 953. Cooley in his work on Taxation, page 3, defines it as "an inland impost levied upon articles of manufacture or sale, and also upon licenses to pursue certain trades, or to deal in certain commodities." Bouvier and Black, respectively, *in [618] their dictionaries give the same definition. If we turn to the general dictionaries, Webster's International calls it "an inland duty or impost operating as an indirect tax on the consumer, levied upon certain specified articles, as tobacco, ale, spirits, etc., grown or manufactured in the country. It is also levied on licenses to pursue certain trades and deal in certain commodities." The definition in the Century Dictionary is substantially the same, though in addition this is quoted from Andrews on Revenue Law, § 133: "Excises is a word generally used in contradistinction to imposts in its restricted sense, and is applied to internal or inland impositions, levied sometimes upon the consumption of a commodity, sometimes upon the retail sale of it, and sometimes upon the manufacture of it."

Some of these definitions were quoted with approval by this court in the Income Tax Cases, and while the phraseology is not the same in all, yet so far as the particular tax before us is concerned, each of them would include it. The tax on manufactured tobacco is a tax on an article manufactured for consumption, and imposed at a period intermediate the commencement of manufacture and the final consumption of the article.

It is practically conceded by one counsel for plaintiff in error that this is an excise tax. After discussing the question at some length he says:

"To determine, then, what excise means, we have for our guidance, first, an enumeration of the articles that it fell on in Great Britain in 1787. We have, second, the nature of the tax as judicially determined; and we have, third, the definition of it, or the common understanding of men about it, as given by the Encyclopedia Britannica and the Century Dictionary. Taking these three sources of information and combining them, it would seem that the leading idea of excise is that it is a tax, laid without rule or principle, upon consumable articles, upon the process of their manufacture and upon licenses to sell them. . . . Since tobacco was supposed to be one of the subjects to which excise was applied in England when the Constitution was framed, I shall assume that the court will hold that the tax in this case is an excise."

184 U. S.

[619] It is true other counsel in their brief have advanced a very *elaborate and ingenious argument to show that this is a direct tax upon property which must be apportioned according to population within the rule laid down in the Income Tax Cases, but, as we have seen, it is not a tax upon property as such, but upon certain kinds of property, having reference to their origin and their intended use. It may be, as Dr. Johnson said, "a hateful tax levied upon commodities;" an opinion evidently shared by Blackstone, who says, after mentioning a number of articles that had been added to the list of those excised, "a list which no friend to his country would wish to see further increased." But these are simply considerations of policy, and to be determined by the legislative branch, and not of power, to be determined by the judiciary. We conclude, therefore, that the tax which is levied by this tax is an excise, properly so called, and we proceed to consider the further propositions presented by counsel.

It is insisted: "That Congress may excise an article as it pleases, so that the excise does not amount to spoliation or confiscation. But that having excised it, it has excised it, and the power is exhausted. It cannot excise a second time." But why should the power of imposing an excise tax be exhausted when once exercised? It must be remembered that taxes are not debts in the sense that having once been established and paid all further liability of the individual to the government has ceased. They are, as said in Cooley on Taxation, p. 1: "The enforced proportional contribution of persons and property, levied by the authority of the state for the support of the government and for all public needs," and so long as there exists public needs just so long exists the liability of the individual to contribute thereto. The obligation of the individual to the state is continuous and proportioned to the extent of the public wants. No human wisdom can always foresee what may be the exigencies of the future, or determine in advance exactly what the government must have in order "to provide for the common defense" and "promote the general welfare." Emergencies may arise; wars may come unexpectedly; large demands upon the public may spring into being with little forewarning; and can it be that having made provi-

[620] sion for times *of peace and quiet, the government is powerless to make a further call upon its citizens for the contributions necessary for unexpected exigencies?

That which was possible in fact existed. A war had been declared. National expenditures would naturally increase and did increase by reason thereof. Provision by way of loan or taxation for such increased expenditures was necessary. There is in this legislation, if ever such a question could arise, no matter of color or pretense. There was an existing demand, and to meet that demand this statute was enacted. The question, therefore, is whether congressional provision must reach through an entire year and at the beginning finally determine the extent of the burden of taxes which can be cast upon the citizen during that year, with the result that if exigencies arise during the year calling for extraordinary and unexpected expenses the burden thereof must be provided for by way of loan, temporary or permanent; or whether there inheres in Congress the power to increase taxation during the year if exigencies demand increased expenditures. On this question we can have no doubt. Taxation may run pari passu with expenditure. The constituted authorities may rightfully make one equal the other. The fact that action has been taken with regard to conditions of peace does not prevent subsequent action with reference to unexpected demands of war. Courts may not in this respect revise the action of Congress. That body determines the question of war, and it may therefore rightfully prescribe the means necessary for carrying on that war. Loan or tax is possible. It may adopt either, or divide between the two. If it determines in whole or in part on tax, that means an increase in the existing rate or perhaps in the subjects of taxation, and the judgment of Congress in respect thereto is not subject to judicial challenge. Wisely was it said by Mr. Justice Cooley in his work on Taxation, page 34:
184 U. S.

"The legislative makes, the executive executes, and the judiciary construes, the laws." Chief Justice Marshall, in Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheat. 1, 46, 6 L. ed. 253, 263. The legislature must therefore determine all questions of state necessity, discretion, or policy involved in ordering a tax and in apportioning it; must *make all the [621] necessary rules and regulations which are to be observed in order to produce the desired returns, and must decide upon the agencies by means of which collections shall be made. "The judicial tribunals of the state have no concern with the policy of legislation. That is a matter resting altogether in the discretion of another co-ordinate branch of the government. The judicial power cannot legitimately question the policy or refuse to sanction the provisions of any law not inconsistent with the fundamental law of the state." Chief Justice Redfield, in Re Powers, 25 Vt. 261, 265. . . . But so long as the legislation is not colorable merely, but is confined to the enactment of what is in its nature strictly a tax law, and so long as none of the constitutional rights of the citizen are violated in the directions prescribed for enforcing the tax, the legislation is of supreme authority. Taxes may be and often are oppressive to the persons and corporations taxed; they may appear to the judicial mind unjust and even unnecessary, but this can constitute no reason for judicial interference."

In a general way these observations on the power of Congress to meet exigencies by increased taxation are not questioned by counsel, but it is specifically insisted that the power of imposing an excise once exercised is gone, even though the property may thereafter remain subject to ordinary taxation upon property as such. We quote the language of counsel:

"Possibly the property is not therefore to go free of taxation thereafter because it has been excised. If a man who has paid an excise upon a thousand boxes of tobacco chooses to stack it up in a warehouse and keep it there ten years, the tobacco is not, possibly, to go tax free because it has borne an excise. It receives the protection of the laws, and it should bear its part of the burdens of the laws. But it is to be taxed thereafter according to the principles of taxation, and not according to the arbitrariness of excise. Taxation upon it thereafter is to be direct taxation imposed according to population, which makes it bear a burden that is proportional to that borne by other property."

[622] Doubtless a general tax may be cast upon property once charged with an excise; and the power to tax it as property, *subject to constitutional limitations as to the mode of taxing property, might not be defeated by the fact that it has already paid an excise. But what is the difference in the nature of an excise and an ordinary property tax which forbids a repetition or increase in the one case and permits it in the other? They are each methods by which the individual is made to contribute out of his property to the support of the government, and if an ordinary property tax may be repeated or increased when the exigencies of the government may demand, no reason is perceived why an excise should not also be repeated or increased under like exigencies. Counsel speaks of the power to impose an excise as an arbitrary, unrestrained power, but the Constitution, art. 1, § 8, provides that "all duties, imposts, and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States." The exercise of the power is, therefore, limited by the rule of uniformity. The framers of the Constitution, the people who adopted it, thought that limitation sufficient, and courts may not add thereto. That uniformity has been adjudged to be a geographical uniformity. In the Head Money Cases, 112 U. S. 580, 594, sub nom. Edye v. Robertson, 28 L. ed. 798, 802, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247, 252, it was said:

"The tax is uniform when it operates with the same force and effect in every place where the subject of it is found. The tax in this case, which, as far as it can be called a tax, is an excise duty on the business of bringing passengers from foreign countries into this, by ocean navigation, is uniform. and operates precisely alike in every port of the United States where such passengers can be landed. . . . Perfect uniformity and perfect equality of taxation, in all the aspects in which the human mind can view it, is a baseless dream, as this court has said more than once. State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 612, 23 L. ed. 663, 673. Here there is substantial uniformity within the meaning and purpose of the Constitution."

So also in the recent case of Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 106, 44 L. ed. 969, 995, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747, 772.

"By the result, then, of an analysis of the history of the adoption of the Constitution, it becomes plain that the words 'uniform throughout the United States' do not signify an intrinsic, but simply a geographical, uniformity. And it also results *that the[623] assertion to which we at the outset referred, that the decision in the Head Money Cases, holding that the word 'uniform' must be interpreted in a geographical sense, was not authoritative, because that case in reality solely involved the clause of the Constitution forbidding preferences between ports, is shown to be unsound, since the preference clause of the Constitution and the uniformity clause were, in effect, in framing the Constitution, treated, as respected their operation, as one and the same thing, and embodied the same conception."

Geographical uniformity being, therefore, that only which is prescribed by the Constitution, the courts may not add new conditions, and the statute in question fully complies with that requirement. It is not the province of the judiciary to inquire whether the excise is reasonable in amount or in respect to the property to which it is applied. Those are matters in respect to which the legislative determination is final.

Neither can it be said that the change in the ownership of the tobacco in the case at bar had placed it beyond the reach of an excise. It is true that it had passed from the manufacturer, but it had not reached the consumer. By § 3 of the statute the charge is placed upon articles which "were at the time of the passage of this act held and intended for sale," and this tobacco was purchased and held for sale by the plaintiff. Within the scope of the various definitions we have quoted there can be no doubt that the power to excise continues while the consumable articles are in the hands of the manufacturer or any intermediate dealer, and until they reach the consumer.

Our conclusion, then, is that it is within the power of Congress to increase an excise, as well as a property tax, and that such an increase may be made at least while the property is held for sale and before it has passed into the hands of the consumer; that it is no part of the function of a court to inquire into the reasonableness of the excise either as respects the amount or the property upon which it is imposed.

The act in controversy, so far as the charge upon this plaintiff is concerned, is constitutional; and the judgment of the Circuit Court is affirmed.

[624] *Mr. Justice Harlan and Mr. Justice Gray took no part in the decision of this case.

RELOJ CATTLE COMPANY, Appt.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 624-639.)

Mexican land grants — lawful area — over-plus — imperfect claim.

1. A claimant under a Mexican land grant, for whose predecessor in interest the Mexican authorities, on formal denouncement of the excess therein over the area which the grantee could take under the Mexican law, have laid off in Mexico this lawful area, cannot have such lawful area confirmed by the court of private land claims out of territory ceded by Mexico to the United States, which was included within the original survey of the grant.
2. A preferential right of purchase of over-plus land within a Mexican land grant, to which the owner of the lawful area was entitled under the Mexican law at the date of the treaty with Mexico, is an imperfect claim, and is therefore barred by the act of March 3, 1891, § 12, unless filed within two years from that date.

[No. 30.]

*Argued and Submitted October 21, 1901.
Decided March 17, 1902.*

A PPEAL from the Court of Private Land Claims to review a decree dismissing a petition for confirmation of a Mexican land grant. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

The Reloj Cattle Company, claiming to be the owner in fee of a tract of land in the county of Cochise, Arizona, which it described as the San Pedro grant, filed its petition for confirmation in the court of private land claims, May 29, 1897. The petition alleged that the grant contained 37,000 acres in the United States, and, by a sketch map attached, 19,000 acres in the Republic of Mexico, or a total of 56,000 acres, within its exterior boundaries. It gave a description of the grant by courses and distances from certain natural objects, and relied on a survey made by one Howe. The petition further alleged that plaintiff was the owner of the tract by virtue of certain instruments in writing, by which it had acquired from Rafael Elias, the original grantee, title to all the property he had therein; that the grant title bore date May 2, 1833, and was duly made, executed, and delivered by Don José Maria Mendoza, treasurer general of the state of Sonora, in the name of that state, under and by virtue of article 11 of [625] the general *sovereign decree No. 70, passed August 4, 1824, by the sovereign constituent 184 U. S.

congress of the United States of Mexico, which article conceded to all of the states of the Republic the rents or revenues which by said law were not reserved to the general government, one of which revenues was the vacant lands within the states of the Republic, thereby confirming to the states the lands so described.

It was further averred that by law No. 30 of May 20, 1825, and other decrees subsequent thereto, the constituent congress of the state of Sonora and Sinaloa prescribed regulations for the sale of such lands; that the initiatory proceeding to obtain the grant title to the lands in question was by petition dated 1820 or 1821, addressed to the governor intendente, the officer of the Spanish government in charge of and having exclusive jurisdiction in the matter of the sales of public lands in the precinct of Fronteras, in which precinct the lands petitioned for were situated, which petition was made and signed by José Jesus Perez, and proceedings thereon taken as required by the applicable royal ordinances of December 4, 1786; that thereafter, on July 5, 1822, at Arispe, Sonora, the tract petitioned for was sold by the proper officers to Perez for the sum of $190; that on July 6 the intendente ordered Perez to pay into the treasury that sum, together with costs and charges; that on July 7 the sale was approved by the provincial imperial treasury at Arispe, and was referred to the superior board of the treasury for its approval or determination, and that thereafter the $190, together with costs and charges, was paid into the national treasury of the Republic of Mexico; but that the superior board of the treasury was abolished before the sale was approved, and no further action was taken until October 25, 1832, when proceedings were instituted to transfer the rights and title of Perez to Rafael Elias, and to have the formal title to the lands issue to Elias; that in accordance therewith, on May 8, 1833, José Maria Mendoza, the treasurer general of the state of Sonora, issued to Elias the final testimonio or evidence of title to the grant, which was thereupon duly recorded in the proper records of Sonora.

The petition alleged that the claim was presented by certain *grantors of petitioner [626] to the surveyor general of Arizona, and a report made by a duly authorized agent of the United States to the effect that the expediente was among the archives in the state of Sonora, and that all the proceedings were regular, and the certificates showing payment and the record of the transfer between Perez and Elias were properly recorded, and in the proper place, among the archives of Sonora; that there was on file in the office of the surveyor general of Arizona a report of one Wharton, apparently acting under special instructions of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, in which he reported against the land grant, and that the land described therein was situated in the state of Sonora, Mexico, but the petition charged that the report was not made with full knowledge of the facts; and also that there was a report on file by one Borton, apparently acting under instructions of the surveyor general of Arizona, of an indefinite character. And it was alleged that beyond what was so stated the San Pedro grant had not been acted on by Congress, or any other competent authority of the United States, constituted by law for the adjustment of land titles within the territory of Arizona.

The petition averred that all the proceedings in the matter of the grant were regular, complete, and legal, and vested a perfect and valid title in fee thereto in the grantee; that the grantee went into actual possession and erected proper monuments, and that the grantee and his descendants and legal representatives and assigns have continued until the present time in the actual possession, use, and occupation of the same, and were seised and possessed in fee thereof; that petitioner was entitled to all of the lands embraced within the original survey of the grant lying in the territory of Arizona, and that they were the lands delineated on the map filed with the petition; and that there was no person in possession of the grant otherwise than by permission of petitioner, except one Roberts, who was made a defendant. On May 13, 1899, plaintiff filed an amended petition in which the description followed an amended map and survey made by one Contzen, and attached to the amended petition, which survey was the one relied on at the trial, and made the contents of the grant within the United States 38,622.06 acres.

[627] *The answer of the United States denied the correctness of the surveys and maps of Howe and of Contzen, and alleged that the tract, whether located according to quantity, or courses and distances, or natural objects, was situated entirely south of the boundary line between the Republics of the United States and Mexico, and without the jurisdiction of the court.

The answer further denied that the claim set forth was at the date of the treaty a complete and perfect title, and pleaded the statute, whereby all imperfect claims not filed within two years from March 3, 1891, became forever barred.

The answer also set up that under and pursuant to proceedings of denouncement, commenced in July, 1880, by the predecessors of the Reloj Cattle Company, the government of Mexico measured off and delineated to said persons the legal area or cabida legal of 4 sitios mentioned in claimant's title papers; and in the same proceedings it was adjudged that the ranch of San Pedro had no known boundary, and thus no surplus or demasias; that the 4 sitios were measured off and delineated to said persons by the Mexican government and located entirely within the Republic of Mexico; and that the claim sued for was thus entirely satisfied and discharged by the location of the said 4 sitios within the Republic of Mexico.

The case came on for hearing in June, 1899, at which time there was offered in evidence for plaintiff a copy of the original expediente of the San Pedro grant, from which it appeared that in the year 1821 one José Jesus Perez presented the following petition to the governor intendente:

"I, Don José de Jesus Perez, a resident of this capital, before your excellency, in conformity with law, and in accordance with the royal ordinances concerning land, laws, sanctions, and rescripts that treat of the royal and abbatial lands with which His Majesty (God preserve him) protects his vassals, as perquisites of his royal patrimony, appear and state: That, whereas I enjoy some property, acquired in the military service and by my own industry, without owning a place upon which to locate and bring them together (centruarlos), I apply to the superior authority of your excellency (with prior permission of my father) in order that, pursuant to the provisions of the national laws and the terms [628] of the royal cedula of February 14, 1805, the depopulated place down the San Pedro river, situate in this province, toward the north, on the hostile frontier, close to the abandoned place of Las Nutrias, be considered as registered, in virtue of which I protest that I will enter into composition with His Majesty (God preserve him) and will pay the quota or cost of its purchase, the royal half annate tax, and whatever else may be necessary, for such is rigorous justice with relation to what is stated. In this understanding I pray you to issue commission for the execution of the necessary proceeding, ocular examination, reconnaissance of the ground, survey, appraisement, publication, possession, and final sale of the 4 sitios, which will be surveyed for me in a square or oblong figure, according to the length or extent of the land and its direction, and in these terms I pray your excellency to defer to my just petition, by which I shall receive grace. I protest costs and whatever is necessary, etc."

March 12, 1821, this petition was referred by the governor intendente for survey, appraisement, and other customary proceedings, and for citation to the adjoining owners, with instructions to return the proceedings when completed, for further action. On May 3, 1821, a promotor fiscal, appraisers, and recorder of courses were appointed by the constitutional alcalde of the district and judge surveyor of that registry, who accepted their positions, took the proper oaths, and were duly commissioned. On the same day publication of notice was had to all whose rights might be affected to appear at the house of San Pedro, the place of the proposed purchase; in response to which one Antunes of the place of Terrenate, claiming certain sitios in the vicinity, appeared and objected that if the survey went up the river, or south (the river ran north) from the house of San Pedro, it would interfere with his rights, to which Perez's attorney objected, on the ground that if the survey went down the river, or north, it would deprive Perez of the benefit of the water from the marsh, which was the mother of those pastures. The matter was compro-

[629] mised by an agreement to divide the water of the marsh. This part of the expediente is of importance in respect of the contention that the *entire grant was south of the boundary line between the United States and Mexico, and as to the starting point of the primitive survey.

The survey was then proceeded with from the place of San Pedro, and is set forth at length, and, having been concluded, the alcalde, May 21, 1821, directed that an appraisalment and valuation be made by the appraisers previously appointed, who appraised the first 3 sitios at $60 each, and the remaining one at $10. Thereupon the alcalde, reciting that the "4 sitios of land for live stock" had been appraised and valued, required the proceedings to be forwarded to the promotor fiscal for him to deduce, according to their condition, what he considered proper to the benefit of the public treasury. May 22 the fiscal directed the alcalde to make inquiry as to whether Perez had the qualifications required by law, and whether he had sufficient property to protect these sitios, and finally whether great advantage would result to the public treasury by their protection and settlement. Testimony was taken, and, the result of the inquiry being satisfactory to the fiscal, he directed, May 26, the publication for thirty days consecutively of the appraisalment of said lands, and provided for bids thereon, and that the final sale and disposition of the land should be at Arispe, before the provincial board of the royal treasury, presided over by the governor intendente of the province. Publication was thereupon had, the first being as follows:

"On said day, month, and year, I, the judge surveyor, caused Lazaro Quijada, at the sound of the drum and in clear, loud, and distinct voice, to announce: It is made public and notorious that Don José Jesus Perez has registered the place of San Pedro, and, his petition being admitted, there were measured and located and sold 4 sitios of land for large stock, which were appraised and valued in the sum of $190 in virtue of which everyone who believes he has a well-founded right or desires to make a bid for the land mentioned may apply, as his bid will be admitted and his actions reserved till the day of the disposition and sale, which will be in Arispe on the day designated by the governor intendente of the [630] province, *to which end his actions and rights are reserved. And no bidder having appeared I entered it as a minute, which I signed, with those in my attendance, according to law, as I certify, and on this paper, without prejudice to the royal revenue."

The proclamations took place for thirty consecutive days, and no one appearing to outbid Perez, the alcalde and judge surveyor, June 26, 1821, transmitted to Antonio Cordero, the governor intendente, "the proceedings of survey, ocular inspection, appraisements, and publications executed on the depopulated tract of San Pedro in favor of Don José Jesus Perez, for your excellency to make such order as may be just." The 184 U. S.

proceedings were referred to the promotor fiscal, and June 25, 1822, he reported favorably thereon, and recommended that the celebration of the three customary offers be proceeded with in the capital of the intendency, the city of Arispe, in solicitation of bidders for the final sale of said land. On July 3, 1822, this was ordered, and such offers were made July 3, 4, and 5, 1822, at Arispe. The land described in the first offer was "4 sitios of royal land for raising cattle comprised in the place called San Pedro, situate in the particular territory of the presidio of Fronteras, surveyed for Don José Jesus Perez, of this city, and appraised in the sum of $190 at the rate of $60 for the first three and $10 for the other one."

The final offer of sale was as follows:

"In the city of Arispe, on the 5th day of the month of July, 1822, having assembled as a board of sale in this said capital, the intendente, as president, and the members who compose it, for the purpose of making the third and last offer of the lands to which these proceedings refer, they caused many individuals to assemble, at the sound of the drum and the voice of the public crier, in the office of this intendency and Loreto Salcido to proceed to make in their presence a publication, as he in effect did, similar in all respects to the one set out in the preceding offer, with only the difference of announcing to the public that the final sale is now to be made to the highest and best bidder. In which act appeared Don José Maria Serrano, as attorney of Don José Jesus Perez, again offering the value of the land, and the hour for midday prayer of this day having *already been struck, the [631] public crier finally said: 'Once, twice, three times; sold, sold, sold; may they do good, good, good, to Don José Jesus Perez.' In these terms this act was concluded, the 4 sitios of royal land referred to in these proceedings being solemnly sold in favor of this party in interest for the sum of $190, and in due witness thereof this minute was entered with the president and members of this board of sales, signed with the attorney, Don José Maria Serrano."

Thereupon the attorney of Perez prayed that "when the approval of the superior board of the treasury is obtained, there may be issued in favor of my party the corresponding title of grant and confirmation of the 4 sitios which said land contains, being prompt to appoint in Mexico a person under pay and expenses to be charged with managing the present matter at that court." July 6, 1822, the intendente ad interim, Bustamente, admitted Perez to composition with the imperial treasury for said royal land, and ordered that his attorney be notified to pay into the treasury the sum of $208, 1 grain; 190 "as the principal value at which there were sold to said party in interest, the 4 sitios which said tract comprises;" and the remainder taxes and expenses. The provincial board of the imperial treasury approved the sale in favor of Perez the next day, describing the land as being "the 4 sitios of royal land for raising large stock which the place called San Pedro comprises." July 8, the sum of $208, 1 grain, was paid into the treasury at Arispe. No action appears to have been taken in the matter by the superior board of the treasury, and it remained as it was until October 25, 1832, when Ignacio Perez, on behalf of his brother José Jesus Perez, presented to the treasurer general of the state of Sonora a petition alleging that on July 5, 1832, there was sold in favor of his brother "the land called San Pedro, situated in the jurisdiction of Fronteras, including 4 sitios of land," and that he had lawfully exchanged the right he had thereto with citizen Rafael Elias, and requesting that inasmuch as the corresponding title to the land had not yet been issued, he might be pleased to order [632] that title *issue to said citizen Rafael Elias "as the actual owner and proprietor of the land of San Pedro." On that day the treasurer general transmitted to the governor of Sonora the proceedings "comprehensive of the registry, survey, appraisalment, publications, and sale of 4 sitios of land, at the place called down the San Pedro river, in favor of citizen José de Jesus Perez;" that Perez had paid into the treasury "the sum of $208, 1 grain, for the principal value of the land and its corresponding taxes;" and that Perez desired the title to be issued to Rafael Elias, complying at the same time with article 27 of law No. 30 of May 20, 1825: and the treasurer reported that he considered the proceedings sufficient. October 31, 1832, Ignacio Bustamante, governor of Sonora, returned the proceedings with this communication: "Having examined the proceedings on the lands which your excellency transmits with your note of the 25th ultimo, comprehensive of 4 sitios surveyed at the place called down the San Pedro river, in favor of Don José Jesus Perez, I return it to your excellency for your excellency to issue to Don Rafael Elias a corresponding title for the grant, in view of the exchange Don Ignacio Perez of this place has made with him." Mendoza, thereupon, May 8, 1833, issued the grant, reciting: "Whereupon, in the exercise of the powers which the laws confer upon me, by these presents and in the name of the sovereign state of Sonora, I confer the grant in the form of 4 sitios of land for breeding large cattle and horses, which comprise the place named San Pedro, situate in the jurisdiction of the presidio of Santa Cruz, in favor of the citizen Rafael Elias, to whom I grant, give, and adjudicate these lands by way of sale, with all the privileges, guaranties, and stability which the laws provide, etc." And commanded that the officials "do not permit that the said interested party nor his successors be in any manner disturbed in their peaceful enjoyment, nor molested in the free use, exercise, proprietorship, dominion, and possession of the said 4 sitios of land which comprise the place named San Pedro."

In the proceeding for the denouement of the overplus of the ranch of San Pedro subsequently had in Mexico, it is recited that the district judge "has before him the testimonio of *the title of the grant of 4 [633] sitios of land for raising large stock issued by the citizen treasurer general of the state in the city of Arispe under date of 8th of May of the year 1833, José Manuel Mendoza, in favor of citizen Rafael Elias, and after payment of $208, 1 grain, which said Elias paid into the funds of said treasury as the value of the 4 sitios, expenses and fees of the title. The land is generally known by the name of ranch of San Pedro, in the jurisdiction of the town of Santa Cruz and near the presidio of Fronteras in the district of Magdalena." Plaintiff also introduced in evidence a copy of the titulo to the San Rafael del Valle grant. Oral evidence was introduced on both sides in respect of the original and subsequent surveys.

The government introduced a petition of the Eliases presented to the surveyor general, together with a map attached to such petition. The government also introduced the expediente of the proceedings of denouement of the demasias of the ranch of San Pedro commenced July 8, 1830, on behalf of the Elias family. On that day Manuel Elias made a formal denouement "of the overplus that may be in the ranch of San Pedro in the jurisdiction of the town of Santa Cruz in the district of Magdalena," of which ranch he alleged that he was a co-owner. After considerable delays and after securing by appeal a declaration of his right to proceed to such denouement, Elias on June 1, 1832, secured the appointment of one Pedro Molera, who was directed to "proceed to the resurvey of the ranch of San Pedro, after examination of its titles and citation of adjoining owners, marking on the ground as well as on the respective maps the lawful area (cabida legal) of said ranch and the overplus (demasias) it may contain within its monuments, subjecting his operations to the general laws of July 22 and August 2, 1863." Molera accepted the appointment, and, July 19, 1832, appeared at the ranch of San Pedro. His report recited that before proceeding with the survey he found it necessary to make a reconnaissance of the land because the titles were decidedly obscure; and notwithstanding the person who made the ancient survey gave the distances, the courses were incomprehensible, and no description was *given of [634] the places the title cited. He then set forth what he did in respect of the general lines on which the grant should be located, and proceeded to lay off the cabida total, or entire area, within the exterior boundaries, so far as he could ascertain them. Having laid off the total area of 28,265.11 hectares running up to the international line on the north, Molera on July 28, 1832, proceeded to segregate the legal area (cabida legal), which was 4 square leagues. He described the methods he adopted, and from the map and field notes it appeared that the legal area was 7,061.61 hectares, which, deducted from the total area, left an overplus or demasias of 21,203.47 hectares. Orders were then given for the advertisement of the proceedings, and testimony was taken as to the qualifications of Elias to secure the property. In April, 1884, the district judge at Guaymas recited that it appeared that the ranch of San Pedro belonged to various owners, who under the law had equal rights to the demasias, and ordered that Manuel Elias be notified to state whether or not he consented that said demasias should be adjudged to him in company with the other owners, and thereupon it was consented that the demasias should be adjudged to all the owners. November 18, 1884, the value of the demasias was fixed, but no price was fixed for the cabida legal, since that part of the survey belonged to the original parties. The order of the district judge recites that having examined the proceedings of survey and the map, both made by the surveyor, Pedro Molera, from which it appears that there is a total area of 28,265.11 hectares, of which 7,061.64 hectares are covered by title and 21,203.47 hectares are demasias, and, having examined the other proceedings, decreed the adjudication of said overplus to José Maria Manuel, and the heirs of José Juan Elias in third parts, subject to the approval of the department of public works. The proceedings were transmitted to that department at Mexico, and, an error having been found in the calculations, were returned with orders to the surveyor to repeat the survey and correct the error. Molera again went into the field, and on March 19, 1887, made a recalculation of the cabida total, with the result that the overplus was found to be 21,231 hectares and a fraction [635] instead of 21,203 and a fraction. *The correct valuation was thereupon made and the proceedings again sent to Mexico. May 3, 1887, the department of public works recited that they had examined the survey of the so-called demasias, and observed that on such survey "no monuments were found that would determine the limits or boundaries of said ranch," and that the courses indicated in the primitive survey were so confusing that in "attempting to follow them one goes and returns repeatedly over the same line without it being possible to circumscribe with this data any perimeter whatever." It was accordingly found and ordered that the ranch of San Pedro had no known boundary or boundaries that could be determined, and consequently had no demasias, so that the land denounced was not demasias, but vacant public land; and that Molera made an arbitrary survey. The adjudication was therefore not approved, and the office of the chief of the treasury in the state of Sonora was directed to register the land and the public treasurer to enter into possession of it, except that part which had been sold to McManus & Sons, and for which the proper title had already been issued. This order was subsequently revoked as a matter of equity, and the purchase of the property allowed so far as not conflicting with the McManus grant. On July 4, 1887, on the petition of Elias, one Bonillas was appointed surveyor for the purpose of separating the McManus land from the land sought by Elias, and to make a report that would enable the final purchase of the balance by Elias's family to be effected. This survey gave the total area of the San Pedro ranch, after cutting off the McManus land, as 22,058 hectares, 11 ares, 8 centiares, from which subtracting the legal area (cabida legal) of 7,022 hectares, 44 ares, there remains an overplus of 15,035 hectares, 67 ares, 8 centiares. Hectare = 2.471 acres. February 24, 1888, the President of the Republic approved the adjudication of this overplus in favor of Elias and associates, and ordered the proper title to issue to them upon payment of the required amount. The proper amount was paid, and on October 15, 1888, Alejandro Elias, for the Elias heirs, receipted for the title of said demasias, issued by President Diaz, February 24, 1888.

The government also introduced in evidence the expediente *of an adverse suit [636] brought by Plutarco Elias respecting himself and his mother and brothers on the denouncement of the overplus of the Agua Priete grant made by Camou Brothers, in which, in deciding the matter, the district judge recited that the fact that the Elias family had already denounced a large area of demasias in the Republic of Mexico, and mentioned many other tracts denounced by them besides the overplus of the San Pedro ranch, and called attention to the fact that the Eliases in consequence of such denouncements had secured a larger grant than they were allowed to obtain under the law of July 22, 1863. He quoted from the regulations of the department of public works in which the method of acquiring demasias and other vacant lands is set forth, and showed from the order of the department of public works that overplus within a grant rests on exactly the same basis as other public lands, except that under the provisions of the law of July 22, 1863, a preference in its purchase is given the owner of the legal area. The district judge held that the Elias family had no right to be admitted as denouncers, since they had already obtained an area greater than that designated by law.

The Reloj Cattle Company was incorporated September 24, 1885, and various quit-claims of the interests of the Elias heirs in 18,000 acres in the grant, described as being north of the boundary line, commencing with April 2, 1883, and down to October 13, 1885, were introduced by it as muniments of title. The cause was submitted June 2, 1899, and November 27, 1899, the court entered a decree rejecting the grant and dismissing the petition. The court held that the grant was one of 4 sitios only, and that the owners had secured full satisfaction from the Mexican government and within its territory of all that they were entitled to. Thereupon this appeal was prosecuted.

Mr. H. H. Cobb argued the cause, and Mr. Rochester Ford filed a brief for appellant:

Such rights in the United States as were fixed at the time of the treaty could not be changed by any subsequent action of the Mexican authorities.

United States v. Yorba, 1 Wall. 412, 17 L. ed. 635.

Solicitor General Richards and Messrs. Matthew G. Reynolds and William H. Pope submitted the cause for appellee:

The rights of the grantee are limited to the quantity petitioned for, appraised, advertised, sold, and paid for, and for which the formal title was issued twelve years thereafter by the succeeding government.

Ainsa v. United States, 161 U. S. 208, 40 L. ed. 673, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 544; United States v. Maish, 171 U. S. 242, 43 L. ed. 150, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 948; Ely v. United States, 171 U. S. 220, 43 L. ed. 142, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 840; Perrin v. United States, 171 U. S. 292, 43 L. ed. 169, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 861.

The securing to the owners of the grant of full satisfaction of its lawful area (cabida legal) by the Mexican government is conclusive of the case here presented.

Ainsa v. United States, 161 U. S. 208, 40 L. ed. 673, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 544; Ely v. United States, 171 U. S. 240, 43 L. ed. 150, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 840.

[637] Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

Perez petitioned for the grant "pursuant to the provisions of the national laws and the terms of the royal cedula of February 14, 1805."

That cedula provided that (for the reason "that the settlement of a sitio of a league in extent was very difficult for a person of large means, and that lands of large area were held without this legal obligation having been fulfilled to the prejudice of others") "there should not be adjudicated nor granted more than three or four tracts (to the wealthy), and two to the poor;" "with the understanding that the lowest estimate was not to be less than $10 for lands without water, $30 for lands irrigable by means of wells, and $60 for those capable of regular irrigation." Reynolds, p. 72. Recognizing the limitation, Perez prayed for the sale to him of "the 4 sitios."

The entire proceedings were directed to the acquisition of 4 sitios. Four sitios were valued; 4 sitios were put up at the auctions; 4 sitios were purchased; 4 sitios were paid for; and 4 sitios were granted. The intention to convey only so much and no more is plain, and is controlling. The title of the grantee was limited to that quantity. Ainsa v. United States, 161 U. S. 208, 40 L. ed. 673, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 544; Ely v. United States, 171 U. S. 220, 43 L. ed. 142, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 840; United States v. Maish, 171 U. S. 242, 43 L. ed. 150, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 948; Perrin v. United States, 171 U. S. 292, 43 L. ed. 169, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 861.

The cabida legal, or lawful area, was, therefore, 4 sitios, or something over 17,350 acres, and this lawful area, "the 4 sitios," was described by Perez as "the depopulated place down the San Pedro river, situate in this province, toward the north, on the hostile frontier, close to the abandoned place of Las Nutrias."

The primitive survey was had at the place of San Pedro, and Las Nutrias was 2 or 3 miles to the southwest. It is plain that the old house of San Pedro was in existence at that time. When Antunes appeared from the place of Terrenate, which was a short distance west of the house of San Pedro, he was willing that the survey should proceed "from the house of San Pedro down the river" (the river ran north or somewhat east *of north), while Perez [638] claimed it should be located up the river to get the benefit of the water of the marsh. This dispute was compromised by agreeing to divide the water of the marsh, which lay some distance above the house of San Pedro. The starting point of the survey was plainly up the river from the house, and then the line ran below it, for the survey states: "I caused a monument to be placed at a rectangular corner, from which, taking the course southwest to northwest, there were measured and counted 50 cords, the last of which terminated down the river from the house, on the edge of the ford, on the bank." That the house of San Pedro was an important call in the location of the grant on the ground is unquestionable. That house was the ancestral home of the Elias family, and on that place some of its members still reside. It was and is in Mexico, several miles south of the boundary line. Accordingly, when Manuel Elias made a formal denunciation, July 8, 1880, of the demasias there might be in the ranch of San Pedro, and it became necessary to mark the cabida legal on the ground, the Mexican authorities laid off the 4 sitios so as to embrace the San Pedro settlement. The omission of San Pedro from the lawful area of the San Pedro grant would have, indeed, been something remarkable. The owners of the grant thus obtained from Mexico full satisfaction of its cabida legal; and no legal or equitable claim therefor existed against the United States when this petition was filed.

In Ainsa v. United States, 161 U. S. 234, 40 L. ed. 682, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553, it was said: "We have referred to the proceedings of 1882, 1886, in Mexico, as furnishing persuasive evidence of the proper construction of this grant under Mexican law, and it may be further observed that the adjudication of the overplus required the location of the $7\frac{1}{2}$ sitios, which location Mexico, as the granting government, assumed it had the right to make, and made out of the land within its jurisdiction. In this way the grant was satisfied by the receipt of all the grantees had bought and were entitled to under the Mexican law, the result as to the overplus inuring to Camou's cotenants by the terms of his petition."

In Ely v. United States, 171 U. S. 220, 43 L. ed. 142, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 840, the court, 184 U. S.

referring to Ainsa's Case, observed: "In [639] that case it appeared *that while the out boundaries of the survey extended into the territory ceded by Mexico to the United States, the grantee had taken and was in possession of land still remaining within the limits of Mexico to the full extent which he had purchased and paid for, and therefore no legal or equitable claim existed against the United States in reference to land within the ceded territory." It is quite impossible to entertain the proposition that the court of private land claims should have adjudged to appellants another cabida legal on this side of the boundary line. According to the doctrine of Ely's Case no different location could have been recognized if the entire area had been in this country.

Something is said in respect of the right to confirmation of the tract sued for treated as demasias. But, apart from other insuperable objections to that suggestion, such a claim would be imperfect for want of fulfilment of conditions, and barred by § 12 of the act of March 3, 1891 [26 Stat. at L. 854, chap. 539].

Decree affirmed.

SANTIAGO AINSA, Administrator of the Estate of Frank Ely, Deceased, and Edward Camou, Appts.,
v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 639-649.)

Mexican land grants—grant by quantity—excess over lawful area—unperformed conditions—imperfect claim.

1. A Mexican grant of land whose measurement was made with great care and the quantity repeatedly recited in the proceedings to secure the grant is a grant by quantity, notwithstanding a general description by natural objects was given in the original petition; and when the quantity covered by the grant has been laid off in Mexico by the Mexican authorities, on denouncement of the overplus within such grant, no legal or equitable title therefor exists against the United States.
2. Title to overplus within a Mexican land grant, for which the government has a right to compel payment from the owner of the lawful area, or to resell such surplus to a third party, could not be confirmed by the court of private land claims on payment of such amount as might be found due, in view of the provision of the act creating that court, that no authority to acquire land on condition should be admitted or confirmed unless such condition had been performed,—especially where such claim was not filed within the time given by that act for filing imperfect claims.

[No. 40.]

Argued January 29, 1902. Decided March 17, 1902.

184 U. S.

A PPEAL from the Court of Private Land Claims to review a decree denying confirmation of a Mexican land grant. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

This was a petition filed February 28, 1893, by Ainsa, as administrator, against the United States and one Whitney, for confirmation of the Agua Prieta grant, so called, which he represented he owned by virtue of "a grant title," dated December 28, 1836, *made by the Mexican Republic under article 11 of decree No. 70, of August 4, 1824, and a law of the states of Sonora and Sinaloa, No. 30, of May 20, 1825, and other decrees embodied in sections 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7 of chapter 9 of the organic law of the treasury, No. 26, of July 2, 1834; and that regular and lawful proceedings were had under those laws, by which the Mexican government, December 28, 1836, sold and conveyed the land to Juan, Rafael, and Ignacio Elias Gonzales in consideration of $142.50 and other valuable considerations. The proceedings were set out at length in the petition. [640]

The United States answered, denying the ownership and possession of the petitioner, and alleging that the grant by the state of Sonora was void; that the grant was located within the Republic of Mexico; that it was confirmed in 1882 to Camou brothers by the Mexican government, and lay south of the boundary line; that the demasias of the grant was also confirmed to Camou brothers; and that a large area remained between the north boundary of the grant and of the demasias and the boundary line, which had since been purchased from Mexico by Camou brothers February 14, 1899, on which day the cause came on for trial, petitioner filed an amended and supplemental petition, averring "that prior to the treaty known as the Gadsden treaty no resurvey of said grant had ever been applied for or ordered by anyone, and that neither the grantees nor their successors in interest had, prior to said treaty, any knowledge or notice that within the said monuments there was an excess of land over the area stated in said title papers, and petitioner avers that the grantees under said grant were, under the laws of Mexico and the state of Sonora existing at the date of said treaty, and for a long time prior thereto had been, holders in good faith of any such excess or surplus, if any such there is, and entitled to occupy and retain the same as their own, even after such overplus is shown, without other obligation than to pay for the excess according to the quality of the land and the price that governed when it was surveyed and appraised; and petitioner further avers that if this honorable court should decide that said sale, as recited in said title papers, did not, as petitioner avers it did, convey to the grantees *therein all of the said tract of land [641] to the monuments described in said title papers without further payment therefor, he is ready and willing and now offers to pay to the United States of America any amount that may be found to be due from him for such overplus, and also the costs for ascertaining the same, as soon as the amount of the same and the sum due therefor is ascertained."

Petitioner tendered the sum of $600 in gold in payment of the overplus and $200 in gold for costs, offered to pay whatever might be adjudged due, and prayed "that upon said payment this honorable court decree that petitioner is entitled to and is the owner of all of said tract of land, as originally surveyed, including said overplus or surplus, and that by said decree he be secured in the possession and ownership of the whole of said tract," etc.

The area delineated on petitioner's maps, as included in the grant claimed, was 163,797.48 acres. The court of private land claims rejected the claim, and dismissed the petition.

The documents covered three tracts of land called, respectively, Agua Prieta, Naidenibacachi, and Santa Barbara. And it appeared that on July 21, 1831, Juan, Rafael, and Ignacio Elias Gonzales petitioned the treasurer general of Sonora, stating that they had cattle and sheep whose numbers they could not feed on the sitios belonging to them, for which reason the stock wandered to the four points of the compass, more particularly toward the waters of the Santa Barbara, Naidenibacachi, Agua Prieta, and Coaguyona, by which they suffered incalculable damage.

They therefore made denouncement of the lands that might be "found to be public lands within the points and waters aforesaid, which are bounded on the north by the Chiricahua mountains, on the south by the lands of the Sinaloas, on the east by the mountains of Coaguyona, and on the west by the lands of the Saus;" and petitioned that under the law of May 20, 1825, the denouncement might be admitted, and orders issued for the survey, appraisalment, publications, sale, and other necessary proceedings. The petition was referred, testimony taken, and report made as to the necessities of the case, and in October, 1831, at Hermosillo, Treasurer General Mendoza ap-

[642] pointed Joaquin *Vincente Elias, resident of San Ignacio, to proceed to take the legal steps, to "the survey of the said public lands," effecting the measurement, appraisalment, and publications as is provided, in the decrees No. 30, of May 20, 1825, and No. 175 of November 20, 1830, etc. In August, 1835, Elias proceeded to execute the commission, and on September 28 appointed and qualified his assistant measurers and recorders, and commenced the survey of the Agua Prieta tract. He asked "the attorney of Messrs. Elias to point out the place they wanted as the center; he did so, fixing a lagoon or pool that is in the middle of a valley called by the same name as the place and the center of all the circumference." The survey then followed and is given at length, and closed as to the Agua Prieta tract thus: "The survey being in this manner concluded, and containing in its area, the calculation having been made with entire correctness, $6\frac{1}{2}$ short sitios, the party, who assented to what had been done, was cautioned to inform his parties in due time to have monuments of stone and mortar constructed as is provided." Then came the survey of the Santa Barbara and Naidenibacachi tracts, and they were found to contain an area of " $11\frac{1}{2}$ sitios and $12\frac{1}{2}$ caballerias," which made, with the $6\frac{1}{2}$ sitios, a total of 18 sitios and $12\frac{1}{2}$ caballerias. Appraisers were then designated, and the $6\frac{1}{2}$ sitios composing the survey of Agua Prieta were valued, one at \$60, as it had a limited water course, and the others at \$15 each, as they were absolutely dry, and the $11\frac{1}{2}$ sitios and $12\frac{1}{2}$ caballerias were appraised, one at \$80, another at \$60, and the rest at \$15, making a total of \$432.50. Thereupon the lands were published for thirty consecutive days at the values fixed, from June 4 until July 3, 1836. The advertisement exposed for sale 18 sitios and $12\frac{1}{2}$ caballerias for raising cattle, comprised in the places of Agua Prieta, Naidenibacachi, and Santa Barbara, surveyed in favor of the citizens Elias, and appraised in the sum of \$432 and 4 reals. Three public auctions were then ordered and had on September 15, 16, 17, 1836. The advertisement was as follows:

"There are going to be sold on account of [643] the public treasury of the department 18 sitios and $12\frac{1}{2}$ caballerias of land for the raising of cattle and horses, comprised in the places called Agua Prieta, Naidenibacachi, and Santa Barbara, situate in the jurisdiction of the presidio of Fronteras, in the district of this capital, surveyed at the request of the citizens Juan, Rafael, and Ignacio Elias Gonzales, of this town, and appraised in the sum of \$432 and 4 reals, as follows: The $6\frac{1}{2}$ sitios, which compose the survey of Agua Prieta, one in the sum of \$60, on account of having a small spring, and the other $5\frac{1}{2}$ at the rate of \$15 each, on account of their being absolutely dry; and the other $11\frac{1}{2}$ sitios, together with the $12\frac{1}{2}$ caballerias, of which the other two places consist, one in the sum of \$80, one in the sum of \$60, and the others at \$15 each, all of which sums together go to make up the total amount of \$432 and 4 reals."

The property was sold to the Messrs. Elias at \$432 and 4 reals, the record stating: "On these terms this act was concluded, the said 18 sitios and $12\frac{1}{2}$ caballerias of land which compose the said places of Agua Prieta, Naidenibacachi, and Santa Barbara, situate in the jurisdiction of the presidio of Fronteras, having been publicly and solemnly sold to these interested parties for the said sum of \$432.50, at which said lands had been appraised." September 27, the treasurer general directed the parties to be notified to pay the sum in question into the treasury. The title was issued December 28, 1836, declaring that the purchase money for said "18 sitios and $12\frac{1}{2}$ caballerias of land for breeding cattle and horses, which are comprised in the places called Naidenibacachi, Agua Prieta, and Santa Barbara" had been paid, and granting in the usual terms the said 18 sitios and 12½ caballerias contained in those places.

[644] On the trial, Ainsa, administrator, introduced in evidence a *number of deeds made by descendants of the original grantees to Ainsa's intestate, ranging in date from December 24, 1886, to January 24, 1893.

The United States introduced a deed of the Eliases, dated July 25, 1862, conveying to the Messrs. Camou of Hermosillo, Mexico, by way of conditional sale, all of the property forming the subject-matter of this suit, and also certain proceedings of March 17, 1869, and of November 15, 1880, showing the extinguishment of the equity of redemption.

May 31, 1899, petitioner asked for an order making Eduardo Camou party defendant, and presented a deed from Juan Pedro Camou to said Eduardo, quitclaiming the grantor's interest in the Agua Prieta grant, north of the international boundary line.

In addition to the documents much oral evidence in reference to the surveys was adduced on both sides.

The government introduced a certified copy of the expediente of the denouncement of the demasias of the grant made by Camou brothers before the Mexican tribunals by proceedings initiated April 22, 1880. The lands mentioned were the three places of Agua Prieta, Santa Barbara, and Naidenibacachi, and four others. The denouncement was admitted by the district judge of Guaymas, May 31, 1880, and a resurvey ordered of the seven tracts, with direction that special care be taken to make the survey of each of the lands separately, and to designate in the minutes of the survey and on the several maps the demasias pertaining to each. The parties in interest were summoned and were satisfied with the survey made. In 1887 Plutarco Elias, for himself and his mother and brothers, brought an adverse suit against the denouncement on the theory that the Eliases, though not entitled to the cabida legal, were entitled to the demasias, but the contention was rejected. The value of the overplus was fixed, and the judge decreed that the owner was entitled under article 5 of the law of public lands, the law of July 22, 1863, to a reduction of one half the price as fixed, and it was so liquidated. The final result was the issue, January 30, 1888, of the title to the demasias in favor of Camou. The government also introduced in evidence [645] the expediente *of denouncement of a tract of public land amounting to 16,920 acres, situated between the north boundary of the Agua Prieta grant and the international boundary line. This proceeding was initiated May 4, 1881; the denouncement was admitted and a surveyor appointed, who issued summons to Elias, owner of the ranch of San Pedro, to Camou, owner of the ranches of Agua Prieta and Naidenibacachi, and to Ainsa, representing the lands surveyed to one Rochin, situated east of the Agua Prieta tract. A survey was had and the tract surveyed divided among the three petitioners, Mr. Camou, the owner of the Agua Prieta grant, acting as attorney in fact, giving his receipt for the three titles to the property, and describing it as public land. The government also put in evidence the withdrawal by Mr. Camou from the consideration of the surveyor general of Arizona of the grant now in controversy in July, 1880.

184 U. S.

Mr. Francis J. Heney argued the cause, and Mr. Rochester Ford filed a brief for appellant:

The grant of a tract with specified boundaries covers all the land within those boundaries, irrespective of quantity, and this is true although there is a statement that the tract contains a certain amount, which amount is very much less than that included within the boundaries.

United States v. Hancock, 133 U. S. 193, 33 L. ed. 601, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 264; Maxwell Land-Grant Case, 121 U. S. 325, sub nom. United States v. Maxwell Land-Grant Co. 30 L. ed. 949, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1015.

Under the civil law a sale is always considered per aversionem when it is for a total sum and assigns to the land sold existing visible boundaries, such as rivers, highways, fences, pieces of iron, stone, or wood, showing the starting point and the direction of the dividing line with the adjoining tenements. These sales are held to be per aversionem on the presumption that the parties to them have their attention fixed rather upon the boundaries than the enumeration of quantity.

Boyce v. Cagle, 7 La. Ann. 672.

If in the sale of an immovable property the lines have been designated, the vendor is obliged to deliver all that is comprehended within them, although there may be an excess in the measure expressed in the contract.

Hall, Mexican Law, § 2109.

When the sale is made of the whole of a certain quantity, by so much per pound, bushel, or other measure, and the vendor expresses the number of them, he is bound to deliver to the vendee the whole, though it exceed the quantity, and the vendee is bound to receive the whole, though it fall short of the quantity specified.

Schmidt, Civil Law of Spain & Mexico, art. 612, p. 134.

Where, in Sonora, questions of excess arose in grants due to inaccurate measurements or computations, the remedy was by a further payment by the grantee, and not by a curtailment of the land surveyed.

Law of Sonora, May 12, 1835, cited in Ainsa v. United States, 161 U. S. 208, 40 L. ed. 673, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 544.

No proceedings in Mexico subsequent to the treaty can affect rights in the United States fixed at the date of the treaty. The rights asserted by the inhabitants of the ceded territory depend upon the concession made by the officers of the government having at the time the requisite authority to alienate the public domain, and not upon any subsequent declarations or actions of Mexican officials.

United States v. Yorba, 1 Wall. 412, 17 L. ed. 635.

Mr. Matthew G. Reynolds argued the cause, and, with Solicitor General Richards and Mr. William H. Pope, filed a brief for appellee:

In this grant there passed to the claimants the quantity paid for,—no more, no less.

Ainsa v. United States, 161 U. S. 208, 40 L. ed. 673, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 544; Ely v. United States, 171 U. S. 220, 43 L. ed. 142, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 840; Perrin v. United States, 171 U. S. 292, 43 L. ed. 169, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 861; United States v. Maish, 171 U. S. 242, 43 L. ed. 150, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 948.

This grant has been satisfied by the Mexican government south of the international line, and the claim should therefore be rejected.

Ainsa v. United States, 161 U. S. 234, 40 L. ed. 682, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 544; Ely v. United States, 171 U. S. 240, 43 L. ed. 150, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 840.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

